This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

A. NATURE AND KINDS.

NATURE AND STATUS OF CORPORATION, § 1.
—— AS PERSONS, § 2.
KINDS OF CORPORATIONS, § 3.
PUBLIC OR PRIVATE, § 4.
STATE REGULATION, § 5.

[a] A corporation for commercial purposes, formed under our statute, is little more than a joint stock company under the English laws, more nearly resembling a limited partnership under special articles than a corporation at common law.—Chater v. San Francisco etc. Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[b] Where a corporation is formed under our system, between certain parties for commercial purposes, in pursuance of a previous agreement fixing the terms of the corporation and the rights of the members therein, the corporation, when formed, is the mere agency of the associates created for the sake of convenience in carrying out the agreement, as between those who made the bargain—the different characters and forms in which or by which the bargain was made, and the order in which the several parts of it were executed, making no substantial difference in the obligation.—Chater v. San Francisco etc. Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[c] Where corporation is formed to more conveniently carry out purposes of certain parties, and the corporation incurs no liability, and is to receive none of the profits, but they are to be divided among the parties and no stock was issued, the corporation will be treated as the mere trustees of the partners, and their respective rights will be ascertained in the light of their agreements among themselves independently of the contract.—Shorb v. Beaudry, 56 Cal. 446.

[f] Grants of corporation franchises are always subject to implied condition that they will not be abused.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 117, 24 Pac. 277.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
10 Cyc. 143; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 15, 16, § 1.

§ 2. —— As Persons.

[a] Corporations are to be deemed and taken as persons when the circumstances in which they are placed are identical with those of natural persons, expressly included in a statute.—Douglass v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 4 Cal. 304.

[b] Benevolent corporation formed to promote cause of temperance is not corporation formed for profit.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 68, 24 Pac. 711.

[c] A land and improvement company, organized for the purpose of acquiring real property, by purchase or otherwise, buying and selling the same, building hotels, street railroads, and otherwise developing lands, stands upon the same basis as banking, railroad, insurance, and like commercial corporations having a subscribed capital stock.—Potter v. Dear, 95 Cal. 578, 30 Pac. 777.

What are quasi corporations: 13 Am. Dec. 523, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 145-148; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 22-31, §§ 7-10.

§ 4. Public or Private.

their object the personal emolument of the incorporators; and such as partake of the nature of both, such as bridge and canal companies.—(Cal. 1869) Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 543.

[b] A levee district, organized under the laws of California, to construct works for preventing portions of the territory from overflow, and clothed with powers, for this purpose, to issue bonds, levy and collect assessments, construct and repair highways, open canals, etc., is a public corporation.—Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406.

[c] Reclamation districts are public corporations.—People v. Williams, 56 Cal. 647.

[d] A corporation organized to reclaim swamps and overflowed lands is of a quasi public character, and the proceedings leading up to its creation cannot be collaterally attacked.—Reclamation Dist. No. 542 v. Turner, 104 Cal. 334, 37 Pac. 1038.

§ 5. State Regulation.

[b] Legislature may control charters by general laws.—Thomason v. Ashworth, 73 Cal. 77, 14 Pac. 615.

[c] State may impose such new terms and conditions on right of corporation to do business as it sees fit.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 119, 15 Pac. 380.

[d] State may, in absence of constitutional prohibition, allow only foreign corporations within its borders, or may impose tax on domestic corporations not imposed on foreign ones.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 118, 119, 15 Pac. 380.

See, also, post, §§ 33, 63, 67, 268.

[a] In California a corporation sole can be created only by compliance with the provisions of section 602 of the Civil Code.—Blakeslee v. Hall, 94 Cal. 159, 69 Pac. 623.

7. Right to Incorporate.

[a] There is no natural right to do business as corporations. Corporations act as such purely by grace, depending on consent of state for enforcement of their contracts. Power of state to impose conditions on corporations is absolute; it may exclude them entirely.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 118, 15 Pac. 380.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 8. —— Compliance with Statute as Condition Precedent.

[a] Existence of corporation, formed under a general statute, requiring certain acts to be done before the corporation can be considered in esse or its transactions be valid, must be proved by showing at least a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute.—Mokelumne Hill Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424, 73 Am. Dec. 658.

[b] Where an act incorporating a water company provided that three thousand feet of water pipe should be laid within a year, the laying of such pipe within such period was not a condition of the existence of the corporation, and hence proof of compliance was not necessary in order to entitle it to sue.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[c] A strict, literal compliance with the requirements of the statute is not essential, and the proceedings will not be held invalid for slight defects or omissions.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[d] There must be substantial compliance with all forms of the acts by the persons seeking to become a body corporate before the corporation can be considered in esse.—Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124.

[e] The right to be a corporation is a franchise, to acquire which the prescribed statutory conditions for the formation of the corporation must be substantially complied with, without the omission of any requirement, though a substantial, rather than a literal, compliance with each provision of the statute will suffice.—People v. Montecito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276, 133 Am. St. Rep. 172, 32 Pac. 236.

[f] Substantial compliance with the law is essential to the valid organization of a corporation, and it cannot be dispensed with as against an attack upon its validity in an action of quo warranto.—People v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257, 60 Pac. 865.

§ 9. Purposes for Which Corporation may be Created.

[a] Act of March 5, 1864, providing for the organization of corporations for manufacturing, mining, or "for the purpose of engaging in any other species of trade, business, or commerce," is broad enough to authorize the formation of a corporation for the "purchase and sale of swamp and overflowed lands and adjacent high lands, the construction of dikes, levees, canals, reservoirs, and other works." People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 286, a corporation may be formed for the purpose of "buying, selling, and dealing in all kinds of public and private stocks," and a purchase by a corporation so formed of stock in another corporation is not ultra vires.—Market St. Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

§ 10. Amount of Capital to be Subscribed or Paid.

[a] The provision of section 1 of the California act for the incorporation of railroad companies, requiring payment of ten per cent of the amount subscribed in cash, is not merely directory; it is a condition precedent, without which the subscribers to a company have no power to incorporate.—People v. Chambers, 42 Cal. 201.

[b] Act of April 14, 1843, authorizes the organization of certain corporations, and requires the certificate of incorporation to state the amount of capital stock and the number of shares. Statutes of 1869-70, pages 32, 36, provide that the corporations formed under the first-named act for the purpose of receiving, from the members and others, deposits and investing the same, may receive deposits of money from minors and married women. Held, that a corporation organized under said first-named act is not required to have a capital stock, the latter statute being a construction of the former to that effect by the legislature.—People v. Perrin, 56 Cal. 345.

§ 11. Number of Persons Required to Incorporate.

[a] Sections 593 and 594 of the Civil Code, providing for the incorporation of any number of persons associated together for any purpose where pecuniary profit is not their object, must be read in connection with section 292 of the Civil Code, as not providing for the incorporation of any number less than five persons.—People v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257, 60 Pac. 865.

12 Cent. Dig., cols. 54, 55, § 25.

§ 12. Organization by Special Act.

Creation by special laws. See, also, Statutes, § 21.

[a] The provision in an act granting an exclusive franchise to build a telegraph line between the two points, that "no existing law shall be construed so as to conflict or interfere with the provisions of this act," does not repeal the general corporation law, so as to take away the right of forming corporations to build lines of telegraph between those points, but only to subject subsequent builders to the exclusive prior right of the grantees named in the act.—California State Tel. Co. v. Alta Tel. Co., 22 Cal. 398.

[b] No particular words are necessary to the creation of a corporation, it being sufficient if the legislative intention is clearly manifested.—(Cal. 1876) Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406.

[c] Act of March 28, 1872, granting to certain persons "and their assigns" the exclusive right to supply a town with water, prescribing certain duties, and authorizing the town "to purchase all the works and franchises" granted after fifteen years, does not create a corporation, within the prohibition of constitution, article 4, section 31, against the creation of corporations by special act.—San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 168, 48 Pac. 1075.

§ 13. —— Construction of Constitutional Provision.

[a] The thirty-first section of the fourth article of the constitution provides that "corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special act, except for municipal purposes." Held, that the term "municipal" is limited to governmental, and cannot be extended to commercial, purposes.—Lowe v. City of Marysville, 5 Cal. 214.

§ 14. Organization Under General Laws.

[a] The act of 1850, concerning corporations, has no application to corporations formed under the act of 1853, "for manufacturing, mining, mechanical, or chemical purposes, or for the purpose of engaging in any species of trade or commerce." The act of 1853 repealed the act of 1850 so far as these classes of corporations are concerned.—Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

[d] Provisions of Civil Code, regarding organization of corporations apply to all corporations.—West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 30, 21 Pac. 1123.

[e] Legislature cannot confer benefit or impose duty on one or more corporations formed under general law not conferred or imposed on all other corporations formed under same law.—People v. Central etc. R. R. Co., 83 Cal. 413, 23 Pac. 303.

[f] Corporation organized for the purpose of transacting such real business as natural person can is not organized under 639 of the Civil Code, but under general provisions of title 1, part 4 of the Civil Code.—Vercoutere v. Golden State L. Co., 116 Cal. 412, 48 Pac. 375.

[g] General operation of statute is not affected if it gives to all corporations of its kind or class opportunity to adopt either of two different provisions.—Murphy v. Pacific Bank, 119 Cal. 341, 51 Pac. 317.

10 Cyc. 219-235; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 36-61, §§ 16-27; cols. 78-110, §§ 48-69.

§ 15. What Constitutes Corporate Charter.

Amendment or repeal of charter. See post, § 58. Charters of municipal corporations. See Municipal Corporations, §§ 6-8.

[a] In this state the charter is the statute or statutes granting and defining the powers of the corporation under which it is constituted and exists, together with the instruments required to be executed by the provisions of such statute or statutes. These are sometimes called the constating instruments. Such franchises are legal estates, not mere naked powers, and are powers coupled with an interest, which vest in the corporation by virtue of its charter or constating instruments.—Spring Valley W. W. v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69.

§ 16. Acceptance of Charter.

[a] Where corporation is organized under a general law, no acceptance of charter is requisite.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

§ 17. Construction of Charter.

[b] Charter must be reasonably construed so as to promote its object.—Vandall v. South etc. Co., 40 Cal. 89.

[c] Where a corporation is formed "to buy, improve, lease or sell, and otherwise dispose of real estate," etc., the term "improve" includes the performance of any act, whether on or off the land, the direct and proximate tendency of which is to benefit the property or enhance its value.—Vandall v. South San Francisco Dock Co., 40 Cal. 83.

[d] No infallible rule can be laid down defining accurately the point at which the benefit to be derived from a proposed work would cease to be direct and proximate, but each case must be determined on its own circumstances.—Vandall v. South San Francisco Dock Co., 40 Cal. 83.

[e] Ambiguous words in the charter of a corporation are to be construed most strongly against the corporation.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111.

[a] Where certificate of incorporation states that San Francisco is "the place of business," instead of "the principal place of business," it is a mere technical error, not invalidating the charter.—Spring Valley W. W., Ex parte, 17 Cal. 132.

[b] A statute requiring a certificate of incorporation to state the names of the city or town and county in which the principal place of business is to be located is not complied with by a certificate which states that the operations of the corporation are to be carried on in the county of Calaveras, state of California.—Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124.

[c] Under act of May 20, 1861 (Stats. 1861, p. 607), providing that there shall be annexed to the articles of incorporation an affidavit setting forth in substance that the stock has been subscribed, and that ten per cent in cash thereon has been actually and "in good faith paid," a certificate of incorporation complying substantially with the statute is not void merely because the affidavit omits the words "in good faith" in that portion of the affidavit relating to the payment of ten per cent. People v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 45 Cal. 306, 13 Am. Rep. 178.

[d] Under Statutes of 1850, pages 273, 274, authorizing the formation of moral, beneficial, literary, or scientific associations by such methods as their rules or regulations may direct, on the appointment of not less than three nor more than nine trustees to take charge of the estate and property belonging thereto, a certificate of incorporation, showing the appointment of nine trustees, is sufficient to bring such corporation into existence, though it does not show that the corporation had previously organized, adopted rules and regulations, and that the trustees were chosen in accordance with such rules and regulations. Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum v. Abrams, 49 Cal. 455.

[e] If the articles of incorporation do not state that a majority of the members of the association were present and voted at the election of directors, the certificate does not constitute the association a corporation; nor can evidence be admitted that a majority were present and voted.—People v. Selfridge, 52 Cal. 331.

[f] Defective certificate of incorporation is not proof of corporation in esse.—McCallon v. Hibernia etc. Soc., 70 Cal. 168, 12 Pac. 114.

[h] The articles of incorporation of a manufacturing company formed to own and run a sawmill and to manufacture lumber and articles made of wood, are not vitiated by including therein power to operate, construct, maintain, and deal in railroads, tramways, and rights of way, it being frequently necessary in such business to have tramways and railroads as part of the manufacturing plant though such a corporation could not exercise the right of eminent domain to acquire rights of way.—People ex rel. Loy v. Mount Shasta Mfg. Co., 107 Cal. 256, 40 Pac. 391.

[i] Corporation has no de jure existence until the Secretary of State has issued the certificate required by Civil Code, section 296.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[a] The certificate of incorporation of a company claiming in good faith to be a corporation under the laws of this state, and doing business as such corporation, is admissible in evidence in a private suit to which the company is a party, as evidence of its right to act as a corporation, although it is not acknowledged by all the corporators.—Dannebroge Mining Co. v. Allment, 26 Cal. 286.

[b] Stockholder is bound by articles of corporation, whether he has signed them or not. McFadden v. Los Angeles County, 74 Cal. 571, 16 Pac. 397.

[c] Civil Code, section 292, provides that articles of incorporation must be subscribed by five or more persons, and acknowledged by each. Held, in an action by the state to forfeit a charter, that a complaint showing that the articles of incorporation were signed by five persons, and acknowledged by four only, stated a cause of action.—People v. Montecito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276, 33 Am. St. Rep. 172, 32 Pac. 236.

[d] It is not necessary to the validity of the corporation or to the subscribers who agreed to its formation becoming stockholders, that they should all sign the articles of incorporation.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349.

[e] The articles of incorporation of benevolent or social associations organized without profit under sections 593 and 594 of the Civil Code must be subscribed and acknowledged by at least five persons, in accordance with section 292 of the Civil Code, in addition to the verification required by section 594 of that code.—People ex rel. Weatherly v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257, 60 Pac. 865.

[a] Effect must be given so far as possible to the consistent provisions of the Civil Code relating to the formation of corporations; and the fact that section 594 provides for the contents of articles of incorporation of the associations mentioned in section 593, in addition to the requirements of section 290, and further provides a mode of verification of such articles, cannot be construed as providing a complete scheme for their authentication, or as dispensing with the additional authentication required by section 292, which is not inconsistent with sections 290, 593, and 594.—People ex rel. v. Golden Gate Lodge, 128 Cal. 257, 60 Pac. 865.

[b] Section 290 of the Civil Code applies to associations organized for benevolent and social purposes, and hence such a corporation, the articles of which were verified by only two persons, was not duly organized.—People v. Golden Gate Lodge, No. 6, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of United States of America, 128 Cal. 257, 60 Pac. 865.

[c] The verification required by Civil Code, section 594, requiring that the articles of incorporation of a benevolent association must set forth certain facts relating to the election of directors, "which facts must be verified by the officers conducting the same," is an essential prerequisite to the assumption of corporate powers by the association as a de jure corporation.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

Necessity that foreign corporation file articles. See post, § 479.

[a] The statute provides that a certificate of incorporation shall be filed with the county clerk, and a duplicate with the Secretary of State, and that when a certificate is filed the persons shall be a corporation. Held that, as to third persons, the filing in the clerk's office was all that was required.—Mokelumne Hill Canal etc. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424, 73 Am. Dec. 658.

[b] That a duplicate certificate is not filed in the office of the Secretary of State on the organization of a corporation, as provided by the statute, is a matter between the corporation and the state, and not necessary to be shown, on the issue of corporation and incorporation, in suits against third persons.—Mokelumne Hill Canal etc. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424, 73 Am. Dec. 658.

[c] Where articles of incorporation state one county to be the principal place of business, and instead of being filed in that county, as required by the statute, are filed in another county, the corporation does not become one de jure.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

[d] Civil Code, section 296, requires every corporation to file its articles of incorporation in the county of its principal place of business, and a certified copy in the office of the Secretary of State. Section 299 provides that it shall file "a copy of the copy of its articles of incorporation filed in the office of the Secretary of State, duly certified by such Secretary of State," in the office of the clerk of any county in which it holds any property, and, further, that it shall not maintain or defend any action in relation to such property "until such articles of incorporation, and such certified copy of its articles of incorporation, and such certified copy of the copy of its articles of incorporation shall be filed at the places directed by the general law and this section." Held, that a certified copy of the copy on file with the Secretary of State was the only one required by section 299 to be filed in counties because property was there situated.—California Savings etc. Soc. v. Harris, 111 Cal. 133, 43 Pac. 525.

§ 23. —— Proof of Issuance and Filing.

[a] When the fact of the issuance of a certificate of incorporation by the Secretary of State as directed by Civil Code, section 296, is in issue, the presumption "that official duty has been regularly performed," as declared by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, cannot dispense with legal proof that such certificate was issued.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[b] Articles of incorporation of plaintiff with filing marks thereon held evidence of proper filing of articles and due incorporation. Sierra Land etc. Co. v. Bricker (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 665.

[a] A change of the laws of a mutual benefit association in regard to the payment of benefit certificates is not an amendment of its certificate of incorporation or articles of association, within the meaning of Civil Code, section 362, providing the method for making such amendments.—Bowie v. Grand Lodge of Legion of the West, 99 Cal. 392, 34 Pac. 103.

See, also, Partnership, § 17.

[a] A partnership or a joint stock company is not necessarily the result of an abortive attempt to organize a corporation.—Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

§ 27. —— Property Rights of Organizers.

[a] Where certain persons associated themselves in a corporation for the development of land for irrigation purposes, and each conveyed land to the corporation, and two of them contracted to pay a third the difference in the proportionate value of the land conveyed by him, and no stock was ever issued in the corporation, it will be treated as a trustee for the associates in an action between them for an accounting, and its capital stock treated as partnership assets sold, and the proceeds distributed among them in proportion to the value of the property contributed by each.—Shorb v. Beaudry, 56 Cal. 446.

[a] A corporation fraudulently organized to avoid payment of mining royalties under a lease held liable for such royalties.—Higgins v. California Petroleum etc. Co., 147 Cal. 363, 81 Pac. 1070.

§ 29. Official Recognition of Invalid Corporation.

[a] Where the constitution of the state forbids corporations to be created except by general laws, the mere recognition of a corporate body, as an existing corporation, in acts of the legislature, cannot operate to give the organization validity.—Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas County Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

§ 30. Unauthorized Assumption of Corporate Existence.

[a] Where persons knowingly and fraudulently assume or pretend to have a corporate existence, they may be held liable as individuals; but where they are acting in good faith, supposing that they are stockholders or members in a valid corporation, and where the corporation assumes to transact business for a number of years, and the assumed corporate existence is not challenged by the state, they cannot be held liable as individuals. The principle that shields the members from claims of persons dealing with the corporation under such circumstances is equally efficacious to protect the members as between themselves.—Perkins v. Fish, 121 Cal. 317, 53 Pac. 901.

§ 31. What Constitutes.

[a] Preliminary organization, and doing business in good faith, is sufficient to make company a corporation de facto.—Stockton etc. Co. v. Stockton etc. Co., 45 Cal. 680.

[b] Body acting as corporation in good faith is de facto corporation.—Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Crane, 80 Cal. 186, 22 Pac. 76.

[c] Corporation de facto exists where a number of persons have organized and acted as a corporation; and where the directors named in the articles never met nor acted, and no stock is issued, nor by-laws passed, nor seal adopted, or any election held, nor any other corporate act done by an intended corporation, it is not a corporation de facto, and its right to exist as a corporation may be collaterally attacked in a private action.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Cal. 368.

See, also, ante, § 6; post, §§ 63, 67, 268.

[a] An individual cannot become a corporation de facto by assuming the name of a toll-road company, where there are no directors or officers, and no acts in corporate forms.—People v. Volcano Cañon etc. Co., 100 Cal. 87, 34 Pac. 522.

§ 34. Proof of Existence.

[a] On an indictment for arson committed with intent to defraud an insurance company, testimony of a witness that he was acting as the agent of the company, and effected the insurance on the property and delivered the policy, which was received by the defendant, is sufficient to warrant a finding that the corporation had a de facto existence.—People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

[b] The de facto existence of a corporation may be proved by parol, but the proof must be of reputation, and not by a direct statement of a witness, so that a witness cannot testify that a certain bank is a corporation. Judgment (1898), 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[c] In a suit involving the corporate existence of a benevolent association, evidence that there were no meetings of the members or trustees, no election of officers, no by-laws adopted, no certificate of shares issued, no seal adopted or used, no records kept, and that the institution was managed after the attempted incorporation as it had been before, was sufficient to sustain a finding that it was not a corporation de facto.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[a] Corporation de facto may legally do and perform every act and thing which the same entity could do or perform were it a de jure corporation. As to all the world, except the paramount authority under which it acts and from which it receives its charter, it occupies the same position as though in all respects valid, and even as against the state, except in direct proceedings to arrest its usurpation of power, its acts are binding.—People v. La Rue, 67 Cal. 526, 8 Pac. 84.

§ 36. Rights in Franchise or Property.

[a] A de facto corporation can be deprived of its franchise or property only in a direct proceeding by the state.—Los Angeles Holiness Band v. Spires, 126 Cal. 541, 58 Pac. 1049.

Attack on existence of de jure corporation. See post, §§ 51-53.

[a] Question whether a de facto corporation was organized strictly according to law can only be inquired into at the suit of the state, or on information by the attorney general.—Rondell v. Fay, 32 Cal. 354.

[b] A mere trespasser cannot justify his entry on the ground that plaintiff was only a corporation de facto, and was not de jure entitled to a franchise.—Stockton etc. R. Co. v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 45 Cal. 680.

[a] The corporate existence of a corporation de facto cannot be inquired into collaterally. It is, as to all who contract with it, to be assumed to be a corporation de jure. The legality of its corporate existence may be inquired into by the state, but not by anyone else. And this is equally true where the corporation is formed under a general law as under a special charter.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434; Pacific Bank v. De Ro, 37 Cal. 538; Bakersfield Town Hall Assn. v. Chester, 55 Cal. 99.

[b] Right of company, doing business as a corporation de facto, and claiming in good faith to be a corporation under laws of state, to act as corporation, cannot be inquired into collaterally in a private action to which the corporation de facto may be a party.—Dannebroge Mining Co. v. Allment, 26 Cal. 286.

[c] Where it appears that plaintiff was recognized in the community as a corporation, and its records show that it was acting as such, and in all its dealings was so styled, and that it had held corporate meetings, and pursued corporate forms of action, sufficient is shown to bring it within Civil Code, section 358, which declares that "the due incorporation of any company claiming in good faith to be a corporation, and doing business as such, shall not be inquired into collaterally in any private suit to which such de facto corporation may be a party."—Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Crane, 30 Cal. 181, 22 Pac. 76.

[d] The validity of the incorporation of a body, which is de facto existing and acting, cannot be questioned collaterally, but only in a direct proceeding in behalf of the people.—Dean v. Davis, 51 Cal. 406.

[e] Due incorporation of a company claiming in good faith to be a corporation under the laws of the state cannot be collaterally attacked, where the incorporators signed and acknowledged the articles stating the object, name, duration, amount of stock, place of business, and number of trustees, and attempted to file the articles, but by mistake filed them with the wrong officer, and took possession of its property, and did business named in the articles.—Bakersfield Town Hall Assn. v. Chester, 55 Cal. 98.

[f] Corporate existence of a plaintiff in ejectment may be established by evidence that it was a corporation de facto.—Oakland Gaslight Co. v. Dameron, 67 Cal. 663, 8 Pac. 595.

[g] Validity of the incorporation of a corporation which had properly signed and acknowledged its articles could not be collaterally attacked on the ground that the articles were erroneously filed with the county recorder, instead of the county clerk.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

Contracts of promoters before incorporation. See post, § 375.

[a] An agreement to form a corporation for certain specified purposes, and to make a part payment on the shares of stock subscribed by the contracting parties within a specified time after the filing of the articles of incorporation, to a person therein designated as agent, inures, with its advantages and rights, to the benefit of the corporation upon its formation, irrespective of any agreement, or want of agreement, to that effect, and notwithstanding it may contain special provisions for carrying its own terms into execution.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 94 Cal. 399, 29 Pac. 785.

[b] Where a street railroad franchise was granted to two persons, and they thereupon organized a corporation for the express purpose of constructing and operating a railroad under the franchise, and so declared in the articles of incorporation, an assignment of the franchise by said persons to the corporation was not necessary to vest the latter with any right relating thereto.—Santa Rosa City R. § 40. Promoter Defined.

[a] A promoter of a corporation is a person who, by his active endeavors, assists in procuring the formation of the company and the subscription of its shares, whether he afterward becomes connected with the company or not, and he is considered in law as occupying a fiduciary relation to the corporation and to its shareholders who subscribe upon the trust that the promoters will control the enterprise for the benefit of the company.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

[a] Promoter of corporation who brings about its organization and aids in procuring subscriptions thereto is considered in law as occupying a fiduciary relationship toward the corporation and its stockholders.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

§ 42. Promoter's Agents.

[a] Authority to agents of promoters of corporation to sell land of the promoters to the corporation for a commission tends, in connection with other evidence, to prove authority to such agents to promote the corporation.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

§ 43. Duty in Selling Property to Corporation.

[a] A promoter of a corporation or joint stock association may sell property thereto, but it is incumbent upon him, as a person occupying a fiduciary position, to make full and fair disclosure of his interest and position with respect to the property, and not to make any false representations as to its cost price.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

[b] In an accounting had against a promoter of the corporation he should be credited with a sum paid to perfect the title of one of the tracts sold, and should only be charged with the profit actually realized upon a particular tract.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

§ 44. Liability of Corporation for Promoter's Acts and Contracts.

[a] Corporation is not responsible for acts nor bound by contracts of promoters before incorporation, unless made so by its charter or its own contract or ratification.—Mitchell v. Patterson, 120 Cal. 293, 52 Pac. 589.

[b] Promoters are not the corporation and their contracts are not its contracts.—Scadden etc. Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 38, 53 Pac. 440.

§ 45. Fraud and Ratification or Waiver Thereof.

[a] Where fraud is practiced upon the stockholders by the promoters of the corporation, knowledge of it by the directors is not knowledge to the stockholders, and the fraud practiced upon the stockholders cannot be ratified or waived by the directors.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

[b] Transactions in which the promoters of a corporation suppress or misrepresent material facts, or otherwise deceive the corporation, or corruptly control its action, are fraudulent, and the company may elect either to set aside such transaction, or to recover the promoter's secret profits.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

COMMENCEMENT OF CORPORATE EXISTENCE, § 56.
EXTENDING FRANCHISE TO TERM OF EXISTENCE, § 57.
AMENDMENT OR REPEAL OF CHARTER, § 58.

§ 46. Nature of Franchise.

[a] The right to be a corporation is a franchise, and to acquire a franchise under a general law the required statutory conditions must be complied with.—People ex rel. Hamilton v. Selfridge, 52 Cal. 331.

[b] Franchises are legal estates, not mere naked powers, and are powers coupled with an interest which vest in corporation by virtue of charter and constating instruments. Spring Valley W. W. v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69.

[c] Very existence of corporation as such is franchise, and it exercises its franchise in every act which it performs as a corporation. A corporation whose existence is a franchise may possess powers and privileges which in themselves are not franchises; but it usually owns along with such privileges some that are franchises, but whether the powers be entirely of the kind which are franchises or not, its existence and right to employ its corporate powers is a franchise.—Spring Valley W. W. v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69.

[d] That a corporation is organized to and may acquire public uses or franchises does not make such franchises "when acquired" a part of the corporation's general franchise to be and act as a corporation.—San Joaquin etc. Irr. Co. v. Merced County (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 285.

§ 47. Effect of Franchise as Vesting in Corporation.

[a] Where a franchise was granted to an individual and his associates and assigns, with a provision in the act requiring their incorporation within a fixed time, it was held that the franchise passed to the corporation so formed by operation of law.—Spring Valley W. W. v. San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[a] Stockholder owning majority of stock does not own franchise of the corporation, and is not a trustee of the other stockholders.—Johnsen v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 488, 4 Pac. 458.

§ 49. —— Assignability and Liability to Forced Sale.

[a] Franchises of a corporation are privileges granted and held in personal trust, and cannot be transferred by forced sale, or by voluntary assignment except by permission of the government, and, when that permission is granted, the mode of transfer pointed out must be followed.—Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

[b] Corporate franchise may be assigned to a legally organized corporation by persons having lawful right to exercise and transfer it.—People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 371, 18 Pac. 85, 19 Pac. 693.

Right to prove corporate existence by hearsay evidence, in criminal prosecution. See Criminal Law, § 192.

Degree of proof required to prove corporate existence. See Criminal Law, § 279.

[a] Existence of a corporation formed under a general statute cannot be proved without proof of at least a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute, differing herein from a corporation under a special charter, whose existence is proved prima facie by production of the charter, and proof of a user under it.—Mokelumne Hill Canal etc. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424, 73 Am. Dec. 658.

[b] Existence of corporation formed under general corporation laws of this state is proved by its articles of association or incorporation, executed and filed in accordance with the statute.—Spring Valley W. W. v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[c] Proof of a company raises no presumption that it is an incorporated company; nor, if the name of a state appears in the name of the company, does it raise the presumption that it was incorporated under the laws of that state.—Briggs v. McCullough, 36 Cal. 542.

[d] Where a certificate of incorporation is legally defective for want of conformity to the statutory requirements under which it purports to have been made, it cannot be used as proof of a corporation in esse.—McCallion v. Hibernia Savings etc. Soc., 70 Cal. 163, 12 Pac. 114.

[e] Copy of certified copy of articles proves corporate existence.—Fresno etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 382, 14 Pac. 37.

[f] Evidence reviewed and held sufficient to prove corporate existence.—Fresno etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 382, 14 Pac. 37.

[g] Proof that body was recognized in community as corporation and was acting as such is sufficient proof of corporate existence.—Lakeside Ditch Co. v. Crane, 80 Cal. 185, 186, 22 Pac. 76.

[h] Where a patent to a mining claim was issued to the California Iron, Mining and Smelting Company, which patentee conveyed the claim to defendant, the patent was proof that the patentee was a corporation.—Galbraith v. Shasta Iron Co., 143 Cal. xviii, 94, 76 Pac. 901, 1127.

[i] Receipt showing that defendants contracted with plaintiff in its corporate name held competent evidence as to plaintiff's incorporation.—Sierra Land etc. Co. v. Bricker (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 665.

[a] The allegation that the plaintiffs are a corporation is an indispensable allegation in any action brought by them, and necessarily the adverse party may deny it. The statute does not contemplate that the mere allegation that the company has been duly organized should put that fact beyond dispute, but only that, when the evidence establishes that the company claims in good faith to be a corporation, and is actually doing business as such, then its due incorporation shall not be inquired into collaterally. Irregularities or defects in the mode of performing the acts prescribed by law as constituting a corporation cannot be set up by a private individual, but he may show that those acts have not been performed at all.—Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas County Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

[b] Upon an application for a mandamus to compel county authorities to complete their subscription to the stock of plaintiff's railroad company, the defendants may deny the plaintiff's incorporation, and may deny that they have complied with the provisions of the law prescribing their organization, or are doing business as a railroad company.—Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas County Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

[c] The corporate existence of a company which is neither a de facto nor de jure corporation may be questioned in a private action to which it is a party.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

§ 52. —— By Trespasser.

[a] Mere trespasser cannot question corporation's existence in action by it for injury to its property.—Golden Gate etc. Co. v. Hendy M. Works, 82 Cal. 186, 23 Pac. 45.

§ 54. Estoppel to Question Capacity or Existence.

[a] In contracts of corporations, where the question is one of capacity or authority to contract, arising either upon a question of regularity in the corporate organization, or of power conferred by the charter, a party who has had the benefit of the contract cannot be allowed, in a suit upon it, to question its validity,—Argenti v. City of San Francisco, 16 Cal. 255.

into collaterally in any private suit to which it is a party, defective incorporation cannot be set up as a defense to an action by a corporation to recover on a note.—Pacific Bank v. De Ro, 37 Cal. 538.

[c] The provisions of Statutes of 1862, page 110, section 6, does not go to the extent of precluding a private person from denying the existence de jure or de facto of an alleged corporation. The mere allegation that a party is a corporation cannot put the question whether it is such a corporation beyond the reach of inquiry in a suit with a private person.—Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas County Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

[d] A person making a contract with a corporation as such is estopped to deny its corporate existence, where the contract was within the power of the corporation to make, and where its organization was sufficient to make it a de facto corporation.—Pacific Bank v. De Ro, 37 Cal. 538.

[e] One contracting with an alleged corporation in the use of corporate powers and franchises, and within the scope of such powers, is estopped to deny its corporate existence, in an action by the corporation to enforce the contract.—Grangers' Business Assn. v. Clark, 67 Cal. 634, 8 Pac. 445; Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 379, 14 Pac. 37.

[f] One who has contracted with an apparent corporation as such is estopped, in an action on the contract, from denying the existence of the corporation.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 379, 14 Pac. 37.

[g] Making a corporation a party in a proceeding to forfeit its charter is not such an admission of its corporate character as to preclude the state from questioning its right to corporate existence.—People v. Montecito Water Co., 97 Cal. 276, 33 Am. St. Rep. 172, 32 Pac. 236.

[h] One who has given a note or other evidence of indebtedness to a corporation by its corporate name cannot deny that the corporation was legally organized.—Bank of Shasta v. Boyd, 99 Cal. 604, 34 Pac. 337.

[i] One purchasing goods from a corporation is estopped to deny its corporate capacity.—Raphael Weill & Co. v. Crittenden, 139 Cal. 488, 73 Pac. 238.

[j] Party making contract with corporation cannot, by way of collateral attack, deny that it was a corporation.—California etc. Assn. v. Stelling, 141 Cal. 720, 75 Pac. 320.

[a] Under our law corporations have a legal existence from the date of filing the certificate of incorporation in the county clerk's office.—Mokelumne Hill Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424, 73 Am. Dec. 658.

§ 57. Extending Franchise or Term of Existence.

[a] Where a corporation organized prior to the adoption of the code had thereafter continued its existence thereunder, it became a code corporation, and might therefore extend the term of its existence beyond the original period of its limitation.—People v. Pfister, 57 Cal. 532.

[b] Constitution, article 12, section 7, provides that no act shall be passed extending the charter of any corporation or remitting the forfeiture of a franchise. During the pendency of an action to forfeit the charter of a street-car company alleged to be operating under an unwarranted city ordinance authorizing the use of electric power, acts of 1891, chapters 18, 19, were passed, one amending Civil Code, section 497, so as to invest municipal corporations with power to authorize street railways to use electricity as a motive power; the other ratifying existing ordinances granting such power. Held, that the acts did not extend the company's franchise or charter, and, as there had been no decree of forfeiture, there was none to remit, and therefore the acts were not repugnant to the constitution.—People v. Los Angeles Electric Ry. Co., 91 Cal. 338, 27 Pac. 673.

[c] Civil Code, section 288, provided that no corporation formed or existing before the code took effect should be affected by its provisions unless such corporation should elect to continue its existence thereunder. Held, that the provisions which did not affect such corporation without its election were such only as related to the formation and existence of corporations.—McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57, 43 Pac. 418.

[d] Civil Code, sections 287, 401, permitting corporations to continue their existence for fifty years, on certain terms, is not limited to private corporations as distinguished from quasi public corporations.—People v. Auburn, etc. Turnpike Co., 122 Cal. 335, 55 Pac. 10.

[a] Charters may be amended or repealed at any time.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 119, 15 Pac. 380.

[b] Power of legislature to amend or repeal the charters of corporations organized in California does not authorize the legislature, while the corporation exists, to deprive it of the rights, guaranteed to it by the federal constitution, to due process of law, and to the equal protection of the laws, nor has the legislature any power to alter, amend, or repeal the charters of foreign corporations doing business in this state.—Johnson v. Goodyear Min. Co., 127 Cal. 4, 78 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 304.

§ 59. Change of Names.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1276, providing that any religious, benevolent, literary, scientific, "or other corporation," or any corporation having, or being known by, the name of any benevolent or charitable society, may apply to the superior court for a change of its corporate name, is not restricted in its application to corporations of the kind specially enumerated, but applies to a corporation organized for profit.—In re La Societe Francaise De Pargnes et de Prevoyance Mutuelle, 123 Cal. 525, 56 Pac. 458, 787.

§ 60. Use of Name Similar to that of Another Company.

[a] While a private person may engage in a business in his own name, although his name is used in the same business by a corporation of which he was at one time a leading stockholder, so long as he does not resort to any artifice to produce the impression that the place of business conducted by him and that conducted by the corporation are identical, yet he cannot, by becoming a stockholder in a new corporation, confer on it the right to adopt a name similar to that used by the former corporation to palm off the business of the new corporation as that of the old.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where a name adopted by a corporation is so similar to that of another corporation as to create confusion and enable the later corporation to obtain the business of the prior one, injunction will lie to restrain the simulation, so far as necessary to protect the rights of the prior corporation.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[b] The use by one corporation or individual of a name similar to that of another corporation engaged in the same business will be enjoined only so far as is necessary to protect against fraudulent representations.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[c] A corporation engaging in business under a name similar to that of another corporation engaged in the same business should be enjoined from making use of that name only in the business in which both corporations were engaged, and not from making use thereof in any other business.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[d] The names "The Dodge Stationery Company" and the "J. S. Dodge Company," when taking into consideration the fact that the business conducted by the latter is the same as that conducted by the former, are sufficiently similar to warrant an injunction restraining the latter from conducting its business under the name adopted by it.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[e] A person whose name was used as the corporate name of a corporation of which he was at one time president, and whose surname was used as the popular name of that corporation, who engaged in the same business, after the termination of his connection with the corporation, in a new corperation making use of his name as a corporate name and of his surname standing alone as a popular name, was properly enjoined from engaging in the business and at the place in the same city where the new corporation had established itself, and had used misleading signs similar to those used by the old corporation, and from causing any business similar to that of the old corporation to be carried on by the new corporation in the city under the designation of the surname without a qualifying statement that the business so carried on was not the business theretofore carried on by the old corporation under that name, and from in any manner representing that such business was the same business as that carried on by the old corporation; but a further provision of the injunction restraining him from using his own name in the carrying on of the business at any other place in the city unless qualifying that name by explanatory statements making its use burdensome was unauthorized.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[a] Admitted, for the purposes of this decision, that a corporation may adopt the private seal of the several trustees or any one of them as its seal for the occasion.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

[b] A seal affixed to an instrument, which purports to be the corporate seal of a corporation, must, in the absence of objection, be presumed to be genuine, as well as to have been affixed by proper authority, and is evidence of the corporate act which it purports to authenticate.—Burnett v. Lyford, 93 Cal. 114, 28 Pac. 855.

[c] Where a seal which had not been formally adopted by a corporation was used for the first time in the execution of instruments afterward in question, the finding that it had become the common seal of the corporation by use is sustained by a showing that it had afterward been employed as the seal of the corporation in all transactions requiring the impress of a seal.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017, 45 Pac. 252.

§ 63. —— Of Sole Corporation.

[a] A sole corporation has no need of a corporate seal, nor of a secretary or treasurer, nor of by-laws. His own will and judgment alone regulate his acts, like any other individual acting in his own right. His possession of land, when the title is in him as an individual, can in no way be distinguished from his holding thereof as a sole corporation when the title is in the corporation.—Roman Catholic Archbishop of San Francisco v. Shipman, 79 Cal. 288, 21 Pac. 830.

§ 64. Domicile or Place of Business.

[a] Every corporation has a "residence," within the meaning of the word as used in the practice act, where its principal office or place of business is established.—Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 537.

[b] It is duty of every corporation to have an office and principal place of business. Chapman v. Doray, 89 Cal. 54, 26 Pac. 605.

[c] Corporation's residence is county where it has its principal place of business.—Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47, 36 Pac. 395.

§ 65. Evidence of Domicile.

[a] In proceedings by creditors of a corporation to have the same declared insolvent, the creditors may prove by parol evidence in what county the corporation has its place of business.—Creditors v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 98 Cal. 318, 33 Pac. 196.

See, also, post, § 178.

[a] In the absence of legislative restriction, the propriety and character of a corporation's by-laws are to be determined by the corporation itself.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189, 81 Pac. 1029.

[a] Sole corporation has no need of by-laws. Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Shipman, 79 Cal. 288, 21 Pac. 830.

[a] By-laws are the body of rules laid down for government of corporation, its officers and stockholders in conduct of its affairs.—Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 161, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090.

[b] The function of a by-law of a private corporation is to prescribe the rights and duties of members with reference to the internal government of the corporation, the management of its affairs, and the rights of members inter se.—Bornstein v. District Grand Lodge No. 4, Independent Order B'nai B'rith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 271.

§ 69. —— Power to Enact.

[a] A corporation's power to make by-laws, conferred by Civil Code, section 354, held not limited by section 303.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189, 81 Pac. 1029.

[b] Corporations may make only such by-laws as are consistent with the constitution and laws of the state.—Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090.

[c] A corporation's right to enact by-laws, while inherent and incident to its existence, is subject to the condition that the by-laws must be reasonable and not contravene the charter or any existing state law.—Bornstein v. District Grand Lodge No. 4, Independent Order B'nai B'rith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 271.

[b] By-laws of a corporation construed, and held to authorize the vice-president to call special meetings of the directors, in the absence or inability of the president to act.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[a] Act of April 11, 1862, section 10 (Stats. 1862, p. 201), provides that the capital stock of savings banks shall be a security for non-stockholding depositors, and that the by-laws may extend the security to stockholding depositors also. Defendant's by-laws formerly extended the security. Thereafter a "committee on revision of by-laws reported." The minutes recited that "the proposed new by-laws" were submitted; and subsequent minutes that "the same are hereby declared to be the by-laws." The by-laws were set out in full in the minutes, and contained no provision making the capital stock a security to depositors, whether stockholders or not. Held, that the by-laws as adopted in the later meetings were new by-laws, and not mere amendments of the former by-laws, and hence the provision of the old by-laws extending the security to stock-holding depositors was not continued in force.—Murphy v. Pacific Bank, 130 Cal. 542, 62 Pac. 1059.

[a] A stockholder of a corporation is bound by its duly and regularly adopted by-laws, whether he has signed them or not.—McFadden v. Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles County, 74 Cal. 571, 16 Pac. 397.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 301, providing for the adoption of by-laws after organization of a corporation, a copy of by-laws prepared and signed by the stockholders before organization is invalid.—Vercoutere v. Golden State Land Co., 116 Cal. 410, 48 Pac. 375.

[c] Signature of stockholder to by-laws, though made before organization of corporation, constitutes an agreement which corporation can enforce after formation.—Vercoutere v. Golden State L. Co., 116 Cal. 415, 48 Pac. 375.

[a] By-laws which contravene provisions of an existing law are void.—Vercoutere v. Golden State L. Co., 116 Cal. 412, 48 Pac. 375.

[b] By-laws of a corporation cannot have the effect of forbidding what the law expressly authorizes.—Reclamation Dist. v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 56, 4 Pac. 945.

[c] By-law relieving stockholders from constitutional or statutory liability is void.—Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 162, 163, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090.

[a] Corporation cannot pass a retrospective by-law to prevent transfer of stock until indebtedness to company is paid.—People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112.

[b] Where a by-law of a corporation expressly provides that it shall operate retrospectively, and its effect is to annul or impair an existing obligation of the corporation, it will be held unreasonable and in contravention of existing laws.—Bornstein v. District Grand Lodge No. 4, Independent Order B'nai B'rith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 271.

§ 76. —— Abridging Rights of Members.

[a] Substantial rights of a stockholder cannot be taken from him or even abridged by the by-laws.—People's Home Savings Bank v. Superior Court, 104 Cal. 649, 43 Am. St. Rep. 147, 38 Pac. 452.

[a] Where actual notice of by-laws is necessary it must be proved against shareholders and agents, as well as against strangers, by direct or presumptive evidence, and cannot be imputed by an arbitrary rule of law.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[a] The last clause of article 12, section 11, prohibiting the increase of the stock by a corporation, except in a certain manner, is not self-executing.—Ewing v. Oroville Min. Co., 56 Cal. 649.

[b] Code, section 359, authorizing the increase of corporate stock on the written assent of the holders of three-fourths of the capital stock, being in contravention of Constitution, article 12, section 11, prohibiting a corporation from increasing its stock except on the assent of the holders of a majority of the stock at a meeting called for that purpose, on sixty days' notice, is unconstitutional and void, and hence an increase under such section was void.—Ewing v. Oroville Min. Co., 56 Cal. 649.

[c] Constitution, article 1, section 22, article 12, section 11, and Civil Code, section 359, held to prohibit any increase in the capital stock of a corporation, unless sixty days' notice of the meeting at which the increase is voted is given.—Navajo Mining etc. Co. v. § 82. Reduction.

[a] The fact that corporation becomes the owner of the shares converted, where a recovery is had for the conversion, is not ground for refusing the remedy for such recovery, as the authorized capital is not reduced by such ownership, and the shares are not extinguished, and may be reissued by the corporation.—Ralston v. Bank of California, 112 Cal. 208, 44 Pac. 476.

[b] Capital and all assets except surplus profits are to be retained intact and form a fund to secure corporate creditors.—People v. San Francisco Savings Union, 72 Cal. 204, 13 Pac. 498.

[c] Money or property received by corporation in exchange for its capital stands in place of such capital, and cannot be divided or withdrawn.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 386, 390, 22 Pac. 689.

[e] There can be no division of capital stock among shareholders except on dissolution of corporation.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 388, 22 Pac. 689.

[f] Unanimous agreement or consent of shareholders will not authorize distribution of any part of capital stock (Civ. Code, 309). Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 386, 22 Pac. 689.

[g] "Capital stock" which directors are prohibited from withdrawing or dividing among stockholders means money and property with which corporation carries on its corporate business (Civ. Code, sec. 309).—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 384, 385, 22 Pac. 689.

[h] Corporation not for profit cannot divide any part of its funds among its members.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 69, 24 Pac. 111.

[i] Mining corporation may distribute its net earnings, although the value of its mine is thereby diminished; and it is not deemed to have divided its capital, within the meaning of section 309 of the Civil Code, merely because it has distributed the net proceeds of its mining operations.—Excelsior Water etc. Co. v. § 84. Contract of Subscription.

[a] Rights in corporation under our laws can be fixed by contract. A man can as well make an agreement with another for certain stock in a corporation to be organized hereafter as an agreement for stock in a corporation already existing; and may contract that each shall have so many shares of stock on such and such terms.—Chater v. San Francisco etc. Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[b] A, B, and C entered into an agreement to form a corporation for commercial purposes. Each was, by this agreement and by the corporate act, to have an equal share of the stock. Two contributed capital in money. The third gave his note, pledging his stock as security; the other two agreeing to raise the money for him on his stock. It was agreed that the stock due him should be issued on a given event, which occurred, but his note was not made, nor the stock issued; but the company, controlled by the other two corporators, went on in its business, recognizing the third as a corporator. No demand was made for his note or the stock. His share in the profits of the corporation amounted to enough to pay his contribution. Held, that the two must be held to have waived their formal rights, they having omitted to demand the note and stock, and having otherwise obtained the object of this security, and that the third might recover his stock in a suit for that purpose.—Chater v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[c] Defendant and others, for the purpose of forming a corporation, agreed to "subscribe for stock to the amount set opposite to our respective names; amounts to be due and payable on the formation of the company and the issuance of the stock." Held, that the corporation, when formed, could sue on such agreement as a contract made for its benefit.—Marysville Electric Light etc. Co. v. Johnson, 93 Cal. 538, 27 Am. St. Rep. 215, 29 Pac. 126.

[d] In an action by an opera-house company to recover a subscription to its capital stock, it appeared that a "prospectus" recited in detail the objects of the intended corporation, the amount of stock, etc.; that the subscriptions were to be called in on installments; and that defendant signed the prospectus for a certain number of shares. Held, that the prospectus constituted a contract under which defendant was liable for the amount of his subscription.—Auburn Opera House etc. Assn. v. Hill, 113 Cal. 382, 45 Pac. 695, affirming (1893) 32 Pac. 587.

[e] It is not necessary, for one to subscribe to a subscription agreement to become the owner of shares and the holder of original certificates of the first issue of a corporation's stock.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136.

[f] If acting in good faith, it is valid for all the stockholders to agree that shares of stock be issued to themselves in exchange for property conveyed by them to the corporation, and to acquire which, in part, the corporation is formed.—Garretson v. Pacific Crude Oil Co., 146 Cal. 184, 79 Pac. 838.

[g] In a stock subscription, by which the subscribers agreed "to take the number of shares set opposite our names respectively, and thereon to pay the amount in cash named, to wit, ten per cent of the amount of stock by us subscribed, to B., treasurer of said corporation," opposite the name of each subscriber, under the words "Stock Subscribed," was written "two thousand dollars," and under the words "Amount of Cash" was written "two hundred dollars paid." Held, that the obligation on the subscription was not limited to the two hundred dollars, but this amount was to be paid contemporaneously with the subscription, and the balance on call.—Ventura etc. Ry. Co. v. Collins (Cal.), 46 Pac. 287.

[a] Mutual promise of subscribers, one to the other, is sufficient consideration for promise of each.—West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 32, 21 Pac. 1136.

[a] Terms of statutes in force become part of contract of subscription.—Glenn v. Sexton, 68 Cal. 358, 9 Pac. 420.

[b] Agreement to subscribe to stock in corporation to be formed does not make subscriber member of corporation. To become member corporate articles must be subscribed.—West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 29, 21 Pac. 1136.

[c] The subscribers present at the organization of the corporation are not the agents of absent subscribers for the formation of the corporation, except for the formation of such a corporation as has been agreed upon, and there is no implied authority from a nonconsenting subscriber to go beyond the bounds agreed upon for the formation of the corporation.—Marysville Electric Light etc. Co. v. Johnson, 109 Cal. 192, 50 Am. St. Rep. 34, 41 Pac. 1016.

[d] In case of ambiguity, an agreement of one taking stock from a corporation to pay one dollar per month, for thirty-four months, will be held merely to be an arrangement to avoid necessity for calls and assessment, rather than a sale for less than par; the directors not being shown to have authority to so sell.—Tulare Sav. Bank v. Talbot, 131 Cal. 45, 63 Pac. 172.

[a] An agreement by a subscriber to the stock of a proposed corporation to pay the amount of his subscription upon the formation of the company and the issuance of its stock, and not as the same might be called for under section 322 of the Civil Code, is valid, and the measure of his liability is not fixed by that section of the code, but by the terms of his subscription, which may be enforced, regardless of the inability of the corporation to meet its liabilities or to satisfy the claims of creditors.—Marysville Electric Light and Power Co. v. Johnson, 93 Cal. 538, 27 Am. St. Rep. 215, 29 Pac. 126.

[b] Honest expressions of opinion as to the happening of future events affecting the business of a corporation, made by a stockholder and officer of the company, as an inducement to others to give a note for stock in the corporation, do not render the note voidable on the failure of the events to happen, when the happening of the events is not made a condition of payment.—Jefferson v. Hewitt, 95 Cal. 535, 30 Pac. 772.

[a] Where the purchaser is induced by the fraudulent representations of the seller to make a purchase of mining stock, he may, within a reasonable time, by restoring the seller to the situation he was in before the sale, rescind the contract, and resist the payment of the note given for the property.—Gifford v. Carvill, 29 Cal. 589.

[b] Offer to rescind a corporate stock subscription, claimed to have been induced by fraud, and to return all benefits received thereunder, as required by Civil Code, section 1691, subdivision 2, is vitiated by the purchaser's demand for the return of the amount of an assessment voluntarily paid after the discovery of the fraud alleged.—Marten v. Paul O. Burns Wine Co., 99 Cal. 355, 33 Pac. 1107.

[c] The cancellation or rescission of a subscription for corporate stock may be proved by circumstantial evidence, but, where such rescission is a necessary part of the plaintiff's case, the burden devolves upon plaintiff to prove such rescission, and, where the plaintiff fails to sustain such burden, a finding of the court against the rescission will not be disturbed.—Pacific Fruit Co. v. Coon, 107 Cal. 447, 40 Pac. 542.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 1691, subdivision 2, providing that a party desiring to rescind a contract must return, or offer to return, everything of value received by him under it, a purchaser of corporate stock from the corporation cannot rescind the purchase unless he returns or tenders dividends on the stock received from the corporation.—Marten v. Paul O. Burns Wine Co., 99 Cal. 355, 33 Pac. 1107.

[a] Plaintiff cannot rescind a purchase of stock of defendant corporation on the ground that he was induced to take the stock by false and fraudulent representations, where it appears that on the day that he claimed to have discovered the fraud he attended a stockholders' meeting, and voted for an assessment on the stock, and that afterward, before attempting to rescind, he attended another stockholders' meeting, and voluntarily paid the assessment on the stock.—Marten v. Paul O. Burns Wine Co., 99 Cal. 355, 33 Pac. 1107.

[a] Subscription to railroad stock upon a prospectus for organization after a certain amount is subscribed, leaves subscriber at option, if organization is upon a less sum.—Santa Cruz R. Co. v. Schwartz, 53 Cal. 106, 110.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 92. Conditions Precedent to Liability.

[a] Several persons signed a paper purporting to be an agreement to take stock in a corporation which, as the paper recited, was about to be formed. Afterward the paper was signed by the president and secretary, and the corporate seal affixed, and an action brought to recover from one of said subscribers the price named in the paper. The complaint did not state when the company was incorporated, and it was not shown that any of the subscribers joined in its formation or membership, or was authorized to sell any of the stock. Held, that the action could not be maintained.—California Sugar Mfg. Co. v. Schafer, 57 Cal. 396.

[b] Where subscribers agree that certain amount of stock shall be subscribed before corporation is formed, subscriber is under no obligation to pay subscription until condition is complied with.—California So. Hotel Co. v. Russell, 88 Cal. 280, 26 Pac. 105.

[c] Defendant agreed, in a contract of subscription to corporation stock, that he would pay his subscription upon the call of the board of directors. Held, in an action to recover a balance alleged to be due on the subscription, that it was unnecessary to defendant's ownership that a stock certificate should have been issued to him, it not being due till his subscription is fully paid, nor that the directors should have levied assessments on the stock.—California So. Hotel Co. v. Callender, 94 Cal. 120, 28 Am. St. Rep. 99, 29 Pac. 859.

[d] When the capital stock and the number of shares in a private corporation are fixed in the articles of association by general law or act of incorporation, no valid assessments can be made against a subscriber until all the shares are taken, unless there is a provision to that effect in the articles, or in the general law under which the corporation is formed, or unless there is a waiver.—(Cal. 1895) San Bernardino Inv. Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[e] An opera house company sued defendant to recover a subscription to its capital stock. Defendant had signed a prospectus which stated that the building was "to be built by a corporation with a capital stock of twenty thousand dollars, consisting of one thousand shares at twenty dollars per share." Held, that it was not a condition precedent to defendant's liability that twenty thousand dollars of plaintiff's stock should be first subscribed for.—Auburn Opera House etc. Assn. v. Hill, 32 Pac. 587.

[a] Where a subscriber for corporate stock sought to enforce subscriptions made under the same circumstances as his own, he could not repudiate his liability thereon under Civil Code, section 359, providing that no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid, labor done, or property received.—Richardson v. Chicago Packing etc. Co., 131 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 74.

[b] In an action by an opera house company to recover a subscription to its capital stock, it appeared that defendant was one of plaintiff's directors for two months, during which time he signed the articles of incorporation, was present at meetings of the board when the calls for the first two installments were ordered, and voted in favor of accepting the building lot, and that he served as a member of the building committee, prepared several plans for building, and consulted various architects and contractors about the same. Held that, though the subscription for the full amount of stock mentioned in such contract was a condition precedent to defendant's liability, he had waived any objection on the ground that such amount was not subscribed.—Auburn Opera House etc. Assn. v. Hill, 32 Pac. 587.

[a] A subscription for capital stock of a corporation cannot be canceled, except for fraud or mistake, without the consent of all the stockholders.—Pacific Fruit Co. v. Coon, 107 Cal. 447, 40 Pac. 542.

[b] Though the cancellation of a subscription for corporate stock may be shown by circumstantial evidence, the mere recitals in the minutes of the stockholders' meetings that so many shares of stock were represented "out of five thousand issued" is insufficient, when ten thousand shares were originally subscribed, and not enough was represented to constitute a lawful meeting, unless that alleged to have been canceled, or a large amount of other stock, had in fact been canceled.—Pacific Fruit Co. v. Coon, 107 Cal. 447, 40 Pac. 542.

§ 95. Release or Discharge.

[a] To an application for a writ of mandate to compel county supervisors to subscribe to the capital stock of plaintiff railroad company, the pendency of proceedings in quo warranto to oust the corporation from exercising corporate franchises is no defense.—Oroville etc. R. Co. v. Plumas County Supervisors, 37 Cal. 354.

[b] A promissory note executed for the purchase of a certain number of shares of a homestead association about to be formed, under a name and with a number of shares agreed upon when the note is given, does not fail for want of consideration because the association when formed has a name or number of shares of stock different from that agreed on, provided the land is the same, and the lots are of the same value as the promisor had reason to expect. The giver of the note in such case is, however, at liberty to stand on the terms of his contract; and, if it was understood that the shares of stock he is to receive should not cost, in the aggregate, more than a certain sum per share, he is at liberty to refuse the stock, if it will cost more than that sum, and the note is then void for want of consideration.—Mahan v. Wood, 44 Cal. 462.

[c] Release of a subscription for stock may be proved as well by the acquiescence of the stockholders, and the fact that the corporation did not regard it as binding, as by the records.—Tulare Sav. Bank v. Talbot, 131 Cal. 45, 63 Pac. 172.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 96. —— Changes in Nature of Business.

[a] A corporation formed for the "purpose of producing electricity and power" cannot maintain an action on a subscription to a corporation to be formed "for the purpose of furnishing the incandescent system of electric lighting."—Marysville Electric Light etc. Co. v. Johnson, 109 Cal. 192, 50 Am. St. Rep. 34, 41 Pac. 1016.

[a] Where directors are the only holders of corporate stock, payment by them for stock subscribed by transfer of land was not invalid.—Kellerman v. Maier, 116 Cal. 416, 48 Pac. 377.

[b[Directors cannot extend time for payment more than thirty days.—National P. O. Co. v. Chapellett (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 506.

§ 98. —— By Notes or Checks.

[a] Treasurer of a company about to form a railroad corporation may receive from the subscribers payment of the ten per cent required by law, in bank checks drawn by the subscribers, and payable at once, provided they are drawn against a sufficient fund, and the banks will pay them on presentation, and they are drawn in good faith and with no intention to evade the law.—People v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 45 Cal. 306, 13 Am. Rep. 178.

[c] A note given by a subscriber in payment of stock which was thereupon issued to the maker is not void under Constitution, article 12, section 11, providing that no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid.—(1886) Pacific Trust Co. v. Dorsey, 72 Cal. 55, 12 Pac. 49, 13 Pac. 148.

[d] A note given by a subscriber to the capital stock of a bank, in payment of a first assessment, the certificate for the stock being issued thereupon, is not void under Constitution, article 12, section 11, providing that "no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid," etc., nor under Statutes of 1875-76, page 729, section 1, which prohibits promissory notes to be computed as paid-in capital, or Penal Code, section 560, making it a misdemeanor to receive notes in payment of installments actually called.—Pacific Trust Co. v. Dorsey, 72 Cal. 55, 12 Pac. 49.

[e] The payment of a judgment obtained on the personal liability of a stockholder by a corporate creditor under Civil Code, section 322, cannot be considered as payment on unpaid corporate stock.—Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 Pac. 441.

[f] A note given by a subscriber in payment of a certificate which was thereupon issued is not void under Penal Code, section 560, providing that any director of a corporation voting to receive a note in payment of an assessment on stock subscriptions shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.—Pacific Trust Co. v. Dorsey, 13 Pac. 148.

[a] Person to whom subscriptions of stock are payable is trustee of express trust and authorized to collect money agreed to be paid.—West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 31, 21 Pac. 1123.

[b] Where, by a stock subscription contract, the subscribers agreed to pay a certain proportion of their stock before incorporation, and authorized defendants to draw on the person to whom such payments were made for property purchased for the corporation, defendants were not entitled to the custody of the money, nor to any part thereof, no property having been purchased by them prior to the organization of the company.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. West, 94 Cal. 399, 29 Pac. 785.

[c] When the agents appointed to draw and invest the funds repudiated their agency before any money was paid on the subscriptions, and refused to act under their appointment, and wholly abandoned the same, the corporation is entitled, as against their claim, to the custody of the money collected from the subscribers, and may maintain an action to recover the same from the collecting agent.—San Joaquin etc. Co. v. West, 94 Cal. 399, 29 Pac. 785.

[d] In an action by the corporation to recover the money which the agent had collected from the subscribers to the stock it is not necessary to make the parties named as agents of the corporation for the investment of the money in the purchase of land parties to the action, nor is the right of the corporation to recover the money in any respect affected by the substitution of two of such parties as defendants in place of the agent who collected it, and who has paid it into court, nor can such substituted defendants, after having repudiated their agency, claim that the presence of the third agent is essential to a determination of the plaintiff's right.—San Joaquin etc. Co. v. West, 94 Cal. 399, 29 Pac. 785.

§ 100. Actions on Subscriptions—Call or Assessment as Condition Precedent.

[a] Call made by chancery court has same effect as call made by president and directors.—Glenn v. Sexton, 68 Cal. 358, 9 Pac. 420.

[b] Where persons subscribe for a certain number of shares of stock in a corporation, and agree to pay one hundred dollars for each share, in such installments and at such times as, under the laws of the state, they may be required to pay the same, a decree in chancery or an assessment by the board of directors is not necessary in order to sustain an action to recover on the contract of subscription against nonresidents.—Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9, 33 Pac. 741.

10 Cyc. 510-538; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 471-520, §§ 383-434.

§ 101. —— Right of Corporation to Sue.

[a] Corporation cannot sue upon a subscription to its stock.—California etc. Co. v. Schafer, 57 Cal. 396.

[b] Corporation may maintain action on contract of subscription against a subscriber to its stock to recover calls made in pursuance to the terms of the contract; and it is not necessary that such calls should be made in the mode prescribed by the Civil Code for the levy of assessments upon the stock.—California Southern Hotel Co. v. Callender, 94 Cal. 120, 28 Am. St. Rep. 99, 28 Pac. 859.

[c] In an action by an opera house company to recover a subscription to its capital stock, it appeared that a "prospectus" recited in detail the objects of the intended corporation, the amount of stock, etc., and that the subscriptions were to be called in on installments; that defendants signed the prospectus for a certain number of shares; that four calls had been ordered by the board of directors, and payment demanded; and that defendant had failed to pay. Held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover.—Auburn Opera House etc. Assn. v. Hill, 32 Pac. 587.

[a] Fraudulent representations as to the value of the mine of a corporation, made by the seller of the stock of the company to the purchaser, as an inducement for the purchaser to buy, may be given in evidence, under a proper state of the pleadings, to defeat the collection of a promissory note given for the stock.—Gifford v. Carvill, 29 Cal. 589.

[b] In order that delay in the completion of the road may be available as a defense to a promissory note given upon a subscription for shares, the time of completion must be shown to have been a condition agreed upon by the parties as a term of the subscription.—Jefferson v. Hewitt, 95 Cal. 535, 30 Pac. 772.

[a] Statute does not begin to run against suit for unpaid subscription until call is made.—Glenn v. Sexton, 68 Cal. 358, 9 Pac. 420.

[b] Action must be brought within two years on subscription contract made out of state.—Glenn v. Sexton, 68 Cal. 358, 9 Pac. 420.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Limitation of actions against stockholders of corporations: 96 Am. St. Rep. 972, note.

[a] In an action by a corporation to enforce an agreement to subscribe to its capital stock, entered into before its organization, a complaint which does not show that the articles of incorporation failed to state that defendant was a subscriber to the capital stock, or the amount of such subscription, is good against a general demurrer.—Marysville Electric Light etc. Co. v. Johnson, 93 Cal. 538, 27 Am. St. Rep. 215, 29 Pac. 126.

[b] An action against the subscriber to stock upon his subscription, according to its terms, is not an action, under the statute, to recover assessments upon the subscribed capital stock, and the complaint need not aver an equal demand upon all of the subscribers, nor show a liability to an assessment under the statute, and any averments in regard to assessment or calls by the corporation upon the subscribers to its stock may be disregarded as surplusage.—Marysville Electric Light etc. Co. v. Johnson, 93 Cal. 538, 29 Pac. 126.

[a] A finding of fact that a mine owned by a corporation is valueless does not necessarily show that the stock of the corporation is valueless.—Gifford v. Carvill, 29 Cal. 589.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 537, providing for an attachment where the contract is unsecured by any lien or pledge, an attachment will lie in an action by a corporation to recover an unpaid call on defendant's subscription to the capital stock, though a paid-up certificate to the stock had not been issued to him, and remained in the possession of the corporation, it not having a lien thereon.—Lankershin Ranch Land etc. Co. v. Herberger, 82 Cal. 600, 23 Pac. 134.

§ 107. Action to Set Aside Subscription.

[a] In an action to set aside a stock subscription, held not error to permit defendant to amend its answer to conform to the proof. Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[a] A stipulation in the agreement in this case that C., who was to superintend the erection of a sugar refinery for the contemplated business of the corporation, should continue his services for five years at a certain annual salary, was held not to be a condition precedent to the vesting of his title to his shares of stock; and the fact that, from paralysis, he was rendered unable to discharge his duties as superintendent, except for a limited period, was held not to forfeit his stock.—Chater v. San Francisco etc. Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[a] The code does not require that there shall be a subscription book kept by the corporation, nor direct how subscriptions shall be made, and, where it does not appear that the corporation had any other book showing who the subscribers were than the stock books offered in evidence, and the suit is by strangers of the corporation against its stockholders, the books kept by the corporation, together with the testimony of the secretary, that they contained the names of all the stockholders, are sufficient proof of the stock subscribed and outstanding.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

§ 110. Power to Levy.

[a] The trustees of a mining company have power to levy and collect for the purpose of paying the legal and proper expenses of the company assessments on the capital stock thereof, even though the amount of such assessments is greater than the sum to which they are limited by the by-laws of the company in incurring indebtedness, if the assessment does not exceed the amount allowed by law.—Sullivan v. Triunfo etc. Min. Co., 29 Cal. 585.

[b] Statutory phrase, "proper and legal expenses" of a corporation, for which assessments are authorized to be made, includes debts incurred in the transaction of ordinary business.—Sullivan v. Triunfo Gold etc. Min. Co., 39 Cal. 459.

[c] In the absence of fraud, a corporation is liable for money borrowed from one of its stockholders for the payment of expenses which were collateral, and but incidental to an act which may have been ultra vires, such expenses not being inseparably connected with the main act. Being liable for such money, the corporation could levy an assessment to pay it.—Taylor v. North Star Gold Min. Co., 79 Cal. 285.

[d] Assessment for repairs to machinery without which company would be unable to meet business demands upon it is clearly authorized by section 331. of the Civil Code. Younglove v. Steinman, 80 Cal. 377, 378, 22 Pac. 189.

[e] It is no defense to an action against a stockholder by a corporation authorized to levy assessments to meet outstanding obligations, and whose directors were given discretion to require assessments or to resort to the corporate property in payment of such obligations, that the corporation had sufficient property to meet the obligations forming the basis of the assessment.—Visalia etc. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 43 Pac. 10.

ized as a board of directors, and acted as such, their acts as de facto officers in levying an assessment upon the subscribed capital stock are valid.—San Joaquin Land and Water Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349.

§ 112. —— Before Payment of Previous Assessment.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 333, providing that no assessment must be levied while any portion of a previous one remains unpaid, unless the power of the corporation has been exercised for its collection, where a stockholder paid a previous assessment by offsetting his fraudulent salary as president, a subsequent assessment was void, as such offsetting was not a payment.—Strouse v. Sylvester, 134 Cal. xx, 66 Pac. 660.

§ 113. —— Before One-fourth of Capital Stock is Subscribed.

[a] In the absence of any provision to the contrary, a corporation cannot levy an assessment upon its capital stock until after the whole amount thereof has been subscribed; but, under section 331 of the Civil Code, the subscription of one-fourth of the capital stock is a condition precedent in this state to the exercise of the power given by the statute to levy an assessment.—San Bernardino Investment Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[b] A mere agreement to "subscribe and take" the amount of capital stock set opposite the subscriber's name does not bind him to pay an assessment levied before one-fourth of the capital stock has been subscribed, in violation of Civil Code, section 331.—Ventura etc. Ry. Co. v. Hartman, 116 Cal. 260, 48 Pac. 65.

[b] Act of March 26, 1866, authorized assessment of full-paid stock.—Sayre v. Gaslight Co., 69 Cal. 208, 7 Pac. 437, 10 Pac. 408.

[c] Where all the stock of a corporation is fully paid up it is assessable; and as between stockholders who have obtained paid-up shares at one-fourth of their par value in exchange for property conveyed to the corporation, and those who have obtained paid-up shares at the same rate by purchase, for cash, of stock reserved for working capital, the effect of an assessment upon all the stockholders is equal and just.—Green v. Abietine Medical Co., 96 Cal. 322, 31 Pac. 100.

§ 115. Persons Liable.

[a] Under code, sections 290-293, requiring articles of incorporation to state the amount of stock subscribed, the names of the subscribers, and the amount actually paid by each, a subscriber does not incur liability for assessments levied after incorporation by merely signing a prior agreement to take stock in the corporation.—Monterey etc. R. Co. v. Hildreth, 53 Cal. 123.

[c] Defendant sold a manufacturing plant to plaintiff corporation, taking in part payment four hundred shares of the corporation's stock, at fifty dollars per share. There was no indorsement on the certificate that the stock was fully paid and nonassessable, nor was there such an agreement between the parties. At the time of the transaction, fifty dollars a share had been paid on the stock. Held, that defendant's stock was subject to the same assessments to which it would have been subject in the hands of an original subscriber.—Stockton Combined Harvester etc. Works v. Houser, 109 Cal. 1, 41 Pac. 809.

[d] One who purchases unpaid stock in a corporation, and causes a transfer thereof to himself to be entered upon the books of the corporation, is substituted for the original subscriber of the stock as a stockholder of the corporation, and thereafter holds the stock on the same conditions and subject to the same obligations as the original stockholder prior to the transfer; and he is liable for an assessment upon the unpaid shares, of which liability he cannot devest himself by an assignment of the shares subsequent to the levy of the assessment.—Visalia etc. R. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 52 Am. St. Rep. 136, 43 Pac. 10.

[e] For the purpose of ascertaining those who are liable to the corporation for the amount of an assessment, the corporation may look only to the list of stockholders as their names are registered upon its books.—Visalia etc. R. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 52 Am. St. Rep. 136, 43 Pac. 10.

[f] In an action to recover an assessment on corporate stock, evidence that the assessment was made on the same day that defendant purchased the stock is sufficient to show that it was made while defendant was the owner of the stock, as it will not be presumed that the assessment was made a fraction of a day before the purchase.—San Gabriel Valley Land etc. Co. v. Dennis, 34 Pac. 441.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 331, authorizing directors, when one-fourth of the stock is subscribed, to levy and collect assessments on the "subscribed capital stock," a notice describing the assessment, in conformance with section 335, as "levied upon the capital stock," will sustain a collection on the stock subscribed.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Belding, 35 Pac. 353;

San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hewlett, 35 Pac. 353; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hitchcock, 35 Pac. 353.

[a] A notice for a call for the unpaid portion of the capital stock of a corporation held sufficiently served.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rauer (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 329.

[b] Assessment of stock levied at special meeting of which two directors had no notice is void.—Thompson v. Williams, 76 Cal. 155, 9 Am. St. Rep. 187, 18 Pac. 153.

§ 119. Sale for Delinquent Assessment.

[a] Levying of an assessment on mining stock to pay a debt which the company does not owe is not of itself fraud, so as to invalidate a sale of stock made thereunder, where it was not shown that the money was used for such purpose.—Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482, 4 Pac. 458.

[b] Where a stockholder fails to pay an assessment lawfully made, and his stock is advertised for sale, a complaint setting forth that the company refused to show plaintiff its bills and vouchers, as required by Civil Code, section 377, and that it was a worthless concern, and desired to get plaintiff's stock for the assessment, shows no ground for an injunction on the sale.—Burnham v. San Francisco Fuse Mfg. Co., 76 Cal. 24, 17 Pac. 940.

[c] Section 346 of the Civil Code makes irregular proceedings to collect delinquent assessment void only as against owner who tenders assessment.—Burnham v. San Francisco Fuse Mfg. Co., 76 Cal. 28, 17 Pac. 939.

[d] Proceedings herein for sale of stock for unpaid assessment held to comply with code.—Burnham v. San Francisco Fuse Mfg. Co., 76 Cal. 25, 17 Pac. 940.

[e] A sale of stock as delinquent by a board of directors illegally elected, and under an invalid assessment made in violation of law is ineffective to determine the relations of the stockholders to the corporation.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

§ 120. —— Notice of Sale.

[a] Where the secretary of a corporation is not otherwise ordered by the board of directors, it is his duty to publish the notice of sale for delinquent assessments at least fifteen days prior to the day appointed by the board of directors of such sale, and by failure to make publication of a delinquent sale for such period, the board loses all jurisdiction to sell the stock for the delinquent assessment, unless they shall begin anew all previous proceedings and publication subsequent to the levy of an assessment as authorized by section 346 of the Civil Code.—San Bernardino Investment Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 337, which provides that, if any portion of the assessment levied against the capital stock of a corporation shall remain unpaid on the day specified in the assessment notice, the secretary must, unless otherwise ordered by the board of directors, cause to be published, "in the same papers" in which the notice of assessment was published, a notice of sale, etc., the board may order such notice of sale to be published in a paper other than that in which the notice of assessment appeared.—Stockton Combined Harvester etc. Works v. Houser, 109 Cal. 1, 41 Pac. 809.

[a] One whose stock is improperly sold may maintain suit for its recovery.—Smith v. Maine Boys Tunnel Co., 18 Cal. 111.

[b] Whether a stockholder, whose stock is about to be sold under an assessment which he alleges to be illegal and void, would suffer such injury by the sale of his stock as would entitle him to relief by injunction in a court of equity, not decided.—Sullivan v. Triunfo Min. Co., 39 Cal. 459.

[c] Complaint to set aside sale of stock for a fraudulent assessment must aver facts showing the fraud with certainty.—Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 487, 4 Pac. 458.

[d] Right to set aside sale of stock for nonpayment of assessment may be barred by delay and acquiescence.—Sayre v. Gaslight Co., 69 Cal. 213, 7 Pac. 437, 10 Pac. 408.

[e] A stockholder wrongfully deprived of his shares under a void assessment may either sue the corporation in trover for the value of the shares, or may apply for a mandamus to the corporation to compel it to open its books and allow the registry, or to pay damages if registry is impossible, or he may sue in equity to vacate the sale, and to have the shares sold ordered to be delivered up and canceled, and for other relief. A court of equity has jurisdiction to give full relief to the stockholder in such case.—Herbert Kraft Co. Bank v. Bank of Orland, 133 Cal. 64, 65 Pac. 143.

[f] A complaint in a suit to restrain the sale of corporate stock for nonpayment of an assessment levied by three directors held fatally defective for failure to aver that defendant was a corporation organized for profit within Civil Code, section 290, subdivision 5.—Humphrey v. Buena Vista Water Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 296.

§ 122. Action to Recover Assessment.

[b] A subscriber to stock becomes liable to suit for delinquent assessment thereon by the directors, under Civil Code, section 349, where a majority of the subscribers have met and organized for the objects and with the capital and number of shares specified in the subscription agreement, and have elected the directors who levy the assessment.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Belding, 35 Pac. 353; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hewlett, 35 Pac. 353; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hitchcock, 35 Pac. 353.

[c] A subscription for shares of the capital stock of a corporation, subsequently to be formed, will sustain an action by the company on its complete incorporation against the subscribers to recover calls duly made upon the stock.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349.

[d] Where a corporation seeks to recover the amount of an assessment levied, not by virtue of any contract of subscription on the part of the defendant, but solely by virtue of the obligation against him which is created by the estate, a strict observance of the statutory mode and provision is essential to its recovery.—San Bernardino Investment Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[e] Where the board of directors has lost jurisdiction to take further proceedings for the collection of a delinquent assessment by failure to make publication of the delinquent sale, the condition under which the statute authorizes it to elect to proceed by action to collect the delinquent assessment does not exist, and there are no further proceedings which the board can waive under section 349 of the Civil Code, and there can be no cause of action to recover an assessment in such case.—San Bernardino Investment Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[f] A resolution by the board of directors "that the president and secretary are hereby ordered to commence suit for the collection of assessment" on stock sufficiently shows a waiver of further proceedings under the chapter for the collection of delinquent assessments to entitle the corporation to sue for them.—San Gabriel Valley Land etc. Co. v. Dennis, 34 Pac. 441.

[a] Where a corporation is authorized to levy assessments to meet its outstanding obligations, a stockholder cannot defend an action on an assessment on the ground that the obligation was created before he became a stockholder.—Visalia etc. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 43 Pac. 10.

[a] An original call for payment of subscriptions upon shares made pursuant to the oral agreement of the original stockholders, under which the shares were issued, upon payment of twenty dollars per share, did not set the statute of limitations in motion as against subsequent calls for the residue of the par value made upon a creditor's bill against the original stockholders.—Vermont Marble Co. v. Declez Granite Co., 135 Cal. 579, 87 Am. St. Rep. 143, 67 Pac. 1057.

[b] Statute of limitation does not commence to run against an action to enforce the liability of corporate stockholders on unpaid stock, under Civil Code, section 332, subdivision 1, until levy of an assessment.—Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 Pac. 441.

[c] The levy of an assessment on unpaid corporate stock, and notice thereof to the stockholder, which was afterward rescinded, did not commence the running of limitation against the liability of the stockholder, so as to prevent the enforcement of a subsequent assessment.—Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 Pac. 441.

[a] Civil Code, section 331, provides that "a corporation . . . . after one-fourth of its capital stock has been subscribed, may . . . . levy and collect assessments" thereon. Held that, in an action to collect an assessment on certain shares of stock, a complaint that does not show one-fourth of the capital stock to have been subscribed is demurrable as failing to show a cause of action.—San Bernardino Inv. Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

[b] Allegations and findings that certain persons owned stated amounts of stock, that an assessment of a given amount was levied on such stock and not paid, and that said owners were indebted to the corporation in the amount of said assessment, were not sufficient to show a personal liability of such owners for the amount of the assessment, since none of the facts required by statute to constitute a personal liability for the assessment were alleged or found.—Shively v. Eureka T. G. M. Co., 129 Cal. 293, 61 Pac. 939.

[a] In action by private corporation organized in this state for commercial and manufacturing purposes, to recover an assessment which exceeds ten per cent of capital stock, burden of proving valid assessment is on plaintiff; and where there is no evidence to prove that its subscribed capital stock had not been fully paid, an assessment exceeding ten per cent of the amount of the capital stock named in the articles of incorporation must be presumed to be void, and cannot be enforced.—Pacific Fruit Co. v. Coon, 107 Cal. 447, 40 Pac. 542.

[a] A finding that a meeting of directors of a corporation was "duly and regularly convened," and that an assessment made thereat was "lawfully and rightfully" levied, includes a finding that the necessary notice was given.—Younglove v. Steinman, 80 Cal. 375, 22 Pac. 189.

§ 128. Action to Set Aside Assessment.

[a] In an action to set aside a stock assessment, refusal to permit plaintiff to amend her complaint, so as to allege that the assessment was not levied to pay debts or expenses of the corporation, or to conduct its business, held not an abuse of discretion.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[b] In an action to vacate a corporate stock assessment, it having been alleged that more than one-fourth of the corporation's stock had been subscribed, as required by Civil Code, section 331, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to permit plaintiff to file a second amended complaint alleging the contrary.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

ESTOPPEL TO ALLEGE INVALIDITY, § 140.
RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PERSONS RECEIVING INVALID STOCK, § 141.

[a] To constitute the subscribers to an agreement for the formation of a corporation stockholders of the corporation it is not necessary that the certificates of stock should have issued to them.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Beecher, 101 Cal. 70, 35 Pac. 349.

[b] The issuance of a certificate of corporate stock is not a necessary preliminary to the ownership or assessability of such stock.—Pacific Fruit Co. v. Coon, 107 Cal. 447, 40 Pac. 542.

§ 130. Power to Issue Stock.

[a] The question whether corporations can issue certificates of stock, except to subscribers therefor who have paid up for their subscriptions, is not decided.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15.

[b] First clause of article 11, section 12, of the new constitution, providing that no corporation shall issue stock except for certain purposes, is prohibitory.—Ewing v. Oroville Mining Co., 56 Cal. 649.

§ 131. —— Before Full Payment.

[a] Corporation for profit may give credit to subscribers to its capital stock for the stock, and issue certificates to such subscribers before full payment.—Lankershim etc. Co. v. Herberger, 82 Cal. 602.

[a] Corporation cannot issue stock as a pledge.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 16, 99 Am. Dec. 237.

[a] Where an agreement between a corporation and a corporator provided that the corporator should act as superintendent, for a term of years, at a named annual salary, and should receive certain stock, the performance of the services was not a condition precedent to the corporator's right to receive the stock, in the absence of such a provision in the contract.—Chater v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[b] In an action against a corporation and the officers controlling the same, to compel the specific performance of a contract to issue a portion of the stock to plaintiff, and for an account of the dividends and profit of the stock, it is erroneous to give the plaintiff a portion of the stock, and also the same proportion of the undivided profits of the company, as the stock of the company represents its undivided profits, and one who receives a share of the stock acquires, by virtue thereof, his due interest in the undivided profits.—Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 359, prohibiting the issue of stock except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received, a stock certificate issued in exchange for a note conditioned upon the completion of the road in a given time is void, and such note is without consideration.—Jefferson v. Hewitt, 103 Cal. 624, 37 Pac. 638.

[b] Public policy is not violated by organizers of corporation issuing stock to themselves in consideration of transfer by them to corporation of property which can be used for purposes for which it was incorporated.—Kellerman v. Maier, 116 Cal. 423, 48 Pac. 377.

[c] Where the directors, who are all the stockholders, of a corporation, cause to be issued to themselves and others all the unsubscribed for shares of capital stock, in exchange for certain franchises and stock of other corporations, such issue is not without consideration or invalid, under Constitution, article 12, section 11, providing that no corporation shall issue stock, except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received.—Smith v. Martin, 135 Cal. 247, 67 Pac. 779.

[d] Where directors of a corporation purchased of another corporation, of which they were the stockholders, property of the value of one million two hundred thousand dollars, and in payment therefor issued to themselves twenty-four thousand seven hundred and fifty shares of stock, of the par value of two million four hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, and assumed an indebtedness of one million fifty thousand dollars, a stockholder of the former corporation is not entitled to have such issue of stock declared void and fictitious, without setting aside the whole transaction. By divided court.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] When by consent of all the stockholders of a corporation reserved stock is sold by the corporation for less than its par value it is to be considered as fully paid-up stock; and when the equitable owners of all the unsold stock, who are the legal owners of all the stock issued, and who control the board of directors, procure the sale by the corporation of the reserved stock for one-fourth of its par value, and the issuance of certificates, in accordance with the by-laws, certifying to the purchasers that the price paid was full payment, and that the stock purchased was fully paid stock, the stockholders who are the real sellers, as well as the corporation, are estopped from denying that the stock sold was fully paid-up stock, and from claiming that any sum is due or owing from the purchasers or holders thereof to the corporation. Green v. Abietine Medical Co., 96 Cal. 322, 31 Pac. 100.

[b] Contract for sale of reserved stock below par as paid-up stock is not unlawful, and is not in violation of section 323 of the Civil Code, which does not prohibit the issuing of certificates before the stock is fully paid up, but enjoins the duty of issuing certificates for fully paid-up stock, and authorizes the stockholders to enact by-laws in accordance with which the corporation may issue certificates before full payment.—Green v. Abietine Medical Co., 96 Cal. 322, 31 Pac. 100.

§ 136. Estoppel to Deny Sufficiency of Consideration.

[a] Plaintiffs held a majority of the stock of a corporation, which they had taken at the rate of fifty cents a share, in return for property turned into the hands of the corporation. Afterward the board of directors, which plaintiffs controlled, sold the balance of the stock, to raise working capital, at the same rate per share which plaintiffs had paid, and gave certificates which stated that the stock so sold was fully paid and unassessable, being the same kind which plaintiffs held. After having acquiesced for three years in this sale, plaintiffs claimed that the shares so sold for working capital were subscribed for at the par value of two dollars a share, and that the difference between that and the price paid was still due. Held, that plaintiffs were estopped from denying that the price paid was full payment.—Green v. Abietine Medical Co., 96 Cal. 322, 31 Pac. 100.

[a] Complainant alleged that a corporation purchased property of another corporation worth at least one million two hundred thousand dollars, and as the price assumed an indebtedness of one million fifty thousand dollars, and issued to the latter corporation's stockholders twenty-four thousand seven hundred and fifty shares of stock, of the par value of two million four hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. He did not allege that the former corporation had any property before such purchase. Held, that there was no fictitious issue of stock, within Constitution, article 12, section 11, providing that all "fictitious" issues of stock shall be void.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[a] There is not an overissue of stock where there was to be five hundred shares of stock, and no more than this was issued, though when the articles of incorporation were drawn, all the stock subscription lists not being at hand, L., the organizer, put himself down in the articles for one hundred and eighty-three shares, to make up the full total of five hundred, he in so doing regarding himself as the agent of the subscribers whose names were not at hand, and the sum of the subscription lists and the amounts set down in the articles exceeded five hundred shares, the shares being issued to such subscribers from the amount put down to L., with the acquiescence of him and all the other stockholders.—Tulare Sav. Bank v. Talbot, 131 Cal. 45, 63 Pac. 172.

[a] Though the unanimous consent of stockholders cannot cure the illegality of issuing certificates in violation of law, yet they may ratify an unauthorized issuance of certificates.—Green v. Abietine Medical Co., 96 Cal. 322, 31 Pac. 100.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 140. Estoppel to Allege Invalidity.

[a] Where a corporation issues capital stock, and represents it as fully paid, and causes it to be so listed on the stock and bond exchange, it is estopped to claim that the stock is invalid, as against a bona fide purchaser, even if the stock was in fact issued without consideration.—Smith v. Martin, 135 Cal. 247, 67 Pac. 779.

[a] Certificates of corporate stock are not negotiable instruments, but mere evidences of the holder's title to shares in the franchises, property, and profits of the corporation.—Sherwood v. Meadow Valley Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412.

[b] A certificate of stock of a corporation is not a negotiable instrument within the definition of the Civil Code.—Barstow v. Savage Min. Co., 64 Cal. 388, 1 Pac. 349.

[c] Certificate of stock is transferable by delivery.—Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 170, 15 Pac. 670.

§ 144. Formal Requisites in General.

[a] Placing certificates of stock indorsed in blank in envelope directed to assignor, in safe of assignee, will not revest title.—O'Neil v. Donahue, 57 Cal. 226.

[b] When shares in a corporation belonging to decedent are sold by his executor or his administrator, the title of the purchaser is complete when the certificate has been indorsed and delivered.—Brown v. San Francisco Gaslight Co., 58 Cal. 426.

[d] Stock can only be transferred by indorsement by signature of owner or his attorney or representative.—Taft v. Presidio etc. R. R. Co., 84 Cal. 137, 18 Am. St. Rep. 166, 24 Pac. 436.

[e] Stock cannot be transferred or canceled by indorsement by signature of agent without stating name of principal.—Taft v. Presidio etc. R. R. Co., 84 Cal. 138, 18 Am. St. Rep. 166, 24 Pac. 436.

[f] The lack of the owner's indorsement on the certificate was not inconsistent with the right of his attorney in fact, empowered to deal generally with corporate stock, and in possession of the certificate, to cause the stock to be transferred to himself.—Taft v. Presidio etc. R. Co., 22 Pac. 485.

[a] Pledgee of stock after transfer on books of company must be regarded as owner as to third parties.—Strout v. Natoma W. & M. Co., 9 Cal. 80.

[b] If one who holds mining stocks in secret trust for another pledges the same for his debt, without notice to the pledgee of the interest of the cestui que trust, and the pledgee sells the stock without previous demand and notice, the right of action for the conversion is in the pledgor, and not in the cestui que trust. If the cestui que trust has a cause of action outside of the contract of pledge, he must first pay or tender the money for which the stocks were pledged.—Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99.

[c] Rule that shares of stock cannot be pledged without written transfer of title applies only where rights of third parties are involved.—Hall v. Cayot, 141 Cal. 17, 18, 74 Pac. 299.

[d] Delivery of certificate of stock, by way of pledge without indorsement vests equitable title in pledgee enforceable between the parties.—Hall v. Cayot, 141 Cal. 18, 74 Pac. 299.

[e] Under Civil Code, section 2889, one to whom a certificate of shares of corporate stock is issued as security for a debt does not, as against the pledgor, obtain the legal title to the stock.—Cross v. Reid, 14 Pac. 885.

§ 147. Liability of Pledgee to Pledgor.

[a] Where corporate stock was pledged to secure a debt, and remained in the hands of the pledgee until he had received from dividends more than enough to pay the debt, the pledgor is entitled to an accounting and a decree directing a retransfer and delivery of the stock.—Smith v. '49 & '56 Quartz Min. Co., 14 Cal. 242.

[b] B held A's shares of mining stock as collateral for a loan. A charged B with having sold the shares without A's knowledge or consent, and with afterward obtaining from him a power of attorney to sell—A being ignorant that the shares then had been sold—and then selling an equal number of shares, which he claimed to be A's, for a less price than that for which the earlier sale was made. B denied this, and contended that the shares last sold were the identical shares pledged. Held that if B was at all times ready and willing to transfer shares to A on payment of the loan, he was not liable for the higher price obtained for the shares first sold.—Hayward v. Rogers, 62 Cal. 348.

[c] Where a bailee unlawfully sold pledged stock, he may be compelled to convey to the bailor similar stock owned by himself in the same corporation.—Krouse v. Woodward, 110 Cal. 638, 42 Pac. 1084.

[a] Where one is entitled to a certain number of shares of stock issued to another, a demand is satisfied by a transfer of the requisite number of shares of the same corporation, though not the identical stock demanded, the shares transferred being of the same value and serving the same purposes.—Hardenbergh v. Bacon, 33 Cal. 356.

[b] By a contract for the sale of stock the seller warranted that the stock should be worth two hundred dollars a share in one year from the date of the sale, and the buyer agreed to keep "said stock until that time." Held, that a transfer of the stock on the books of the company, and the issue of new certificates to the buyer on the surrender of the old certificates which stood in the name of the seller, was not a breach of the buyer's contract to keep the stock.—Hawley v. Brumagim, 33 Cal. 394.

[c] If one delivers number of shares of stock to another upon the consideration of the performance of certain acts by the other, and such other does not comply with his contract, and refuses to comply, he is bound to reassign the stock, and becomes a trustee as to such stock.—Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482, 486, 4 Pac. 458.

§ 149. Execution Sale—Rights and Liabilities of Purchaser.

[a] A party who purchases, at sheriff's sale, stock of an incorporation, knowing that the certificates of such stock have been previously hypothecated, is chargeable with notice of the fact, and takes subject to the claim of the pledgee.—Weston v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425.

[b] Execution purchaser without notice of pledge of untransferred stock takes it discharged of lien.—Farmers' etc. Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600.

[c] One who purchases at execution sale shares of a corporation standing on the books of the corporation in the name of the judgment debtor is entitled to have the certificate of such shares reissued to him as such purchaser, if, at the time of the purchase, he acts in good faith, and without notice that the outstanding certificate has been assigned or pledged to some person other than the judgment debtor.—West Coast Safety Faucet Co. v. Wulff, 133 Cal. 315, 85 Am. St. Rep. 171, 65 Pac. 622.

no transfer of stock is good against third parties unless the transfer be made upon the books of the company.—Weston v. Bear River Co., 5 Cal. 186.

[b] Neither the incorporation act of 1850 nor that of 1853 was intended to cover the case of one purchasing stock at sheriff's sale, knowing it had been hypothecated, but to apply only to transfers and purchases in good faith without notice.—Weston v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425.

[c] An assignment of stock in a corporation established under the act of 1852, merely by a transfer of the certificate, without a transfer on the books of the corporation, is not valid against the claim of a bona fide purchaser, without notice, of the same stock at a sale under an execution against the assignor. Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co., 20 Cal. 529.

[d] Transfers of stock which have not been entered on the books of the company as provided in Statutes of 1853, page 87, section 9, are nevertheless valid as against all the world, except subsequent purchasers in good faith without notice.—(1868) People v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 653; (1871) Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614.

[e] Transfers of stock must be entered upon books of company to be valid against bona fide purchasers.—Farmers' etc. Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 604.

[f] Section 324, Civil Code, applies to distributees of shares of stock.—People's H. S. Bank v. Stadmuller, 88 Pac. 280.

§ 151. —— Necessity to Creation or Validity of Pledge or Mortgage.

[a] A mortgage of shares of stock is valid without a transfer thereof upon the books of the company.—Ede v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 53.

[b] A transfer of stock upon the books of the corporation is not essential to the creation of a valid pledge of the stock, but the pledgee has the right to cause a proper entry of the transaction between himself and his pledgor to be entered upon the books of the corporation for his protection, under section 324 of the Civil Code, though he is not authorized to devest the pledgor of the rights incident to his ownership of the pledge, by surrender and cancellation of the pledged certificate, and the issuance of a new certificate in the name of the pledgee.—Spreckels v. Nevada Bank of San Francisco, 113 Cal. 272, 54 Am. St. Rep. 348, 45 Pac. 329.

[c] Pledge of stock may legally exist independent of any transfer upon books of corporation from pledgor to pledgee.—Hurlburt v. Arthur, 140 Cal. 107, 98 Am. St. Rep. 17, 73 Pac. 734.

[d] Entry on corporate books is not essential to validity of transfer, except as to bona fide purchasers and transferees.—Hall v. Cayot, 141 Cal. 17, 74 Pac. 299.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
10 Cyc. 593, 594, 597-629; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 586-614, §§ 479-492; cols. 637-656, §§ 513-528; cols. 672-674, § 538.

[a] Under act of April 22, 1850, transfer of stock not entered on books of corporation is void as against attachment creditor of assignor.—Weston v. Bear River etc. Co., 5 Cal. 186, 63 Am. Dec. 117.

[b] Acts of 1853, page 88, section 9, providing that no transfer of stock shall be valid except between the parties, unless entered on the books of the company, does not render a purchase at sheriff's sale of stock of a corporation valid, when made by one who knew that the certificate of such stock had been previously hypothecated, though it had not been transferred on the books.—Weston v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425.

[c] Pledge of stock as security for a debt, made without transferring the shares on the books of the company, is good as between the parties, but not as against creditors of the pledgor.—Strout v. Natoma Water etc. Min. Co., 9 Cal. 78.

[d] Assignee of stock as collateral security for a debt, who has not had the stock transferred to him on the books of the company, as the assignor had authorized him to do, is not entitled to an injunction against the sale, under execution in favor of another creditor, of whatever interest in the stock may remain in the assignor.—Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600.

[a] If a railroad company has no interest or lien on stock when a transfer is made, then it is good between the parties, and the company cannot rightfully object to the demanded transfer.—People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112.

[b] Company cannot refuse to enter transfer of stock on books on ground that assignor of stock is indebted to it, unless company had a lien upon stock at date of its transfer. People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112.

[c] It is not the duty of the officers of a corporation to inquire into the motives of an attorney in fact, having full power to transfer stock, for desiring it to be transferred to himself.—Tafft v. Presidio etc. R. Co., 22 Pac. 485.

[d] An owner's right to have his stock transferred, and a new certificate issued to the purchaser, is not defeated by the fact that there is an unpaid assessment against the shares.—Craig v. Hesperia Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 7, 54 Am. St. Rep. 316, 45 Pac. 10.

[b] Where a certificate of stock in a banking corporation is issued to a person named therein, and the certificate remains unindorsed until after his death, the mere possession of the certificate by a firm of which the deceased was a member, and by other firms succeeding thereto, is insufficient to establish transmission of title from the deceased holder of the certificate, his representatives or heirs, and no subsequent holder of the certificate can compel a transfer of such stock on the books of the bank.—Nicholls v. Reid, 109 Cal. 630, 42 Pac. 298.

§ 155. —— —— Pledgees.

[a] A pledgee of the stock of a corporation, when the contract is silent upon the subject, has no right to have the stock transferred to his name before maturity of the debt; and an injunction will lie at suit of the pledgor to prevent such transfer.—Spreckels v. Nevada Bank of San Francisco, 113 Cal. 272, 54 Am. St. Rep. 348, 45 Pac. 329.

[a] A notation by the secretary of a corporation on the margin of the stubs of certain certificates that such certificates are held by a certain person "as security for money loan," when made without authority from either pledgee or pledgor, does not amount to a transfer of the stock on the books of the corporation, as against creditors of the pledgor.—McFall v. Buckeye Grangers' Warehouse Assn., 122 Cal. 468, 68 Am. St. Rep. 47, 55 Pac. 253.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 157. —— Liability and Remedies for Refusal.

[a] A transferee of corporate stock has an adequate remedy at law in a suit against a corporation for damages for its refusal to transfer the stock on its books, and hence mandamus will not lie against the company to compel such transfer.—Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173, 13 Am. Rep. 157.

[b] A party entitled to stock in a corporation may sue it for damages for the refusal of its officers to transfer the stock to him on its books.—Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173, 13 Am. Rep. 157.

[c] Complaint against corporation for refusal to transfer stock must aver damage, and show a right to the transfer.—Edwards v. Sonoma Valley Bank, 59 Cal. 136.

[d] In an action to recover stock claimed to be unlawfully held and transferred, the corporation is a proper party defendant to compel a transfer on its books to plaintiff, and the issuance of a certificate of shares to him, to which, under the facts alleged, he is entitled.—Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482, 4 Pac. 458.

[e] Where a rule of the bank forbids a transfer of stock while the stockholder is indebted to the bank, a refusal of the bank to transfer the stock on that ground is not a conversion; but, if the bank transfers its claim of indebtedness against the stockholder, it loses its lien upon the stock, and it is no longer authorized to refuse the transfer, and is liable for conversion of the stock upon a subsequent demand and refusal to transfer it upon the books.—Ralston v. Bank of California, 112 Cal. 208, 44 Pac. 476.

[f] Where corporation has refused to transfer stock upon its books, assignee may elect to treat this as a conversion of the shares by it, and sue for their value, or he may sue in equity to compel registration of the transfer, and recover damages as an alternative; nor is the latter remedy exclusive of the former. Ralston v. Bank of California, 112 Cal. 208, 44 Pac. 476.

[g] The plaintiff cannot recover dividends upon the stock converted by refusal to register transfer when he has not alleged any demand for such dividends, nor sought to recover them as a separate cause of action, and they cannot be added to the measure of damages for conversion of the stock.—Ralston v. Bank of California, 112 Cal. 208, 44 Pac. 476.

[h] A corporation is liable for a conversion of stock which it refuses to transfer on the books of the corporation to a purchaser thereof; and the existence of unpaid delinquent assessments upon the stock is no defense to an action for such conversion, though proof of them is admissible as affecting the value of the stock.—Craig v. Hesperia L. & W. Co., 113 Cal. 7, 54 Am. St. Rep. 316, 45 Pac. 10.

[a] Corporation is bound to know whether agent's power of attorney authorizes him to transfer stock of principal, before making transfer on its books and canceling certificate.—Quay v. Presidio etc. R. R. Co., 82 Cal. 3, 22 Pac. 925.

[b] Corporation is liable for conversion of stock illegally canceled by its secretary upon surrender of certificate by another person without indorsement.—Taft v. Presidio etc. R. R. Co., 84 Cal. 138, 18 Am. St. Rep. 166, 24 Pac. 436, 11 L. R. A. 125.

[c] If the attorney in fact of a stockholder presents the certificate of stock, together with a power of attorney from the stockholder giving him full authority to deal with the stock, and the corporation's officers are ignorant of any intention on the part of the attorney to misappropriate the stock, the corporation will not be guilty of conversion simply by issuing another certificate in the name of the attorney, who appropriates the stock wrongfully.—Tafft v. Presidio etc. R. Co., 22 Pac. 485.

[d] The fact that the attorney in fact of a stockholder to transfer his stock was also a director of the corporation does not warrant the presumption that the corporation had notice of his intention to convert the stock to his own use, as he assumed to act, not for the corporation, but for his principal.—Tafft v. Presidio etc. R. Co., 22 Pac. 485.

§ 159. ——Liability of Owner of Stock Registered in Another's Name.

[a] Where mining stock was placed by owner in name of another person as "trustee," on the books of corporation, and such trustee hypothecated it to bankers, who had no notice of who owner was, for moneys advanced by them to him, held, that owner was bound by the acts of the trustee.—Brewster v. § 160. —— Ratification of Invalid Transfer.

[a] Where a corporation transfers stock on the indorsement of the certificate by B., the agent of the owner, who was not authorized to make such indorsement for the purpose of a transfer, the fact that the owner afterward tells another of his agents that he will not hold him responsible for delivering the certificate to B. is not a ratification of the transfer by the corporation.—Quay v. Presidio etc. R. Co., 82 Cal. 1, 22 Pac. 925.

12 Cent. Dig., col. 656, § 526.

[a] Corporation is not necessary party to suit to compel individual to transfer shares of stock.—Sayward v. Houghton, 82 Cal. 629, 630, 23 Pac. 120.

[a] The transfer of stock by original stockholder was not sufficiently proved to escape liability for calls where there is no evidence that the transferee accepted the transfer, or authorized anyone to act for him, by evidence merely that a third party asked to have the shares transferred on the books to the transferee, which was not in fact done.—Vermont Marble Co. v. Declez Granite Co., 135 Cal. 579, 87 Am. St. Rep. 143, 67 Pac. 1057.

12 Cent. Dig., col. 570, § 467; cols. 575, 576, § 469.

§ 163. Effect of Transfer—Rights and Liabilities Incident to Transfer in General.

[a] Where defendant took an assignment of certain corporate stock, giving notice of indebtedness to the corporation for balance due thereon, defendant assumed the same liability to the corporation as his assignors, under Civil Code, section 1531, subdivision 2. People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189, 81 Pac. 1029.

[b] Certificates of stock assigned by the person to whom they were issued were surrendered by the assignee, and new certificates were issued to him in his own name. Held, not to change the identity of the stock.—Hawley v. Brumagim, 33 Cal. 394.

[c] Where partners form a corporation to carry on the business of the firm, and a portion of the shares are issued to the partners individually, though by agreement between themselves they are interested therein as partners, and the remainder to the firm, a purchaser of shares in such corporation from the firm, or from any of the partners, without notice, is not bound by such agreement.—Behlow v. Fischer, 102 Cal. 208, 36 Pac. 509.

[d] Certificates of stock, assigned as security for an indebtedness, give the holder, as pledgee of the stock, a right to maintain an action to compel defendant corporation to recognize it as a stockholder, after an illegal levy of assessment on the stock and sale thereof for delinquency.—Herbert Kraft Co. Bank v. Bank of Orland, 133 Cal. 64, 65 Pac. 143.

[e] It is sufficient, prima facie, to sustain a recovery against the stockholder, to show the transfer to an insolvent transferee, knowing the corporation to be insolvent; and the burden is upon the stockholder to allege and prove, as matter of defense, that the insolvent transferee had subsequently transferred the stock to a responsible person.—People's Home Savings Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285, 73 Pac. 858.

[f] The vendor of stock in a corporation has no vendible interest in the goodwill of the business carried on by the corporation, and cannot transfer any part thereof, but such goodwill is the property of the corporation alone.—Dodge Stationery Co. v. Dodge, 145 Cal. 380, 78 Pac. 879.

[a] Participation in the proceedings of a corporation, and receipt of dividends, etc., by an assignee of stock, held a sufficient consideration for his agreement to pay the balance due thereon.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189, 81 Pac. 1029.

[b] Where the secretary of a corporation testified that a person applied to have the shares of a stockholder transferred to a third person, saying that the stockholder had transferred such stock, but showed no authority from such third person to act, and there was no evidence that such third person ever accepted or consented to the transfer, which was never, in fact, made on the books, there was not such a transfer as would exempt the stockholder from liability for unpaid subscription after insolvency of the corporation. Vermont Marble Co. v. Declez Granite Co., 135 Cal. 579, 67 Pac. 1057.

[c] Where, in an action to recover unpaid stock subscriptions on a call made to pay creditors after the corporation's insolvency, the court found that defendant had transferred her stock to an insolvent for the purpose of avoiding liability, a finding that she was a stockholder at the date of the call was unnecessary to sustain a judgment against her for the unpaid balance.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285, 73 Pac. 858.

[d] A suit by a corporation for unpaid capital stock held properly brought against a pledgee, notwithstanding Civil Code, section 322.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rauer (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 329.

§ 165. —— Liability for Corporate Debts.

[a] Where a corporation assigned all of its assets to a stockholder in consideration of her agreement to pay its debts, and such stockholder, knowing the corporation's insolvency, transferred her stock to an insolvent for the purpose of relieving herself of liability, she is liable for such debts, notwithstanding the transfer.—National Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Story & Isham Commercial Co., 111 Cal. 531, 44 Pac. 157.

[b] In general, the law places no restriction upon the right of a stockholder to transfer his stock, so long as the corporation is solvent. But, after the corporation has become insolvent to the knowledge of the stockholder, he cannot, by a transfer of his stock, to an irresponsible person, escape liability for an unpaid subscription to stock, as against a creditor's bill to enforce such liability filed by the creditors of the insolvent corporation, who are entitled to have all such transfers canceled, and to have judgment entered against the transferrers.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

[c] Where a note given by a corporation is paid by a surety thereon, such surety may recover the amount paid from the stockholders at the time the payment was made, but not from the stockholders at the time the note was given who had parted with their stock, since the debt is not on the note, but for money paid for the corporation's benefit. Judgment (1900) 62 Pac. 68, reversed.—Yule v. Bishop, 133 Cal. 574, 65 Pac. 1094.

[d] Where defendant transferred her shares to an insolvent for the purpose of avoiding a stock liability, and he transferred the stock to another, who was also insolvent, the fact that defendant had no knowledge of the financial condition of such subsequent transferee did not exonerate her from liability on the stock.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285, 73 Pac. 858.

[a] An assignment of corporate stock after the levy of an assessment on the same will not relieve the assignor from liability on the assessment, where no formal transfer was made on the books of the company.—Visalia etc. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 43 Pac. 10.

[b] After a transfer of corporate stock has been duly made on the books of the company, the transferee becomes liable on assessments. Visalia etc. R. Co. v. Hyde, 110 Cal. 632, 43 Pac. 10.

[c] Fact that purchaser did not know of delinquent assessment at time of demanding transfer does not affect validity of assessment, nor liability of stock therefor.—Craig v. Hesperia L. & W. Co., 113 Cal. 7, 54 Am. St. Rep. 316, 45 Pac. 10.

Liability of transferee of stock for subsequent calls: 6 Am. St. Rep. 838, note; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 659-665, §§ 530, 531.

§ 167. —— Transfer to Enable Transferee to Qualify as Director.

[a] Stock assigned merely to qualify as director is property of assignee until retransferred. Estate of assignee may maintain trover against assignor.—O'Neil v. Donahue, 57 Cal. 226.

[b] Transfer of stock to enable party to act as director makes him liable as stockholder. Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 174, 15 Pac. 670.

§ 168. —— Lost or Stolen Certificates.

[a] A bona fide purchaser from a finder of a certificate of stock in a corporation, duly indorsed by the owner, and transferable on the books of the company by indorsement and surrender of the certificate, acquires no title to the stock.—Sherwood v. Meadow Val. Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412.

[b] If A causes his shares of stock to be transferred on the company's books to B, to whom the certificate is duly issued, and B indorses it in blank and delivers it to A, from whom, while it is so indorsed, but the stock still standing registered to B, B steals it and puts it on the market, C, purchasing it in good faith and without notice, will acquire a valid title to the stock as against A.—Winter v. Belmont Min. Co., 53 Cal. 428.

[c] The true owner of shares of stock, from whom, without his fault, they have been stolen, loses no rights in them as against one who, in good faith, and for value, buys them from the thief, they having been regularly indorsed by a former owner, in whose name they stand on the corporation books.—(1883) Barstow v. Savage Min. Co., 64 Cal. 388, 49

[a] The mere fact that a person holding the legal title of stock, and apparently having the right of disposition, is styled "trustee," raises no implication that he has not authority to sell or hypothecate it in the usual course of business.—Brewster v. Sime, 42 Cal. 139.

[b] The addition of the word "trustee," in a certificate of stock, to the name of the person to whom it is issued, does not show that such person has not the full right to deal with it as his own, nor give the person dealing with him notice that any other person has any interest in the same.—Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99.

[c] If the owner of mining stocks allows his broker, who purchases for him, to hold the certificates in such a manner that they will pass by delivery on the indorsement of the broker, with nothing on the face of the certificates to indicate that the real owner has any interest in the stock, a purchaser in good faith from the broker, without notice of the rights of the real owner, acquires a good title to the same, even if the broker, by a contract with his principal, had no right to sell or hypothecate the stocks without the consent of his principal.—Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99.

[d] California mining stocks, properly indorsed, pass by delivery, and if the true owner places them in the hands of another, on some secret trust between them, without anything on the face of the certificates to show his ownership, he, and not an innocent purchaser or pledgee, must bear the loss.—Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99.

[e] The existence of a by-law prohibiting the transfer of stock of a stockholder indebted to the corporation is not enough to charge a bona fide purchaser with notice; and this, though the purchaser, which is also a corporation, has a similar by-law, which is printed on each of its certificates of stock.—Anglo-California Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359.

[f] A transfer of stock to a bona fide purchaser for value vested the title in such purchaser, free of equities between the seller and the corporation, of which the purchaser was then ignorant, though provided for by a by-law of the corporation.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359.

[h] One to whom stocks are indorsed and delivered for safekeeping may vest in a bona fide pledgee the right to retain the stocks as security for the loan to the original bailee. (1884) Ambrose v. Evans, 66 Cal. 74, 4 Pac. 960; (1885) Arnold v. Johnson, 66 Cal. 402, 5 Pac. 796.

[i] One who purchases stock from a bailee who, by the indorsed assignment, is made the apparent owner thereof, will be protected as against the bailor, though the stock stood on the corporation's books in the latter's name. Krouse v. Woodward, 110 Cal. 638, 42 Pac. 1085.

Dividends of savings banks. See Banks and Banking, § 114.

[a] The apportionment of net earnings of a corporation to the payment of cash dividends, stock dividends, increase of capital, reserve or contingent fund, or to provide for future obligations, is largely one of policy, intrusted to the discretion of the directors, which, when honestly and intelligently exercised, will not be slightly overruled.—Excelsior Water etc. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131; Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 27 Pac. 44.

[b] The inhibition of section 309 of the Civil Code in regard to the payment of dividends, except from "surplus profits," does not prohibit the payment of a dividend by a mining corporation from the net proceeds of its mining operations, to be ascertained by deducting the gross outlay of current expenses from the gross receipts; and the balance, less a reasonable reserve to meet contingencies, would be the legitimate subject of a dividend.—Excelsior Water etc. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131, 27 Pac. 44.

§ 171. "Profits," "Net Earnings" and "Surplus Profits" Defined.

[a] "Profits," "surplus profits" and "net earnings" out of which dividends are payable defined.—People v. San Francisco Savings Union, 72 Cal. 202, 203, 13 Pac. 498.

§ 172. Persons Entitled.

[a] Where stock was assigned with a transfer of "all dividends made after the morning of the 23d of September," both parties at the time expecting that the dividend would be made on the 22d of the month, but in fact it was not made until after the morning of the 23d, the dividend anticipated on September 22d did not pass to the assignee.—Brewster v. Lathrop, 15 Cal. 21.

[b] One seeking to recover dividends on stock must own it when the dividends accrued. Mere possession of the stock, or special property in it, is not sufficient.—Dow v. Gould & Curry Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 630.

[c] A person, in order to recover dividends on stock, is bound to show that he was the owner of the stock at the time the dividends accrued. He cannot rest on mere possession, or on proof of special property in the stock that falls short of the legal title.—Dow v. Gould & Curry Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 629.

[d] Executors, pursuant to decree of distribution, delivered certificates of stock to distributee, and, pending an appeal from the decree, the stock was transferred on the corporate books to distributee, and again to her assignees. The transfer was made with knowledge of the appeal and the rights of the estate on the part of the corporation, and after reversal defendant was served with notice of the executor's claim to the stock and of the dividends thereon. The dividends thereafter declared were paid to the distributee's assignees. Held, that the executors were entitled to recover the amount thereon from the corporation.—Ashton v. Zeila Min. Co., 134 Cal. 408, 66 Pac. 494.

[a] A dividend declared upon pledged stock is the property of the pledgor, the same as the stock, but the pledgee has the right to collect it if he can and apply it upon the secured note, yet this failure to collect it does not cast upon him the duty of crediting it upon the note.—McAulay v. Moody, 128 Cal. 202, 60 Pac. 778.

[a] In an action against a corporation and its officers to recover or have issued to the plaintiff a certain proportion of the stock of a corporation, and to have an account taken of the profits and dividends on the stock, if a dividend of the company has been paid to the stockholders by an increase in the capital stock and an issuance of new shares to those to whom the dividend was due, the plaintiff, in taking the account, cannot recover in money the dividend thus declared, especially if he also recover his proportion of the stock thus divided.—Harris v. San Francisco Sugar Refining Co., 41 Cal. 393.

§ 175. Contracts Relating to Dividends Construed.

[a] Defendant corporation agreed that plaintiff should receive all dividends on certain shares of its capital stock on which he held an option, during the period the option was to run, and that it would make good any deficiencies in said dividends below four per cent per annum; but there was no guaranty that the dividends should be paid annually or at any stated period. The dividend paid for the first year exceeded four per cent for the whole period, but no dividend was declared thereafter. Held, that defendant's liability was discharged by the payment of the first dividend declared.—Fontana v. Pacific Can Co., 129 Cal. 51, 61 Pac. 580.

§ 176. Nature and Extent.

[a] A corporation's lien on its stock for unpaid subscriptions held not a mortgage, within Code of Civil Procedure, section 726, precluding the corporation from suing to enforce a stockholder's liability.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Sadler, 1 Cal. App. 189, 81 Pac. 1029.

[b] The lien of a corporation on the stock of a stockholder indebted to it, by a provision restricting transfer until payment of all indebtedness to the corporation, extends to all advances made prior to notice of transfer.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[c] In the absence of contract, a corporation has no special seller's lien on shares of its capital stock for unpaid installments of the purchase price, as the only lien not dependent on possession given by statute (Civil Code, sec. 331) is to secure the payment of assessments levied for the purpose of paying debts and expenses incurred in conducting the business of the corporation.—Lankershin Ranch Land etc. Co. v. Herberger, 82 Cal. 600, 23 Pac. 134.

[d] A subscriber for shares of the capital stock of a corporation, who has received a transferable certificate showing his payment of all installments due on his shares, as well as his agreement to pay for installments not yet due, is the owner of the shares, subject to the unpaid installments; and, as the certificate gives him complete possession of the shares, the corporation has no seller's lien thereon.—Lankershin Ranch Land etc. Co. v. Herberger, 82 Cal. 600, 23 Pac. 134.

[a] A by-law passed two days after transfer, to the effect that no transfer of stock should be made upon the books of the company until all indebtedness of the assignor was paid, would not give the company such lien, or a right to refuse to enter the transfer on their books.—People ex rel. Bosqui v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112.

[a] A corporation may prescribe in a certificate of its stock that such stock will not be transferred until all indebtedness due it from the stockholder has been paid, although the terms on which such stock may be transferred are prescribed by statute; and where a person accepts a certificate containing such provision, and thereafter becomes indebted to the corporation, he is bound thereby, and the corporation is entitled to a lien on the stock for the amount of the debt.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[b] Where a provision restricting the transfer of corporate stock while the stockholder is indebted to the corporation was inserted by the president, cashier, and secretary without authority of the board of directors, a stockholder who borrowed money from the corporation is estopped to deny the authority of such officers to insert such provision.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[a] Charter authority to make by-laws regulating the transfer of stock does not empower the corporation to adopt a by-law creating a lien on shares for debts due by the holder.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359.

[b] When a stockholder, without objection, accepts a certificate containing a condition against transfer of stock before payment of debts owing to the corporation, and thereafter borrows money from the corporation, a bank, he assents to the condition, and the bank has an equitable lien on the stock for the amount due it.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[a] A purchaser of shares from one indebted to the corporation acquires a good title, as against it, notwithstanding the charter prohibiting the transfer of shares until the payment of all debts due by the holder, where the corporation had no authority to adopt such by-law, and where the purchaser had no notice thereof.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359.

[b] Power of corporations to make by-laws for the transfer of their stock does not include the power to create liens thereon affecting purchasers for value without notice.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers' Bank of California, 63 Cal. 359.

[c] By virtue of condition in a certificate of stock, a bank had a lien on the stock for debts owing by the stockholder. Civil Code, section 324, provides that a transfer of stock by the indorsement and delivery of the certificate "is not valid, except between the parties, until the same is entered on the books." Held, that an assignee of the certificate takes subject to the bank's equity, and, as the condition is sufficient to put him on inquiry, he is not a bona fide purchaser.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 324, providing that a transfer of stock is not valid except between the parties, until transferred on the books of the corporation, a provision in a stock certificate restricting its transfer until all the stockholder's indebtedness to the corporation is paid, is sufficient to put a purchaser on inquiry, and hence does not entitle him to claim himself a bona fide purchaser.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[f] An assignee of a stock certificate, nontransferable until all the stockholder's indebtedness to the corporation was paid, takes subject to the corporation's lien for all advances made to the stockholder prior to notice of sale.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[a] A by-law of a corporation, providing that its stock should be transferable by delivery and indorsement, the transfer to be complete and binding on the corporation only when recorded on its books, is not a waiver of a stipulation previously inserted in a certificate of its stock by its president and cashier, without the authority of the board of directors, to the effect that such stock would not be transferred by the corporation until all the indebtedness of the holder to the corporation was paid, nor of the lien created thereby.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[b] Where, on the sale of bank stock to a depositor, the president and cashier inserted a stipulation in the certificate that the stock would be transferred only on payment of all the stockholder's indebtedness to the bank, evidence of the cashier, in an action for the bank's refusal to transfer the stock while its former holder was indebted to it, that, "if a party is in good standing, we do not question his right to transfer," and that the stockholder was allowed to make large overdrafts, does not show that the loan was made on his personal credit, alone, so as to waive the bank's lien on the stock created by the provisions of the certificate.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323, 12 Am. St. Rep. 145, 21 Pac. 852, 5 L. R. A. 233.

[a] Where, by a stipulation in stock certificates of a corporation, a lien was created in its favor on the stock of members indebted to it, the fact that there was no usage from which such lien could arise is no defense to its enforcement, no contrary usage appearing.—Jennings v. § 184. Who are Members or Stockholders.

[a] Under code, sections 290-293, requiring articles of incorporation to state the amount of stock subscribed, the names of the subscribers, and the amount actually subscribed by each, a subscriber does not become a stockholder by signing an agreement to take stock prior to the incorporation of the company.—Monterey etc. R. Co. v. Hildreth, 53 Cal. 123.

[b] Civil Code, section 322, held not to make one a stockholder whose name appeared as such without his knowledge or consent on the books of the corporation.—Welch v. Gillelen, 147 Cal. 571, 82 Pac. 248.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 185. Evidence of Ownership of Shares.

[a] Evidence that a person subscribed for stock is not sufficient proof that he actually owns the shares, when it does not appear that he bought them on credit, but rather that he was to pay for them at once, and it also appears that he did not pay or offer to pay for them, and that no certificate of them was ever issued to him.—Bank of Yolo v. Weaver, 31 Pac. 160.

[b] Fact that the cashier of a bank permitted dividends on stock standing in his name to be included in checks to the bank did not show that the bank owned the stock.—Chemical Nat. Bank v. Havermale, 120 Cal. 601, 52 Pac. 1071.

[b] The question whether the incorporating members withdrew from the association and abandoned their rights and interests therein is a question of fact, depending largely upon the intention of the parties. They could not withdraw therefrom without giving up all their interest in its property; and the course pursued by them indicated an intention not to abandon such interest.—Strong v. Los Nietos and Ranchito Walnut Growers' Association, 137 Cal. 607, 70 Pac. 734.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
12 Cent. Dig., cols. 765, 766, §§ 637-639.

§ 187. Title to Corporate Property.

[a] Stockholders have no legal title to property of corporation.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 385, 22 Pac. 689.

[b] A stockholder in a private corporation for profit is not in any proper sense the owner of the property of the corporation; but he has a direct interest in the corporation, and a right to participate according to the amount of his stock in the surplus profits on a division, and ultimately, on its dissolution, in the assets remaining after payment of its debts.—Richter v. Henningsan, 110 Cal. 530, 42 Pac. 1077.

Mandamus to compel access to corporate records. See Mandamus, § 59.

[a] Stockholder has the right to inspect books, records and journals of corporation, and it is no defense in mandamus proceeding to compel secretary to allow inspection to allege that the objects and purposes of the inspection are improper, and that the petitioner desires to injure the business of the corporation. The clear legal right given by the constitution and statute cannot be defeated by inquiry into motives.—Johnson v. Langdon, 135 Cal. 624, 87 Am. St. Rep. 156, 67 Pac. 1050.

[a] Where a creditor has the right to be subrogated to the rights of a corporation to claim unpiad balances due on shares, he does not lose that right by reason of the fact that he is a stockholder.—Richardson v. Chicago Packing etc. Co., 131 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 74.

[b] Where stockholders agreed that shares should be deemed fully paid by payment of a stated amount less than the par value, a creditor, who was also a stockholder, could not compel the payment of the par value of shares owned by other stockholders, the creditor being a party to the agreement.—Richardson v. Chicago Packing etc. Co., 131 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 74.

[a] When the president of a corporation interested in the mortgage debt sells property under foreclosure by collusion with trustees to defraud a stockholder, such stockholder may redeem in behalf of corporation.—Wright v. Oroville etc. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[b] Majority vote of stockholders of turnpike company, levying an assessment paid by two-thirds of the stockholders, does not ratify a mortgage requiring a two-thirds vote.—Forbes v. San Rafael Turnpike Co., 50 Cal. 340.

[c] A resolution of the members concerning the disbursement of money, if not adopted or ratified by the directors (where no money could be appropriated or drawn from the treasury without their order), is ineffective, as a corporation can only act or speak through its board of trustees.—La Solidarite Mut. Ben. Assn., In re, 68 Cal. 392, 9 Pac. 453.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
Sale of all the property of corporations and the right of minority stockholders to assail: 103 Am. St. Rep. 548, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 936; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 787-805, §§ 665-673.

[a] The right of minority stockholders to attack transactions between other stockholders and the corporation, as fraudulent, is not affected by the fact that they are completely "executed," where such transactions were not merely beyond the powers of the corporation, but procured by the fraud of defendants, who controlled it. Nor need the minority stockholders offer to place defendants in statu quo.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

[b] Under the facts, held, that the approval of such sale at the stockholders' meeting did not affect the rights of the minority stockholders, who did not consent thereto.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

§ 193. —— Acquiring Adverse Title or Interest.

[a] One of several associates in a mining claim received some seven thousand dollars of the common property, and then bought in divers judgments against the company, and the sheriff's certificate of a sale of their land for taxes. Held, that, if the company chose to assume and affirm his acts as if done for their benefit, the amount paid by him should be credited on his indebtedness, and the title go to or remain in the company, unaffected by this arrangement.—Bradbury v. Barnes, 19 Cal. 120.

[b] The owners of a majority of the stock of a corporation, who persuade their "implements and representatives" on the board of directors to convey to them the property of the corporation for a grossly inadequate consideration, in fraud of the minority stockholders, must be held to have participated in the fraud of the directors.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
10 Cyc. 374; 12 Cent. Dig., col. 818, § 691.

§ 194. —— Holding Mortgage on Corporate Property.

[a] A mortgage executed by a corporation, if valid when executed, is not invalidated by the fact that certain persons, who, at that time, had a right to receive some of its stock on surrender of the stock of another company, did subsequently make the exchange.—Donohoe v. Mariposa Land etc. Co., 66 Cal. 317, 5 Pac. 495.

[b] Where a corporation pays a debt due its principal stockholder before maturity, as a consideration for his guaranteeing its note, repayment to the corporation will not be enforced by a court of equity at the suit of other stockholders, without a showing that the corporation or its stockholders were injured in some way.—Wills v. Porter, 61 Pac. 1109.

[a] Defendants, having a contract for land at five dollars an acre, employed agents to organize a corporation to purchase it at twenty-five dollars. It was represented to the subscribers for stock in such corporation that the contract held by defendants was for the purchase of the land at twenty-five dollars an acre, the lowest price at which it could be obtained; and it was concealed from them that one of defendants, a large subscriber to the corporation, was interested in the contract, and that the organizers were defendants' agents. The corporation gave a mortgage for part of the price, which was foreclosed, defendants buying in the land, and obtaining a deficiency judgment. Held, that in an action to set aside the foreclosure decree and the judgment, and to cancel the notes and mortgage, the fact that defendants purchased the land before they put themselves in a position of trust toward the corporation by its organization did not prevent it from recovering the secret profits made by them.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

[a] Stockholders of a corporation, who do not control its directors, owe no duty to the corporation not to conceal from the directors the fact that they are interested in another corporation with which the directors of the former are about to make a contract, and hence such a contract is valid, notwithstanding such concealment.—Fox v. Mackay, 125 Cal. 57, 57 Pac. 670.

§ 197. Actions Against Corporation.

[b] Where a corporation and its officers do an act, even within the scope of their authority, which amounts to a breach of the trust on which the authority was conferred, a court will relieve an injured stockholder from loss, if in the meantime no superior equity has intervened, and no rights of innocent third parties have attached.—Wright v. Oroville Gold, Silver etc. Min. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[c] Where a temperance society incorporated "for the purpose of promoting the cause of temperance" disposes of all its property and distributes the proceeds of the sale among its members in good standing, any member not a party to the transaction may bring an action to recover the money so distributed.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 61, 22 Pac. 660.

[d] Where a suit by stockholders of a water company to enjoin the sale of additional shares of stock, under an amendment of the articles of incorporation, is based on the theory that the amendment is absolutely void, there need be no offer to return money paid for such shares.—McDermont v. Anaheim Union Water Co., 124 Cal. 112, 56 Pac. 779.

[a] Where part of the stockholders of a corporation induced it by fraudulent representations to convey property to a third person, who, under a prearrangement, conveyed the same to such stockholders, the nonassenting stockholders cannot maintain a suit in equity against such stockholders to compel a conveyance to them of their portion of the property.—Gorham v. Gilson, 28 Cal. 479.

[a] In action by stockholder against directors for fraud only those interested in fraud need be joined as defendants.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 201, 26 Pac. 111.

[b] A corporation has no interest in the individual ownership of its shares, and is not a proper party to a controversy between the claimants to a portion of its capital stock.—Behlow v. Fischer, 102 Cal. 208, 36 Pac. 509.

[a] A complaint which alleges that plaintiffs and defendants are stockholders in a corporation, that the directors are the "implements and representatives" of defendants, who own a majority of the stock, and that the directors conveyed to defendants land of the corporation at one-tenth of its real value, in fraud of the other stockholders, states facts constituting actual fraud, and is sufficient on demurrer.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

[b] Defendants acquired land, which they conveyed to a corporation of which they were stockholders in consideration of stock issued to them, and agreed to pay the deferred purchase price of the land at maturity, and afterward agreed to sell the stock and apply the proceeds in payment of the land, which they failed to do. Held, that the fact that defendants on the sale of the stock received only part of the purchase price in cash, and that the complaint in an action by stockholders contained no allegation that they converted to their own use notes received for the balance, did not create a presumption that such notes were turned over to the corporation.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

[c] Civil Code, section 1691, provides that one party cannot rescind a contract without the consent of the other party unless he restores to the latter everything of value which he has received from him thereunder. A corporation which owed forty-six thousand six hundred and fifty dollars to its principal stockholder borrowed money from a bank, and, in consideration of his guaranteeing its note, paid its indebtedness to him before maturity. Held, in an action by other stockholders to compel repayment to the corporation, that the action could not be maintained without releasing the principal stockholder from his guaranty.—Wills v. Porter, 61 Pac. 1109.

§ 202. Majority Rule.

[a] The rule of stockholders' meetings is that the majority governs; and every stockholder contracts that such shall be the rule.—San Diego v. Pacific Beach R. R. Co., 112 Cal. 53, 44 Pac. 333.

§ 203. Necessity for Quorum.

[a] To adopt resolution, majority of quorum must vote for it.—Smith v. Los Angeles etc. Assn., 78 Cal. 292, 12 Am. St. Rep. 53.

§ 204. What Constitutes Quorum.

[a] A person to whom stock has been issued as trustee, without the knowledge or consent of the owners, is not a bona fide stockholder within the meaning of section 312 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and where, without stock thus issued, a majority of the stock is not represented at a meeting for the election of trustees, the election is void.—Stewart v. Mahoney Min. Co., 54 Cal. 149.

[a] Notice of day, hour, and place of annual meeting of the stockholders of a corporation to elect a board of trustees must be given, or such meeting cannot be legally held, unless the stockholders are all present and consenting, either in person or by proxy.—San Buenaventura Mfg. Co. v. Vassault, 50 Cal. 534.

[b] In an action to set aside a stock assessment levied at a meeting called by the vice-president, refusal to require the president to answer questions tending to show that his presence could have been obtained to call the meeting, if desired, held not error.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

Corporate meetings not properly called, validity of acts done at: 18 Am. Dec. 102, note.

[a] A corporate by-law, together with Civil Code, section 320, required that notices of special meetings of a corporation should be given on "the order of the president, or, if there be none, on the order of two directors." Held, that the action of a majority of the directors at a special meeting called by them on the refusal of the president to do so, though competent to act, declaring the offices vacant, electing new officers, and authorizing them to sell the corporate property, was void.—Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73, 30 Pac. 1024.

[b] Where the by-laws of a corporation, adopted by virtue of Civil Code, section 303, authorizing a corporation by its by-laws to provide for the time, place, and manner of calling and conducting its meetings, provided that the president or two directors might call special meetings of directors, and that notice should be given of each called meeting to each director one day before the meeting, and a special meeting was held, no notice having been given either of two directors, who were absent from the meeting, and the minutes of the meeting were not approved at any subsequent meeting of the board of directors, a mortgage on the corporation's property executed by the directors at such meeting was invalid.—Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. etc. Co., 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552.

[c] A notice of a special meeting of a corporation held a sufficient compliance with the corporation's by-laws, and with Civil Code, section 320.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[a] Semble, upon the principle that the real owner of stock in corporations formed under our laws is entitled to represent it at the meetings of the corporations, and the mere fact that he does not appear as the owner upon the books of the company should not absolutely exclude him from the privilege of so doing.—People ex rel. Allen v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113.

[b] When the qualifications of persons who may vote for directors of a corporation are definitely prescribed by statute, the corporation cannot extend or limit the right to vote. A resolution of the board declaring that a certain person is recognized as the one entitled to vote on certain stock is inoperative, if his right cannot be established under the statute.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15, 99 Am. Dec. 237.

[c] Under the requirement of Civil Code, section 312, that, to entitle a person to vote for directors, he must be "a bona fide stockholder," one is not entitled to vote stock in which he has never had any interest, but which is registered in his name for the purpose of enabling the real owner to avoid statutory liabilities. (Beatty, C. J., dissenting.)—Smith v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 584, 47 Pac. 582, 35 L. R. A. 309.

[d] The stockholders of a corporation do not hold a fiduciary relation to each other by which one is precluded from voting at a stockholders' meeting on a question in which he has an individual interest adverse to any of the other stockholders.—Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[e] Under the act of 1853, section 9, declaring a transfer of stock invalid, except as between the parties, until entered on the books of the corporation, the person in whose name the stock stands on the books is, as between himself and the corporation, the owner for all purposes, and particularly for those of an election.—People v. Robinson, 64 Cal. 373, 1 Pac. 156.

15 L. R. A. 665, 683, notes. See, also, 10 Cyc. 331-343; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 863-879, §§ 747-766.

[a] The "stock and transfer book," which, under Civil Code, section 378, is required to be kept by corporations, is the criterion, under section 312, for determining the amount of stock held by any person, and for which he is entitled to cast a vote for any purpose at a stockholders' meeting; and hence the statement by the secretary, in his record of a stockholders' meeting, of the amount of stock held by a stockholder, made under section 377, requiring a record to be kept by corporations of every act done or ordered to be done, and of who were present and who absent at any meeting, must yield to the evidence derived from the "stock and transfer book."—Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[b] The testimony of a stockholder as to the number of shares held by him at the time of an annual meeting of stockholders of a corporation, though subject to be overcome by the production of the stock-book required by Civil Code, section 378, to be kept by corporations, must, in the absence of evidence therefrom, prevail over the unsupported recital of the secretary of the corporation in his minutes of the meeting made under section 377, requiring a record to be kept by corporations of every act done or ordered to be done, and who were present and who absent at any meeting.—Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[a] The executors of a deceased person may represent the stock standing on the books of a corporation in his name, and may vote such stock for the purpose of consolidation, without the necessity of a transfer of the stock to them.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

§ 210. —— Surviving Partners.

[a] Surviving partner has right to vote at election for officers of a corporation formed under the general incorporation act of this state of 1853 the stock in his hands as assets of the partnership, the business of the firm being unsettled.—People ex rel. Allen v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113.

[b] The fact that a portion of the stock voted by such surviving partner stood upon the books of the corporation, at the time of the election, in the name of the deceased partner alone, did not affect the right to vote, if in fact the stock belonged to the partnership.—People ex rel. Allen v. Hill, 16 Cal. 113.

[a] One to whom stock has been issued as trustee without the knowledge or consent of the owner is not a "bona fide stockholder," within code, section 312, as to qualification to vote, etc.—Stewart v. Mahoney Min. Co., 54 Cal. 149.

[b] A trustee of stock is the legal owner of the stock, and as against the corporation and all the world, except his cestui que trust, he may vote the stock for all purposes, including the purpose of consolidation of the corporation.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

[a] Certificates of stock of a corporation issued to a creditor of the corporation, or to a trustee for him as a pledge to secure his debt, are illegally issued, and cannot be voted by any person.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15, 99 Am. Dec. 237.

[b] Pledgee of stock owned by a corporation has no right to vote the stock.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15, 99 Am. Dec. 237.

[c] The pledgor of stock has the right to vote it, where the pledgee does not claim the right to vote it under an agreement with the pledgor.—Dulin v. Pacific Wood and Coal Co., 103 Cal. 357, 35 Pac. 1045, 37 Pac. 207.

§ 213. —— Stock Held by Corporation.

[a] Stock belonging to a corporation cannot be voted upon by any person, even if held in the name of a person as trustee.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15.

[a] It is the legal right of a stockholder to vote his stock as he pleases in the election of directors, and though he may confer upon another stockholder the right to vote his stock by a written proxy for that purpose, yet the court cannot compel him to do so in the absence of an agreement upon or for a valuable consideration that he would give such proxy.—Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 103 Cal. 357, 35 Pac. 1045, 37 Pac. 207.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 312, providing that stockholders of corporations may be represented at all corporate elections by proxies, a stockholder may choose any person to cast his vote, and a by-law providing that no proxy shall be voted by one not a stockholder is unreasonable and invalid.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 104 Cal. 649, 43 Am. St. Rep. 147, 38 Pac. 452, 29 L. R. A. 844.

[c] Under section 312 of the Civil Code stockholders of a corporation may be represented at all elections by proxies of their own selection; and a by-law of a banking corporation providing that no proxy should be voted by anyone not a stockholder of the corporation is void as being an infringement upon the statute.—People's Home Savings Bank v. Superior Court, 104 Cal. 649, 43 Am. St. Rep. 147, 38 Pac. 452.

[d] Stock brokers who have purchased stock of a corporation upon orders from dealers and speculators upon deposit of the customary margin, which stock has been transferred to the trustees of the brokers as security for their advances, if authorized to vote the stock at all, are bound to vote it in the interest of those for whom they have purchased it, and they should not give proxies as a mere matter of favor or professional comity, or for a consideration, to anyone who may choose to make a contest for the control of the board of directors.—Fox v. Hale & Norcross Silver Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369, 41 Pac. 308.

[f] A corporation which is a stockholder in the consolidated corporation may authorize its secretary to vote its stock, and where a portion of its stock stood on the books of the company in the names of pledgees who authorized the stock to be voted by proxy, it may ratify and confirm the acts of the proxy, and such ratification is equivalent to previous authority.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

[g] It is not illegal or against public policy to separate the voting power from the ownership of stock by an irrevocable proxy given upon a sufficient consideration, when it is not appointed for an unlawful purpose, or where no unlawful end is attempted to be effected by the exercise of the voting power.—Smith v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 584, 56 Am. St. Rep. 119, 47 Pac. 582.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Irrevocable proxies: 56 Am. St. Rep. 138, note; 15 L. R. A. 683; 29 L. R. A. 844, notes. See, also, 10 Cyc. 338; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 879-887, §§ 767-776.

§ 215. Agreements to Vote and Voting Trusts.

[a] A verbal agreement among the stockholders of a corporation accompanying a division of stock and a loan of money, to the effect that one of the stockholders who loaned money to another to purchase stock should be president for two years, and should receive a salary of one hundred and twenty-five dollars a month so long as he should retain an interest in the corporation, there being no agreement that such stockholder should be elected as a director, and no means being provided for the carrying out of the agreement, is void, and cannot be specifically enforced.—Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 103 Cal. 357, 35 Pac. 1045, 37 Pac. 207.

[b] A written agreement between purchasers of stock that they will for five years "retain the power to vote the shares in one body, and that the vote which shall be cast by said shares shall be determined by ballot between them or their survivors," is a proxy, authorizing the vote of all the stock to be cast in accordance with the determination of

[c] It is sufficient consideration for an agreement between purchasers of stock to have it voted in one block for five years, the vote to be determined by ballot between the parties, that in their agreement among themselves to purchase they had stipulated for such a voting agreement; and it is immaterial that the voting agreement was not executed till after their bid for the stock was made, it having been executed before they had completed the purchase and become the owners by paying the purchase money; and it is likewise immaterial that a certificate for part of the stock was issued to each party.—Smith v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 584, 47 Pac. 582, 35 L. R. A. 309.

§ 216. Cumulative Voting.

[a] Under Constitution of 1879, article 12, section 12, a qualified stockholder of a corporation may, at an election for directors, vote at one time the whole number of his shares for the whole number of directors to be elected, or cumulate his shares by casting for one candidate as many votes as shall equal the number of his shares, multiplied by the number of directors to be elected, or by distributing them among as many candidates for director as he shall see fit; and, where qualified stockholders are denied the right to so vote, the election is illegal.—Wright v. Central California Water Co., 67 Cal. 532, 8 Pac. 70.

[b] Where a stockholder had in his own hands enough stock to have elected himself and another director by cumulation of his shares in voting, but neglected to do so, on account of a verbal agreement among the stockholders that he should be president, and accordingly scattered his votes, expecting the agreement to be performed, and as the result of the election was defeated as director, the court has no power to relieve him from his own error, or do that for him which he had the power to do for himself, and cannot declare him elected, nor order a new election.—Dulin v. Pacific Wood etc. Co., 103 Cal. 357, 35 Pac. 1045, 37 Pac. 207.

[a] Various actions which stockholder may bring against directors and others on behalf of corporation set forth.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 67, 24 Pac. 111.

[b] Any stockholder has right to sue in equity to prevent or set aside any departure from chartered purposes of corporation by act of majority.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 65, 22 Pac. 660.

[d] A corporation represents and binds its stockholders in all matters within the limits of its corporate powers, so long as it acts in good faith and without fraud upon their rights; and, in the bringing and defending of suits affecting the rights and obligations of the corporation, it binds the stockholders as fully as in the making of contracts; and with its right to maintain and defend actions concerning its corporate rights or liabilities the stockholders cannot interfere, except when the directors refuse to act, or are guilty of fraud in the maintenance or defense of the action.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 30 Pac. 776.

[e] If a corporation refuses to answer to an action against it to foreclose a mortgage, or to prosecute its defense in good faith, the stockholders may intervene, and prove all facts essential to a complete defense, and cause the necessary parties to be brought in. Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646, 44 Pac. 1086.

[f] In an action brought against a corporation by an assignee for the use of the president and two directors thereof, constituting a majority of the board, in which the answer of the corporation admits all the causes of action alleged, a stockholder may intervene to assert the rights of the corporation against the plaintiff, and need not aver a request to the corporation officers to defend the action. § 218. What Constitutes Suit on Behalf of Corporation.

[b] An action by a shareholder to enforce corporate rights must be regarded as a suit brought on behalf of the corporation, and the shareholder can enforce only such claims as the corporation could enforce; and the essential character of the cause of action remains the same, whether the suit be brought by the corporation or by a shareholder.—Chetwood v. California Nat. Bank, 113 Cal. 414, 45 Pac. 704.

[c] After corporate stock has been issued in good faith by agreement of all the stockholders in payment for leases transferred to the corporation, the remedy of a subsequent stockholder, who was misled by false representations of some of the stockholders, is personal to himself, and not in the name and for the benefit of the corporation, whose transaction was valid when made.—Garretson v. Pacific Crude Oil Co., 146 Cal. 184, 79 Pac. 838.

[a] Action against trustees of a corporation for misappropriation of funds should be in name of corporation, unless stockholder avers demand and refusal to sue.—Cogswell v. Bull, 39 Cal. 320.

[b] Averment in stockholders' suit that board is composed nearly, if not entirely, of unfaithful trustees, is not sufficient to excuse want of demand.—Cogswell v. Bull, 39 Cal. 320.

[c] When trustees repudiate the trust and claim title to corporate property, stockholders may sue to stay waste without demand, or election of new trustees.—Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 623.

[d] In an action by the stockholders against the trustees of a corporation, a denial, in the answer, that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust exists between the parties dispenses with the necessity of averring in the complaint, or proving, a prior demand and refusal.—Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614.

[e] Stockholders cannot maintain suit where request made on directors to bring action was simulated and did not disclose real nature of action sought to be brought.—Bacon v. Irvine, 70 Cal. 225, 11 Pac. 646.

[f] Stockholders may commence suit on behalf of corporation without first demanding that directors do so, when such demand would be useless.—Moyle v. Landers, 83 Cal. 582, 23 Pac. 794.

[g] Stockholder may sue for wrong to corporation without previous demand on directors when such demand would be useless.—Ashton v. Dashaway, 84 Cal. 69, 70, 22 Pac. 660.

[h] Where, in an action by a stockholder to set aside a sale of property of a corporation by the directors on the ground of fraud, it appears that any demand on the corporation, or on its controlling directors, for any remedy for the alleged wrongs, would have been useless, and this is, in substance, stated in the complaint, plaintiff, as a mere stockholder, is entitled to maintain the action without having first sought a remedy through the board of directors.—Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73, 30 Pac. 1024.

[i] Where it is alleged in the complaint that the majority of the directors participated and assisted in the acts complained of, and have ever since controlled the action of the board, and that it would therefore be useless to make a demand upon the corporation or the directors to bring the action, which allegations are not denied, and the answer of the corporation shows that any demand upon it or upon its directors would have been useless, no demand is necessary to be alleged or shown.—Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73, 30 Pac. 1024.

[j] In an action by a stockholder of a corporation on behalf of himself and other stockholders against certain other stockholders and an officer of the corporation, for damages for injury to the corporation, and for an accounting, a finding that the demand of the plaintiff upon the corporation to bring the action, and its refusal to do so, were simulated, and not in good faith, negatives the right of the plaintiff to maintain the action. Morrison v. Stone, 103 Cal. 94, 37 Pac. 142.

[k] Where the evidence shows, in an action by a stockholder against a bank, that a request of the directors to bring the action would have been useless, defendant cannot object that the stockholder made no such request.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 106 Cal. 329, 39 Pac. 603.

[l] A suit by stockholders to enjoin the foreclosure of a trust deed securing bonds issued by the corporation, on the ground of illegality in the bonds and trust deed, cannot be maintained in the absence of a showing that the corporation has refused to assert the validity of the bonds and trust deed in the foreclosure action.—Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646, 44 Pac. 1086.

[m] A suit for relief for the misappropriation of the funds of a corporation is properly brought by the stockholders, without any demand on the directors to bring such suit, where the complaint alleges that the corporation is under the control of the defaulting directors, and that such demand would be useless.—Moyle v. Landers, 21 Pac. 1133.

[a] Civil Code, section 1691, provides that a party entitled to rescind a contract must do so promptly. A corporation which owed forty-six thousand six hundred and fifty dollars to its principal stockholder borrowed money from a bank, and, in consideration of his guaranteeing its note, paid its indebtedness to him before maturity. Held, that an action brought by other stockholders two years thereafter to compel repayment to the corporation could not be maintained, no excuse being shown for the delay.—Wills v. Porter, 61 Pac. 1109.

[b] Corporation is necessary defendant in suit by stockholders in its behalf.—Beach v. Cooper, 72 Cal. 103, 13 Pac. 161.

[c] Suit may be brought by a stockholder, on behalf of his corporation, against the directors and others, for frauds, wrongs, and breaches of trust, and for the recovery from them of money of which the corporation has been defrauded, and the corporation be joined as a defendant.—Beach v. Cooper, 72 Cal. 99, 13 Pac. 161.

[d] Defendants, having a contract for land at five dollars an acre, employed agents to organize a corporation to purchase it at twenty-five dollars. It was represented to the subscribers for stock in such corporation that the contract held by defendants was for the purchase of the land at twenty-five dollars an acre, the lowest price at which it could be obtained, and it was concealed from them that one of defendants, a large subscriber to the corporation, was interested in the contract, and that the organizers were defendants' agents. The corporation gave a mortgage for part of the price, which was foreclosed, defendants buying in the land and obtaining a deficiency judgment. Held, that, in an action to set aside the foreclosure decree and the judgment, and to cancel the notes and mortgage, the corporation was the proper plaintiff, rather than the individual subscribers to stock.—Ex-Mission Land etc. Co. v. Flash, 97 Cal. 610, 32 Pac. 600.

[f] A suit for relief for the misappropriation of the funds of a corporation may be brought by any one or any number of stockholders.—Moyle v. Landers, 21 Pac. 1133.

§ 221½. Pleading—Allegations as to Corporate Right of Action.

[a] Defendants acquired land which they conveyed to a corporation, of which they were stockholders, in consideration of stock issued to them, and agreed to pay the deferred purchase price of the land at maturity, and afterward agreed to sell the stock, and apply the proceeds in payment of the land, which they failed to do. Held, that a complaint by stockholders to enforce such agreement was not defective for failure to allege that the corporation had sustained damage by defendants' failure to perform their agreement, since such payment was essential to protect the corporation's rights to the property, and damage would be inferred.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

[b] In such case the allegation in the complaint that defendants applied the cash proceeds of the stock to their own use, and did not pay the debt, was a sufficient allegation of breach of contract.—Woodroof v. Howes, 88 Cal. 184, 26 Pac. 111.

§ 222. —— Allegations as to Interest of or Injury to Plaintiff.

[a] An averment that plaintiffs, in an action on behalf of the corporation, were owners of the stock of the corporation before suit brought, and ever since 1881, sufficiently alleges ownership of the stock.—Moyle v. Landers, 21 Pac. 1133.

[b] A stockholder alleged that the directors purchased property of another corporation worth at least one million two hundred thousand dollars, and in payment therefor issued shares of stock of the par value of two million four hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, and assumed an indebtedness of one million and fifty thousand dollars. He did not allege that the corporation owned any property before such purchase. Held, he did not show that he was injured. By divided court.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[a] In an action by a stockholder to restrain the misappropriation of corporate funds, plaintiff's allegations in reference to actions brought by another stockholder and himself to determine the rights of certain defendants to hold the offices of directors, were not separate causes of action on behalf of plaintiff, and did not vitiate the cause of action alleged.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[a] In an action by stockholder to set aside a sale of property of a corporation by the directors on the ground of fraud, it appeared that it was recited in the resolution authorizing the sale, and also in the deed, that the sale was made because the corporation was unable to pay its debts. The complaint negatived these recitals, and alleged specifically the means and ability of the corporation to meet its indebtedness, and these allegations were denied in the answer. Held, that the issues raised by the pleadings were material, and evidence pertinent thereto offered by

[a] Where an appeal is taken by a corporation from a large judgment against it, it will not be dismissed on the ground that the attorney who took it acted without authority, nor will a motion be granted to substitute another attorney for the appellant for the purpose of consenting to a dismissal of the appeal, where the showing made by the moving parties is not strong and clear, but are conflicting affidavits, and the evidence considered as a whole does not affirmatively establish the alleged facts upon which the motions are based, or show who among contesting stockholders have the control of the corporation appellant.—Woodbury v. The Nevada Southern Ry. Co., 115 Cal. 85, 46 Pac. 864.

[a] Each corporator is principal debtor, and not mere surety for the corporation, and, in relation to the creditors of the corporation stands on the same footing as if it were an ordinary partnership.—Mokelumne Hill Canal Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265.

[b] Liability of stockholders for subsisting debt against corporation is primary, and not conditional or contingent, and is unaffected by a suspension of the remedy against the corporation.—Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Morrow v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383, 1 Pac. 354.

[c] Liability of stockholders is purely statutory, and is governed as to limitation by section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545.

[e] Stockholders of corporation are not sureties as regards the creditors of a corporation.—Sonoma Valley Bank v. Hill, 59 Cal. 107; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650.

[f] Stockholder is liable for his proportion of corporate debts contracted while he was stockholder as principal, not as surety.—Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 653, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62.

[g] Stockholder's liability under code is substantially the same as under constitution. Bidwell v. Babcock, 87 Cal. 32, 25 Pac. 752.

[h] Liability of a stockholder in a corporation is primary, in the sense that he is not a surety.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[e] Stockholders in this state are not jointly and severally liable for the debts of the corporation; but each stockholder has a several liability proportionate to the amount of his stock.—Brown v. Merrill, 107 Cal. 446, 48 Am. St. Rep. 145, 40 Pac. 557.

[f] Liability of stockholders of corporation is several, and a stockholder who is creditor of corporation may sue other stockholders.—Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 560, 48 Pac. 611.

§ 229. Law Governing.

[a] The liability of a stockholder of a corporation for the debts of the corporation on its becoming insolvent, created by the statutes of one state, cannot be enforced in another state.—Russell v. Pacific Ry. Co., 113 Cal. 258, 45 Pac. 323.

[b] A special statutory remedy given by the laws of another state, for enforcing the statutory liability of the stockholders of a corporation organized under its laws, limits the liability, and where such remedy is not afforded by the laws of this state, the liability of the stockholders of such corporation cannot be enforced in this state against resident stockholders thereof.—Russell v. Pacific Ry. Co., 113 Cal. 258, 45 Pac. 323.

10 Cyc. 650-652.

[a] The legislature has the power to say, not that the stockholder shall not be liable for any of the debts of the corporation, but that he shall be liable for his portion, and what that portion shall be.—French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518.

[b] Legislature must impose same rate of liability upon all stockholders, and the law must operate alike upon all corporations.—French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518.

[c] Act of legislature authorizing formation of corporations, without attaching to stockholders an individual liability, would be unconstitutional, and persons organized under such act would acquire none of the rights of a corporation.—French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518.

[d] While the constitution requires the debts of corporations to be secured by the personal liability of the corporators, and makes each stockholder liable for his proportion of such debts, it leaves to the legislature the power to regulate such liability, and to prescribe the rule by which each stockholder's proportion of such debts shall be ascertained. Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

[f] Sections 32 and 36 of article 4 of the constitution of 1863, relating to the liability of stockholders in a corporation, are substantially the same as sections 2 and 3 of article 12 of the constitution of 1879.—Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448.

[g] Neither section 2 nor section 3 of article 12 of the constitution of 1879, relating to the liabilities of stockholders in corporations, has any application to this case, because the liability of the stockholders accrued prior to the adoption of that constitution.—Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448.

[h] The remedy given by section 322 of the Civil Code, fixing the personal liability of the stockholders of a corporation, is purely statutory, and furnishes to creditors of corporations additional security by making the stockholders directly liable for their proportion of the corporate debts, and was not intended to diminish the assets of the corporation by releasing the stockholder from his indebtedness to the corporation on account of his unpaid subscription for stock, or to take away from the creditor the right to resort to a court of equity to compel its payment.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 30 Pac. 776.

[i] The legal effect of the condition prescribed by section 3 of article 12 of the constitution of this state, regulating the individual liability of stockholders for debts contracted and liabilities incurred by the corporation, is, that a corporation when created becomes the agent of its stockholders to make such contracts and incur such liabilities as are authorized by law and its articles of incorporation, and the contracts which it thus makes bind the stockholders to the extent named.—Kennedy v. California Savings Bank, 97 Cal. 93, 33 Am. St. Rep. 163, 1 Pac. 846.

[j] Under constitution of 1849, article 4, section 31, liability of stockholders may be so changed as to impose obligations for which they were not liable when they became stockholders.—McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57, 43 Pac. 418.

[b] Laws of 1862, section 27, providing that corporations organized thereunder, and their members, shall not be subject to the conditions and liabilities contained in, and shall, be exempt from, the corporation act (Laws 1850, p. 347), is unconstitutional so far as it was intended to declare that the stockholders of a corporation formed under its provisions should not be individually and personally liable for any portion of its debts, within Constitution 1849, article 4, section 36, which was given practical effect by Laws of 1850, section 32, and Laws of 1853, section 16, each providing substantially that each stockholder of a corporation shall be individually liable for its indebtedness in an amount proportioned to his shares of stock.—McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57, 43 Pac. 418.

[a] Corporation has no power to extend liabilities of its stockholders, nor to represent them as to their individual obligation to pay a debt or liability at the time when it was first incurred, and it cannot bind them by a note subsequently executed in consideration of a prior liability of the corporation, for which alone the stockholders were responsible.—Winona Wagon Co. v. Bull, 108 Cal. 1, 40 Pac. 1077.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 2831, persons who execute and indorse a note for the accommodation of a corporation of which they are members are primarily liable for their individual proportion of the debt, and secondarily liable as sureties for the proportions owed by the others.—Kellogg v. Lopez, 145 Cal. 497, 78 Pac. 1056.

§ 233. Extent of Liability in General.

[a] In order to find out how much any one stockholder is liable to pay to the plaintiff of the amount due from the corporation, it is necessary to find the whole amount of the indebtedness of the corporation created while he is a stockholder. If his share of personal liability, upon the whole indebtedness, is sufficient to pay the judgment of the plaintiff, the plaintiff may collect the whole out of him, leaving the stockholder, who has paid more than his share of the particular debt, to seek contribution out of his costockholders.—Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

[b] Stockholder's liability runs from date of execution of corporate note, and is not extended by renewal of note.—Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 653, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62.

[c] A corporation is the agent of its stockholders to make such contracts and incur such liabilities as are authorized by law and by its articles of incorporation; and its contracts thus made bind the stockholders as respects their individual liability for its indebtedness and any admissions or declarations made by the corporation within the scope of its agency, and as part of the res gestae may be proved against the stockholders as principals.—McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57, 52 Am. St. Rep. 149, 43 Pac. 418.

[d] Stockholders, who are such at time indebtedness was incurred by corporation are ratably liable therefor.—Danielson v. Yoakum, 116 Cal. 383, 384, 48 Pac. 322.

[e] The stockholders of a corporation are liable for their proportion of the whole of the debt of the incorporation, including the interest, which is as much a part of the debt as the principal; and a loan of money to the corporation is presumed to be upon interest, unless it is otherwise expressly stated at the time in writing.—Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Enright, 127 Cal. 669, 60 Pac. 439.

[a] A court of equity will, for the benefit of a creditor of an insolvent commercial corporation, compel a stockholder to pay in the amount of capital stock which he has contracted with the corporation to take, there being nothing in the constitution to the contrary.—Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448.

[c] Where persons take stock of a corporation from it, pay value therefor, and act in all respect as stockholders during the time debts of the corporation are contracted, it is immaterial, on the question of their liability to creditors for any balance due on the par value of the stock, whether they were original subscribers or not.—Tulare Sav. Bank v. Talbot, 131 Cal. 45, 63 Pac. 172.

balance.—Kellerman v. Maier, 116 Cal. 423, 48 Pac. 377.

[e] Right of creditors of a corporation to recover against stockholders to the extent of their unpaid subscriptions is not limited by other debts of the corporation.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136.

[f] Stockholders having paid thirty-three and a third per cent of the par value of their stock cannot, in an action against them by creditors of the corporation to enforce liability to the extent of their unpaid subscriptions, be treated as holding their stock as a mere gratuity.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136.

[g] Since Civil Code, section 322, declaring that, if any stockholder pays his proportion of any corporate debt, he is thereby released from any further personal liability therefor, does not affect the stockholder's liability to the corporation for unpaid subscriptions, a stockholder's payment to a corporate creditor of the amount due on his unpaid subscription, in reduction of the corporation's debt, he knowing it to be insolvent, will not relieve him from liability in an action by other creditors to recover such unpaid subscription, in the absence of evidence of a corporate act authorizing such creditor to make such application of the amount due.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

[h] Where the par value of corporate stock was one hundred dollars per share, for which there was no written subscription, but the incorporators agreed orally before the incorporation that they were to purchase the stock for twenty dollars per share, fully paid, which was done, such stockholders are liable for the unpaid balance to creditors of the corporation after its insolvency; they being deemed subscribers, and not purchasers; no formal agreement, in writing or otherwise, to pay the par value of the stock, being necessary, but their ownership of stock fixing their liability.—Vermont Marble Co. v. Declez Granite Co., 135 Cal. 579, 67 Pac. 1057.

[a] When interest is added to a claim against a corporation, and a note given for the amount, it becomes a debt of the stockholders, though there was no agreement in writing to pay the interest.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[b] Stockholders liable for their proportion of the debt of a corporation are liable for the interest thereon.—Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Enright, 127 Cal. 669, 60 Pac. 439.

§ 237. —— Note Given for Pre-existing Debt After Transfer of Stock.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 322, providing that the liability of each stockholder is determined by the amount of stock owned by him at the time the debt was incurred, a stockholder is not liable on a note given by the corporation in payment of an antecedent indebtedness, but on the original debt.—Winona Wagon Co. v. Bull, 108 Cal. 1, 40 Pac. 1077.

§ 238. —— Debts Contracted Before Membership.

[a] A stockholder of a mining corporation is liable for only those of its debts which were incurred since he became such, and obtaining a judgment against the corporation upon a debt incurred before he became a member does not make it a new debt, so as to render the stockholder liable.—Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

[c] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation to recover the proportional share of each one of the corporate debts, the proof must show that the defendant was a stockholder when such debt was contracted. Proof of a judgment against the corporation does not show when the debt was contracted. Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

[a] Stockholders may have the benefit of the statute of this state imposing liability on stockholders for their respective proportions of the debts of the corporation, as against other stockholders in the same corporation.—Brown v. Merrill, 107 Cal. 446, 48 Am. St. Rep. 145, 40 Pac. 557; Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[b] A creditor, though a stockholder, can enforce the liability of the other stockholders for their proportion of his debt, and that right passes to his assignee.—(1895) Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047; (1897) Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 553, 48 Pac. 611.

[a] To render a subscriber to stock in a bank liable to creditors on his subscription, it is not essential that certificates of stock shall have been issued to him, for they are merely the proof of property, which may exist without them.—Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 110.

§ 241. —— Purchaser of Stock on Credit.

[a] To render a stockholder in a bank individually liable for its debts, it is not essential that he shall have paid for the stock for which he subscribed, for a corporation may give credit for its stock, as well as for any other property sold by it.—Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 110.

[b] All persons who appear to be stockholders on face of corporation books are liable as such.—Hurlburt v. Arthur, 140 Cal. 107, 98 Am. St. Rep. 17, 73 Pac. 734.

[c] One held not guilty of laches in having his name removed from the books of a corporation as a stockholder, so as to estop him to deny liability to creditors of the corporation.—Welch v. Gillelen, 147 Cal. 571, 82 Pac. 248.

§ 243. —— Owners of Stock Registered in Another's Name.

[a] Under section 322 of the Civil Code, a stockholder is liable for his proportionate amount of the indebtedness of the corporation, not only for the stock standing in his name on the books, but also for all of the stock owned by him which stands on the books in the name of another person.—Duke v. Huntington, 130 Cal. 272, 62 Pac. 510.

[a] Where shares of the stock of a corporation are transferred in pledge as collateral security for the indebtedness of a stockholder, pledgee is not to be deemed a stockholder as respects personal liability for the indebtedness of the corporation.—Borland v. Nevada Bank of San Francisco, 99 Cal. 89.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 322, where shares appear on corporate books in name of trustee, he is liable for assessment.—Union Sav. Bank v. Willard (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 1098.

[a] Where statutory liability is simple personal liability growing out of contract of stockholder, it may be enforced in any state where jurisdiction of shareholder can be obtained.—Ferguson v. Sherman, 116 Cal. 173, 174, 47 Pac. 1023.

§ 247. Waiver or Release of Liability.

[b] Where a corporation transferred all its assets to a stockholder, in consideration of her agreement to pay its debts, and she subsequently transferred her stock to an insolvent, with an intent thereby to escape liability, a judgment in favor of the assignee, for a subsequent conversion of the stock by the corporation, did not relieve her from liability for the corporate debts.—National Carriage Mfg. Co. v. Story & Isham Commercial Co., 111 Cal. 531, 44 Pac. 157.

[c] The liability of the stockholder for his proportion of a corporate debt may be modified or waived by contract.—Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090.

§ 248. —— Power to Waive Benefit of Constitutional Provision.

[a] It was competent for parties to a contract with the corporation to waive the liability imposed by the constitution.—Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379.

[b] A clause of the constitution, providing for the personal liability of stockholders of corporations, may be waived by the insertion of a stipulation to that effect in all the contracts of the corporations.—French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518.

§ 249. —— Release of One Party as Release of Others.

[b] Though both the corporation and the stockholders are primarily liable to creditors, yet, as between themselves, the one being the principal debtor and the other only its sureties, a release of the corporation will release the stockholders; but a release of the latter will not discharge the former. (Per Crockett, J., dissenting.)—Prince v. Lynch, 38 Cal. 528, 99 Am. Dec. 427-n.

[a] A waiver of stockholder's liability, classed as one of the by-laws of a banking corporation and printed with them in each depositor's book, and followed by a formal agreement to be signed, is of no effect unless actually signed by the depositor.—Wells v. Black, 117 Cal. 157, 59 Am. St. Rep. 162, 48 Pac. 1090.

[a] Wherever the debt of a corporation is satisfied in part, there is also a pro tanto discharge of the liability of stockholders.—San Jose Sav. Bank v. Pharis, 58 Cal. 380.

[b] Money paid by stockholders to the president of a corporation, to discharge their proportionate liability for the entire indebtedness, if applied to the payment of a corporate debt to the extent of the proportionate shares of such stockholders, does not relieve other stockholders of their shares of the indebtedness.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 252. —— Recovery of Voluntary Payment of Debt not Owing.

[a] A stockholder being liable only for debts of the corporation incurred after he acquired his stock (Const. art. 12, sec. 3; Civ. Code, sec. 322), his payment of debts incurred prior thereto is voluntary, and cannot be recovered of one who sold him the stock.—Danielson v. Yoakum, 116 Cal. 382, 48 Pac. 322.

[a] When the judgment against the stockholders of a corporation is once satisfied, the plaintiff can collect no more from the other stockholders, although his judgment may, before satisfaction, have authorized him to collect it from several stockholders.—Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155.

§ 254. Necessity for Exhausting Remedy Against Corporation.

[b] Before adoption of code and new constitution creditor was not bound to exhaust remedies against company which law provided for his protection before proceeding against stockholder.—Morrow v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383, 1 Pac. 354.

[c] Fact that debt of corporation is secured by mortgage which the creditor holds and is unforeclosed does not affect liability of stockholder whose liability for the debt of the corporation is primary and not that of a surety, and he is not injured nor benefited by the fact that the corporation was given security, nor by the fact that the debt was renewed.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[d] Creditor who has obtained judgment against Kansas corporation in that state with execution returned nulla bona may pursue stockholder here without first obtaining judgment against stockholder here.—Ferguson v. Sherman, 116 Cal. 176, 47 Pac. 1023.

§ 255. Actions to Enforce Liability.

[a] In an action by a creditor against a stockholder to recover a proportionate amount of a debt created by the corporation it is only necessary to determine (1) the whole amount of the capital stock of the company, (2) the amount of stock owned by the defendant, and (3) the amount of the indebtedness of the company to the creditor. These questions are not of equitable cognizance, and may be tried and determined in an action at law.—Morrow v. Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383, 1 Pac. 354.

[b] In action to enforce liability of stockholders of corporation it is incumbent upon plaintiff to prove whole amount of stock outstanding to enable court to determine liability.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[c] In suit in justice's court to enforce stockholder's liability under section 322 of the Civil Code, there may be as many diverse issues made and as many trials had resulting in several judgments as there are separate defendants and disposition of case as to one defendant does not operate as dismissal as to others.—Grimwood v. Barry, 118 Cal. 276, 50 Pac. 430.

[d] Where the holder of a corporate note holds no security, and the action thereon against the stockholders is not barred, it is not necessary for stockholders who pay the note as sureties to bring an action in equity to enforce contribution from the other stockholders; but their remedy must be by an action at law, under Civil Code, section 322, which gives a joint and several action against stockholders for their proportionate share of the corporate debt.—Myers v. Sierra Val. Stock etc. Assn., 122 Cal. 669, 55 Pac. 689.

[e] Actions by creditors of a corporation will lie against stockholders personally; remedy not being limited to sale of the stock.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Actions against stockholders for debts of corporations: 43 Am. Dec. 694, note. See, also, 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1120-1208, §§ 1050-1170.

[a] Creditors of corporation are entitled to pursue either of two concurrent remedies against its stockholders—one equitable, to enforce their liability for unpaid subscriptions, and the other statutory, to recover their additional personal liability imposed thereby.—Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448.

[a] A court of equity will, for the benefit of a creditor of an insolvent commercial corporation, compel a stockholder to pay in the amount of capital stock which he has contracted with the corporation to take, there being nothing in the constitution to the contrary.—Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448.

[b] It is not necessary for the judgment creditor of the corporation, who is seeking in equity to enforce payment of subscriptions to stock, to show that he had pursued his statutory remedy against the stockholders, and proof that the creditor had exhausted his legal remedies against the corporation is shown by the introduction in evidence of the judgment against the corporation with the return of the execution issued thereon unsatisfied.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158.

[a] In action against stockholder to recover his ratable proportion of the debt of a corporation it appeared that the corporation had transferred to the plaintiff its personal property "as security for the indebtedness due." The court instructed the jury that it was no defense that a portion of the property given in pledge to the plaintiff remained in his hands undisposed of. Held, that the instruction was correct, and that other instructions embodying a contrary doctrine were rightly refused.—Sonoma Valley Bank v. Hill, 59 Cal. 107.

[b] The pendency of a suit by plaintiff against the corporation constitutes no defense to an action to enforce the liability of the stockholders.—Herman v. Hecht, 116 Cal. 553, 48 Pac. 611.

[c] In an action against the stockholders by an assignee of claims against the corporation, defendants claimed that one E. had purchased the claims and released them. E. and one S., attorney for the creditors, entered into an agreement, whereby S. was to become the owner of the claims by assignment, and, on payment of a consideration, transfer them and the corporate assets to E. The contract was not carried out, but at E.'s request S. sold the assets of the corporation, and received and applied the money according to the agreement, which defendants claim was a substantial compliance therewith, and entitled E. to the transfer of the claims. Held that, even if E. became the equitable owner, defendants, to sustain their claim, must show that S. was able to perform his part of the agreement.—Irish v. Sunderhaus, 122 Cal. 308, 54 Pac. 1113.

[d] Where guarantors are liable both as guarantors of a corporation and as stockholders, while they cannot be held liable for more than the corporate liability in either or both capacities, yet where the judgment against them is less than their liability as stockholders, it is immaterial in what capacity it was recovered.—London etc. Bank v. Parrott, 125 Cal. 472, 28 Am. St. Rep. 142, 58 Pac. 164.

[e] A subscriber to the stock of a corporation proposed to be formed, who, after its formation, partially paid for the stock therein, and received, and for upward of six years retained, the certificates evidencing the same, becomes a stockholder in the corporation and cannot escape from liability as such on the ground that the purposes of the corporation, as named in its articles of incorporation, differed from those stated in the subscription agreement.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136.

[b] Where a creditor of a corporation seeks to make the stockholders thereof liable for his demand, he must bring his action against them within the time prescribed by the statute of limitations, which begins to run when the debt falls due, and is not extended, as to the right to sue the stockholders, by a judgment against the corporation.—Stilphen v. Ware, 45 Cal. 110.

[c] An action against stockholders to recover money had and received by the corporation is seasonably brought within three years.—Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545.

[d] Where a person subscribed to the stock of a Virginia corporation, the laws of which state required that on every subscription for shares in any joint stock company there should be paid on every share two dollars at the time of subscribing, and the residue thereof when required by "the president and directors," a decree that such unpaid portion should be, and was thereby, called for, was equivalent to a call by the officers for the purpose of setting in motion the statute of limitations which would run against the subscriber's liability from the date of such call under the decree.—Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 353, 9 Pac. 420.

[f] Liability of stockholders is statutory, and must be enforced within three years after cause accrues.—Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 653, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62.

[h] The liability of a stockholder of a corporation upon a note given by the corporation is created, within the meaning of section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure, at least as early as the date of the note, and the statute of limitations commences to run in favor of the stockholder from the date of its execution, and not from its maturity, regardless of how long the liability of the corporation to actions may be postponed by agreement of the creditor.—Hunt v. Ward, 99 Cal. 612, 34 Pac. 335.

[i] Liability of a stockholder of a corporation upon a note given by the corporation is created within the meaning of section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure, at least as early as the date of the note, and the statute of limitations commences to run in favor of the stockholder from the date of its execution, and not from its maturity, regardless of how long the liability of the corporation to actions may be postponed by agreement of the creditor.—Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 103 Cal. 594, 37 Pac. 499.

[j] Where the liability of the directors of a corporation arises from negligence, the action must be commenced within two years after the cause of action accrues, whereas, if it arises out of fraud, it may be commenced within three years after the discovery of the facts constituting the fraud.—Fox v. Hale and Norcross Silver Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369, 41 Pac. 328.

[k] Code of Civil Procedure, section 359, providing that actions against stockholders of a corporation for corporate debts must be brought within three years, is not in conflict with constitution, article 12, section 3, which provides that each stockholder shall be liable for such proportion of the debts and liabilities as are contracted while he is a stockholder.—Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407, 58 Pac. 85.

[l] Code of Civil Procedure, section 359, limiting the time within which an action may be brought against stockholders, is not in conflict with Civil Code, section 309, which provides that there shall be no limitation of action against the directors of a corporation for liabilities incurred under that section, or with Code of Civil Procedure, section 348, providing for actions without limitation against persons with whom money has been deposited.—Santa Rosa Nat. Bank v. Barnett, 125 Cal. 407, 58 Pac. 85.

[n] A corporation authorized the issuance of new notes on surrender of notes held by plaintiffs, or on receipt of their value from any other person; directed new notes to be made to him, and the proceeds applied to plaintiffs' claim. Plaintiffs presented K.'s check for the amount and the notes, and new notes were executed to K., who immediately indorsed them to plaintiffs. The corporation indorsed K.'s check to plaintiffs, who deposited it in a bank to their credit. At the time the check was drawn, K. did not have sufficient funds in his bank to meet it, and on the following day gave the bank his note for the amount of the check, which he paid on the next day by a check from plaintiffs. The entire transaction was between plaintiffs and the corporation, who knew nothing of K. except that the check was signed by, and the notes made payable to, him. Held, that such facts constituted a renewal of the old notes merely, and not the creation of a new debt, and hence plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain an action to enforce a stockholder's liability on the new notes more than seven years after the giving of the original notes.—Goodall v. Jack, 127 Cal. 258, 59 Pac. 575.

[o] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 359, providing that actions against a stockholder of a corporation, to enforce statutory liability must be brought within three years after the liability is created, limitations begin to run, as against the demand of a surety who has been compelled to pay the debt of the corporation, from the day of such payment, and not from the date of the original obligation.—Ryland v. Commercial etc. Bank of San Jose, 127 Cal. 525, 59 Pac. 989.

[p] The liability of a stockholder of a corporation for his proportionate share of its debts is created by statute, and is barred within three years after the cause of action accrues.—Jones v. Goldtree Bros. Co., 142 Cal. 383.

[q] The corporation has no power, without the consent of the stockholders, to extend the time for the commencement of an action against them, by any subsequent renewal or extension of time for the payment of its original debt.—Jones v. Goldtree Bros. Co., 142 Cal. 383.

[a] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation by a judgment creditor of the corporation who has had execution against it returned unsatisfied, to enforce the amount due upon unpaid subscriptions for stock, the liability of the stockholders is several, and it is not necessary to make them all defendants.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158, 27 Pac. 647, 30 Pac. 776; Baines v. Story, 27 Pac. 676, 30 Pac. 777; Potter v. Dear, 27 Pac. 676.

[b] A judgment creditor who has had an execution returned unsatisfied against a street railway corporation may maintain an action against its stockholders to recover, for the benefit of all creditors who may desire to be made parties, the amount due upon unpaid subscriptions for stock.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158, 27 Pac. 674, 30 Pac. 776; Baines v. Story, 27 Pac. 676, 30 Pac. 777; Potter v. Dear, 27 Pac. 676.

[c] An action may be brought by a judgment creditor against several stockholders in a corporation to subject an alleged balance remaining unpaid to the corporation upon the stock held by the defendant in satisfaction of a judgment recovered by the plaintiff against the corporation; and a complaint averring the several amounts of stock held by each defendant, and of unpaid subscriptions due from each, does not show a misjoinder of parties or causes of action, and is sufficient as against a general demurrer.—Ryan v. Jacques, 103 Cal. 280, 37 Pac. 186.

[d] An averment in the creditor's bill that plaintiff sued on behalf of other creditors who may come in and be made parties to the action is immaterial and redundant surplusage.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[e] A bill to enforce a stockholder's liability for unpaid subscriptions may be filed against a single stockholder or any number of stockholders indebted for unpaid subscriptions, and the fund realized distributed ratably among all the creditors of the corporation.—Walter v. Merced Academy Assn., 126 Cal. 582, 59 Pac. 136; Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 50 Pac. 319.

[f] Under section 322 of the Civil Code, the stockholders of a corporation may be joined in an action to enforce their individual liabilities for a corporate indebtedness. In such an action the corporation is not a necessary party.—Greenleaf v. Jacks, 133 Cal. 506, 65 Pac. 1039.

[a] In an action to recover from the members of a plank or turnpike road company debts contracted before its final organization, the action being based on the theory that no final organization was ever had, the complaint must allege that the defendants commenced the formation of such company, and that, before the final organization thereof, debts were contracted which still remain unpaid, etc.—Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

[b] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation on its renewal notes, which are claimed to have extinguished the old notes, the complaint should allege that the defendants were stockholders of the corporation when the renewals were made.—Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650, 16 Am. St. Rep. 178, 23 Pac. 62.

[d] Complaint in action to enforce several debts of corporation against stockholder must show number of shares subscribed at time each debt was contracted.—Bidwell v. Babcock, 87 Cal. 33, 25 Pac. 752.

[e] Complaint in suit to enforce stockholder's liability must show proportion which his stock bears to entire subscribed stock or state facts from which this can be deduced. Bidwell v. Babcock, 87 Cal. 32, 25 Pac. 752.

[f] If the defendants had purchased the stock, without notice, under such circumstances as to relieve them from liability for the amount paid upon the shares, it is matter of defense to be pleaded and proved by them, and the plaintiff is not bound to anticipate and negative such defense.—Ryan v. Jacques, 103 Cal. 280, 37 Pac. 186.

[g] Where it is alleged that the stock held by each of the defendants was held as original subscribers, it will not be presumed that they sold the stock after paying nine dollars and a half per share, and that the purchasers paid the remainder and then sold the stock back to the defendants; and any facts showing that the defendants were not liable for the remainder of the subscription price must be pleaded to exonerate them from liability.—Ryan v. Jacques, 103 Cal. 280, 37 Pac. 186.

[h] Where a judgment creditor of a corporation improperly intervenes in an action by another judgment creditor against a stockholder of the corporation for an unpaid subscription of stock, and his complaint states a good cause of action against the stockholder, the allegations as to intervention will be regarded as redundant, and the complaint treated as an independent and original one.—Baines v. Babcock, 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[i] Stockholders of corporation are perhaps not strictly liable on contract of corporation, but on the statute creating the liability; but, if the debt of the corporation was created by a written contract, the debt of the corporation based on the contract must be pleaded in the usual mode.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[j] A complaint, in an action to enforce a stockholder's liability on a note given by the corporation, which failed to allege that defendant was a stockholder at the time the original indebtedness was created is sufficient.—Winona Wagon Co. v. Bull, 108 Cal. 1, 40 Pac. 1077.

[k] In an action against a stockholder for his proportionate share of a corporate debt, it must be alleged in the complaint what the whole number of subscribed shares was, the liability of the stockholder being dependent upon the proportion which his own holding bears to the total number of subscribed shares; and, in default of such allegation, the complaint is subject to a general demurrer.—John A. Roebling's Sons Co. v. Butler, 112 Cal. 677, 45 Pac. 6.

[m] In an action to enforce the individual liability of a stockholder for his proportionate share of a corporate debt, the complaint must show affirmatively that the indebtedness was incurred while the defendant was a stockholder; and the mere allegation that on a certain day, while the defendant was a stockholder, the corporation made its promissory note, is not sufficient, in the absence of an averment that the indebtedness was then for the first time incurred, or that the corporation then became indebted to the plaintiff.—J. I. Case Plow Works v. Montgomery, 115 Cal. 380, 47 Pac. 108.

[o] A complaint in an action to enforce a stockholder's liability for a corporate debt alleged that on a certain date the corporation became indebted to F. for a certain sum for money loaned and advanced by him to it, and that it agreed to repay said sum, and that he had assigned said claim to plaintiff. The evidence showed that a stockholder solicited a loan for the corporation from plaintiff; that plaintiff drew a check for the amount of the loan, and left it with such stockholder. The corporation executed a note to F., its attorney, for the amount of the loan, and he indorsed it to plaintiff without recourse, whereupon the stockholder to whom plaintiff had previously given the amount of the note gave a check therefor to the corporation's manager, who thereupon indorsed it to F., and he indorsed it to the corporation. Held, that a motion for a nonsuit on the ground that the evidence did not sustain the material allegations of the complaint was properly denied, it not appearing that the defendants were in any way misled or prejudiced by the allegations of the complaint. Spreckles v. Butler, 128 Cal. 645, 61 Pac. 378.

[p] A complaint to enforce a stockholder's liability set forth the existence of the corporation and its capital stock, and alleged that the corporation, for value received, executed the note set forth in the complaint, which was due and unpaid, and that, during the time said debts and liabilities of the corporation were contracted, defendant was a stockholder (giving the number of shares of stock held by him). Held, that the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to support a judgment by default, as against the objection that it did not allege when the indebtedness for which the notes were given was incurred, which was waived by failure

[a] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation by a judgment creditor of the corporation who has had execution against it returned unsatisfied, to enforce the amount due upon unpaid subscriptions for stock, evidence that the company owns a large amount of personal property besides its road and franchise is inadmissible.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158, 30 Pac. 776; Baines v. Story, 30 Pac. 777, affirming (1892) 95 Cal. 581, 27 Pac. 674.

[b] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation by a judgment creditor of the corporation who has had execution against it returned unsatisfied, to enforce the amount due upon unpaid subscriptions for stock, proof that a creditor has exhausted his legal remedy against the corporation is shown by the judgment and the execution thereon returned unsatisfied.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158, 27 Pac. 674, 30 Pac. 776; Baines v. Story, 30 Pac. 777.

[c] In an action by a judgment creditor of a corporation for an unpaid subscription to stock, a judgment in an action by another judgment creditor against the same stockholder, rendered two years before, is not evidence of the indebtedness of the stockholder to the corporation.—Baines v. Babcock, 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[d] The liability of a stockholder for corporate debts is primary, and evidence competent and sufficient to show the liability of the corporation is competent against the stockholder.—McGowan v. McDonald, 111 Cal. 57, 43 Pac. 418.

[f] It is not material error to exclude general questions asked of the payee of the note, not purporting to relate to the transactions set forth in the complaint and testified to by the plaintiff, but generally as to whether such payee had at any time loaned any money to the corporation, or whether the corporation had borrowed any money from him. The further question as to whether he assigned the note to the plaintiff, after he had admitted that was properly excluded as immaterial.—Spreckles v. Butler, 128 Cal. 645, 61 Pac. 378.

[g] In an action to enforce a stockholder's liability where it was shown that she had transferred her shares to an insolvent for the purpose of avoiding liability, and that such insolvent had transferred the stock to another, the burden of proving that such subsequent transferee was responsible, and that defendant's liability was therefore destroyed, was on her.—People's Home Sav. Bank v. Rickard, 139 Cal. 285, 73 Pac. 858.

[h] A resolution of the board of directors authorizing the secretary to borrow money for the corporation is sufficient, though not entered on the minute-book, and, therefore, in an action against stockholders to recover the money so borrowed, the admission in evidence of a resolution adopted by the board and entered on its minutes is immaterial.—Bank of Yolo v. Weaver, 31 Pac. 160.

§ 264. —— Corporate Books as Evidence.

[a] The presumption created by entries in the stock and transfer books of a corporation that the party therein named is a stockholder is impeached and overcome by oral testimony that the party sought to be charged had never accepted, but refused to accept, any of the stock of the company, and that he never in fact became a stockholder in the company.—Mudgett v. Horrell, 33 Cal. 25.

[b] In an action by a creditor of a corporation against a party claimed to be a stockholder, the stock-book of the corporation is not admissible in evidence to prove that he is a stockholder.—Mudgett v. Horrell, 33 Cal. 25.

[c] A stock certificate-book, stock ledger, and stock journal of the corporation, together with the testimony of the secretary of the corporation that they contain the names of all the stockholders, and that no other persons appeared on the books of the company as having owned stock during any of the times mentioned in the complaint, are sufficient to prove the whole amount of stock outstanding, and the dates of the ownership of stock by the defendants.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

[d] In a creditor's action to recover a stockholder's proportion of the indebtedness of the corporation, entries in its books are not admissible in the plaintiff's behalf.—Neilson v. Crawford, 52 Cal. 248.

[e] A corporation's books are competent to prove the number of shares issued, and the shareholders at the time of an indebtedness arose, but articles of incorporation dated a year or more previous to that time do not necessarily show those facts, and are not admissible for that purpose.—Evans v. Bailey, 66 Cal. 112, 4 Pac. 1089.

[f] Where the stock certificate-book offered in evidence appears to have been designed for a stock and transfer book, and its contents, so far as set out in the record, correspond with what is required by the code, in respect of a stock and transfer book, the fact that the book is not named as the code requires is not material.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

his proportion of corporate debt.—San Pedro etc. Co. v. Reynolds, 121 Cal. 85, 53 Pac. 410.

[a] The sale of property belonging to an incorporated company under a judgment recovered against the individual members thereon in an action to which the company was not a party passes no title.—Bracia v. Nelson, 42 Cal. 107.

[b] A judgment recovered against a corporation is conclusive against the company and its stockholders, and they cannot show, in an action for unpaid subscriptions, that the indebtedness for which the judgment was recovered arose upon a contract which was ultra vires.—Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581, 29 Am. St. Rep. 158, 27 Pac. 674; Baines v. Story, 27 Pac. 676; Potter v. Dear, 27 Pac. 676.

[c] A provision in the judgment for relief to other judgment creditors, if valid under the pleadings, refers only to persons who were judgment creditors at the time of the judgment, and not to those who may afterward become such.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[d] The creditors appearing in the action, whether as plaintiffs or as interveners, are entitled to have several judgments against each stockholder made a party to the action, to the extent of his indebtedness to the corporation.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

[a] When a stockholder has paid his portion of any debt, or of all debts of corporation, he is freed from all liability, and has no cause of action against any other stockholder for money so paid.—Brown v. Merrill, 107 Cal. 446, 48 Am. St. Rep. 145, 40 Pac. 557.

[b] A stockholder of a distilling corporation paying more than his share of internal revenue taxes is entitled to contribution from the other stockholders.—Richter v. Blasingame, 110 Cal. 530, 42 Pac. 1077.

[c] Costs paid by stockholders for procuring a release of the distillery belonging to the corporation after seizure of it by officers of the United States government cannot be made the subject of contribution from other stockholders; but where they are not allowed in an action for contribution, the averment of them in the complaint is immaterial.—Wolters v. Henningsan, 114 Cal. 433, 46 Pac. 277.

[d] An action by stockholders against other stockholders of the corporation, to enforce their liability to contribute to the payment of a note upon which the plaintiffs were sureties, and which they have paid, does not arise out of the relation of surety, but is a statutory action to enforce the liability to them of the stockholders as principal debtors. Myers v. Sierra Valley Stock etc. Assn., 122 Cal. 669, 55 Pac. 689.

Right of one who has paid more than his share of the corporate liabilities: 71 Am. St. Rep. 40, note. See, also, 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1212-1218, §§ 1177-1185.

[a] Where, in an action by one stockholder and director of a corporation, who had paid the whole of a corporate debt, for contribution from another stockholder, the stockholder asks to be subrogated to the rights and remedies of the creditor, the period of limitation is that defined by Code of Civil Procedure, section 359, providing that actions against a stockholder of a corporation to enforce a liability created by law must be brought within three years after the creation of the liability.—Redington v. Cornwell, 90 Cal. 49, 27 Pac. 40.

[a] One not elected as director is not eligible to the office of president, and neither the board that was elected nor the court can make him president.—Dulin v. Pacific Wood and Coal Co., 103 Cal. 357, 35 Pac. 1045, 37 Pac. 207.

[a] In order to establish an agency in behalf of a corporation it is not indispensable to show a written authority, or a vote or resolution of the corporate authorities.—Crowley v. Genesee Min. Co., 55 Cal. 273.

[b] Corporation can confer authority upon agent to sell its lands only through its board of directors, when duly assembled, by resolution duly passed and recorded, and a ratification of such authority can only be made in the same manner required for the conferring of original authority.—Salfield v. Sutter County etc. Co., 94 Cal. 546, 29 Pac. 1105.

[a] A county has a right through its board of supervisors to contest the election of the directors of a railroad company in which it owns stock.—Hornblower v. Duden, 35 Cal. 664.

[b] A proceeding to set aside an election for directors of a corporation may be instituted by a stockholder, although he has not had the stock standing in his name on the corporation books for a sufficient length of time to entitle him to vote at such election.—Wright v. Central California Colony Water Co., 67 Cal. 532, 8 Pac. 70.

[c] Section 315 of the Civil Code, providing for an action to determine the validity of an election held by any corporate body, has application only to elections which are, by the statute, authorized to be made by the stockholders, and does not include an appointment made by the directors to fill a vacancy.—Wickersham v. Brittan, 93 Cal. 34, 28 Pac. 792, 29 Pac. 51.

[e] The provisions of section 315 of the Civil Code are not intended to apply where the plaintiff does not claim to be aggrieved by any election of a corporate body, but complains that after he was regularly appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of an elected director of a corporation some of the remaining members of the board refused to acknowledge his rights, and that, together with the director who had resigned and who still claims to be a director, they had excluded him from participation in the action of the board.—Wickersham v. Murphy, 93 Cal. 41, 28 Pac. 793.

[f] In general, a court of equity has no inherent jurisdiction to review a corporate election, and oust the officers who claim to have been elected; but, in this state, under section 315 of the Civil Code, the superior courts have jurisdiction, as courts of equity, to inquire into the validity of the election of directors of a corporation, and to set it aside, if not in conformity with law.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[g] Where the complaint in an action by stockholders to review an alleged illegal election of directors, and to oust them from office, alleges that the corporation is controlled by the illegally elected directors, it need not allege a demand on the corporation that it bring the action, and its refusal to do so.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[h] Where the complaint in an action by stockholders to review the election of officers of a corporation, and to oust them from office, alleges that defendants are not the officers of the corporation, it need not allege a demand, on persons whom plaintiffs considered the officers de jure, that the corporation bring the action in its name, and a refusal so to do, where it appears that the defendants are exercising the functions of the offices they claim.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[i] A complaint in an action by stockholders to review an alleged illegal election of directors is not demurrable for ambiguity, where it refers to them as the "board of directors," when it clearly appears from the whole complaint that the claim is made that they are not the legal board.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[j] Stockholders whose stock has been sold to satisfy an assessment thereon, to carry into effect an illegal contract made by a board of directors illegally elected, may maintain an action to review the illegal election and oust them from office, and to have the illegal contract set aside.—Whitehead v. Sweet, 126 Cal. 67, 58 Pac. 376.

[a] After allowing a person to act as its secretary, and causing its records to be authenticated by him as such, a corporation cannot object to the regularity of his appointment, or repudiate its obligations, signed by him under the direction of its board of directors.—Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129, 54 Pac. 594.

Power to levy assessment. See ante, § 111.

[a] A director of a corporation who ceases to be a stockholder during the term for which he was chosen, but continues to act as director, no judgment of ouster having been pronounced against him, is a director de facto.—San Jose Sav. Bank v. Sierra Lumber Co., 63 Cal. 179.

§ 275. —— Validity of Acts in General.

[a] The acts of de facto directors in levying assessments are valid, though they were not elected by ballot as required by law.—San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Belding, 35 Pac. 363; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hewlett, 35 Pac. 353; San Joaquin Land etc. Co. v. Hitchcock, 35 Pac. 353.

[a] Power of removing private or ministerial officers of a private corporation belongs to the corporation alone. Courts cannot remove such officers.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145.

[b] A proceeding under statutes of 1871-72, page 443, to remove officers of a corporation, may be brought by the corporation itself.—Chollar Min. Co. v. Wilson, 66 Cal. 374, 5 Pac. 670.

[d] Agents to draw and invest subscriptions having no interest coupled with their agency, it is competent for the corporation to remove them at any time and appoint other agents in their place, or itself assume the custody and disposition of the money.—San Joaquin etc. Co. v. West, 94 Cal. 399, 29 Pac. 785.

[b] Power to make settlement of defalcation and to accept a deed in satisfaction belongs only to board of directors.—Bank of Healdsburg v. Bailhache, 65 Cal. 328, 4 Pac. 106.

[c] The payment of cash dividends out of net earnings of a corporation is a question of policy, and the action of the directors in that regard, if honest and intelligent, will not be lightly overruled.—Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 33 Pac. 786.

[d] Directors are managers of business of corporation, and what they cannot do stockholders cannot do or authorize to be done.—Vercoutere v. Golden State L. Co., 116 Cal. 415, 48 Pac. 375.

[e] Where all of the directors of a corporation were present at a meeting, which was adjourned, but there was nothing to show that all the directors were present at the first meeting, when that meeting adjourned, and no other notice of the second meeting was given, and all were not present at the adjourned meeting, a resolution passed at the latter meeting to proceed by action for the collection of an assessment on the stock, which was business which could not have been lawfully transacted at the former meeting, was invalid.—Bank of National City v. Johnston, 133 Cal. 185, 65 Pac. 383.

[f] Where in the absence of by-laws fixing the times for meetings of directors or a corporation, all of the directors, being duly assembled, agree to adjourn to a date and hour named, a meeting held by a majority of the directors at the time thus fixed is a legal meeting of the board, though no personal notice of a meeting is given to each director; and the acts of each meeting will be valid, under Civil Code, section 308, providing that every decision of a majority of the directors, made when duly assembled, valid as a corporate act.—Bank of National City v. Johnston, 60 Pac. 776.

[a] A regular meeting of the directors of a bank was had on January 14th, and an adjournment taken until February 14th. On January 20th, C. and two other defendants, directors, held a meeting, at which a forty-five thousand dollar loan was made to C., and a salary of four hundred dollars per month voted to C. Held, that the action taken at such meeting was not binding on the stockholders.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[b] The incompetency of one director to act, by reason of his interest in the transactions leading to the conveyance of the property to the corporation, and to the execution of the mortgage of the corporation, cannot affect the validity of the original authorization of the mortgage by a majority of the full board of directors to which his vote was not necessary, nor affect the subsequent ratification of the mortgage by a newly elected full board of directors, of which he was a member.—Porter v. Lassen County Land Co., 127 Cal. 261, 59 Pac. 563.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 308, declaring that a majority of the directors of a corporation form a quorum, the passage of a resolution ratifying the payment of compensation to one of their members for services outside his duties as a director was not invalidated by the fact that such director was present when the vote was taken, though his presence was necessary to constitute a quorum, where the resolution was passed without his vote.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 61 Pac. 791.

[a] In the absence of a charter provision or a by-law to the contrary, a special meeting of the directors of a corporation must be called by giving personal notice to each member of the board.—Harding v. Vandewater, 40 Cal. 77.

[b] In the absence of proof to the contrary, notice to the directors of a meeting will be presumed, though not recited in the record of the meeting.—Granger v. Original Empire etc. Co., 59 Cal. 678.

[c] A mortgage was executed under a resolution passed at a special meeting of the directors. The resolution recited that written notices of the meeting had been served on each director. The purpose of the meeting was not specified in the notices. Held, that the meeting was regularly called, and the mortgage valid.—Granger v. Original Empire Mill etc. Co., 59 Cal. 678.

[d] Where regular meeting of directors from which two are absent is adjourned and the hour of the adjourned meeting is not fixed, it is a special meeting of which notice must be given to those absent from regular meeting.—Thompson v. Williams, 76 Cal. 155, 9 Am. St. Rep. 187, 18 Pac. 153.

[e] A corporate by-law, together with Civil Code, section 320, required that notices of special meetings of a corporation should be given on "the order of the president, or, if there be none, on the order of two directors." Held, that while there was a president competent to act, a special meeting called by two directors on the refusal of the president to make the call was illegal.—Smith v. Dorn, 96 Cal. 73, 30 Pac. 1024.

[f] An attempted express ratification of promissory notes at a special meeting of the board of directors, of which the directors were not all notified, is not made at a meeting duly assembled, and does not bind the corporation as a corporate act.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[g] The secretary of a corporation, on the order of the president, sent by mail to each of the seven directors a written notice of a special meeting, properly addressed and postpaid, three days before the time fixed for the meeting. Held, that notice was given as required by Civil Code, section 320, and the acts of the five directors present were valid. Stockton Combined Harvester etc. Works v. Houser, 109 Cal. 1, 41 Pac. 809.

[h] Notice to the directors of a corporation of a special meeting will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, though not recited in the record of the meeting.—Stockton Combined Harvester etc. Works v. Houser, 109 Cal. 1, 41 Pac. 809.

[i] A corporation claiming that all of its directors were not notified to attend a meeting has the burden of proof.—Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129, 54 Pac. 594.

[j] The secretary of a corporation testified that he had notified the directors of a meeting by sending to each a written notice, by a boy from his office, twenty-four hours prior thereto. Held that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the court was authorized to find that proper notice was given.—Balfour-Guthrie Inv. Co. v. Woodworth, 124 Cal. 169, 56 Pac. 891.

[k] Where a resolution adopted at a special meeting of directors was spread at length on the records of the corporation, and authenticated by the signature of its purported secretary, the presumption is that the directors were properly notified of the meeting.—Balfour-Guthrie Inv. Co. v. Woodworth, 124 Cal. 169, 56 Pac. 891.

[l] On an issue as to the validity of a directors' special meeting, held, that it would be presumed that the vice-president, in calling such meeting and in mailing notices, in the absence of the president, acted in his capacity as secretary.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[m] Notice of a special meeting of the directors of a corporation, signed by its vice-president and mailed by him personally to the directors, constitute a sufficient written declaration of the necessity of such meeting to make a legal call thereof.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[n] The call of a special meeting of the directors of a corporation by the vice-president, in the absence of the president, held not objectionable, in that the president, if notified, could have reached the corporation's principal place of business and acted on the call within four or five hours.—Bell v. Standard Quicksilver Co., 146 Cal. 699, 81 Pac. 17.

[o] In the absence of any limitation imposed by statute or the articles of incorporation or by-laws of a corporation, requiring the object of a special meeting to be stated in the notice therefor, a board of directors, duly assembled at an adjourned meeting, may resolve to proceed by action for the collection of an assessment upon stock, as provided in Civil Code, section 349, where the resolution levying the assessment fixed a day when unpaid assessments would become delinquent, and the time for payment has expired.—Bank of National City v. Johnston, 60 Pac. 776.

[a] The president of a private corporation has no authority by virtue merely of his official position to make contracts binding the corporation, except in relation to matters arising in the ordinary course of the business of the corporation.—Blen v. Bear River etc. Mine Co., 20 Cal. 602, 81 Am. Dec. 132

[a] Defendant transferred to plaintiff by a bill of sale a quantity of wine, and gave plaintiff a written order to pay a certain amount to a mortgagee of the wines, which plaintiff accepted, and the mortgagee released the mortgage. In reply to a query as to shipment, plaintiff's secretary, forgetting plaintiff's obligation to the mortgagee, told defendant that he might sell a part of the wine to other parties and retain the proceeds, and defendant did so. Held, that the secretary of plaintiff corporation had no power to make such promise, in the absence of express or implied authority.—California Wine Makers' Corp. v. Sciaroni, 139 Cal. 277, 72 Pac. 990.

[b] Secretary of corporation has no power to release or transfer its property, in the absence of authority express or implied, and with no authorization or ratification by its board of directors.—California Winemakers' Corporation v. Sciaroni, 139 Cal. 277, 72 Pac. 990.

Authority of managing agent of joint stock company. See Joint Stock Companies, § 7.

[a] Mortgage by managing agent of a corporation, without express authority, is void. Shaver v. Bear River etc. Co., 10 Cal. 396.

[b] Managing agent may do in transaction of ordinary business all that corporation may do.—Shaver v. Bear River etc. Co., 10 Cal. 396.

[c] A general managing agent of a corporation is the representative of the corporation, and may do in the transaction of its ordinary affairs what the corporation itself could do within the scope of its powers; and he may assign a chose in action of the corporation to a third party for collection.—Greig v. Riordan, 99 Cal. 316, 33 Pac. 913.

[e] A manager of a corporation having general supervision of a flume across an irrigation ditch, and acting under the control of the board of directors, but without authority to make an expenditure such as would be involved in trussing the flume, has no authority to bind the corporation by making a promise to the owner of the ditch that he would cause a truss bridge to be thrown across the ditch to support the flume—Centerville & Kingsburg Irr. Ditch Co. v. Sanger Lumber Co., 140 Cal. 385, 73 Pac. 1079.

[c] Directors of corporation hold a fiduciary relation to the stockholders, and are intrusted with the management of the corporate property for the common benefit and advantage of each stockholder, and are precluded by their acceptance of the trust from doing any act or engaging in any transaction in which their private interests will conflict with their duty to the stockholders, and from making any use of their power or of the corporate property for their own advantage.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[d] The corporate authority of the officers is considered to have been conferred by the stockholders upon the trust and confidence that it will be exerted at least with a view to advance the interest of the stockholders, and not used with a purpose to injure or destroy their interests.—Wright v. Oroville Gold etc. Min. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[e] A contract made on behalf of a corporation, by a person who is its president and one of its directors, with a partnership composed of himself and another person, is void, since the director occupies a fiduciary relation to the corporation, such that he cannot take part in any transaction where he has an interest adverse to that of the corporation. Judgment and order (1900) 62 Pac. 300, affirmed.—Sims v. Petaluma Gaslight Co., 131 Cal. 656, 63 Pac. 1011.

[a] Any officer who in fact acts as an officer of a corporation de facto is subject to all the liabilities and penalties imposed upon directors and officers duly elected by a corporation de jure, and a de facto officer of a de facto corporation is liable criminally for the embezzlement of funds in his hands.—People v. Leonard, 106 Cal. 302, 39 Pac. 617.

[a] The power of a corporation to fix or change the salary of its officers rests entirely upon statute, and the exercise of this power is subject to all of the limitations contained in the statute.—Marquis v. City of Santa Ana, 103 Cal. 661, 37 Pac. 650.

[b] One employed by a director of a corporation to do what the director should have done as a director, without compensation, cannot recover of the corporation for his services.—Brown v. Valley View Min. Co., 127 Cal. 630, 60 Pac. 424.

[a] That plaintiff was director of a corporation weakens presumption of a promise to pay for services.—Barstow v. City Ry. Co., 42 Cal. 465.

[b] Directors may recover on quantum meruit value of services rendered and advances made when corporation has derived benefit therefrom.—Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 320, 22 Pac. 665.

[c] A director is not entitled to compensation for his services as director in the absence of any agreement in advance that he shall receive such compensation.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[d] When a director rendered services for the corporation as manager, which were outside of his duties as director, for which he received payment without the authority from the board, such payment might be properly ratified thereafter; and the directors cannot be held liable therefor, as for a wrongful expenditure of funds.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 61 Pac. 791.

[a] Where plaintiff served as president of a corporation for two years without any provision being made for compensation except an understanding that he was to receive compensation, and at the beginning of the third year he was again elected president, and a resolution passed fixing his compensation at fifty dollars per month, such resolution constituted an agreement to pay for past as well as future services, at the rate specified.—Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556.

[b] President of corporation, who is also stockholder, is, in absence of any usage of company to contrary, entitled to compensation for his services as president. If rate is not fixed by special contract he is entitled to what his services are reasonably worth.—Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556.

[c] Understanding not amounting to agreement between a corporation and its president that he should receive pay for his services is competent evidence to rebut any presumption that he was serving gratuitously.—Rosborough v. Shasta River Canal Co., 22 Cal. 556.

[a] Where the secretary of a corporation has performed extra services for the corporation, and there is no proof that he did not perform them or was overpaid therefor, other than the protest of one director, and it does appear that the secretary, as a member of a board of five directors, took any share in the passage of the act for his compensation, it will be presumed from the action of the board that he did perform the extra service and received only a reasonable compensation therefor, and the resolution awarding the compensation was authorized and was properly passed.—Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 99 Cal. 57, 33 Pac. 786.

[a] Where a director of a corporation performed services as its manager, not pertaining to his duties as director, he is entitled to recover the reasonable value of such services, though no rate of compensation was fixed by the board of directors prior to performance of the service. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 791, affirmed.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 132 Cal. 637, 64 Pac. 1082, 52 L. R. A. 611.

[b] Where a director of a corporation performed service as its manager not pertaining to his duties as director, he is entitled to recover what such services were reasonably worth, though no rate of compensation was fixed by the board of directors in advance of the performance of the services.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 64 Pac. 791.

[a] Superintendent cannot be deprived of salary, by a court of equity because also a trustee and treasurer, in violation of by-laws, if he faithfully performs his duties and no fraud appears.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 146, 76 Am. Dec. 508.

[b] Where there is no contract fixing the salary of the superintendent of a railroad company, he is entitled to recover the value of his services.—Bee v. San Francisco etc. R. Co., 46 Cal. 248.

[c] A person appointed superintendent of a corporation for a fixed compensation held not entitled to recover the compensation without showing that the board of directors ratified the acts making the appointment and fixing the compensation.—Colpe v. Jubilee Min. Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 324.

§ 293. —— Directors or Trustees Voting Themselves Salaries or Increase.

[a] Contracts for salaries of officers made at a meeting at which such officers were present and voted, are void, if their votes were necessary to pass the resolution.—Shattuck v. Oakland Smelting etc. Co., 58 Cal. 550; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788, 106 Cal. 327, 39 Pac. 602.

[b] The superintendent of a mining company testified that the services rendered by the president and secretary of the company outside of the performance of their duty as such officers were worth a certain sum, but it appeared that he resided at the mine, was seldom at the offices of the company, and did not know what services were rendered by the president and secretary. The only evidence as to the value of his own service was the fact that he was superintendent. Held, that this evidence was insufficient to show that these officers had rendered services worth the sum stated, and that their charging the corporation therewith, by a resolution passed by their own votes, was fair and honest.—Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 303, 22 Pac. 665.

[c] A resolution of a board of directors fixing the salary of the president, and which was spread upon the records, but was illegal because it required the president's vote to adopt it, could be ratified by a subsequent board, so as to justify the president for having drawn such salary.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 110 Cal. 332, 42 Pac. 893.

§ 294. —— Extra Pay.

[a] Extra pay of superintendent must be authorized by vote of directors.—Bee v. San Francisco etc. Co., 46 Cal. 255.

[a] In an action against a corporation by one of its members, upon an implied contract for the value of services as secretary, it is competent for the defendant to show that by the usage and custom of the corporation no compensation was chargeable for such services.—Fraylor v. Sonora Min. Co., 17 Cal. 594.

[b] A by-law of a corporation that directors shall receive no compensation for services as directors, "though traveling expenses may be audited and paid," is relevant evidence in an action by a director for such services.—Barstow v. City R. Co., 42 Cal. 465.

[c] Whether there is a usage of a corporation not to pay compensation to its officers is matter of fact, competent and relevant to be testified to upon an issue as to whether there was any implied understanding for compensation to a stockholder and director acting as superintendent and general manager; and such testimony is not objectionable as being the conclusion of the witness, and it is specially important where it appears that the corporation was in poor financial condition when the services were rendered.—McCarthy v. Mt. Tecarte L. & W. Co., 111 Cal. 328, 43 Pac. 956.

[a] A director may, in good faith, loan his money to the corporation for the legitimate purposes of the corporation, and hold it as a valid claim against the corporation.—Santa Cruz R. Co. v. Spreckles, 65 Cal. 193, 3 Pac. 661.

[b] Where a director of a corporation lends money to it, and takes a mortgage to secure the notes taken therefor, the note and mortgage cannot be enforced, as to excessive interest stipulated for, and as to an amount included therein, beyond the sum actually borrowed.—Sutter Street R. Co. v. Baum, 66 Cal. 44, 4 Pac. 916.

§ 297. —— Purchase of Claims Against Corporation.

[b] Purchase of claims subsisting against a corporation by its agent, under its authority, does not extinguish them unless the corporation furnishes or refunds to him the purchase money. If he purchase them without authority, while it may be conceded that the claims are extinguished, it does not necessarily follow that the corporation is thereby relieved of indebtedness.—Sullivan v. Triunfo Gold etc. Min. Co., 39 Cal. 459.

[c] The trustee of a corporation will not be permitted to deal with himself in his individual capacity, so as to derive the benefit of the transaction, and, therefore, where a corporation resolved to borrow money with which to pay its debts and authorized the president and secretary to execute a mortgage as security therefor, and the president, instead, purchased the debts of the corporation and assigned them to the firm of which he was a member, the mortgage executed to such firm to secure said indebtedness was invalid.—Davis v. Rock Creek Lumber etc. Co., 55 Cal. 359, 36 Am. Rep. 40.

§ 298. —— Mortgages to Secure or Pay Claims.

[a] A corporate resolution, authorizing the borrowing of money for the payment of corporate debts, and the execution of a mortgage by the president, did not authorize him to execute a mortgage to a firm of which he was a member, which had purchased such debts.—Davis v. Rock Creek Lumber etc. Co., 55 Cal. 359, 36 Am. Rep. 40.

§ 299. Liability for Property and Funds in General.

[a] If the secretary of a corporation, whose duty it is to receive moneys due the corporation, and to pay them over to the treasurer, fails to pay over promptly, and the moneys are stolen from him, he and the sureties, on a bond given by him for the faithful performance of his duties, are liable.—Odd Fellows' Mut. Aid Assn. v. James, 63 Cal. 598 49 Am. Rep. 107.

ing, in substance, that the president of the bank, who was one of its trustees, and who was the owner and in control of the majority of the shares of its stock, had combined and conspired with the other directors, who were under his control, for violation of his trust by diverting a large amount of its funds from the purpose of the trust to his own use and benefit, and had, without authority, appropriated to himself a large sum per month as salary for his services as trustee, states a cause of action.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[b] An officer and stockholder of a bank will be required to account in an action by another stockholder for attorney's fees which he procured to be paid by the bank for attorney's services rendered solely for his own benefit in a litigation between himself and a third stockholder for the control of the bank. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 106 Cal. 329, 39 Pac. 603.

[c] Manager of corporation who has been proven guilty of embezzlement through connivance with bookkeepers is liable for total loss sustained unless he prove that corporation received money not embezzled by him or that embezzlement by bookkeepers occurred through no failure of duty on his part.—San Pedro etc. Co. v. Reynolds, 121 Cal. 87, 89, 53 Pac. 410.

[d] In an emergency to meet a pay-roll of one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight dollars, a corporation's treasurer obtained six hundred dollars of its funds from one of its officers, and paid it to the secretary, the disbursing agent, receiving his receipt therefor, and its president paid six hundred dollars of his own money direct to the same agent. Subsequently the board of directors, upon the account of the pay-roll, ordered warrants drawn for a check of six hundred dollars to repay the president, and one of one thousand two hundred and seventy-eight for cash, which warrants were presented to the secretary, and were honored by the treasurer, as he was in duty bound to do. In the books the treasurer charged himself with the six hundred dollars received from the officer, and credited himself with the amount disbursed on the pay-roll. He did not charge himself with the money received from the president, which did not come into his hands, but credited himself with the check of six hundred dollars to repay the president, and the check of one thousand two hundred and seventy-eight dollars. Held not to show any shortage on the part of the treasurer.—Mechanics' Institute v. Firth (Cal.), 49 Pac. 214.

[b] A deed by the president to a partnership of which he is a member, which recites that a full board of directors of the corporation ordered the conveyance, is not void on its face.—Fudickar v. East Riverside Irr. Dist., 109 Cal. 29, 41 Pac. 1024.

[a] Sections 2230, 2234 and 2322 of the Civil Code prohibiting trustee from acting where his interests are adverse to beneficiary, apply to corporate directors.—Graves v. Mono Lake etc. Co., 81 Cal. 319, 22 Pac. 665.

[b] Manager of corporation cannot buy its property for his own benefit at forced sale.—San Francisco Water Co. v. Pattee, 86 Cal. 629, 25 Pac. 135.

[c] Managing agent of corporation cannot obtain any advantage over it or acquire any interest adverse to it without consent of directors given on full knowledge of facts.—San Francisco Water Co. v. Pattee, 86 Cal. 629, 25 Pac. 135.

[d] The title to the corporation's property acquired from the secretary by one who himself occupied fiduciary relations to the corporation, and who had full knowledge of the manner in which the secretary acquired his title, must stand or fall with that of his grantor.—San Francisco Water Co. v. Pattee, 86 Cal. 623, 25 Pac. 135.

[e] Directors of a corporation who are directly and personally interested in a contract, adversely to the stockholders, cannot authorize the contract on behalf of the corporation, and a contract attempted to be so authorized by them is void.—Goodell v. Verdugo Canyon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

[f] Where it appears that the contract authorized by the interested directors was for pumping water, which interfered with water rights belonging to the corporation and deprived its stockholders of water they were entitled to receive, such deprivation is an additional ground for annulment of the contract.—Goodell v. Verdugo Canyon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

[g] A corporation is not estopped from challenging the validity of a contract made on its behalf by its directors, interested therein adversely to the corporation, by laches on the part of such directors in not causing the contract to be set aside, but allowing the other party to expend money on the strength of the contract.—Goodell v. Verdugo Canyon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

[h] The motives of the directors of a corporation in repudiating an illegal contract made by former directors on behalf of the corporation are of no concern to the other party to the contract.—Goodell v. Verdugo Canyon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

[i] The fact that a water company took steps to prevent certain other parties from diverting its water, but did not at the same time proceed against an association claiming rights in the water under an illegal contract, did not show that the company and its stockholders were estopped from asserting that the contract was illegal.—Goodell v. Verdugo Canyon Water Co., 138 Cal. 308, 71 Pac. 354.

[a] To redeem its property from purchases of the secretary at execution and tax sales the corporation need repay him only his expenditures incurred in that behalf, and not his claim for salary, as the payment of such claim would be giving him an advantage over the other creditors of the corporation, in violation of Civil Code, section 2228, which prohibits a trustee from obtaining any advantage to himself in dealing with the trust property.—San Francisco Water Co. v. Pattee, 86 Cal. 623, 25 Pac. 135.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 305, providing that directors of a corporation must be stockholders, a person owning no stock in the corporation, elected a director without his knowledge, does not become a director either de jure or de facto, so as to prevent his purchasing corporate property at a judicial sale, though a share of stock was, subsequently to his election, issued to be delivered to him, which he retained; he never having acted as a director or been called upon to do so until ten years after his election, when he repudiated his office.—Rozencrans Gold Min. Co. v. Morey, 111 Cal. 114, 43 Pac. 585.

[c] Civil Code, section 2230, held, in the absence of fraud, not to invalidate an execution sale of property of a corporation to directors thereof under a judgment on claims against it brought by them.—Snediker v. Ayres, 146 Cal. 407, 80 Pac. 511.

§ 304. Individual Benefit from Corporate Business.

[c] Directors must surrender to bank all profits received as a condition of loan of its funds.—Farmers' Bank v. Downey, 53 Cal. 466, 31 Am. Rep. 62.

[d] Equity will not permit a director, in the exercise of his official duties, to make a profit for himself to the exclusion of the other stockholders.—Farmers' etc. Bank v. Downey, 53 Cal. 466, 31 Am. Rep. 62.

[e] Resolution of directors making allowances in their own favor are voidable at election of corporation or minority of stockholders if corporation refuses to act whether they are fair or not.—Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 320, 22 Pac. 665.

[f] Corporation may repudiate mortgage given to secure claims of directors allowed by their interested votes, and induced by them in violation of section 2230 of the Civil Code. Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 323, 22 Pac. 665.

[g] The by-laws of a corporation providing that the president thereof "shall sign, as president, all certificates of stocks, checks, notes, ... and other instruments in writing, and shall have full power to act in all respects as the general agent and manager of the company, subject to the advice of the board of directors," does not authorize the president to purchase notes payable to the corporation and indorse them to himself individually.—Smith v. Pacific Vinegar etc. Works, 145 Cal. 352, 78 Pac. 550.

[h] The court will not permit any inquiry into the question of the honesty or fairness of a transaction whereby the president of a corporation purchases notes payable to the corporation and indorses them to himself.—Smith v. Pacific Vinegar etc. Works, 145 Cal. 352, 78 Pac. 550.

[i] Under Civil Code, section 2230, providing that no trustee or his agent may take part in any transaction concerning the trust in which he or his agent has an interest adverse to the beneficiary; section 2234, providing that a violation of this provision is a fraud against the beneficiary; and section 2322, declaring that no general authority shall authorize an agent to do any act which a trustee is forbidden from doing—the president of a corporation is prohibited from purchasing notes payable to the corporation and indorsing them to himself individually. Smith v. Pacific Vinegar etc. Works, 145 Cal. 352, 78 Pac. 550.

[j] In a suit by a bank depositor against the bank and its president to establish the equitable title of the bank to certain shares of railroad stock, evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that a purported purchase of the stock was for the use of the president, though in the name of another person.—Dundon v. McDonald, 146 Cal. 585, 80 Pac. 1034.

§ 305. —— Who may Attack Transaction.

[a] A contract by which a director obtains from a corporation its property or an advantage to himself is voidable only at the instance of the corporation or its stockholders.—Fudickar v. East Riverside Irr. Dist., 109 Cal. 29, 41 Pac. 1024.

§ 306. Dealings with Corporations or Shareholders.

[a] In dealing with the relations between the corporation and its officers on one hand, and the stockholders on the other, in the management of the corporate affairs, courts of equity will look beyond the mere observance of the forms of law, and inquire if the authority has been in good faith exercised to promote the interest of the stockholders.—Wright v. Oroville M. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[c] Director of a corporation cannot use his position to obtain an undue advantage, but may loan to corporation on fair terms, when it is to interest of corporation to borrow.—Sutter St. R. R. Co. v. Baum, 66 Cal. 51, 52, 4 Pac. 916.

[d] When terms of note by a corporation to one of its directors are unjust and excessive, corporation may rescind, without tender before suit. Offer in complaint to pay what is just is sufficient.—Sutter Street R. R. Co. v. Baum, 66 Cal. 45, 4 Pac. 916.

[e] Where the president of a corporation, owning a controlling interest in the stock, executed for the corporation a contract between the corporation himself and another, the contract was not invalid, as in violation of a trust relation.—(1900) Sims v. Petaluma Gaslight Co., 62 Pac. 300; judgment and order reversed (1901) 131 Cal. 656, 63 Pac. 1011.

[i] The fact that defendant was secretary of the corporation did not prevent him from procuring oil leases from third persons, which were valuable, and transfer them to the corporation in exchange for corporate stock issued to him, where the transaction is free from fraud or concealment of facts.—Garretson v. Pacific Crude Oil Co., 146 Cal. 184, 79 Pac. 838.

[a] A resolution of the board of trustees of a corporation, carried by the casting vote of the president, ratifying an unauthorized act of the president, in a matter in which he was personally interested, is void.—Chamberlain v. Wool Growing Co., 54 Cal. 103.

[b] A finding that a voidable mortgage procured by a corporation's officers in their own favor was ratified by the holders of two-thirds of the stock is not warranted, where the evidence shows that certificates for a part of the stock necessary to make up the two-thirds had been canceled shortly after such attempted ratification, without showing that they remained in the hands of the person whose vote is alleged to have represented them until canceled.—Graves v. Mono Lake Hydraulic Min. Co., 81 Cal. 303, 22 Pac. 665.

§ 308. Fraud Against Corporation.

[a] The by-laws of a mining corporation authorized the directors to fix salaries. H., a stockholder, contracted with two others for a transfer of their stock to him for four years, without power of sale. Having thus become a majority stockholder, he presented to his brother, A., and to personal friends, M. and C., five shares, each, of his own stock. M. was in the personal employ of H. At the stockholder's meeting, shortly ensuing, H., A., and M. were elected directors, and the board was organized by the election of H. as president, M, as secretary and treasurer, and A. as vice-president. Later another director was removed, and C. chosen in his place. On motion of A., seconded by M., H. was given a salary of two hundred and fifty dollars per month as president, and, on motion of C., M. was given a like amount. The minutes showed that both motions were carried unanimously but later interlineations showed that H. did not vote in the first instance nor M. in the second. H. paid assessment No. 4 by offsetting his salary as president, and purchased delinquent stock in the same manner. He borrowed M.'s salary from him, giving a note, without interest, payable when the mine became productive. On inquiry by S., an innocent director, as to the payment of assessment No. 4, H. said: "The cat is out of the bag. I suppose S. will be mad, but I had to do it. It cost a good deal to get control of the mine, and I am king of the situation. Crack your whip." Held, that the evidence was sufficient to show that the salaries voted H. and M. were a fraud on the corporation, and that their use by H. as offsets to his liabilities was ineffectual as payment.—Strouse v. Sylvester, 134 Cal. xx, 66 Pac. 660.

§ 309. Officers or Agents of Different Corporations.

[a] The fact that some of the directors of the bank were also directors of the cable company does not prevent them from being distinct corporations, who have a right to contract with each other in their corporate capacities, and, if the relation of the parties has not been abused, it constitutes no bar to a recovery for moneys advanced by the bank, and used for the benefit of the cable company.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[b] The fact that the same persons were directors of two contracting corporations does not render the contract void, but merely voidable.—(Cal. 1896) San Diego etc. R. Co. v. Pacific Beach Co., 112 Cal. 53, 44 Pac. 333.

in the name of the corporation by its president and secretary, to a firm of which the president is a member, is in breach of the fiduciary relation occupied by the president to the corporation and its stockholders, and is invalid without reference to its fairness or unfairness, and cannot be enforced against the corporation.—Sims v. Petaluma Gaslight Co., 131 Cal. 656, 63 Pac. 1011.

[a] Where four of the trustees of a corporation, owning the majority of the stock, negligently managed the affairs of the company, disregarding the by-laws, and neglecting to keep proper accounts, it was held that a bill would lie in the name of a single stockholder against the corporation and trustees, and that the plaintiff was entitled to an account, and to hold the trustees to make good any loss occasioned by their malfeasance.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145, 76 Am. Dec. 508.

[b] Since the corporate authority is considered to have been conferred by the stockholders on the directors on the trust that it will be exerted with a view to advance the interests of the stockholders, courts of equity will, at the instance of a stockholder, restrain the directors of a corporation from doing acts even within the corporate authority, if such acts when done would, under the particular circumstances, amount to a breach of the trust on which the directors were vested with their authority.—Wright v. Oroville Gold etc. Min. Co. 40 Cal. 20.

[d] Where plaintiff, in an action against certain bank directors for misappropriation of funds, had the right to bring the action in his own name and for his individual account, as well as on behalf of the other stockholders, if his allegations were not sufficient to entitle the action to be considered as brought in behalf of others than himself, its sufficiency as an action in his own behalf was not impaired by his averment that he brought it for them as well as for himself.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788.

[e] Although the right to avoid a secret sale of the property of a corporation by the president to himself does not, as an abstract proposition, depend upon the adequacy of the price, yet, when the general powers of a court of equity are invoked against the consequences of such a sale, the chancellor has a wide discretion as to the form and character of the decree which he will render, under the particular facts of the case before him.—Dundon v. McDonald, 137 Cal. 1, 69 Pac. 498.

[f] An allegation that a corporation's stockholder "is informed and believes" that certain directors furnished labor and material for the corporation, and charged large profits against it, and that no accounting had been made, is insufficient on demurrer.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[a] Where an indictment against an officer of a corporation for making false entries with intent to defraud it, prohibited by Penal Code, section 563, alleges that such entries were made with intent to defraud the corporation, it was not invalid for failure to set out how they could have effected that result, if the entries were such that the court could not say from their face that they could not possibly have done so.—People v. Leonard, 103 Cal. 200, 37 Pac. 222.

[b] Where an indictment of an officer of a corporation for making false entries in a record with intent to defraud the corporation, prohibited by Penal Code, section 563, set out the entries in haec verba, and alleged them to be false, it need not state wherein they were false.—People v. § 313. Statutes Construed.

[a] Corporation law of April 22, 1850, making directors jointly and severally liable for debts exceeding the capital stock actually paid in, should be strictly construed, since it is a statute creating a forfeiture or imposing a penalty.—Irvine v. McKeon, 23 Cal. 472.

[c] The act of 1880 does not relate to the business of the corporation, nor impose burdens, restrictions upon domestic corporations in the conduct of their business, from which foreign corporations are relieved, within the prohibition of section 15 of article 12 of the constitution.—Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308, 46 Pac. 1076.

[a] Where an injunction restraining a mining corporation from washing dirt into a stream resulting in loss to the company, such loss was not an operating expense, for which the directors were required to provide before declaring dividends in order to escape liability under Civil Code, section 309, prohibiting directors from making dividends except from surplus profits, and rendering them personally liable for its violation, where such injunction proceeding could not reasonably have been anticipated.—Excelsior Water etc. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131, 27 Pac. 44.

[b] Directors of a mining corporation which has become indebted by acquiring its property encumbered with debt, and by making permanent improvements thereon, are not liable to the corporation merely because they declare and pay dividends out of the net proceeds of the mine without first paying the whole of such debts, and are not thereby guilty of any infraction of section 309 of the Civil Code, prohibiting the making of dividends except from the surplus profits arising from the business of the corporation.—Excelsior Water and Min. [a] In an action against a director of a corporation under act of April 22, 1850, making directors severally liable for debts exceeding the amount of capital stock actually paid in, plaintiff must prove that defendant was a director when the debt was created, and that he was present at the meeting of the board authorizing it.—Irvine v. McKeon, 23 Cal. 472.

[b] To make directors personally liable under section 309, Civil Code, for debt created beyond subscribed capital, corporation must have been indebted at the time in aggregate amount exceeding amount of capital stock subscribed.—Moore v. Lent, 81 Cal. 506, 22 Pac. 875.

§ 316. Individual Liability on Corporate Contracts and for Unauthorized or Illegal Acts.

[a] At common law officers are not liable personally on promissory note of the corporation, made by them as such officers, in which the promise to pay is made by the corporation and not by the officers personally.—Hall v. Crandall, 29 Cal. 567, 89 Am. Dec. 64.

[b] Statutes of 1853, page 173, section 19, relating to the incorporation of turnpike companies, and providing that unless contracts of such corporations shall be made by the directors in compliance with the by-laws such contract shall be void as to the corporations, but binding against the directors, the directors of a turnpike company are not liable on a contract which they entered into in behalf of the corporation, and which in terms binds the latter, unless it is in violation of by-laws adopted by the stockholders and filed in the recorder's office.—Hall v. Crandall, 29 Cal. 567, 89 Am. Dec. 64.

[c] An agent of a corporation who, without authority, makes a contract for the payment of money in its name, is not liable to the promisee at common law on the contract, but only for the wrong done in exceeding his authority.—Hall v. Crandall, 29 Cal. 567, 89 Am. Dec. 64.

[d] The trustees of a corporation who make and sign notes, as such trustees, with the intention of not binding themselves personally, are not personally liable, even if they had no authority from the corporation to make the notes.—Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

[e] Constitution, article 12, section 3, making the directors of corporations jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers, does not impose a liability on all the directors of a mining company because the president, without the knowledge of the other directors, agrees on behalf of the company to pay a milling company an excessive price for treating its ore in consideration of payment to him of part of the profits.—Fox v. Hale & Norcross Silver Min. Co., 108 Cal. 369, 41 Pac. 308.

[f] A receiver was appointed in a suit by an insolvent corporation to subject certain property to the satisfaction of a judgment, the directors of the corporation acting in good faith in bringing the suit. Held, that, in an action by the receiver against the corporation and directors to recover his compensation, he was not entitled to a personal judgment against the directors.—Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646, 69 Pac. 436.

[a] The by-laws of a corporation provided that the general manager should have charge of all the company's property, and control of all persons in its employ with power to discharge them at will, and that he should cause regular and accurate accounts to be kept by a competent bookkeeper. Held, that the general manager was liable for funds misappropriated by the company's bookkeeper.—San Pedro Lumber Co. v. Reynolds, 121 Cal. 74, 53 Pac. 410.

[b] Under Constitution, article 12, section 3, providing that the directors of corporations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys misappropriated by officers during their terms of office, such liability is not penal in the technical sense, as it allows no recovery as a punishment, but only to compensate for a loss.—Rice v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 69 Pac. 77.

Withdrawal of assets of corporation: 57 Am. St. Rep. 63, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 850; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1457-1459, § 1451.

§ 319. Failure to Make, Post or Publish Monthly Accounts and Reports.

[a] Statute (Acts 1880, p. 134) is penal in its character; and, as it does not specifically declare that the penalty may be recovered for each failure to comply with its requirements, there can be but one recovery for all such failures prior to the commencement of suit.—Loveland v. Garner, 71 Cal. 541, 12 Pac. 616.

[b] Statute is mandatory as to time when account should be made and posted, and that failure to post within the time rendered the directors liable, though the account was made and posted before the bringing of an action for the recovery of the penalty.—Schenck v. Bandmann, 81 Cal. 231, 22 Pac. 654.

[c] Directors' liability is fixed by failure to make and post account on day directed, though they did not have the necessary information to make the report at such time.—Schenck v. Bandmann, 81 Cal. 231, 22 Pac. 654.

[d] Directors cannot evade liability for failure to post monthly reports by failure to have an office for transaction of business.—Chapman v. Downey, 89 Cal. 54, 26 Pac. 605.

[e] If the stockholders of a mining corporation forbear to sue till after several failures of the directors to post the monthly reports have occurred, only one penalty can be recovered up to the time such forbearance ceases and the suit is brought.—Schofield v. Doray, 89 Cal. 55, 26 Pac. 606.

[f] Action will lie by stockholder against any one or more of directors of a mining corporation to recover the penalty of one thousand dollars for omitting to cause to be made and posted an itemized account or balance-sheet monthly, as required by the act of March 30, 1874.—Francais v. Somps, 92 Cal. 503, 28 Pac. 592.

[g] In an action for a penalty against a gold mining company brought under Statute of 1880, page 134, which provides that such corporation shall on the first Monday of each month make and have posted in the office of such company certain reports and accounts current for the previous month, an answer denying the allegation of the complaint that said company had an office for the transaction of business is insufficient to raise a material issue; Civil Code, sections 290, 321a, contemplating that all corporations shall have a place of business.—Chapman v. Doray, 89 Cal. 52, 26 Pac. 605.

[h] Act of April 23, 1880, makes directors of a mining corporation liable to any stockholder, on failure to file reports of the company's affairs, for liquidated damages in the sum of one thousand dollars. Held that, in an action to recover such damages, they need not be proved.—Shanklin v. Gray, 111 Cal. 88, 43 Pac. 399.

[i] Under the act of March 23, 1880, the directors of a mining company formed under the laws of this state, who, in good faith, on the first Monday in the month, make and post in the office of the company, a verified itemized account or balance sheet in attempted compliance with the requirements of the statute in that regard, are not liable for the penalty imposed by that act merely because the account covers a longer period than the preceding month.—Shanklin v. Gray, 111 Cal. 88, 43 Pac. 399.

[j] Under section 1 of that act the monthly accounts and weekly statements required to be filed by the superintendent must be verified by him; if unverified, the directors are not relieved from the penalty imposed by the act, either by the fact that the accounts and statements were in fact true, or because it would have been a great inconvenience for the superintendent to go a long distance to an officer competent to administer oaths, or because they had been advised by counsel that a verification was unnecessary.—Shanklin v. Gray, 111 Cal. 88, 43 Pac. 399.

[k] Act of April 23, 1880, providing that a stockholder may recover one thousand dollars as liquidated damages from the directors of a mining corporation for failure to post monthly balance sheets as required by the act, imposes a penalty.—Anderson v. Byrnes, 122 Cal. 272, 54 Pac. 821.

[l] Pledgee of stock is liable as stockholder unless he appears to be pledgee on books of corporation.—Hurlbut v. Arthur, 140 Cal. 110, 98 Am. St. Rep. 17, 73 Pac. 734.

[a] Under constitution, article 12, section 3, providing that "the directors or trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation or joint-stock association during the term of office of such director or trustee," the only proper remedy of a creditor of a bank, where certain sums of money were alleged to have been misappropriated by a certain officer thereof, is a bill in equity, in which all the creditors are parties or represented, and under which there can be an accounting, after all the facts have been ascertained, as the moneys misappropriated constitute a fund for the benefit of all the creditors who have been injured by such wrongful acts.—Winchester v. Mabury, 122 Cal. 522, 55 Pac. 393.

[a] The general rule is that an action against trustees of a corporation for a misappropriation of its funds must be brought in the name of the corporation.—Cogswell v. Bull, 39 Cal. 320.

[c] The corporation should be made a party to a creditor's bill against subscribing stockholders, but is not an indispensable party, unless the object of the action is to secure an adjudication of the rights and liabilities of all parties, and a final settlement of all the affairs of the company; and when the action is against a single stockholder objection to the nonjoinder of the corporation is waived, if not made by demurrer or answer.—Potter v. Dear, 95 Cal. 578, 30 Pac. 777.

[d] Constitution, article 12, section 3, provides that the directors of a corporation shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of the corporation during the term of such director. A petition to charge defendants, as directors of a bank, with the misappropriation of its funds, alleged that the treasurer of the defendant corporation paid the sum of twenty thousand dollars for a note, and that the note was not secured in any way, but did not allege that the note was not paid, or that the makers were not solvent at the time it was purchased, or that the money was embezzled by any officer of the corporation, or was used for any unlawful purpose, or was converted by any officer to his own use. Held, that the facts alleged were not sufficient to make the defendants liable for a misappropriation, and hence a demurrer to the petition was properly sustained.—Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 692.

[c] To make the directors of a plank or turnpike road company personally liable for debts contracted in violation of its by-laws, and after the same have been filed, the complaint must contain allegations that they were thus contracted.—Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440.

[d] In an action against the stockholders of a corporation for their respective portions of the debts of a corporation, held, that an objection on the ground of misjoinder of parties defendant, or on the ground that causes of action were improperly united, in the absence of special demurrer, could not be considered.—Faymonville v. McCollough, 59 Cal. 285.

[e] In an action against the directors of a corporation for failing to post monthly statements, etc., an allegation that the directors pretended to have received large sums of money and incurred large liabilities is not sufficient, and is not equivalent to an allegation that they did in fact receive money and incur liability.—Hewlett v. Epstein, 63 Cal. 184.

[f] A complaint by stockholders against the directors of a ditch and canal company which alleges that the company "is incorporated under and by virtue of the laws of the state of California" for the purpose of constructing a water ditch for irrigating purposes, and that defendants have fraudulently distributed the water gratuitously without alleging that the corporation was organized for profit or for the purpose of selling water, does not state a cause of action, since it shows no misconduct on the part of defendants.—Applegarth v. McQuiddy, 77 Cal. 408, 19 Pac. 692; Applegarth v. Burris, 19 Pac. 693.

[g] In an action by a stockholder against the directors, it is sufficient for the plaintiff, in order to establish a prima facie case, to aver and prove a neglect, failure, or refusal of the directors to comply with a specified provision of the act, and it is not necessary that the complaint should charge, or that plaintiff should prove, a willful failure or refusal; but it is incumbent upon the defendants to show that the failure was not willful, and they must set forth and prove facts or circumstances of exculpation as matter of defense.—Miles v. Woodward, 115 Cal. 308, 46 Pac. 1076.

[h] A petition in an action to charge directors of a corporation with a misappropriation of the corporate funds by its officers, alleged that the purchase of a note was only a pretended purchase, and that the payment of the corporate fund therefor was unlawful, and that the corporation suffered by reason of the misappropriation and pretended purchase. Held, that the use of the words "pretended," "unlawful," and "misappropriation," did not dispense with the necessity of pleading the facts showing a misappropriation, and such words would be stricken.—Winchester v. Howard, 136 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 692.

[a] Charters of corporations are special grants of power. The corporation has no powers except those expressly given or which are necessary to the exercise of those expressly given.—Oakland v. Carpentier, 13 Cal. 540.

[b] The powers of corporations are strictly limited to those granted in their charters, or by the statutes under which they are organized.—McCracken v. City of San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

[c] In determining whether a given act is within the power of a corporation, it is necessary to consider, first, whether the act falls within the powers expressly enumerated in the certificate; or, second, whether it is necessary to the exercise of one of the enumerated powers.—Vandall v. South San Francisco Dock Co., 40 Cal. 83.

[d] All corporations organized under laws of this state are, by general law, vested with certain powers by express grant, They are invested with further powers by the particular act under which they are incorporated, or by the title of the code under which they are incorporated.—Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 69, 104.

[e] Corporation possesses only those properties which charter confers upon it expressly or incidental to its existence and calculated to effect object of its creation.—San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 177, 48 Pac. 1075.

§ 323½. De Facto Power.

§ 324. Powers Incidental to Those Granted.

[a] A corporation authorized to buy, improve, lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of real estate and owning lands in the vicinity of a railroad, has power to appropriate a portion of its funds to the use of the railroad company, for the purpose of increasing its facilities and lessening the cost of transportation, where the direct and proximate tendency thereof is to enhance the value of the land.—Vandall v. South San Francisco Dock Co., 40 Cal. 83.

[b] A corporation possesses only the powers expressly granted to it and such as are necessary to carry out the object for which it was created.—McKiernan v. Lenzen, 56 Cal. 61.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 325. Acquisition of Franchise Granted to Individual.

[a] Corporations formed under general law have power to purchase and hold exclusive franchise or privilege granted by the legislature to an individual and his assigns.—California State Telegraph Co. v. Alta Tel. Co., 22 Cal. 398.

[b] A corporation formed to supply a town with water may purchase and hold a valid franchise, previously granted to certain persons, of the exclusive right for years to furnish such supply.—San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 168, 48 Pac. 1075.

[c] Though constitution, article 4, section 31, forbids the creation of corporations by special act, a corporation may by purchase acquire franchises conferred by special act upon certain individuals "and their assigns" prior to its organization, there being nothing to show that any of the grantees of the franchise had any interest in the corporation or that they caused it to be formed.—San Luis Water Co. v. Estrada, 117 Cal. 168, 48 Pac. 1075.

[b] A private corporation has no implied authority to invest in shares of another private corporation and, in this state, a corporation is forbidden to engage in any business other than is expressly authorized in its charter or the law under which it is organized, and a corporation organized for the purpose of manufacturing, importing, buying, and selling furniture and upholstery cannot hold stock in a hotel corporation, and its subscription to its stock is ultra vires and void and it cannot be charged with liability as a stockholder of the hotel corporation.—Knowles v. Sandercock, 107 Cal. 629, 40 Pac. 1047.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Power of corporations to deal in shares of other corporations: 28 Am. Rep. 15, note.

§ 327. Partnership Contracts.

[a] Corporation formed to carry on business of a partnership is a trustee for the partnership, and entire capital stock is partnership assets.—Shorb v. Beaudry, 56 Cal. 446.

[b] It is not ultra vires for a corporation to enter into a contract with an individual to engage in a certain venture, profits and losses to be divided equally among them, where all the management of the enterprise is intrusted to the corporation.—Bates v. Coronada Beach Co., 109 Cal. 160, 41 Pac. 885.

[c] Corporation cannot legally enter into copartnership with individual.—Willey v. Crocker-Woolworth Nat. Bank, 141 Cal. 518, 75 Pac. 106.

[a] The express powers of a corporation must be exercised in the manner pointed out by the statute, but the powers merely incident thereto may be exercised by its officers or agents.—Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills, 6 Cal. 1.

[b] When to a corporation is prescribed, by the law of its being, the mode of exercising its power, such mode must be observed in order to render its acts binding. But when, by its organic law, it is declared in general terms that its officers shall manage its affairs, and make and execute all contracts to carry out the objects and purposes of such corporation, in any way and manner which they may deem proper, it cannot be held that the corporate powers existing must be exercised in any particular mode.—Pixley v. Western Pac. R. Co., 33 Cal. 183, 91 Am. Dec. 623.

[a] The corporate powers of a corporation can be exercised by the trustees only when duly assembled and acting as a board.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

[c] Signing a petition for a street improvement is a corporate act, and can be done only by authority of the board of directors. Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 225.

[d] Corporation can only act through its board of trustees.—Solidarite etc. Assn., In re., 68 Cal. 394, 9 Pac. 453.

[e] Corporate powers, business and property of all private corporations must be exercised by board of directors.—Granite G. M. Co. v. Maginness, 118 Cal. 138, 50 Pac. 269.

§ 330. Effect of Ultra Vires Acts.

[a] An incorporated water company brought a suit against a city to recover for water furnished under a contract, which was beyond the power of either the water company or the city to make. Held, that no recovery could be had.—San Diego Water Co. v. City of San Diego, 59 Cal. 517.

[b] That which a corporation has not the power to do, if attempted to be done by it, is ultra vires, and void.—Griffith v. New York Life Ins. Co., 101 Cal. 627, 40 Am. St. Rep. 96, 36 Pac. 113.

§ 331. Who May Question Corporate Powers.

[a] When a corporation is authorized by statute to hold real property necessary to enable it to carry on its business, the inquiry whether any particular real property is necessary for that business is a matter between the state and the corporation, which does not concern third parties.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

[b] In an action by a corporation upon a contract made by it with the defendant, the latter cannot interpose as a defense that the plaintiff in making the contract has exceeded the power conferred by its charter or the law under which it was formed. The question of a violation of its charter is one between the state and the corporation, and cannot be investigated collaterally by individuals.—Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

[c] The power of a corporation to purchase a privilege under the law which created the corporation cannot be questioned in an action between a third party and the corporation. It is a matter between the state and the corporation.—California State Tel. Co. v. Alta Tel. Co., 22 Cal. 398.

[e] Where a contract with a corporation is not only ultra vires but also void as against public policy, the court will not give relief to either party, and the fact that the contract is performed on one part does not estop the other party to plead the invalidity of the contract.—Visalia Gas and Electric Light Co. v. Sims, 104 Cal. 326, 43 Am. St. Rep. 105, 37 Pac. 1042.

[f] The question whether the purchase of a particular note and mortgage by a savings and loan corporation was "such as the purposes of the corporation required," is to be determined by its board of directors, and is not open to investigation at the instance of the mortgagor.—Savings Bank v. Barrett, 126 Cal. 413, 58 Pac. 914.

[g] A deed of a corporation unauthorized by the stockholders is void only as to stockholders or those connected with the corporation's title.—Galbraith v. Shasta Iron Co., 143 Cal. 94, 76 Pac. 901; 143 Cal. xviii, 76 Pac. 1127.

[h] Act of April 23, 1880 (Stats. 1880, c. 118, p. 131) prohibiting the directors of any mining corporation from selling any mining ground owned by the corporation, unless ratified by two-thirds of the stockholders thereof, is for the benefit of stockholders of mining companies only, and does not authorize a person not a stockholder to impeach the deed of a mining corporation on the ground that its officers had no authority to execute the same.—Galbraith v. Shasta Iron Co., 143 Cal. 94, 76 Pac. 901; 143 Cal. xviii, 76 Pac. 1127.

[i] Though an assignment of a certificate of redemption from mortgage foreclosure violated Constitution, article 12, section 9, and Civil Code, section 574, such fact held of no benefit to a purchaser at a subsequent judicial sale.—Youd v. German Savings etc. Soc. (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 991.

[a] Where answer in suit against corporation on its note relies simply on the want of power of the corporation to issue notes, the defendant cannot afterwards object that plaintiff has not shown that officers executing the note were empowered by the corporation to do so.—Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills, 6 Cal. 1.

[b] Where contract is executory the corporation cannot be held bound, unless the contract is made in pursuance of the provisions of its charter; but where the contract has been executed, and the corporation has enjoyed the benefits of the consideration, an implied promise arises against it.—San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

[c] In a contract between a corporation and strangers dealing with it, when the act in question is one which the corporation has no power to perform under any circumstances, the corporation may avail itself of the defense of ultra vires; but when the act may be performed by the corporation for some purposes, but not for others, the defense of ultra vires may or may not be available. If the stranger dealing with the corporation knew of its intention to perform the act for an unauthorized purpose, the defense is available, otherwise not.—Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 543, 99 Am. Dec. 30.

[d] A corporation that has received and retained the consideration of a promissory note, given for its benefit, cannot deny its liability thereon on the ground that the contract was ultra vires.—Main v. Casserly, 67 Cal. 127, 7 Pac. 426.

[e] A corporation, after engaging in the hotel business and assuming the liability of an innkeeper, cannot repudiate its liability on the ground that its acts were ultra vires.—Magee v. Pacific Imp. Co., 98 Cal. 678, 35 Am. St. Rep. 199, 33 Pac. 772.

[f] Where a national bank holds stock in a savings bank, and receives dividends thereon, it is estopped, in an action against it to enforce its liability as such stockholder to a depositor in the savings bank, from claiming that it is ultra vires for it to hold such stock, in the absence of a statute expressly prohibiting it.—Kennedy v. California Sav. Bank, 101 Cal. 495, 40 Am. St. Rep. 69, 35 Pac. 1039.

[g] The entering into a contract by a corporation, within the apparent scope of its business, is a determination on its part, conclusive against it, that the contract was "essential" within Civil Code, section 354, empowering a corporation to enter into contracts essential to the transaction of its ordinary affairs.—Bates v. Coronado Beach Co., 109 Cal. 160, 41 Pac. 855.

[h] In the absence of an issue for that purpose, a corporation cannot show that its records, on the faith of which parties have contracted with it, and which it has not attempted to correct, are false.—Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129, 54 Pac. 594.

[i] It seems that the reception and retention by a corporation of the benefit of a pledge precludes question as to the power of the corporation to make the pledge.—Lawrence v. Johnson, 131 Cal. 175, 63 Pac. 176.

[j] In a suit for attorney's services rendered to a corporation under an executed contract of employment, the corporation held not entitled to claim that it had no power to make the contract of employment.—Kelly v. Ning Yung Benev. Assn. (Cal. App.) 84 Pac. 321.

[a] Where the stockholders of a bank have received the dividends paid by it on deposits transferred to it by another bank in consideration of its assumption of all the latter's liabilities, it is too late for them to set up the defense of ultra vires in a suit by one of the depositors to enforce their individual liability after the bank to which the deposits were transferred has stopped payment.—Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 110.

§ 334. —— Estoppel of Third Persons.

[b] When the purchaser of land covered by a building and loan mortgage secured a release of the mortgage by giving his note for the amount due thereon, secured by a mortgage on other land, in a suit to foreclose the second mortgage he was estopped from claiming that the building and loan company's act in accepting his note and mortgage was ultra vires.—Bay City Building etc. Assn. v. Broad, 136 Cal. 525, 69 Pac. 225.

[c] In an action by one bank against another for money loaned, and on a note representing the balance due, the loan and balance being established, it is immaterial whether the note was authorized by the directors.—First Nat. Bank v. California Nat. Bank, 35 Pac. 639.

§ 337. —— Directors as Mind and Soul of Corporation.

[a] Directors or dominant body of corporation is deemed to be mind and soul of corporate entity, and what they do as the representative of the corporation the corporation itself is deemed to do; and the manifested motives and intentions of the directors when a material fact is in issue are to be imputed to the corporation.—Maynard v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48, 91 Am. Dec. 672.

[a] Directors who are common to both incorporations are not within the rule that he who acts in a fiduciary capacity cannot deal with himself in his individual capacity, but they owe the same fidelity to both corporations, and there is no presumption that they will deal unfairly with either of them.—San Diego v. Pacific Beach R. R. Co., 112 Cal. 53, 44 Pac. 333.

[b] Mere fact that two contracting corporations have common directors does not render the contract between the corporations invalid, or incapable of ratification, where there is no actual fraud alleged or found, and where the contract is within the chartered powers of both corporations.—San Diego v. Pacific Beach R. R. Co., 112 Cal. 53, 44 Pac. 333.

[c] A purchase by a corporation of all the property of another corporation is not void merely because the boards of directors of both corporations were the same.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

§ 339. Express Authority, and Authority Implied Therefrom.

[a] A resolution by the board of directors of a corporation, conferring on its president full power to act for it with reference to municipal street work, authorizes the president to contract with the city on behalf of the corporation for the improvement of a street.—Oakland Pav. Co. v. Rier, 52 Cal. 270.

[b] Corporation president authorized to buy is authorized to buy on credit and give corporate note.—Siebe v. Joshua Hendy M. Wks., 86 Cal. 392, 25 Pac. 14.

[c] Where the directors of a corporation, by resolution, authorizes its vice-president to sign all legal documents relating to its business, he is empowered to retain an attorney for the corporation, and to pay him for his services.—Streeten v. Robinson, 102 Cal. 542, 36 Pac. 946.

[d] A resolution of a board of directors of a corporation authorizing the president "to make and sign contracts" in its name, "and do a general business for said corporation," authorizes him to lease premises for the use of the corporation, and which are necessary for carrying on its business.—Hawley v. Gray Bros. Artificial Stone Pav. Co., 106 Cal. 337, 39 Pac. 600.

[e] A resolution authorizing the president of a corporation "to make arrangements for paying off a debt by giving a mortgage, or any other means," was sufficient in form to authorize the execution of a mortgage.—Boggs v. Lakeport Agricultural Park Assn., 111 Cal. 354, 43 Pac. 1106.

[f] The executive committee of the board of directors of a corporation, authorized by the board to make arrangements with a person for "securing the transfer" of patent rights belonging to him to the corporation, have authority to execute a contract for the transfer.—Andres v. Fry, 113 Cal. 124, 45 Pac. 534.

Necessity for seal. See post, § 379.

[a] Cashier of a bank may affix corporate seal without vote of directors, and perhaps any managing agent clothed with general power may do so.—Bliss v. Kaweah etc. Co., 65 Cal. 504, 4 Pac. 507.

[b] The secretary of a corporation is the proper party to affix the corporate seal, and it devolves upon the party denying the execution of the instrument to prove that he had no authority to affix it. The seal itself is prima facie evidence that it was affixed by proper authority.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[a] The president has no authority to contract beyond matters incident to the management of the corporate business.—(Cal. 1862) Blen v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 20 Cal. 602, 81 Am. Dec. 132.

[b] Under act of May 12, 1853, section 19, providing that the directors shall have only such powers as the by-laws give them, contracts made by the corporation through its directors are not void merely because the by-laws are not filed with the county recorder, since the statute only makes contracts invalid which are not in accordance with the articles as filed.—Forbes v. San Rafael Turnpike Co., 50 Cal. 340.

[c] One claiming under a contract of a corporation, executed without its corporate seal by its president and secretary, must show that they were clothed with general or special authority to make it, or had powers from which such authority might be inferred, or that their act was ratified by the board of directors.—Fontana v. Pacific Can Co., 129 Cal. 51, 61 Pac. 580.

[a] Where the president of a bank employed attorneys in a contest between stockholders for its control in which it had no real interest, and whose services were rendered for his private benefit alone, the fees of such attorneys cannot properly be paid from the funds of the bank, and if so paid an action by stockholders will lie to compel him to account to the bank therefor.—Wickersham v. Crittenden, 106 Cal. 329, 39 Pac. 603.

[b] In a suit against a corporation for attorney's services, it was not necessary that plaintiff should show that the corporation's secretary was authorized to make the contract of employment by by-law or a formal resolution of the corporation's board of directors.—Kelly v. Ning Yung Benev. Assn. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 321.

[a] A general agent of a corporation, to whom has been intrusted the management of its affairs, has power to assign its choses in action to its creditors either in payment of or as security for their claims, without express authority from the board of directors. McKiernan v. Lenzen, 56 Cal. 61.

[b] An assignment of an account for goods sold by a corporation, made by its secretary, who only had general charge of orders for goods, is invalid, unless it is shown that he had authority to make it.—Read v. Buffum, 79 Cal. 77, 12 Am. St. Rep. 131, 21 Pac. 555.

[c] An assignment of a claim by a corporation is not invalid because no authority, either in the by-laws or by resolution of the board of directors, is shown in the manager of the corporation and president, who executed the assignment, where it was made in the regular course of business, with the knowledge and consent of the board of directors.—Greig v. Riordan, 99 Cal. 316, 33 Pac. 913.

[a] Where a corporation is engaged in the business of conveying water through ditches for sale to miners, a purchase of additional ditch property to extend the operations of the company is not within the power of the president of the corporation, so as to bind the corporation therefor.—Blen v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 20 Cal. 602, 81 Am. Dec. 132.

[b] The president of a corporation has no power to sell or purchase real property, either by statute or by implication.—Bliss v. Kaweah Canal etc. Co., 65 Cal. 502, 4 Pac. 507.

[c] The secretary and general manager of a corporation may assign accounts under a general authorization, the adoption of a special resolution authorizing it being unnecessary.—Tuller v. Arnold, 98 Cal. 522, 33 Pac. 445.

[d] Civil Code, section 2310, provides that where the act of an agent has been ratified by accepting and retaining the benefits of the act, with notice thereof, oral authorization of the act is sufficient. Held that, where fruit sold by plaintiff to H. was delivered to and shipped by the defendant corporation, its general manager had power to bind defendant by an oral agreement to pay the proceeds of the fruit to plaintiff instead of H. Tevis v. Savage, 130 Cal. 411, 62 Pac. 611.

[a] The fact that a resolution of the board of directors, authorizing the secretary to make a loan on behalf of the corporation, was not reduced to writing, does not prevent a recovery for the loan.—Bank of Yolo v. Weaver, 31 Pac. 160.

§ 347. Negotiable Instruments.

[a] The officers of a corporation have no power to authorize the execution of a note for a debt of a third party to the payee, having no relation to the corporate business, and in which the corporation has no interest, and the holder of such a note cannot recover on it.—Hall v. Auburn Turnpike Co., 27 Cal. 255, 87 Am. Dec. 75.

[b] The secretary of a mining company has no implied authority, as incident to his office, to make an assignment of promissory notes belonging to the company. To sustain an assignment made by a secretary in the name of his company, either an express authority or ratification must be shown.—Blood v. Marcuse, 38 Cal. 590, 99 Am. Dec. 435.

[c] A note signed by the president and secretary in their official capacity is the note of the corporation.—Farmers' etc. Bank v. Colby, 64 Cal. 352, 28 Pac. 118.

[d] Note showing on its face that it is executed by president of corporation to himself charges assignee with notice of want of authority.—Smith v. Los Angeles etc. Assn., 78 Cal. 293, 12 Am. St. Rep. 53, 20 Pac. 677.

[e] Under a resolution by the directors of a corporation conferring on the president, as the chief executive of the board, the power to incur indebtedness, negotiate loans, to contract, and otherwise act as the agent of the corporation, the president had authority to execute a note which would bind the corporation.—McCormick v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 130 Cal. 100, 62 Pac. 267.

[f] Under a resolution of the directors of a corporation that the president should have power, as the agent and chief executive of the company, to incur debts, negotiate loans, and contract for the corporation, a note signed, "R., President S. & T. Co. R. R. Co., R., Personally,"—was binding on the corporation.—McCormick v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 130 Cal. 100, 62 Pac. 267.

[g] Where the directors of a corporation authorized the president by resolution to incur debts, negotiate loans, and contract for the company, the fact that a by-law of the corporation provided that notes signed by the president and secretary should be binding on the company did not prevent a note signed by the president, without the signature of the secretary, from binding the corporation.—McCormick v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 130 Cal. 100, 62 Pac. 267.

[h] Corporation held not liable as indorser on certain instruments, regardless of whether such instruments were negotiable promissory notes or not.—Wickersham Banking Co. v. Nicholas (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1124.

§ 348. Bonds and Mortgages.

[b] Civil Code, section 305, provides that the powers of a corporation must be exercised, and its property controlled, by its board of directors; and section 308 declares that the decision of a majority of the directors, "when duly assembled," constitutes a valid corporate act. Held, that a mortgage executed by the president or secretary of a corporation without a resolution of the board of directors was void, though subsequently ratified by the holders of two-thirds of the stock.—Alta Silver Min. Co. v. Alta Placer Min. Co., 78 Cal. 629, 21 Pac. 373.

[a] Settlement by secretary with creditor of corporation is not a corporate act.—Blood v. Marcuse, 38 Cal. 594, 99 Am. Dec. 435.

12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1705-1708, §§ 1670-1675.

§ 350. Legal Proceedings.

[a] The directors of a corporation have authority to make a bona fide settlement of a pending action which will be binding on the stockholders.—Donohoe v. Mariposa Land etc. Co., 66 Cal. 317, 5 Pac. 495.

[b] The president and general manager of a corporation, who, in the latter capacity, is authorized by the by-laws to supervise the affairs of the company, may sign a protest against a street improvement for the corporation.—Los Angeles Lighting Co. v. City of Los Angeles, 106 Cal. 156, 39 Pac. 535.

thereof made or done at a time when they were not acting as agents of such corporation.—Shay v. Tuolumne Water Co., 6 Cal. 73.

[b] A statement of the real property owned by a railroad company, furnished by its superintendent to an assessor, is binding on the corporation, and justifies the assessor in adopting it as a correct statement of the property belonging to the company.—People v. Stockton etc. R. Co., 49 Cal. 414.

[c] Corporation is bound by statements of its secretary in charge of entire corporate business.—Abbott v. Land and Water Co., 87 Cal. 328, 25 Pac. 693.

[d] It is within the power of the president of a corporation to furnish the lessor of premises leased by him for corporate purposes with evidence that the corporation has ratified the lease by what purports to be a certified copy of a resolution of the board of directors, and his act in doing so is binding on the corporation, which cannot repudiate it on the ground that such resolution had ever been, in fact, passed.—Hawley v. Gray Bros. Artificial Stone Pav. Co., 106 Cal. 337, 39 Pac. 609.

[e] Where a corporation ratifies a contract made by its president without authority, it is bound by any declarations he may have made during the negotiation determining the meaning of an ambiguity, since it is presumed to have notice of all the facts relating to the negotiation.—Balfour v. Fresno Canal etc. Co., 123 Cal. 395, 55 Pac. 1062.

[f] Where a note before maturity was indorsed to an insurance company for value and without notice of a want of consideration or fraud, the statement of the company's managing agent, made to the maker, that the maker would not be troubled about the note, and that the payee would be looked to for a settlement, was not binding on the company; the agent having no authority to make such a promise.—Muller v. Swanton, 140 Cal. 249, 73 Pac. 994.

[g] The president and managing agent of a corporation have authority to make admissions in regard to the fulfillment of contracts which will be evidence against the corporation.—Bullock v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 31 Pac. 367.

§ 352. Wrongful Acts.

[a] Corporation is liable for acts done by its agents in delicto as well as ex contractu, in the course of its business and their employment; and the corporation is responsible therefor as an individual is responsible under similar circumstances.—Maynard v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48, 91 Am. Dec. 672.

[b] If a corporation furnishes its secretary with money to pay its employees, and an employee monthly delivers to the secretary receipts for the month's salary, and leaves the money with the secretary, the corporation is not liable for the default of the secretary in failing, afterwards, to pay over the amounts.—Gardner v. Omnibus R. Co., 63 Cal. 326.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 353. Who May Question Authority and Estoppel to Question.

[a] Corporate act is not essential in all cases to fasten a liability, and, if it were necessary, the law would sometimes presume, in order to uphold fair dealing and prevent gross injustice, the existence of such act, and estop the corporation from denying it.—San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

[b] Where a corporation agrees to pay a sum of money, and places the amount in the hands of its treasurer for the purpose of meeting the obligation, and such treasurer expends the money for the benefit of the obligee, and the corporation by resolution assents to such expenditure, it cannot afterward hold the treasurer liable for such money.—Bay View Homestead Assn. v. Williams, 50 Cal. 353.

[c] Where a corporation attempts to empower its president to contract with a city for the improvement of a street, and the power was defective, but the contract was made, the work done by the corporation, the assessments issued therefor in its favor, and suit was brought by the corporation to recover the same, both the city and the lot owners when sued for the assessment are estopped to deny that the contract was legally executed by the corporation.—Oakland Paving Co. v. Rier, 52 Cal. 270.

[d] A corporation is not estopped to deny the validity of an unauthorized act of an agent when it has not availed itself of any benefit from his act.—Bliss v. Kaweah etc. Co., 65 Cal. 502, 4 Pac. 507.

[f] Where the president of a corporation authorized to execute a mortgage included in the note and mortgage terms and conditions which the corporation had power to authorize but did not authorize him to insert, and the corporation by its representations and declarations and acts through its directors intentionally led the mortgagees to believe that the president was authorized to insert such terms and conditions, and received the consideration from the mortgagee, and applied the money to its own use, including the payment of a prior mortgage which included similar terms and conditions, and, with full knowledge of such terms and conditions, used the consideration and paid the interest thereon monthly, as it became due upon the note and mortgage, such acts of the corporation constitute a ratification of the acts of its president, and an estoppel in pais, precluding the corporation from questioning his authority.—Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67, 34 Pac. 527.

[g] Corporations, equally with individuals, are subject to the rule that where, with full knowledge of all the facts involved, a principal reaps the fruit of an unauthorized contract of his agent, and for some time yields acquiescence to its provisions, he will be deemed to have ratified it, and will be estopped as against one who has fully performed the contract on his part, from repudiating it to the injury of the latter.—Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67, 34 Pac. 527.

[h] Where the president of the corporation in making a lease of premises for its benefit presented to the owner of the premises a certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors, ratifying and confirming his acts in making the lease, his act in furnishing such resolution was the corporation's act, and it is estopped from denying the ratification of the lease, although no such resolution appears upon its minutes.—Hawley v. Gray Bros. Artificial Stone P. Co., 106 Cal. 337, 39 Pac. 609.

[i] Corporation cannot be held liable on unauthorized contract of its secretary, on the ground that it had accepted its benefits, if, in fact, it expressly repudiated the contract, and the work done under it proved wholly worthless.—Thomasson v. Grace M. E. Church, 113 Cal. 558, 45 Pac. 838.

[j] The alteration of a note of a corporation before delivery by the president, who was authorized to negotiate a loan for the corporation, and secure the same by the note, with indorsers, was not available to the corporation as a defense.—Pelton v. San Jacinto Lumber Co., 113 Cal. 21, 45 Pac. 12.

[k] A mortgagor, under a trust deed authorizing the mortgagee company to substitute a trustee by resolution of its directors, cannot complain of the regularity of the stockholders' meeting at which such directors were elected.—Balfour-Guthrie Inv. Co. v. Woodworth, 124 Cal. 169, 56 Pac. 891.

[l] Corporation held not estopped to deny agent's authority to make indorsement on certain notes.—Wickersham Banking Co. v. Nicholas (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1124.

12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1725-1727, § 1696.

§ 354. Ratification or Repudiation of Unauthorized Act.

[b] The president of a corporation had general discretionary powers as to all matters in the prosecution of the company projects. He bought a house, to be used as an office, and the trustees held their meetings in it during six weeks. Held, that even if he had no authority the trustees had ratified his acts, and therefore that a subsequent rejection of the contract was of no avail, and could not excuse the company from payment. Shaver v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 10 Cal. 396.

[c] The president of a corporation entered into a contract, beyond his powers, for the purchase of property. A written report was made on the subject, omitting some details of the contract, but not professing to set it forth wholly, and presented to the board of trustees, who unanimously ratified the "report and proceedings," the president being present and voting on the occasion. Suit being afterward brought upon the contract against the corporation, they sought to defend on the ground that they acted upon the report alone, and so with information insufficient to make the ratification binding. Held, that without evidence of any actual mistake on the part of the board, this defense was insufficient, the circumstances not being strong enough to overthrow the inference of knowledge which every ratification implies.—Blen v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 20 Cal. 602, 81 Am. Dec. 132.

[d] In an action against a railroad company duly incorporated and acting under the act of 1861 for professional services, where it appeared that the plaintiff was retained verbally by the president of the company to act for them in a certain suit, and that he did so act, and recovered a large amount of money for said company, that while thus openly engaged the president advised frequently with the board of directors concerning such business, it was held that this amounted to a ratification of the acts of the president, although none such appeared by books or resolutions of the directors.—Pixley v. Western Pac. R. Co., 33 Cal. 183, 91 Am. Dec. 623.

[e] Where the employment of attorneys by the president of a railroad company was known to the directors and officers of the company, who also knew of their attending to the business of the company, and advised with them respecting such business, these facts were sufficient to establish a ratification. Pixley v. Western Pac. R. Co., 33 Cal. 183, 91 Am. Dec. 623.

[h] Evidence tending to prove ratification by shareholders of a corporation of the violation of a by-law by the directors, in executing notes and mortgages beyond the subscribed capital stock, is equivalent to evidence of an original authority, and justifies a finding of original authority, under pleading tendering an issue as to such authority, and raising no issue as to the probative fact of ratification.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[i] Acts of directors in violation of by-law may be ratified by the shareholders, and generally by the same number of shareholders that would be necessary to enact them; and such ratification need not be formally made in a meeting of the stockholders, but may be presumed from the circumstances of the case, such as long acquiescence in acts beneficial to the corporation, with knowledge of all the material facts and may even be presumed without evidence.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[j] The acts of the corporation in accepting money paid it under the terms of an agreement of sale by an agent, and in commencing suit to recover money due by its terms, did not amount to a ratification of the contract.—Salfield v. Sutter County Land etc. Co., 94 Cal. 546, 29 Pac. 1105.

[k] Ratification of agent's authority can be made only in the same manner required for the conferring of original authority.—Salfield v. Sutter County Land etc. Co., 94 Cal. 546, 29 Pac. 1105.

[m] The fact that some of the members of the flume company may have encouraged the contract with the city cannot estop the corporation from objecting to such contract, there being no valid ratification of the contract by the corporation.—San Diego W. Co. v. San Diego F. Co., 100 Cal. 43, 34 Pac. 656.

[n] A ratification by board of directors of action of president and secretary of corporation in executing a mortgage of property purchased by the corporation, is equivalent to a previous authority; and such ratification is involved in the issue as to whether the mortgage was executed by the corporation, and may be proved thereunder without being specifically pleaded.—Boggs v. Lakeport etc. Assn., 111 Cal. 354, 43 Pac. 1106.

[o] A ratification of a contract entered into by the directors of a corporation, by a majority of its stockholders, cannot be objected to by the corporation upon the ground that some of the stockholders may have acted without the knowledge of the facts, when they voted to ratify the action of the directors, where it is clear that they knew or ought to have known the nature of the contract, and the circumstances attending it, and there is no attempt to show a want of knowledge by any of the stockholders of any circumstance connected with the contract.—San Diego v. Pacific Beach R. R. Co., 112 Cal. 53, 44 Pac. 333.

[q] Where the execution of a note and mortgage could have been authorized only by a resolution of the board of directors, equivalent to an authority in writing, within Civil Code, section 2309, a corporation can ratify an unauthorized execution by its president and secretary only in the manner that would have been necessary to confer original authority for the act ratified, as provided by section 2310, and not by an exercise of ownership over the property for the price of which the note and mortgage were executed.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 45 Pac. 252.

[r] Under the Civil Code, a ratification can only be made in the manner required in order to confer original authority for the act ratified; and a note and mortgage which could only be authorized by resolution of the board of directors can only be ratified by such resolution.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017, 45 Pac. 252.

[s] A corporation whose by-laws provide that all bonds, contracts, and other instruments on its behalf shall be executed by the president, and "also be signed by the secretary," may, by acquiescence therein, become liable on notes signed in its name by the president alone.—Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 332, 49 Pac. 197.

[t] In an action for the enforcement of the mortgage security for certain bonds of a corporation, it appeared that the president, as the financial manager of the company, had been authorized to negotiate the bonds; that he raised large sums by pledge thereof; which were expended by the company for the purposes which had induced the issue of the bonds; that said transactions expended over a period of more than a year; and that the company had failed to repudiate liability to the holders of such bonds until after action brought thereon. Held, that the company had acquiesced in and thus ratified the president's assumption that his agency to negotiate the bonds extended to the hypothecation of them.—Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 332, 49 Pac. 197.

[u] A mortgage was executed by a corporation when the number of its directors was reduced by a vacancy to less than that required by law. Subsequently, at meetings of full boards, the mortgagee was required to make further advances on the security of the mortgage, and a second mortgage was directed by a resolution expressly recognizing the validity of the previous one. Held, sufficient to constitute a ratification of the previous mortgage.—Porter v. Lassen County Land etc. Co., 127 Cal. 261, 59 Pac. 563.

[v] Even if the president of a corporation has no power to give a note for it, yet the note, being for a valuable consideration received by the corporation, and the whole transaction being entered at large in the books of the corporation, it, by failing to object thereto after notice so brought to it, and making no offer to restore the consideration, ratifies the transaction.—Phillips v. Sanger Lumber Co., 130 Cal. 431, 62 Pac. 749.

[w] Civil Code, section 305, declares that the business of a corporation must be carried on by its board of directors. Act of April 23, 1880 (Stats. 1880, p. 131), section 1, declares that it shall not be lawful for the directors of any mining corporation to sell leased property, or otherwise dispose of the whole or any part of the mining ground owned or held by such corporation, unless such act be ratified by the holders of at least two-thirds of the capital stock. Held, that where a mortgage on all the property of a mining company was invalid because of having been authorized at a directors' meeting at which no legal quorum was present, and thereafter two-thirds of the stockholders united in signing an instrument which purported to ratify the giving of the mortgage, the stockholders not having had authority to mortgage the mine under section 305, their ratification of the invalid act of the directors did not render the mortgage valid.—Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. etc. Co., 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552.

[y] Under Civil Code, section 2307, declaring that authority may be conferred by subsequent ratification, a corporation retaining the consideration for a note is liable thereon, though at the meeting at which it was authorized a director was not present or notified; it appearing that he and the other directors owned all the stock, and that he must have subsequently had notice of the transaction.—Mills v. Boyle Mining Co., 132 Cal. 95, 64 Pac. 122.

[aa] On the issue whether a corporation impliedly ratified the unauthorized act of its president in indorsing to himself individually notes belonging to the corporation, it was shown that the secretary joined with the president in indorsing the name of the corporation on the notes. Knowledge of the transaction was concealed from the directors by the president and secretary, who made false statements on being asked whether the notes were being paid at maturity. Held not to show an implied ratification by the corporation.—Smith v. Pacific Vinegar etc. Works, 145 Cal. 352, 78 Pac. 550.

[bb] In a suit by a bank depositor against the bank and its president to establish the equitable title of the bank to certain shares of railroad stock, evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that purchase of stock by president was not ratified by bank.—Dundon v. McDonald, 146 Cal. 585, 80 Pac. 1034.

[cc] Where a president of a corporation agrees that the corporation shall assume the debts of a person, it cannot be held liable by a creditor of such person, no corporate action with relation to the contract being shown, but it being claimed simply that money paid on the contract came into possession of the corporation.—Hamilton v. Bates, 35 Pac. 304.

[dd] The fact that such ratification was a ratification of all the acts of the directors since the preceding stockholders' meeting, could not be urged against its validity as a ratification of such payment, where the objection was made to the adoption of the resolution at the meeting on the ground that it would cover such specific payment, since that phase of the question was thereby distinctly presented and voted on by the stockholders.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 61 Pac. 791.

[ee] Stockholders of a corporation may ratify the action of the board of directors in ratifying a payment to a director for services outside his duties as a director, and the fact that such director was present at the stockholders' meeting at which action thereon was taken did not invalidate it; a majority of the stockholders, independent of such interested stockholder, having voted in favor of the resolution.—Bassett v. Fairchild, 61 Pac. 791.

[hh] A corporation held to have ratified the issuance of a warehouse receipt by the secretary to himself.—Riley v. Loma Vista Ranch Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 686.

[a] The secretary of a corporation is acting as its agent where he solicits a stock subscription, turns over to the company a note given therefor, whereupon the president delivers the stock certificate to the purchaser, and such actions are thereafter ratified by the board.—Jefferson v. Hewitt, 103 Cal. 624, 37 Pac. 638.

§ 356. Rights Acquired by Corporation.

[a] Prior possession by corporation of ground in controversy, and the entry into the occupation by the defendants as trustees of the corporation, is sufficient evidence of title to support a judgment in favor of the stockholders.—Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 357. Notice to Officer or Agent as Notice to Company.

[a] In an action against a corporation, it cannot, for want of information, deny matters which are presumptively within the knowledge of any of its officers, though the officer verifying the answer is himself without any information on the subject.—Sloane v. Southern California Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 Pac. 320.

[b] A corporation, in the absence of fraud, is chargeable with the knowledge of its directors or officers that one of its officers is to receive a commission for the sale of property to the corporation, so as to estop it from objecting on that ground to the validity of a purchase price mortgage on such property. Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 134 Cal. 361, 66 Pac. 317.

[c] Where work is done wholly upon credit of director of corporation, apart from official relation to corporation, the doctrine of constructive notice to corporation of doing of work is inapplicable, and no lien therefor attaches to property of corporation.—Ayers v. Green Gold M. Co., 116 Cal. 335, 336, 48 Pac. 221.

[e] A corporation is charged with the knowledge of its president, acting as attorney in fact of one making an assignment to it.—Witter v. McCarthy Co., 43 Pac. 969.

[f] Notice to one who is secretary, bookkeeper, and director of a corporation, that a note given by it had been assigned, is notice to the corporation.—Love v. Anchor Raisin Vineyard Co. (Cal.) 45 Pac. 1044.

§ 358. Notice of Entries in Corporate Books.

[a] Where the certificate book of a corporation shows that stock is held by a person as trustee, the officers of the corporation are charged with notice that he does not hold the stock in his own right.—Brewster v. Hartley, 37 Cal. 15, 99 Am. Dec. 237.

[b] Notice of transaction entered in books of company is imparted to it.—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 311, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

§ 359. Notice Imputed to Persons Dealing with Corporation.

[a] If a course of action contrary to a by-law of a private corporation is acquiesced in by the shareholders the by-law is thereby waived, and will not affect the rights of persons dealing with the corporation in good faith, even though such persons may be shareholders, if they did not have actual notice of the by-law.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[b] In the absence of the common seal of a corporation, or of proof of facts whence the authority of the officers of a corporation to execute a conveyance may be inferred, such authority can only be established by resolution of the trustees entered in the proper book of the corporation, which should be in the office of the secretary.—Southern

[c] The authority of an agent of a corporation to make a contract on its behalf may be inferred from the general course of its business and from his admitted relations to the corporation.—Crowley v. Genesse Min. Co., 55 Cal. 273.

[d] There is no presumption that acts done by officers of a corporation are within the powers conferred on the officers where the acts are not within the powers conferred upon and usually exercised by them as part of the ordinary business of the corporation.—Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206, 225.

[e] Burden is on party claiming that corporate officers have exceeded their authority in executing mortgage in due form.—Schallard v. Eel River etc. Co., 70 Cal. 146, 11 Pac. 590.

[f] Mere fact that resolutions of directors do not appear in proper book of corporation should not disprove their existence to annul instrument executed in due form.—Schallard v. Eel River etc. Co., 70 Cal. 146, 11 Pac. 590.

[g] On an issue whether cattle purchased by the superintendent of a corporation had been purchased for the corporation or by him individually, that a note in part payment was signed by the superintendent individually was not conclusive as showing the sale to have been to him.—Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 130 Cal. 669, 63 Pac. 72.

[h] In an action by the assignee of a corporation on a contract with the corporation, the burden of showing want of authority to make the assignment is upon defendant.—McKee v. Cunningham (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 260.

[i] In an action by the assignee of a corporation on a contract with it, evidence held sufficient to show authority for the assignment.—McKee v. Cunningham (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 260.

[j] Proof of signing of contract by corporation by corporation held unnecessary.—Mebius & Drescher Co. v. Mills, 88 Pac. 917.

§ 361. —— Seal as Presumptive Evidence.

[a] The seal of a corporation, together with the signatures of its proper officers, raises a presumption that the deed was made with proper authority from the corporation. Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 543, 99 Am. Dec. 30.

[b] The seal of a corporation affixed to an instrument executed by an officer thereof is prima facie evidence of the authority of such officer to execute the instrument.—(Cal. 1884) Bliss v. Kaweah Canal etc. Co., 65 Cal. 502, 4 Pac. 507; (1892) Gutzeil v. Pennie, 95 Cal. 598, 30 Pac. 836; (1896) Andres v. Fry, 113 Cal. 124, 45 Pac. 534.

[c] Where instruments, purporting to be executed by a corporation, have affixed to them the corporate seal, and are proved to be signed by the proper officers, such officers must be presumed not to have exceeded their authority, and the burden to prove the contrary is on the party disputing the due execution of the instruments.—Schallard v. Eel River Steam Nav. Co., 70 Cal. 144, 11 Pac. 590.

[e] Where a note of a corporation is signed by the proper officers and sealed with the seal of the corporation, it is prima facie evidence of the authority of the officers, and of its due execution by them.—Mills v. Boyle Min. Co., 132 Cal. 95, 64 Pac. 122.

—— PROOF OF DUE EXECUTION, § 372.
EFFECT OF ULTRA VIRES SALE OF PROPERTY, § 373.

§ 362. Capacity to Acquire and Hold Land.

[a] Where land has been conveyed to a company, and there is an absence of proof as to whether the company is a corporation, or capable of taking and holding lands, the court will presume that the company had such power.—Hagar v. Yolo County, 47 Cal. 222.

[b] Land which a corporation cannot hold in its own name it cannot hold in the name of another, and, when a corporation cannot hold the legal title to land, it cannot take a beneficial interest in it.—Coleman v. San Rafael Turnpike Road Co., 49 Cal. 517.

[c] A corporation is presumed, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, to have the right to purchase and hold land.—(1885) People v. La Rue, 67 Cal. 526, 8 Pac. 84; (1893) Stockton Sav. Bank v. Staples, 98 Cal. 189, 32 Pac. 936.

[d] Where a corporation is legally organized for the specific purpose of dealing in land, its power to hold land is not limited.—Market St. Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

§ 363. —— In Joint and Common Tenancy.

[a] No one of the reasons which work want of capacity to hold as joint tenants would prevent corporations holding as tenants in common.—De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289.

[a] There can be no valid delivery of a deed to a corporation not in esse when the attempted delivery is made.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[b] The acceptance of a deed by the grantee will not be presumed from the beneficial character of the grant when the grantee named is a corporation having no legal existence.—Wall v. Mines, 130 Cal. 27, 62 Pac. 386.

[c] A deed to the corporation, though executed prior to its organization, took effect only when it was delivered to the corporation after the filing of its articles.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

[a] A corporation which has received a conveyance of property pursuant to an agreement of purchase made by promoters of the corporation, and which has paid a portion of the purchase money upon account, and given notes and mortgages as security for the residue of the purchase price, cannot maintain an action to have a judgment of foreclosure of the mortgages, and also the notes and mortgages, set aside, annulled, and canceled, on the ground of alleged fraud in their procurement, while retaining the conveyance to it of the property, and not paying or offering to pay the value of the property which it has received.—Buena Vista F. & V. Co. v. Tuohy, 107 Cal. 243, 40 Pac. 386.

§ 366. Power to Dispose of Property.

[a] All corporations capable of taking and holding property have the right of disposing of it as fully as natural persons, except so far as they are restrained by statute.—People v. Trustees of California College, 38 Cal. 166.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Sale by corporations of all their assets and effect thereof: 99 Am. Dec. 333, note.

Sale of all the property of corporations and the right of minority stockholders to assail: 103 Am. St. Rep. 548, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1138, 1139, 1265-1269; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1815-1818, § 1774.

§ 367. Power to Mortgage or Pledge.

[b] Authority to execute mortgage of corporate property can only be conferred by resolution of board of directors duly assembled.—Alta S. M. Co. v. Alta P. M. Co., 78 Cal. 632, 21 Pac. 373.

[c] Where the only authority upon which the president and secretary of a corporation acted in executing a note and mortgage in its name was a resolution passed at the preliminary meeting of stockholders before organization of the board of directors, such authorization is insufficient to support a finding of due and regular execution of the note and mortgage.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017. 45 Pac. 252.

[d] Under Constitution, article 12, section 11, providing that no corporation shall issue stock or bonds, except for money labor, or property, a corporation has the right to pledge its bonds as collateral security for money or property procured by it.—Illinois Trust etc. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 332, 49 Pac. 197.

[e] Stockholders cannot make mortgage or validate one that has not been previously authorized and executed by the board of directors.—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 310, 311, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

§ 368. Conveyance by Corporation—Who may Execute.

[a] The individuals who the are trustees of a corporation, in their official character as trustees, when not acting as a board, have no authority, independent of that conferred by the corporation, to execute a deed of the corporate property.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

How and by whom may be executed: 23 Am. Dec. 743, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1008-1016; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1823-1831, §§ 1778-1784.

§ 369. Who may Authorize Execution.

[a] The stockholders of a corporation have no power, as such, to authorize the sale of the corporate property, or to sell the same, either when collectively assembled as such in a stockholders' meeting or when acting individually.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

[b] Conferring authority to sell and convey the property of a corporation is the exercise of corporate power.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

[c] Power to sell and convey corporate property can be conferred only by the board of trustees when assembled and acting as such. The board may confer this power upon themselves as individual trustees or upon any other person or persons.—Gashwiler v. Willis, 33 Cal. 11, 91 Am. Dec. 607.

[a] Conveyance of real property by corporation must be under its corporate seal. It may alter its seal at pleasure, and may adopt as its own the private seal of an individual, but in the latter case the seal adopted must be used as that of the corporation.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[b] It is not necessary to state in a conveyance by a corporation that the seal used is that of the corporation. This fact may, in the absence of any declaration to the contrary, be presumed from the language of the conveyance or proved by evidence aliunde.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[c] If to a deed, purporting to be that of a corporation, a seal be affixed as that of the individual agent who signs it, such seal cannot be treated as that of the corporation. A declaration in the instrument that the seal is affixed as that of the agent is conclusive of its character and effect.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[d] If the grantor of a deed is in fact a corporation, and the corporation seal is affixed thereto, a statement in the deed that it is incorporated is not essential, and an objection upon appeal that a deed offered in evidence at the trial does not show upon its face that the grantor was a corporation, will not be considered where the only objection to its introduction taken at the trial was the general objection that the deed was incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, there being no proof that the grantor was not a corporation in fact, and no objection urged upon that ground in the court below.—Colton Land and Water Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

[a] Corporate acts, by which corporate property is alienated, if done pursuant to prescribed mode, and not being in themselves ultra vires, are, in point of mere law, binding upon the corporate title; and through that title equally binding upon the interest of the stockholders.—Wright v. Oroville M. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[b] The sale by a corporation of all its property and franchises, except its corporate franchise, does not carry with it shares of its own stock, which it had bought in for delinquent assessments, and had not authorized to be reissued.—Tulare Irr. Dist. v. Kaweah Canal etc. Co., 44 Pac. 662.

§ 372. —— Proof of Due Execution.

[a] One who claims under a deed without a seal, executed by the president of a corporation to himself, must show that it was executed under a resolution of the directors, entered on the records of the corporation, or ratified by such a resolution.—Fudickar v. East Riverside Irr. Dist., 109 Cal. 29, 41 Pac. 1024; Barney v. Phon, 117 Cal. 56, 48 Pac. 987.

[a] Where officers of a corporation receive into its treasury money obtained from a sale of its property which is void for want of power in the corporation to make it, the purchaser cannot recover the money back from the corporation, without its having appropriated the same to its own use, but the officers alone are liable therefor.—Herzo v. City of San Francisco, 33 Cal. 134.

[b] The conveyance of the real property of a corporation which is unauthorized and void cannot be validated by parol acts of ratification and acquiescence.—Fudickar v. East Riverside Irr. Dist., 109 Cal. 29, 41 Pac. 1024.

Contracts of corporations protected from impairment of obligation. See Constitutional Law, § 175.

§ 374. Capacity to Contract in General.

[a] A corporation, unless expressly prohibited by law or provisions of its charter, has power to make all contracts that are necessary and usual in the course of the business it transacts as means to enable it to effect the object of its creation.—Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

[b] Where the agreement made on behalf of the corporation to pay all reasonable charges of the physicians contains the words: "We reserve to ourselves the right to determine what is reasonable," such reservation is one which the company, under the circumstances shown, had a right to make, and the physician is entitled to recover only the amount offered him by the corporation, and a jury cannot award him any greater amount. Fraser v. San Francisco Bridge Co., 103 Cal. 79, 36 Pac. 1037.

[c] A contract making a water company the exclusive agent of a flume company for the sale and distribution of water within the corporate limits of a city to consumers of water, all sales of water being subject to the approval of the flume company, is not illegal, nor beyond the powers of either of the corporations; nor is such contract against public policy, as being a combination between the corporations for the purpose of creating a monopoly for the sale of water to the city and its inhabitants, nor as injuriously affecting the interests of the city or its inhabitants.—San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego Flume Co., 108 Cal. 549, 41 Pac. 495.

[a] An agreement among parties owning a mine, and who expected to incorporate themselves but did not then do so, that a person was entitled to two thousand five hundred shares of the stock of the company, held not to be the agreement of the corporation.—Morrison v. Gold Mountain Gold Min. Co., 52 Cal. 307; Hawkins v. Mansfield Gold Min. Co., 52 Cal. 307, 513.

[b] Corporation may acquire right to enforce contract made by its promoters in advance of its existence by other party's acceptance of performance by it.—Scadden etc. Co. v. Scadden 121 Cal. 38, 53 Pac. 440.

[c] Corporation may adopt contract made for it by its promoters in advance of its existence.—Scadden etc. Co. v. Scadden, 121 Cal. 38, 53 Pac. 440.

[a] Where a contract with a corporation has been executed and the corporation has enjoyed the benefits of the consideration, an obligation to pay for the benefits so received will be implied.—San Francisco Gas Co. v. City of San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453.

[b] Under act of 1861, section 10, concerning railroad corporations, which provides that no contract shall be binding upon the company unless made in writing, an action for personal services rendered such company, where there was no contract in writing, must be brought upon an implied promise, and the recovery must be limited to the value of the actual benefit received.—Foulke v. San Diego S. E. R. Co., 51 Cal. 365.

[c] Corporation may be bound by implied contracts within the scope of their authority.—Brown v. Board of Education of the City of Pomona, 103 Cal. 531, 37 Pac. 503.

[d] Where money is obtained by and disbursed through the proper financial officer of a corporation through the agency of a bank, and is applied to the proper use of the corporation, there arises from such use an implied promise of the corporation to repay the money to the bank.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

be signed with the corporate name, but the corporation may bind itself by an instrument signed only by its president and secretary, with their names and the description of their offices.—Rowe v. Table Mountain Water Co., 10 Cal. 441.

[b] Where the act creating a corporation prescribes to it a mode of contracting, it must observe such mode or the instrument will be void.—(Cal. 1860) McCracken v. City of San Francisco, 16 Cal. 591.

[c] Where power to contract exists, it may be exercised by corporation or its agent in the same way a natural person can contract, unless restrained by its charter to some particular mode of contracting.—McKiernan v. Lenzen, 56 Cal. 61.

Liability of officers dependent on manner of signing contracts: 39 Am. Rep. 299, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1001-1003, 1036-1053; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1859-1879, §§ 1796-1805.

[a] The plaintiff cannot recover against "the corporation of Bradley, Berdan & Co.," upon a written contract entered into between himself and "Bradley & Co.," as the contract was not made by the corporation.—Morrison v. Bradley, Berdan & Co., 5 Cal. 503.

[c] Corporation may make contracts within the scope of their general powers, without the use of the corporate seal.—McKiernan v. Lenzen, 56 Cal. 61.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Contracts from which seal may be omitted: 13 Am. Dec. 561, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1004-1022, 1043-1048; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1868-1875, §§ 1801-1803.

§ 380. Contracts of Employment.

[a] A mining corporation is not liable for services in watching the mine, performed on behalf of stockholders chiefly interested therein.—Brown v. Valley View Min. Co., 127 Cal. 630, 60 Pac. 424.

[b] A corporation, by its president, contracted with plaintiff to advertise and sell certain lands for a certain salary and commission. Below the signatures of the parties was a writing to the effect that a certain other company thereby agreed to plaintiff's employment, and would pay him half the salary mentioned. Plaintiff objected to the writing, but the president said that it was none of his affair. Thereafter such other company notified the president that it would not sign the writing, but the president had plaintiff assist him in selling the lands. Held, that the corporation intended to be bound in any event, and the company's failure to sign the writing did not render the contract incomplete.—Pettibone v. Lake View Town Co., 134 Cal. 227, 66 Pac. 218.

[a] Corporation cannot become a surety, nor ratify a note to secure debt of another. Hall v. Auburn T. Co., 27 Cal. 256, 87 Am. Dec. 66.

[b] A corporation may, for a valid consideration, guarantee the payment of a debt which it may directly contract to pay.—Low v. Central Pac. R. Co., 52 Cal. 53, 28 Am. Rep. 629.

§ 382. Loans and Investments.

[a] A loan of money upon mortgage security by corporation organized for purpose of constructing ditches for conveyance and sale of water is not necessarily an act exceeding its corporate powers. Such contract, if necessary to attain its general objects, and made as an incident to the exercise of its granted powers, is valid. In the absence of proof, its validity will be presumed.—Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

[b] The payment by the corporation of an assessment for the construction of a tunnel run for the purpose of working the mines of another mining company, of which the corporation was a stockholder, is an investment of capital, and not a current expense.—Excelsior Water etc. Co. v. Pierce, 90 Cal. 131, 27 Pac. 44.

[a] Where note executed by officers provides that only assets of corporation, and none of the property of stockholders, shall be liable, the corporation cannot raise the objection as affecting its own liability.—Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills, 6 Cal. 1.

[b] A superintendent of a mining corporation cannot bind the corporation by a promissory note, unless he has authority from the corporation to make it.—Beeman v. Lovett, 46 Cal. 387.

[c] A promissory note of a turnpike company is not void because made before it has filed a copy of its by-laws with the county recorder.—Forbes v. San Rafael etc. Co., 50 Cal. 340.

[d] Note executed by president is invalid unless authorized or ratified by directors.—Smith v. Los Angeles etc. Assn., 78 Cal. 292, 12 Am. St. Rep. 53, 20 Pac. 677.

[f] Promissory notes executed in the name of a corporation, by its secretary, who does not appear to have been authorized to execute them by any resolution of the board of directors, or to have been clothed with general power to execute promissory notes or other obligations on its behalf, do not bind the corporation, and are not admissible in evidence in support of causes of action based thereon.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[g] Where corporation requires its notes executed in certain manner, it may, by acquiescence, become liable if executed in some other manner.—Illinois etc. Sav. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 347, 49 Pac. 197.

[h] Note irregularly issued by corporation may be validated by acts in pais such as retaining benefits with notice and failure to rescind.—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 311, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

[i] Suit may be maintained on note originally invalid but made valid by conduct of company.—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 312, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

§ 385. Corporate Bonds.

[a] A bond containing no mention of a corporation as party to it, and signed by four persons, with nothing to designate them as agents of the corporation, is the individual obligation of those signing it; and extrinsic evidence is not admissible to change the character of the instrument, although given for the debt of the corporation.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Min. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[b] Corporation has a common-law right to issue a bond to pay a debt.—McLane v. Placerville etc. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 612.

[c] There is nothing criminal or against good morals in an attempt ultra vires of one corporation to acquire property and franchise of another, such as would affect validity of bonds issued by grantee.—Illinois etc. Sav. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 343, 49 Pac. 197.

[d] Engraved bonds substituted for lithographed bonds are regarded as mere duplicates or reissues of lithographed bonds for which they are exchanged.—Illinois etc. Sav. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 348, 49 Pac. 197.

[e] Bonds issued by a corporation having authority to borrow money and issue evidences of indebtedness are not invalidated by the want of power to make the mortgage by which they were in terms secured.—Illinois etc. Savings Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 332, 49 Pac. 197.

[f] Bonds issued by a street railroad corporation in part payment for the construction of its railroad are for the creation of a bonded indebtedness within the provision of section 359 of the Civil Code requiring the creation of the bonded indebtedness of any corporation to be approved by the vote of two-thirds of the entire capital stock; and in default of such approval no liability is created upon such bonds against the stockholders.—Boyd v. Heron, 125 Cal. 453, 58 Pac. 64.

[g] A stockholder claiming that bonds issued by the directors were void, because issued without notice to the stockholders, must allege that the stockholders did not consent to the meeting at which the indebtedness was created, as Civil Code, section 317, provides that such consent abrogates the necessity of notice.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[h] A stockholder of a corporation, which purchased a street railroad of another corporation and agreed to assume bonds issued by it, cannot raise the question of fraud in constructing the road, or attack the validity of the bonds. By divided court.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[b] Authority to president of corporation to negotiate its bonds carries with it power to pledge them.—Illinois etc. Sav. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 345, 49 Pac. 197.

[a] Contract of corporation is performable in place where circumstances, viewed in light of pertinent code provisions, indicate that parties intended it to be performed.—Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co., 141 Cal. 316, 74 Pac. 855.

§ 388. Imputed Notice of Corporation's Contract to Officer.

§ 389. Liability on Ultra Vires Contracts.

[a] Although where money or property is given to a corporation under a void contract the corporation is liable to account for the money or other property received, this rule cannot apply to a lessee of the corporation whose lease is void, and who is found to have made nothing from the lease.—Visalia Gas and Electric Light Co. v. Sims, 104 Cal. 326, 43 Am. St. Rep. 105, 37 Pac. 1042.

[b] A corporation must account for benefits received under an ultra vires contract, with interest on the amount found due.—Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29.

[c] The holders of bonds issued by a corporation for a purpose not within its charter powers, who did nothing to promote such purpose beyond parting with their property on the faith of such obligations, and who do not found their right of recovery on such illegal contract, are not affected by its illegality.—Illinois etc. Sav. Bank v. Pacific Ry. Co., 117 Cal. 332, 49 Pac. 197.

§ 390. Borrowing Money.

[b] Power of a corporation to create debts is treated as incident to express powers, under our laws, and not as itself one of the express powers.—Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills, 6 Cal. 1.

[d] The capital stock of a corporation is its sole basis of credit and as to creditors the corporation is presumed to have sought credit based upon its supposed capital stock at its par value, either actually paid in or due from the stockholders. Public policy requires that the fact, whether a particular creditor did trust the corporation on that basis, should not be inquired into.—Vermont Marble Co. v. Declez Granite Co., 135 Cal. 579, 87 Am. St. Rep. 143, 67 Pac. 1057.

[e] A corporation which, in payment for property, assumes the payment of bonds issued by another corporation, cannot retain the property, and claim the bonds were invalid as being overissued, in violation of Civil Code, section 309, prohibiting the contraction of debts beyond the subscribed capital stock. By divided court.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

[f] Shares of stock delivered by corporation to the stockholders of another corporation, as a part of the price of property purchased from it, are part of the former corporation's capital stock, within Civil Code, section 309, prohibiting the creation of debts by a corporation beyond its "subscribed capital stock." By divided court.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

§ 391. Limitation of Amount of Indebtedness.

[a] The third section of act of 1850, concerning corporations, prohibits them from issuing bills, notes, or other evidences of debt upon loans or for circulation as money. The act contemplates that corporations will incur debt and limits their power to incur debts to the amount of the capital stock paid in. Held that corporations are not prohibited from borrowing money and issuing the usual evidences of debt therefor.—Magee v. Mokelumne Hill Co., 5 Cal. 258.

[b] Civil Code, section 309, applies to all subscribed capital stock, whether paid in or not, and regardless of disposition made of it; and debts do not include capital stock paid for corporate property.—Moore v. Lent, 81 Cal. 502, 22 Pac. 875; Shea v. Lent, 22 Pac. 870.

[c] The execution of non-negotiable notes and mortgages by a corporation, the consideration of which is the promise of the mortgagees to advance money and deliver lumber as needed by the corporation to improve the mortgaged property, though given for a debt, larger than the subscribed capital stock of the corporation, is not prohibited by Civil Code, section 309.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara Land etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[d] Non-negotiable notes and mortgages, executed by a corporation, the consideration of which is the promise of the mortgagees to advance money and deliver lumber as needed by the corporation to improve the mortgaged property, are not "bonded indebtedness," in the sense of Constitution, article 12, section 11, forbidding, except on certain conditions, the increase by corporations of their bonded indebtedness.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[e] The fact that notes and mortgages were executed by a corporation for indebtedness beyond the subscribed capital stock of the corporation, contrary to the provisions of section 309 of the Civil Code, does not render such notes and mortgages void.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[f] Under the facts, held, that the by-law which forbade the directors creating any indebtedness exceeding the amount of the subscribed capital stock was waived.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara Land etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[g] Under Civil Code, section 473, providing that the consolidation of railroad companies thereby authorized shall not relieve such companies from their joint liabilities, the obligations of the constituent companies, though not primary liabilities of the consolidated company, are charges on its property, which such company may properly consider as debts, within section 309, forbidding a corporation to create debts in excess of its subscribed capital stock.—Market St. Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

§ 392. Priority of Corporate Creditors Over Stockholders.

[a] Corporate creditors have prior right over stockholders to capital and assets other than surplus profits.—People v. Savings Union, 72 Cal. 204, 13 Pac. 498.

[a] Authorization to execute mortgage must be in writing (Civ. Code, 2309).—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 311, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

[b] Mortgages must be made by directors with consent of two-thirds of stockholders.—Curtin v. Salmon etc. Co., 141 Cal. 310, 99 Am. St. Rep. 75, 74 Pac. 851.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 2957, subdivision 1, providing that a mortgage of personal property shall be void as against creditors of the mortgagor, etc., unless accompanied by a good faith affidavit, by all the parties thereto, such affidavit need not be executed by all the members of a corporation or partnership where a corporation or partnership is a party to the mortgage.—Alferitz v. Scott, 130 Cal. 474, 62 Pac. 735.

§ 395. —— Form, Requisites and Validity.

[b] Where the body of a note expressed the promise, and the mortgage expressly purported to be the mortgage of the "S. B. Land, Building & Improvement Company" (its proper name), but the note is signed by the president and secretary of the "S. B. Land & Improvement Company," and the mortgage is signed by the same parties as president and secretary of the "Land & Improvement Company," and both the note and the mortgage were attested by the corporate seal, there can be no doubt as to what corporation executed the mortgage.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara Land etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[c] Where a corporation executed two nonnegotiable notes and two mortgages, the consideration therefor being the promise of the mortgagees to advance money and deliver lumber as needed and ordered by the corporation for the improvement of the mortgaged property, and the money was advanced and the lumber delivered, and there was no fraud on the part of the mortgagees, such indebtedness was not fictitious.—Underhill v. Santa Barbara Land etc. Co., 93 Cal. 300, 28 Pac. 1049.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 305, providing that corporate powers must be exercised by a board of directors "to be elected" from among the holders of the stock of the corporation, a mortgage executed by a corporation's president and secretary, in pursuance of a resolution of its board of directors who were named in the articles of incorporation as its board of directors for the first year is valid. Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[e] Under Statutes of 1897, page 96, chapter 92, providing for attaching the certificate of the secretary to mortgages on the property of a corporation, the evidence of a ratification by the stockholders is not required to be attached to a mortgage of a corporation to give it validity, the ratification being complete on the adoption of a resolution therefor. Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[b] Civil Code, sections 290, 305, 308, provide that the minimum number of directors of a corporation shall be five. Defendant corporation which was organized with a board of five directors, executed a mortgage at a time when a vacancy in the board reduced it to four. After the vacancy was filled the mortgage was ratified by the whole board. Held, that the subsequent ratification of the mortgage by the full board validated it.—Porter v. Lassen County Land etc. Co., 127 Cal. 261, 59 Pac. 563.

[a] A mortgage given to secure a bond for a corporate debt, naming, as parties of the first part, four persons, "president, directors, and members of" the company, concluding: "In witness whereof the said parties of the first part hereunto set their hands and affix their seals," and signed by the said four persons with their private seals only, held to be the seals and deed of those signing it only, and not that of the corporation.—Richardson v. Scott River etc. Min. Co., 22 Cal. 150.

[b] A mortgage purporting to be a mortgage of a corporation, but signed by its trustees individually, and not in the name of the corporation by its trustees, is not a mortgage by the corporation.—Love v. Sierra Nevada Lake etc. Min. Co., 32 Cal. 639, 91 Am. Dec. 602.

[a] Where a mortgagee of a mining corporation's property was the general manager of the corporation while certain persons performed labor on the mining ground, and such labor was performed with the knowledge of such mortgage, or even at his request, the lien of his mortgage, which was a matter of public record long prior to the time when the services were rendered, was not postponed to the liens acquired by virtue of such labor.—Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[a] If certain out of many creditors, secured by one mortgage of corporate property, form a new corporation, and take the debtor's property, covenanting out of the net proceeds to pay certain debts not their own, the mortgage is canceled as to them, and stands only as to those mortgagees who do not join the new corporation.—Tyler v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 212.

[a] Mortgage held to import that bank mentioned therein was a corporation, so that, in a suit by the bank to foreclose its claim under a mortgage, the recital furnished prima facie evidence of plaintiff's corporate character.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 Pac. 1080.

[b] Action to foreclose mortgage held not action in relation to property purchased or located in the county, within Civil Code, section 299, relating to power of corporations.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Field, 146 Cal. 644, 80 Pac. 1080.

[c] In a mortgage foreclosure suit against a corporation, evidence examined, and held sufficient to show ratification by the stockholders of the mortgage on which the foreclosure was based.—Middleton v. Arastraville Min. Co., 146 Cal. 219, 79 Pac. 889.

[a] Where a mortgage is given to secure the separate debts of several persons as mortgagees it is a several security, and may be enforced by each creditor, as in case of a separate mortgage. But where other parties are interested in the property, the court will require them to be brought in before ordering a sale of foreclosue.—Tyler v. Yreka Water Co., 14 Cal. 212.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 402. —— Pleading in Foreclosure Suit.

[a] In an action to foreclose a mortgage made for a corporation by its president without authority, where the complaint states facts showing ratification of the president's act, and the answer simply denies the "due execution" of the mortgage for want of authority, but does not deny the facts stated, showing a ratification, plaintiffs are entitled to judgment without proof of authorty.—Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67, 34 Pac. 527.

[b] In an action to foreclose a mortgage made by a corporation on its brewery plant, a denial in his answer, by its assignee for the benefit of creditors, on information and belief, that certain appliances connected with property described in the mortgage were attached to the realty and were fixtures, was insufficient, since he must be presumed to be in possession and to have knowledge as to such fact.—Gribble v. Columbus Brewing Co., 100 Cal. 67, 34 Pac. 527.

[c] A mortgage given by the president of a corporation under a resolution insufficient to authorize him to do so was subsequently ratified by the directors. Held, that, in an action to foreclose, it was not necessary to specially plead the ratification.—Boggs v. Lakeport Agricultural Park Assn., 111 Cal. 354, 43 Pac. 1106.

fees secured by it, none should be allowed on foreclosure.—Schallard v. Eel River etc. Co., 70 Cal. 147, 11 Pac. 590.

[b] In an action to foreclose, a corporation cannot object to the allowance of attorney's fees, provided for in its mortgage, on the ground that the resolution authorizing its execution did not authorize payment of such fees, where its directors had passed a resolution authorizing the execution of a mortgage, "to contain covenants, terms, and provisions set forth in a draft of such mortgage submitted" to them by the proposed mortgagee, which provided for such fees.—Hubbard v. University Bank of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 684, 58 Pac. 297.

[a] In an action by stockholders to enjoin the foreclosure of a trust deed securing bonds issued by a railroad corporation, and to compel a return of the bonds, it was alleged by plaintiffs that the bonds had been fraudulently transferred without consideration. Held, that, since the facts alleged were available as a defense to the foreclosure action, an injunction could not be granted.—Waymire v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 646, 44 Pac. 1086.

§ 405. —— Setting Aside Foreclosure Decree.

[a] Defendants, having a contract for land at five dollars an acre, employed agents to organize a corporation to purchase it at twenty-five dollars. It was represented to the subscribers for stock in such corporation that the contract held by defendants was for the purchase of the land at twenty-five dollars an acre, the lowest price at which it could be obtained; and it was concealed from them that one of defendants, a large subscriber to the corporation, was interested in the contract, and that the organizers were defendants' agents. The corporation gave a mortgage for part of the price, which was foreclosed, defendants buying in the land and obtaining a deficiency judgment. Held, in an action to set aside the foreclosure decree and the judgment, and to cancel the notes and mortgage, that the fact that the decree asked for by plaintiff was more disadvantageous to defendants than to the actual organizers of the corporation, who had received cash commissions for their services, did not affect plaintiff's right to such relief. § 406. Nature and Grounds of Corporate Liability.

[a] Corporations are liable for torts of their agents and employees within the scope of their authority.—Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48, 91 Am. Dec. 672; (1873) Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 47 Cal. 207.

Liability of corporations for torts: 5 Am. Dec. 42, 13 Am. Dec. 596, notes.

Defense of ultra vires is not available in favor of action for negligence: 52 Am. Rep. 358, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1203; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1949-1951, § 1899.

[a] An order of the president of a corporation, drawn upon himself as president, to transfer to a person a certain number of shares of stock of the corporation, he holding all its stock as trustee, followed by the refusal of himself and the secretary to deliver the stock, does not amount to a conversion of the stock by the corporation.—Morrison v. Gold Mountain Gold Min. Co., 52 Cal. 306.

§ 408. Willful or Malicious Act.

[a] The directors are the chosen representatives of the corporation, and constitute, for all purposes of dealing with others, the corporation. What they do within the scope of the objects and purposes of the corporation, the corporation does. If they do an injury to another, even though such injury necessarily involves in its commission a malicious intent, the corporation must be deemed by imputation to be guilty of the wrong, and answerable for it, as an individual would be in such case.—Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48, 91 Am. Dec. 672.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Liability of corporations to actions for malicious prosecution; 34 Am. Rep. 495, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1210-1218; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 1959-1961, § 1904.

[a] A corporation aggregate has the capacity to compose and publish a libel, and by reason thereof, when done, becomes liable to an action for damages by the person of and concerning whom the words are composed and published.—Maynard v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 34 Cal. 48, 91 Am. Dec. 672.

§ 410. Liability for Exemplary Damages.

Foreign corporations. See post, § 488.

[a] Damages arising from the act of a director named in the articles of incorporation, whereby the formation of the corporation was prevented, cannot be recovered in an action by the alleged corporation, as it is not in esse.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

§ 412. —— De Facto Corporations.

[a] In an action by a de facto corporation, claiming in good faith to be a corporation under the laws of this state, and doing business as such, held, that the question of the due incorporation of the association could not be inquired into.—Bakersfield Town Hall Assn. v. Chester, 55 Cal. 98.

[b] The trustees of a corporation de facto can sue in its corporate name until its existence is questioned by a direct proceeding on information of the attorney general.—First Baptist Church v. Branham, 90 Cal. 22, 27 Pac. 60.

[c] A de facto corporation may sue and assert its corporate character as against the world, except in a direct proceeding by the attorney general to test its right to its franchise.—People's Ditch Co. v. '76 Land etc. Co., 44 Pac. 176.

§ 413. —— Filing Articles as Conditions Precedent.

[b] Civil Code, section 299, which prohibits a corporation from maintaining or defending any action relating to its property, or the rents, issues, or profits thereof, unless it shall have previously filed a certified copy of its articles of incorporation in the county where such property is situated, does not apply to an action against a corporation for work and labor done at its request; and hence in such an action it is error to render judgment for plaintiff on the pleadings simply for the reason that the answer fails to allege that defendant has filed a copy of its articles of incorporation under the above section.—Weeks v. Garibaldi South Gold Min. Co., 73 Cal. 599, 15 Pac. 302.

[c] An objection that defendant corporation is not entitled to defend the suit because it has not complied with Civil Code, section 299, requiring that every corporation shall file a copy of its articles of incorporation in every county where it holds property, and on failing to do so it shall not maintain or defend any proceeding in relation to such property, will be deemed waived unless taken during the trial.—Lobory v. Los Angeles Orphan Asylum, 97 Cal. 270, 32 Pac. 231.

[d] Where the properly certified copy of the articles of incorporation is filed in the county where the property affected by a suit in favor of the corporation is situated, though such filing be after the commencement of the suit, but before the filing of a plea in abatement of the suit upon the ground that it was not filed, such plea thereafter interposed is unavailing to prevent a further maintenance of the action.—California Sav. etc. Soc. v. Harris, 111 Cal. 133, 43 Pac. 525.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 299, and the statute requiring a corporation to file its certificate of incorporation in the county in which its principal place of business is located, a corporation held entitled to maintain an action to quiet title to certain real estate.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 1049.

§ 414. Right of Action—On Contract.

[a] An action on an implied promise may be maintained against a corporation aggregate. Hunt v. City of San Francisco, 11 Cal. 250.

[b] Agreement of corporators to divide capital stock of a company to be incorporated may be enforced against the corporation.—Chater v. San Francisco etc. Co., 19 Cal. 219.

[c] If the president of a corporation signs, as president, a paper stating that the person named in it has a credit for a given sum for work done for the corporation the instrument itself does not constitute a cause of action against the corporation or against the persons composing the corporation.—Curtiss v. Murry, 26 Cal. 633.

§ 415. —— For Conversion.

[a] A person who has not the legal title to the stock of a corporaton cannot maintain an action against the corporation for converting it.—Morrison v. Gold Mt. G. M. Co., 52 Cal. 306.

[a] In the absence of any law defining the residence of a corporation, it is not necessarily where its principal place of business is, and an action against the corporation to condemn land should be brought in the county where the land lies.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 65 Cal. 394, 409, 4 Pac. 344, 388; Thomas v. Placerville Gold Quartz Min. Co., 65 Cal. 600, 4 Pac. 641.

[b] When the affidavit on which an application for change of venue is based states that the principal place of business of defendant corporation is San Francisco, such place is its "residence," as the term is used in Code of Civil Procedure, section 395, which fixes the "residence" of defendants in certain cases as the place where the cause must be tried subject to change of venue.—Cohn v. Central Pac. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488, 12 Pac. 498.

[d] In an action against a corporation to redeem a mortgage the liability or obligation of the corporation to grant a redemption will be deemed to have arisen, within the meaning of section 16 of article 12 of the constitution, in the county in which the mortgaged premises are situated, when the only allegation in the pleadings as to the residence of the mortgagors or the place where the mortgage was made is a recital in the mortgage that the mortgagors were residents of that county, and a certificate of a notary of that county annexed to the mortgage that the same was acknowledged before him.—Baker v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 73 Cal. 182, 14 Pac. 686.

[e] Constitution, article 12, section 16, provides that corporations may be sued in the county where the contract is made or to be performed, or where the liability arises or breach occurs, or where its principal place of business is, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as in other cases. Article 6, section 5, provides that the superior courts shall have jurisdiction in all cases in which the demand exceeds three hundred dollars, and their process shall extend to all parts of the state. Held, in an action against a national bank, commenced in a county other than those mentioned in section 16, to recover six thousand dollars on a contract for building it a house in the county of its principal place of business, that the court had jurisdiction of the person of defendant as well as the subject matter of the action.—Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 491, 24 Pac. 157.

[f] The principal place of business of a corporation is its residence, within the meaning of that term as used in section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure fixing the place of trial of actions.—Cohn v. Central Pacific R. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488, 12 Pac. 498.

[g] In an action against a corporation for breach of contract to convey land on full payment of the price, it appeared that defendant's principal place of business was in S. county, but that it had an office in K. county, where payments were to be made. Held, that the breach occurred in K. county, within Constitution, article 12, section 16, allowing a corporation to be sued in the county where the breach occurs.—Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196, 46 Pac. 926.

[h] Section 16 of article 12 of the constitution, which provides for the venue of actions against corporations, and permits the action, at the election of the plaintiff, to be prosecuted "in the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated, subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial, as in other cases," is self-executing and applies to actions of tort, as well as those founded in contract. Though it is in the nature of a code provision for procedure, it cannot be repealed or limited in its operation by statute, and any statute inconsistent therewith must give way.—Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586, 66 Pac. 856.

be performed, or where the liability arises, or the breach occurs, or in the county where its principal place of business is, applies to actions in tort, as well as those on contract.—Lewis v. South Pac. Coast R. Co., 66 Cal. 209, 5 Pac. 79.

[b] A corporation may be sued in county where its breach of obligation occurred or where it has its principal place of business.—Chase v. South etc. R. R., 83 Cal. 473, 23 Pac. 532.

[c] An action by stockholders of a corporation against other stockholders, the directors, and a mortgagee, to set aside the mortgage as fraudulently given, by the directors for too large an amount, and to determine the amount of indebtedness to the mortgagee, is one which the mortgagee may have tried in the county of his residence, it being a personal action and he being the only defendant against whom relief is sought.—Bailey v. Cox, 102 Cal. 333, 36 Pac. 650.

[d] An action against a corporation for personal injuries may be begun in the county where the injuries were received, though defendant's principal place of business is in another county.—Jager v. California Bridge Co., 104 Cal. 542, 38 Pac. 413.

[e] An action for breach of a contract of a corporation to convey land situated in a county other than that of its principal place of business is triable at the election of the plaintiff in the county where the contract was made or was to be performed and where it appears that the contract was made and was to be performed in the county where the land is situated, an action brought therein cannot be removed for trial, upon motion of the defendant, to the county in which its principal place of business is situated.—Ivey v. Kern County Land Co., 115 Cal. 196, 46 Pac. 926.

Residence of corporations for jurisdictional purposes: 33 Am. Dec. 399, note. See, also, Cent. Dig., cols. 1984-1993, §§ 1935-1946.

[a] Corporation cannot claim change of venue of action against it to its principal place of business as its residence.—California Southern R. Co. v. Southern Pac. Ry. Co., 65 Cal. 394, 409, 601, 4 Pac. 344.

[b] Under Constitution, article 12, section 16, a railroad company, the principal place of business of which is in San Francisco, when sued in Los Angeles county for damages for breach of a contract made in San Francisco, to be performed out of the state, and the breach of which occurred outside of the state, is entitled to a change of venue to San Francisco county.—Cohn v. Central Pac. R. Co., 71 Cal. 488, 12 Pac. 498.

[c] Section 16 of article 12 of the constitution permits corporation to be sued in certain counties other than that of its residence at option of the plaintiff and to deny corporation absolute right to change venue when sued in such other counties. Authorities reviewed.—Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 82 Cal. 495-498, 24 Pac. 157.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 305, giving a defendant a right to have the action tried in the county where he resides, gives a corporation no absolute right to a change of venue to the county where its principal office is situated, when sued in one of the counties named in Constitution, article 12, section 16, providing that corporations may be sued in the county where the contract was made, or the liability arose, or the breach occurred, or where its principal place of business is situated.—Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47, 36 Pac. 395; Burness v. W. R. Strong Co., 36 Pac. 396.

[e] The place of residence of a corporation is in the county where it has its principal place of business; but a corporation defendant cannot insist upon a change of the place of trial to the place of its residence, where it has been sued in the county where its liability arose.—Trezevant v. W. R. Strong Co., 102 Cal. 47, 36 Pac. 395.

[f] In an action against a corporation and a third person, a motion by the latter for a change of venue to the county of his residence must be decided before plaintiff can be allowed to dismiss the action as to such third person.—Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56, 39 Pac. 209.

[g] In an action brought in the city and county of San Francisco, between corporations, each of which has its principal place of business therein, to recover damages for injury to real property situated in Kern county, the defendant is not entitled to demand, as matter of right, to have the cause tried in that county, under section 392 of the Code of Civil Procedure, without any showing of grounds "to change the place of trial, as in other cases," as contemplated by section 16 of article 12 of the Constitution. Miller & Lux v. Kern County Land Co., 134 Cal. 586, 66 Pac. 856.

[a] Constitution, article 12, section 16, providing that a corporation may be sued in the county where the contract is made, or where the breach occurs, etc., is merely permissive; and by joining another defendant, whose residence is in a different county, plaintiff waives the benefit of such provision.—Griffin & Skelley Co. v. Magnolia & Healdsburg Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378, 40 Pac. 495.

[b] The plaintiff is entitled, as of right, to the privilege given by section 16 of article 12 of the constitution to sue a corporation in the county where the contract was made only when the corporation is the sole defendant in the action; and, if he chooses to join as defendants in the action others whose residence is in a different county, he waives the benefit of the provision, and cannot deprive them of a right held by them to have the action tried in the county of their residence.—Griffin & Skelley Co. v. Magnolia &

[d] Where a plaintiff commenced an action against a corporation for damages resulting from a breach of contract, in the county where the contract was made, and joined as a codefendant a stockholder in the corporation, to recover his proportionate amount of the corporate liability, such stockholder being a resident of another county in which the corporation has its principal place of business, upon an affidavit showing those facts, the defendants are entitled to a change of the place of the trial to the latter county.—Griffin & Skelley Co. v. Magnolia & Healdsburg Fruit Cannery Co., 107 Cal. 378, 40 Pac. 495.

[a] Corporation is recognized in law only by its corporate name, and must sue and be sued by its corporate name.—Curtiss v. Murry, 26 Cal. 633.

[b] If several persons associate themselves together and form corporation they cannot be sued as individuals for the debts of the corporation.—Curtiss v. Murry, 26 Cal. 633.

[d] Name of an insurance company does not raise a presumption of incorporation.—Briggs v. McCullough, 36 Cal. 542.

§ 421. Effect of Change of Name.

[a] Where a corporation changes its name after making a contract, a suit on the contract should be brought by or against the corporation by its new name.—Cumberland College v. Ish, 22 Cal. 641.

[b] Where an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien was brought against certain persons who were alleged to compose a firm, and they answered, setting up the fact of their incorporation and alleging title to the property, a judgment against the corporation was erroneous, inasmuch as it had never been made a party to the action.—Rousseau v. Hall, 55 Cal. 164.

[c] In an action against a corporation to compel the execution and delivery of a certificate of certain shares of stock which stand on the books of the company in the name of another, from whom plaintiff claims title under a mortgage and sheriff's deed in foreclosure proceedings, the mortgagor is not a necessary party.—Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537, 9 Am. St. Rep. 245, 18 Pac. 658.

§ 423. Process—Service.

[a] Service on party in possession of property, who does not appear to be one of the officers named in the Practice Act as an officer on whom process may be served, will not entitle the plaintiff to a judgment by default.—Aiken v. Quartz Rock Co., 6 Cal. 186.

[b] Under Practice Act, section 29, providing that, in a suit against a corporation, the summons shall be served on the president, secretary, cashier, or managing agent, service "on the party in possession of the property," who does not appear to be one of the officers named, will not entitle plaintiff to a judgment by default.—Aiken v. Quartz Rock Mariposa Gold Min. Co., 6 Cal. 186.

[e] Under Practice Act, section 125, subdivision 5, a service of process on the teller of a bank is not sufficient.—Kennedy v. Hibernian Savings etc. Soc., 38 Cal. 151.

[f] Service upon president of corporation de jure, who has not resigned, is valid, though removed from county and not acting.—Eel River etc. Co. v. Struve, 41 Cal. 616.

[g] Where the officers of the company concealed themselves to prevent service on them, service on one who has repeatedly appeared as an attorney of the company is sufficient.—Golden Gate Hydraulic Const. Min. Co. v. Superior Court of Yuba, 65 Cal. 187, 3 Pac. 628.

same on the president and secretary of the company, is prima facie evidence that the persons named in the return were such officers.—Rowe v. Table Mountain Water Co., 10 Cal. 441.

[b] An affidavit of service of summons, reciting that the summons was served "personally" on the managing agent of the "above-named defendant" corporation, instead of on the corporation, sufficiently shows service on the corporation; the agent not being a party defendant.—Keener v. Eagle Lake Land etc. Co., 110 Cal. 627, 43 Pac. 14.

§ 425. Appearance by Attorney.

[a] When a corporation had not done business for some time, and one of the stockholders was dead, attorneys employed by the stockholder, acting for the owners of a majority of the stock, were authorized to sue in the name of the corporation.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

[a] Ordinarily equity courts have no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the property of a corporation in aid of a suit prosecuted against it by a private person. Such power can only be derived from statute. Code, section 564, does not confer it.—La Societe Francaise v. District Court, 53 Cal. 495.

[b] A court has no power, pending an action against a corporation, to displace the corporate management, and put in its place a receiver, in the absence of a statute giving it such power.—Fischer v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 110 Cal. 129, 42 Pac. 561, distinguishing Fisher v. Superior Court of Tuolumne County (1893) 98 Cal. 67, 32 Pac. 875.

[a] Defendant executed a note to a corporation, containing an agreement that "no change in the name, character, or management" of the corporation should affect the liability of the maker. The corporation changed its name before the action, which was brought in its new name, and the complaint stated this fact, and that the note was plaintiff's property. Held, that a good cause of action was stated, and that a demurrer could not be sustained.—Cumberland College v. Ish, 22 Cal. 641.

[b] Where a corporation, sued by a wrong name, answers by its correct name the complaint may be amended.—Mahon v. San Rafael Turnpike Road Co., 49 Cal. 270.

[c] Complaint against a corporation must aver its corporate existence in each count.—Loup v. California So. Ry., 63 Cal. 97.

[e] Allegation that plaintiff was employed by corporation through its secretary is sufficient though it would be better practice to omit mention of secretary.—Sullivan v. Grass Valley etc. Co., 77 Cal. 421, 19 Pac. 757.

[f] In an action by a corporation against a former stockholder to recover money paid him by its president for his stock on an ultra vires purchase thereof for plaintiff, the complaint does not state a cause of action if it fails to show that plaintiff has returned or offered to return the stock.—Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Wickersham, 99 Cal. 655, 34 Pac. 444.

[g] Under an allegation that a contract was made by defendant, it may be shown that it was made by ratification of the unauthorized acts of its officers.—Blood v. La Serena Land etc. Co., 113 Cal. 221, 41 Pac. 1017.

§ 428. —— Allegation of Corporate Existence or Capacity to Sue.

[a] The allegation that plaintiff is a corporation under the laws of the state is sufficient to establish the legal capacity to sue.—California State Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258, 65 Am. Dec. 511.

[b] When corporation is sued by its corporate name, its corporate existence is thereby admitted.—People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 364, 18 Pac. 85, 19 Pac. 693.

[c] Corporation plaintiff need not allege that it has filed articles as required by section 299, Civil Code.—Ontario State Bank v. Tibbits, 80 Cal. 69, 22 Pac. 66.

[f] A mining company made defendant in the action under which plaintiff derives no right need not be alleged in the complaint to be a corporation; and where such company appears and answers by that name, it will not be allowed to say that it was not properly named in the complaint, or that the complaint did not show how it came to bear that name. Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155, 71 Pac. 510.

[g] An allegation in the answer that defendant as a corporation was duly, regularly, and legally formed, and that it has continued to act as such, is a mere averment of a legal conclusion, and raises no issue.—People v. Lowden, 8 Pac. 66.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Necessity of averring corporate existence: 35 Am. St. Rep. 289; 29 Am. Dec. 375, notes. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1347-1363; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 2084-2118, §§ 2052-2081.

§ 429. —— Denial of Existence or Capacity to Sue.

[a] An objection that it does not appear, from the complaint, that plaintiff was ever duly created a corporation, goes to its legal capacity to sue, and not to the sufficiency of the facts stated to constitute a cause of action.—Swamp etc. Dist. No. 110 v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403.

[b] Failure of the complaint to show that plaintiff suing as a corporation had the legal capacity to sue can only be taken advantage of by answer.—Swamp etc. Dist. No. 110 v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403.

[d] Denial of plaintiff's corporate existence and capacity to sue does not raise issue of failure to file corporate articles.—Ontario St. Bank v. Tibbits, 80 Cal. 70, 22 Pac. 66.

[e] Failure of corporation plaintiff to file articles under section 229, Civil Code, can be set up only by special plea.—South Yuba etc. Co. v. Rosa, 80 Cal. 336, 22 Pac. 222.

[f] Failure of corporation to file its articles as required by section 299, Civil Code, is matter of abatement.—Ontario St. Bank v. Tibbits, 80 Cal. 70, 22 Pac. 66.

[g] The allegations in the answer that "plaintiff never was a corporation duly or otherwise organized under the laws of this state, nor a copartnership, nor an individual," do not raise the issue that the corporation had not filed its articles of incorporation in the county, as required by Civil Code, section 299.—Ontario State Bank v. Tibbits, 80 Cal. 68, 22 Pac. 66.

[h] Question of want of corporate capacity to sue can be raised only by a plea in abatement.—California Saving etc. Soc. v. Harris, 111 Cal. 133, 43 Pac. 525.

[b] A corporation cannot deny for want of sufficient information and belief, if the matters alleged are presumptively within the knowledge of any of its officers, though the officer verifying the answer is himself without any information or belief on the subject.—Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co., 11 Cal. 668, 44 Pac. 320.

[a] It is presumed that purchase by a corporation is necessary for its operations.—Shaver v. Bear River etc. Co., 10 Cal. 396.

[b] In an action brought against a corporation by the payee of a note executed by its officers in the name of the corporation, for a debt due the payee from a third person, and having no relation to the business of the corporation, evidence that the note was not given for the debt of the corporation is admissible under an answer denying the execution of the note.—Hall v. Auburn Turnpike Co., 27 Cal. 255, 87 Am. Dec. 75.

[c] Testimony tending to show that company is corporation de facto dispenses with strict proof of the corporate character, and precludes the party offering it from afterward disputing the company's right to act as a corporation.—Rondell v. Fay, 32 Cal. 354.

[d] In an action against a private corporation on a contract made in its behalf by one purporting to act as its agent, parol evidence is admissible to show such person's authority to act as its agent, unless it is compelled by its charter to appoint its agents by deed or resolution.—Carey v. Philadelphia etc. Petroleum Co., 33 Cal. 694.

[e] If an action of trespass is brought against a corporation for damages alleged to have been done by the corporation to the plaintiff's land, the defendant may introduce in evidence its articles of incorporation for the purpose of showing that it was not incorporated till after the alleged trespasses, or a part of them, were committed.—Berry v. S. F. & N. P. R. R. Co., 50 Cal. 435.

[f] When the common seal of a corporation is affixed to an instrument in writing, purporting to be executed by it, and the signatures of the proper officers of the corporation are affixed to it and proved, courts will presume that the officers did not exceed their authority, and the seal itself is prima facie evidence that it was affixed by proper authority.—Southern Cal. Col. Assn. v. Bustamente, 52 Cal. 193.

[h] Abridgment by charter or nature of business of power presumed to exist must be shown affirmatively by party claiming that contract is ultra vires.—Evans v. Bailey, 66 Cal. 112; People v. La Rue, 67 Cal. 526, 4 Pac. 1089.

[i] In an action by a corporation brought in the county in which its original articles of incorporation are filed, a copy certified by the Secretary of State of the certified copy of such articles on file in his office is admissible in evidence to prove the organization of the corporation.—Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485, 8 Pac. 22; Fresno etc. Irr. Co. v. Warner, 72 Cal. 379.

[j] Corporate seal may be shown to have been affixed to deed without proper authority.—Vaca Valley etc. R. R. v. Mansfield, 84 Cal. 566, 24 Pac. 145.

[k] A promoter of the corporation, being an active party to the litigation, his statements and admissions pertaining to the subject matter of the action wherever and whenever made, are competent evidence against him.—Burbank v. Dennis, 101 Cal. 90, 35 Pac. 444.

[l] Records of a corporation showing authority from the board of directors given to its president and secretary to execute a note, and that the one who signed the note as secretary and attached to it the corporate seal, authenticated the record of the meeting of the directors conferring the authority, and the records of the other meetings for a considerable time prior and subsequent to the execution of the note, are sufficient to sustain a finding that he was secretary of the corporation when the note was executed, and was duly authorized as such to execute it.—Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129, 54 Pac. 594.

[m] It is presumed that the board of directors of a corporation consists of at least five, since the code requires at least that number. —Barrell v. Lake View Land Co., 122 Cal. 129, 54 Pac. 594.

[n] Where in a suit on a note of a corporation defendant claimed that it was not properly executed, because one of the directors was not notified and was not present at the meeting at which it was authorized, but the resolution of the board of directors showing the nature of the transaction in which the note was given, authorizing the same, was in evidence, and recited the absence of the director, in the absence of evidence to the contrary it would be presumed that proper notice was given.—Mills v. Boyle Min. Co., 132 Cal. 95, 64 Pac. 122.

[o] In a suit on the note of a corporation, defendant claimed the same not to have been properly executed, in that at the meeting at which it was authorized one of the directors was not present, and was not notified thereof. It appeared from the record of the meeting that the director was absent, and one of the directors testified that on the day of the meeting the payee had agreed to loan a sum to the defendant, and that the meeting took place thereafter. Another witness testified that no opportunity was given the payee to notify any director, but it appeared that the absent director had a desk in the room adjoining where the meeting was held, and the parties had been engaged in negotiating the matter for four or five days. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to overcome the presumption that the absent director was notified; there being no testimony on the part of the president or the absent director.—Mills v. Boyle Min. Co., 132 Cal. 95, 64 Pac. 122.

[p] The fact that the superintendent who purchased the cattle from plaintiff gave his individual note to the plaintiff for the balance of the purchase price is merely a circumstance in favor of the corporation defendant, but is not conclusive of the issue whether the corporation defendant made the purchase.—Lake Shore Cattle Co. v. Modoc Land etc. Co., 130 Cal. 669, 63 Pac. 72.

[a] Where an action was commenced in a justice's court against the "Independent Company" and the return showed that service was made on R., a member of the Independent Company, and judgment was entered by default against the "Independent Tunnel Company," held, that the court acquired no jurisdiction over the Independent Tunnel Company, although the summons was addressed in that name; and the judgment was void.—King v. Randlett, 33 Cal. 318.

[b] If a corporation is sued by a wrong name, but answers by its true name, and judgment is rendered against it by its true name, the judgment is not void, and the supreme court, on appeal, in affirming the judgment, will direct the court below to substitute the true name in the complaint.—Mahon v. San Rafael Turnpike Road Co., 49 Cal. 269.

[c] A judgment against a corporation establishes its liability conclusively until reversed in a direct proceeding, and concludes the stockholders in an action against them in the nature of a creditor's bill to compel them to pay in the unpaid portion of their subscriptions to the capital stock toward the satisfaction of the judgment obtained, and it is not necessary that the complaint in such action should allege the indebtedness upon which the judgment was recovered.—Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129, 29 Am. St. Rep. 97, 30 Pac. 136.

[d] The fact that a certain corporation is named as defendant in a complaint, while judgment is rendered against another not named, does not render the judgment irregular, where the latter appeared and filed an answer which, if true, showed the identity of the two.—Haynes v. Backman, 31 Pac. 746.

§ 433. Property Subject to Execution.

[a] Stock sold for assessment and purchased by corporation is held subject to control by stockholders, and cannot be sold under execution against corporation.—Robinson v. Spaulding Gold & Silver Min. Co., 72 Cal. 34, 13 Pac. 65.

§ 434. Redemption from Execution Sale.

[a] Where the property of a corporation has been sold under execution, and no steps are taken by the corporate authorities to redeem the property within the period limited by law, a stockholder may interpose, and redeem the property for the corporation, and hold it liable for the money advanced for that purpose. By so doing, he becomes the equitable assignee of the certificate of sale, and is subrogated to all the rights of the original purchaser at the sheriff's sale.—Wright v. Oroville Gold etc. Min. Co., 40 Cal. 20.

[a] Upon the motion to vacate a judgment by default against a corporation, upon the ground that there was no service of the summons upon the corporation, and that the one to whom the summons was delivered was not the president or other officer of the corporation, the question whether he was such is a question of fact for the court below, and a finding that he was a president of the corporation at the time of the service will be sustained when the evidence upon the issue is substantially conflicting and not so one-sided as to show an abuse of discretion in making the finding.—J. L. Mott Iron Works v. West Coast Plumbing Supply Co., 113 Cal. 341, 45 Pac. 683.

[b] Where Code of Civil Procedure, section 462, gives plaintiff in an action on a note the right to controvert by evidence any new matter set up in the answer, except as to the genuineness and due execution of the note, it is harmless error to allow plaintiff to file an affidavit denying the genuineness and due execution of a corporate note set up in the answer, after the time allowed by statute, where the note on its face does not purport to have been made by the corporation, as an admission of its due execution would not be an admission that it was the company's note.—Myers v. Sierra Valley Stock etc. Assn., 122 Cal. 669, 55 Pac. 689.

[c] Where defendant's corporate character was alleged and not denied, it was error to find that defendant was not a corporation, in view of Code of Civil Procedure, section 462, declaring that uncontroverted material allegations in the complaint must be taken as true, and section 590, declaring that issues of fact arise only on allegations in the complaint controverted by the answer.—Moynihan v. Drobaz, 124 Cal. 212, 71 Am. St. Rep. 46, 56 Pac. 1026.

§ 436. Application of General Insolvency Laws.

[a] A petition for a writ of prohibition to the superior court to restrain a proceeding in insolvency against a corporation which does not set forth the class of corporations to which the insolvency corporation belongs, or the nature of the business in which it is engaged, is defective in not showing that such a corporation is within the scope of the bankruptcy act.—R. H. Herron Co. v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 297, 89 Am. St. Rep. 124, 68 Pac. 814.

§ 437. Petition in Insolvency—Place of Filing.

[a] Statutes of 1880, chapter 87, section 8, requires that a petition in insolvency shall be filed "in the superior court of the county, or city and county, in which the debtor resides or has his place of business." Held, that a corporation whose residence was in the county of S., but whose mill was located in the county of H., where all his operations were carried on, where it contracted its liabilities, and where its creditors lived, had its place of business in the county of H. for the purposes of the above statute.—Creditors v. Consumers' Lumber Co., 98 Cal. 318, 33 Pac. 196.

§ 438. Jurisdiction of Superior Court—When Acquired.

when a petition in insolvency has been filed by its creditors, setting forth facts constituting the insolvency of the corporation, and praying that it be adjudged an insolvent debtor.—State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

§ 439. Preferences to Creditors.

[a] Where a creditor of an insolvent corporation obtained collaterals to secure its debt in good faith and in due course of business, it cannot be compelled to surrender such securities for the common benefit of all corporate creditors, nor can it share in other assets of the corporation until such securities have been exhausted.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

[a] A mortgage given by a corporation in lieu of an invalid one previously given by the stockholders, which has been canceled for a corporate indebtedness, is not fraudulent as to creditors.—Head v. Horn, 18 Cal. 211.

[b] Where the president of a corporation resigned as president and director in order to take a conveyance of all of the corporation's property in consideration of a pre-existing debt, the conveyance should be treated as though made to an officer of the corporation, and therefore void as against the corporation's creditors.—Nixon v. Goodwin (Cal. App.) 85 Pac. 169.

[c] A deed of all the property of a mining company to its president and director the day after he had resigned, in consideration of a pre-existing debt, held void as to the corporation's creditors.—Nixon v. Goodwin (Cal. App.) 85 Pac. 169.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 441. Transfer to Another Corporation Having Same Officers or Stockholders.

[a] The property of a railroad corporation is vested in its trustees, to be preserved by them as a fund to secure the creditors of the corporation. Where the persons interested in one railroad corporation formed a new one, which chose for its officers the officers of the old corporation, and the persons owing the stock of the old corporation received in exchange therefor stock of the new, and the trustees then caused the property of the old corporation be conveyed to the new, held, that the conveyance was a fraud upon the creditors of the old corporation.—San Francisco etc. R. Co. v. Bee, 48 Cal. 398.

[a] Where a creditor of a corporation has suffered damages by reason of the fraudulent misappropriation by other creditors of moneys belonging to the corporation, whereby the corporation has been rendered insolvent, the remedy is by an action in the nature of a creditor's bill against the corporation and the other creditors or wrongdoers, wherein the rights of all the parties in interest may be adjudicated.—Reid v. Goldstein, 53 Cal. 296.

[b] A creditor's remedy for damages from fraudulent misappropriation by other creditors of the corporation's moneys, rendering it insolvent, is by suit in the nature of a creditor's bill against both it and them.—Reed v. Goldstein, 53 Cal. 296.

[c] The subscribed stock of a corporation is a trust fund in favor of its creditors which a court of equity will enforce in their favor when the corporation ceases to be a going concern and it will not allow the trust so arising to be defeated by simulated payment, or by any device short of an actual payment in good faith.—Vermont Marble Co v. § 444. —— Right of Assignee to Enforce Subscription.

[a] An assignee of an insolvent corporation succeeds to all the rights of the corporation to enforce subscriptions to its stock.—Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9, 33 Pac. 741.

[a] Part of the property of a corporation was sold in good faith to petitioners, who were among its stockholders, pending proceedings for the appointment of a receiver. Held, that the fact that the petitioners, in their character of stockholders, contested the appointment of the receiver for the corporation's property cannot be construed as a voluntary submission to the jurisdiction of the court in their character of purchasers, so as to estop them from questioning the validity of the appointment otherwise than by appeal.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84

[b] A court is without jurisdiction to appoint a receiver to take possession of the property of a corporation upon a complaint filed by a member or stockholder which does not show that the corporation has been dissolved, or seek its dissolution, and which neither shows its insolvency nor alleges fraud or mismanagement on the part of its officers, but alleges only that its liabilities exceed its assets, and that it has ceased to conduct the business for which it was incorporated.—Murray v. § 446. Collection of Assets.

[a] Where vice-president, who, in absence of president, conducts business affairs of corporation, employed an attorney for the corporation, with whom a settlement was had for services rendered, and payment made, without objection on the part of the corporation or any officer thereof, the subsequent assignee in insolvency of the corporation cannot recover the money so paid.—Streeten v. Robinson, 102 Cal. 542, 36 Pac. 946.

[b] A corporation having no power to adopt a by-law inconsistent with the laws of the state (Civil Code, section 301), and corporate directors having express authority to levy and collect an assessment for such percentage of the full amount unpaid on capital stock as may be necessary to satisfy the claims of creditors (Civil Code, section 331, and section 332, subdivision 1), a corporate by-law providing that "no further calls for payments on capital stock shall be made except by a two-thirds vote of all the stock issued and outstanding" does not prevent an assessment by the directors in liquidation.—Union Sav. Bank v. Leiter, 145 Cal. 696, 79 Pac. 441.

§ 447. Enforcement of Unpaid Subscriptions.

[a] An action by the assignee of an insolvent corporation organized under the laws of this state to recover from the stockholders the balance due from them severally upon their subscriptions to its capital stock is an action upon contract, and an attachment will lie against nonresident stockholders who are sued as defendants therein; and it is immaterial that the complaint does not show the amount due upon each subscription and that the prayer of the complaint is for an accounting, where the affidavit for attachment shows the amount due.—Kohler v. Agassiz, 99 Cal. 9, 33 Pac. 741.

[b] A finding in an action by creditors against stockholders of an insolvent corporation to recover unpaid subscriptions, that its indebtedness exceeded such unpaid subscriptions, was sufficient, without specifying the amounts due such creditors, and was not inconsistent with a finding that the court could not definitely determine the amount due one of such creditors until securities held by it had been realized.—Welch v. § 448. Rank and Priority of Claims.

[a] Where an insolvent stockholder of an insolvent corporation is indebted on his subscription for stock to an amount in excess of a sum due him on a note of the corporation, an attachment lien procured by him in an action on his note against the corporation will be postponed in equity to a subsequent attachment lien of other creditors of the corporation.—Kimball v. Richardson-Kimball Co., 111 Cal. 386, 43 Pac. 1111.

[b] A creditor of an insolvent bank, who recovers a portion of his debt from stockholders on their personal liability, is not thereby prevented from sharing with other creditors on the basis of his entire debt in the assets of the corporation, to the extent of the balance due.—Sacramento Bank v. Pacific Bank, 124 Cal. 147, 71 Am. St. Rep. 36-n, 56 Pac. 787.

[c] Where a stockholder of an insolvent corporation paid a portion of the corporate indebtedness on which he was liable as surety, he was entitled to share the assets of the corporation ratably with other creditors to the extent of the payment so made.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

[d] The indorsers of a note of the corporation, to the extent of any payments made by them, stand in the relation of ordinary creditors of the corporation, and may share ratably in the assets of the corporation.—Welch v. Sargent, 127 Cal. 72, 59 Pac. 319.

compensation or damages against the corporation in favor of one having a claim against it, yet the better and more commonly recognized practice is to apply for relief by petition to the court in which the receiver is acting; and it is immaterial whether the damage was occasioned prior or subsequent to the appointment of the receiver.—Pacific Ry. Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449, 25 Am. St. Rep. 201, 27 Pac. 768.

[a] When two corporations consolidate, it is sufficient to file articles of consolidation with Secretary of State without filing additional new articles.—California etc. Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R., 67 Cal. 59, 7 Pac. 123.

Consolidation of corporations: 79 Am. Dec. 421, note.

Consolidation of corporations, effect of: 89 Am. St. Rep. 604, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1265; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 2345, 2346, §§ 2330, 2331.

[a] It is sufficient that the number of consenting stockholders of each constituent corporation shall be three-fourths of the outstanding stock, and it is not required that the consent shall be by the owners of three-fourths of the entire nominal capital stock of the corporation.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

[b] Where the trustees of stock consented to the consolidation of the corporation prior to the cancellation of certificates held by them in trust, it is immaterial that the stock so held in trust by them was subsequently canceled.—Market Street Ry. Co. v Hellman, 109 Cal. 571.

[a] The consolidated corporation becomes a new and distinct corporation which may be organized for the term of fifty years, irrespective of the term of existence of the constituent corporation, and it cannot be objected to the consolidation that it has the effect to extend the existence of the constituent corporations beyond the period of fifty years fixed for each of them.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

§ 454. Right to Stock in Consolidated Corporation.

[a] Civil Code, section 309, prohibits the directors of a corporation from dividing, withdrawing, or paying to stockholders any part of the capital. Held, that where a mining corporation conveys its lands to another corporation in consideration of a part of the stock of the latter, such stock becomes capital of the former corporation, which neither the directors nor the stockholders can distribute among themselves.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 378, 22 Pac. 689, 6 L. R. A. 520, reversing (1889) 81 Cal. 378, 20 Pac. 401.

§ 455. Rights and Liabilities of New Corporation.

[a] An association of individuals, calling themselves the "Experimental Tunnel Company," located a mining claim and began work. Afterward the active members of this company, uniting with others, formed a corporation known as the "Table Mountain Tunnel Company," which was put in possession by these members. Held, that whatever rights the first company had passed to the second by the new transfer of possession, and that, when the possession of the second company was assailed, proof of the acts of the first was pertinent, to show the character and extent of its possession, and that the second was entitled to the benefit of them.—Table Mountain Co. v. Stranahan, 20 Cal. 198.

[c] Where a corporation furnishing water to a city under a contract providing that, if more favorable terms are granted to any other corporation, they shall extend to it, is absorbed by another corporation, to which more valuable terms have been granted, the latter corporation is not bound to furnish water under the contract, but is entitled to the terms given it before the purchase.—City and County of San Francisco v. Spring Valley Waterworks, 48 Cal. 493.

[d] Where a corporation's charter had been forfeited by the state, an application by it for a receiver to administer its affairs cannot be sustained on the ground that to allow its directors to retain control of its assets would defeat the forfeiture.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 84 Cal. 327, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 946, provides that an appeal "stays all further proceedings in the court below, upon the judgment or order appealed from, or upon the matters embraced therein." Held, that where an appeal had been taken from a judgment abrogating the charter of a corporation because of abuse of its corporate privileges, the subsequent appointment of a receiver to sell its property and wind up its affairs was a proceeding upon the judgment, within the meaning of the statute, and was therefore void.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 84 Cal. 327, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[f] Where the officers and stockholders of one corporation form another, and convey all the property of the former to it in fraud of creditors, the latter corporation will be regarded as a continuation of the former, and a court of equity will hold the assets of the latter liable for a debt of the former, though there has been no recovery of judgment for the debt, and return of execution unsatisfied, as required by Civil Code, section 3441, which declares that "a creditor can avoid the act or obligation of his debtor for fraud only when the fraud obstructs the enforcement by legal process of his rights to take the property affected by the transfer or obligation."—Blanc v. Paymaster Min. Co., 95 Cal. 524, 29 Am. St. Rep. 149, 30 Pac. 765.

[g] Where a consolidated corporation has expressly assumed and made itself liable for all the antecedent liabilities of the consolidating corporation it cannot be permitted to divide up the obligation and reduce its responsibility, but must be held to be liable precisely as though it had been the sole actor from the outset; and though such assumption of liability does not, without their consent, bind the creditors of a consolidating corporation, yet suit brought by any creditor thereof against the consolidated corporation, which has agreed to pay the demand, is of itself sufficient evidence of acceptance of the new debtor in lieu of the old.—Smith v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 98 Cal. 210, 33 Pac. 53.

[h] There can be no novation of the indebtedness of the constituent corporations without the consent of the creditors of those corporations; but where the consolidation corporation has assumed the liabilities of the several constituent companies which the creditors are not compelled to have recorded to the new company, they may elect to do so and recover.—Market Street Ry. Co. v. Hellman, 109 Cal. 571, 42 Pac. 225.

[i] A corporation held a lease under which it mined asphalt on a royalty basis. One individual held substantially all of its stock. A new corporation, with the same object, officers, and place of business, was organized, and substantially all of its stock was issued to the principal stockholder of the old one, the sole consideration being a debt which the old corporation owed him. He afterward sold some of his stock, but the old corporation received no part of the consideration. The old corporation transferred its lands and all of its business and assets, with the exception of the mining lease, to the new corporation, and practically went out of business. Held, that the new company was only the old one under another name, and hence was liable on the mining lease for royalties subsequently accruing; the transfer being fraudulent as to the lessor. Higgins v. California Petroleum etc. Co., 122 Cal. 373, 55 Pac. 155.

Consolidation of railroads and its effect on pre-existing debts and liens: 59 Am. St. Rep. 554, note; 23 L. R. A. 231, note. See, also, 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 2364-2370, §§ 2354-2360.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 309, declaring that the directors of corporations must not divide or pay to the stockholders, or any of them, any part of the capital stock, except what remains after the payment of all its debts on its dissolution or the expiration of its term of existence, the capital stock of one corporation, issued to a number of persons, all but one of whom were the stockholders of another corporation, in consideration of the transfer to the former of all the latter's property, capital, patents, and assets, was in fact the property of such latter corporation, and a fund for the payment of its debts; hence all such corporation's stockholders who had received any of the stock issued by the former corporation were proper parties to a suit against the latter corporation.—Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472, 63 Pac. 1025.

[c] Where a corporation issued part of its capital stock to the stockholders of another corporation in consideration of the transfer of all the latter's property, assets, and patents, including the right to use and authorize the use of certain patented machines outside a certain territory, with notice that such transfer created a liability against the latter corporation, and that such corporation could not discharge the same, it took the property charged with that liability, and was a proper party to a suit against the other corporation on the same.—Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472, 63 Pac. 1025.

[d] Where a complaint seeking to recover a certain per cent of the profits accruing to a corporation by reason of the sale of certain property states that such corporation received no consideration for the transfer of the property, but further alleges that the corporation to which it was sold issued two thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight shares of its capital stock to the stockholders of the corporation selling it, in payment for such property, the statement as to consideration did not prevent the facts alleged from constituting a cause of action, since it was a conclusion of law erroneously drawn from the facts.—Schaake v. Eagle Automatic Can Co., 135 Cal. 472, 63 Pac. 1025.

[a] The sixth section of the act of 1858, which provides that any corporation heretofore formed for the purposes specified in the act "shall have the right to reincorporate," etc., is not mandatory, but permissive only; and it is not necessary that the corporation reincorporate in order to become the recipient of the privileges and benefits intended by the act.—People v. Blake, 19 Cal. 579.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Effect of dissolution: 12 Am. Dec. 239, note.

Effect of upon debts and pending actions: 40 Am. Dec. 737, note.

[a] In the absence of any statutory provision defining the mode, a corporation may dissolve itself by a surrender of its franchise, by proper proceedings for such purpose.—People v. California College, 38 Cal. 166.

[b] Corporations can only be dissolved in manner prescribed by law.—Merrill Lodge v. Ellsworth, 78 Cal. 168, 20 Pac. 399; Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 387, 22 Pac. 689.

[c] Corporation may be dissolved by expiration of term of existence; by consent of holders of two-thirds of its shares; or upon judgment of court.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 386, 22 Pac. 689.

§ 459. Grounds in General.

[a] The use of an abbreviation of its corporate name by a corporation is not a usurpa-

tion, and will not support a proceeding by quo warranto to oust it from the enjoyment of its franchise.—People v. Bogart, 45 Cal. 73.

[b] It is an insufficient ground on which to base a judgment of forfeiture of a corporation formed to reclaim lands within a certain district of the state that that reclamation is impracticable.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 53 Cal. 346.

[c] Railroad corporation organized to impose on the court by condemnation for private purposes may be dissolved at suit of state.—People v. Pittsburgh R. R. Co., 53 Cal. 694.

[d] Refusal to allow stockholders to inspect books of concern or that it is carrying on a losing business are not grounds for dissolution.—Burham v. San Francisco F. M. Co., 76 Cal. 25, 17 Pac. 940.

[e] To work forfeiture there must be either perversion by act inconsistent with nature of grant amounting to injury to public, or usurpation by exercise of unauthorized power regardless of injury to public.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 119, 24 Pac. 277.

[f] State may forfeit franchise and dissolve corporations failing to perform duties they were organized to perform or doing acts either not authorized or forbidden.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 117, 24 Pac. 277.

§ 460. Failure to Commence Business Within One Year.

[a] Where the uncontradicted testimony showing that defendant corporation had organized, elected officers, adopted by-laws and a seal within thirty days after incorporating, commenced and continued business from that date, and legally changed its name thereafter, such evidence was sufficient to support a finding of the trial court that the corporation adopted and used a seal, organized and commenced the business for which it was incorporated immediately after issuance of said certificate of incorporation, and continued the same from that time on, and hence was not liable to forfeiture of its charter, or dissolution, under Civil Code, section 358, providing that, if a corporation does not organize and commence business within one year from the date of its incorporation, its corporate powers cease.—People v. Rosenstein-Cohen Cigar Co., 131 Cal. 153, 63 Pac. 163.

§ 461. Failure to Transact Business.

[a] Statutes of 1862, page 110, section 6, providing that the existence of a corporation shall not be inquired into collaterally, applies to a de facto corporation, the existence of which is attacked on the grounds of its failure to proceed and do business, since a corporation once formed is not dissolved by its mere failure to transact business.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frame, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

[a] Public corporation will not be dissolved by judgment of forfeiture for misconduct of officers.—People v. Reclamation Dist., 53 Cal. 346, 350.

[b] Willful acts and neglects of officers are regarded as those of corporation, and render it liable to forfeiture unless done in violation of duties imposed or instructions given by corporation.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 117, 24 Pac. 277.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Principle of forfeiture is that franchise is trust; terms of charter are conditions of the trust, and if those conditions be violated, charter is forfeited.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 119, 24 Pac. 277.

[b] If the corporation does not sell lands which it cannot hold more than five years, penalties may be provided by the legislature for its failure to do so; or, possibly, some judicial procedure might be invoked to compel a sale of the land or a forfeiture of its franchise.—People v. Stockton Sav. etc. Soc., 133 Cal. 611, 85 Am. St. Rep. 225, 65 Pac. 1078.

§ 464. Illegal Levy of Assessments.

§ 465. Sale of Corporate Property.

§ 466. Franchise in Hands of Lessee.

[a] Franchise and property of corporation are liable in hands of lessee to forfeiture at instance of state or execution levy at instance of one wrongfully injured by lessor.—Lee v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 116 Cal. 101, 58 Am. St. Rep. 140-n, 47 Pac. 932.

[a] Charter of corporation cannot be forfeited for misuse or abuse of charter powers, except by direct judicial proceedings.—Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 620.

[b] Court cannot treat a corporation as already dissolved because its condition or business arrangements are such that it will be necessary or proper for it to institute proceedings for its dissolution.—Sullivan v. Triunfo Min. Co., 39 Cal. 459.

[c] While a forfeiture at common law does not operate to devest the title of the owner until a suit is instituted for that purpose, and the rights of the state are established by judgment, yet it is otherwise when a forfeiture is declared by statute.—Oakland R. R. Co. v. Oakland etc. R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 365, 13 Am. Rep. 181.

[d] Acts sufficient to cause a forfeiture of a franchise conferred upon a corporation do not per se produce a forfeiture; but the corporation continues to exist until the sovereignty which created it shall, by proper proceedings in proper court, procure an adjudication of forfeiture, and enforce it.—People ex rel. Sabichi v. Los Angeles E. Ry. Co., 91 Cal. 338, 27 Pac. 673.

[e] Under Civil Code, section 502, providing that, where a franchise has been granted to a street railroad, work on the road must be commenced within one year from the date of the grant of right of way, and finished within three years thereafter, and that a failure to comply with such provision "works a forfeiture" of the right of way as well as of the franchise, when a street railroad fails to comply with that provision, its right of way and franchise continue to exist until declared forfeited by a court or by legislative authority, said section not being self-executing.—Santa Rosa City R. Co. v. Central St. Ry. Co., 38 Pac. 986.

[a] The aid of courts can be invoked only as against such officers as are intrusted by law with the management of the affairs of a corporation, and as against these the remedy is at law, and not in equity.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145, 76 Am. Dec. 508-n.

[b] A court of equity has no jurisdiction over corporations for the purpose of restraining their operations or winding up their concerns. Such court may compel the officers of the corporation to account for any breach of trust, but the jurisdiction for this purpose is over the officers personally, and not over the corporation.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145, 76 Am. Dec. 508.

[d] Transfer of proceedings in insolvency against a corporation after an order of adjudication, from the department in which they had been pending, to the department in which the action for dissolution of the corporation was pending, cannot confer upon the court any greater jurisdiction in the latter matter than it previously had.—State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

[e] The jurisdiction of the superior court to decree a dissolution of any corporation exists only by virtue of statutory authority; and its jurisdiction is limited by the provisions of the statute, both as to the conditions under which it may be invoked and the extent of the judgment which it may make in the exercise of this jurisdiction.—State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Power of the courts to decree dissolution: 96 Am. Dec. 756, note. See, also, 10 Cyc. 1305, 1306; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 2431-2435, §§ 2420-2422.

[b] Upon application of the corporation, a writ of prohibition must be granted to prevent the superior court from proceeding upon the judgment and orders appointing a receiver with reference to any property of the corporation and from interfering with or disturbing the possession or control of the corporation as to any of its property or effects, pending its appeal from the judgment of dissolution.—State Investment and Insurance Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

[c] An order of injunction issued by the superior court at the commencement of proceedings for the dissolution of a corporation, enjoining the corporation, and its agents, attorneys, and creditors, and their agents, attorneys, and solicitors, from carrying on any litigation, or interfering with the assets of the corporation, is without jurisdiction; and an attorney for the creditors of the corporation, who, in disobedience to such order, prosecuted their petition in involuntary insolvency against the corporation is not guilty of contempt in disregarding the injunction; and a writ of prohibition will be granted to prevent the judge who had issued the order of injunction from hearing an order to show cause why such attorney should not be judged guilty of contempt and punished therefor.—Harrison v. Hebbard, 101 Cal. 152, 35 Pac. 555.

[d] In a proceeding in quo warranto against a mutual life association, organized upon the assessment or co-operative plan, for the purpose of paying to the nominee of such members as may die stipulated sums of money to be collected of surviving members, a judgment by which the corporation was excluded from the privilege and franchise usurped by it of making ordinary contracts of life insurance, does not work a dissolution of the corporation, when it was not alleged or found that the defendant was usurping the franchise of being a corporation, and the judgment did not exclude it from exercising that franchise.—Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431, 41 Pac. 477.

[e] Where the state sought to forfeit defendant's charter because it had not begun business within one year from the date of its incorporation, its objection to defendant's minute-book was properly overruled, since this would tend to show all the details of the business of the corporation and the time of its organization.—People v. Rosenstein-Cohn Cigar Co., 131 Cal. 153, 63 Pac. 163.

[a] Conditional acts or requirements not made prerequisite to the exercise of corporate powers, but nonperformance of which operates as a forfeiture of its franchises, can only be taken advantage of in a direct proceeding by the state.—Spring Valley Waterworks v. City of San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434.

[b] Private stockholder or creditor cannot sue to dissolve an insolvent corporation.—French Bank Case, 53 Cal. 553.

[c] If it is claimed that corporation is usurping powers not belonging to it, corporation is proper and only party.—People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 363, 18 Pac. 85, 19 Pac. 693.

[d] An information in the nature of quo warranto to forfeit the charter of a corporation for perversion of its franchise may be brought by the people under Constitution, article 6, section 5.—People v. Dashaway Assn., 84 Cal. 114, 24 Pac. 277.

[a] When the attorney general commences an action to dissolve a corporation, the only order which the court is authorized to make is one requiring the corporation to show cause why its business should not be closed, and, until the return day of this order, the court has no power either to enjoin the corporation from doing business, or to disturb it in the possession of its estate by the appointment of a receiver, or to assume control or management of the estate of the corporation.—State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

[b] Purchase of property of corporation pending suit to forfeit its charter is not void as to state, which has no lien on the property. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 385, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

§ 474. Directors as Trustees to Wind up Affairs.

[a] Prior to the codes, when a corporation was dissolved, the directors continued to be trustees of the creditors and stockholders for certain purposes, or, in case the directors died subsequent to the dissolution, the district court could appoint new trustees for like purposes; such trustees were necessary parties to an action affecting the property of the corporation, without whose presence as parties the legal title of the corporation to real estate could not be transferred, its affairs settled, or its property distributed.—Clark v. San Francisco, 53 Cal. 306.

[a] Jurisdiction of equity is over officers personally, and not over corporation as such, and hence it is error in the court to appoint a receiver and decree a sale of the property and a settlement of affairs of corporation.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145, 76 Am. Dec. 508-n.

[b] Decree appointing a receiver necessarily results in dissolution of the corporation, and would be doing indirectly what the court has no power to do directly.—Neall v. Hill, 16 Cal. 145, 76 Am. Dec. 508-n.

[c] In proceeding to forfeit corporate franchise, judgment of forfeiture ends proceeding and court has no jurisdiction to appoint receiver unless on new proceeding by creditor or stockholder.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 361, 380, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[d] In absence of statute, receiver may be appointed to administer property of dissolved corporation, at instance of creditor or stockholder.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 362, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[e] Appointment of receiver of dissolved corporation is only made when required for protection of rights of creditor or stockholder.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 365, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

[g] The fact that a fine was imposed upon the corporation in the quo warranto proceedings, payable to the people of the state, does not authorize the state to commence a subsequent action to appoint a receiver of the corporation; and the court has no jurisdiction to appoint such receiver, under section 565 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which only authorizes such action to be commenced upon the dissolution of the corporation, and the court will be restrained by writ of prohibition from further proceeding with respect to a receiver of the property of the corporation. Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431, 41 Pac. 477.

[h] In an action by the attorney general to dissolve an insolvent insurance company, the court has no authority, on decreeing dissolution, to appoint a receiver, and restrain such corporation, its directors, agents, attorneys, creditors, etc., from carrying on any litigation, and from interfering with or taking possession of any of its assets.—Harrison v. Hebbard, 101 Cal. 152, 35 Pac. 555.

[i] Code of Civil Procedure, section 565, and Civil Code, section 406, do not authorize the court to appoint a receiver of an insurance company on dissolution thereof in an action brought by the attorney general.—State Investment etc. Co. v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 476. —— Who may Apply for Receiver.

[a] Upon dissolution of corporation for literary purposes, having no debts, personal property and real estate purchased will vest in state, but real estate donated will revert to donor.—People v. President and Trustees, etc., 38 Cal. 166.

[b] The property of a corporation organized for literary purposes, and having no stockholders, vests in the state, on its dissolution by a surrender of its franchise, where it owes no debts.—People v. Trustees of California College, 38 Cal. 166.

[c] Stockholders cannot compel a conveyance of property to themselves upon dissolution, without regard to creditors or legal rights of trustees.—Clark v. San Francisco, 53 Cal. 306, 312.

[e] When corporation ceases to exist for any cause, its property must be disposed of according to law.—Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 362, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627.

§ 481. Situs of Property.

[a] A debt due from residents of this state to a foreign corporation has no situs in this state, but is in contemplation of law in the state of its charter, and is there vested in the corporation, up to the time of a legal assignment thereof by the corporation.—Fenton v. Edwards, 126 Cal. 43, 77 Am. St. Rep. 141, 58 Pac. 320.

[a] Legislature cannot impose on foreign corporation a condition in violation of state constitution.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 119, 15 Pac. 380.

[c] State may deal with foreign, as absolutely as with domestic, corporations.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 119, 15 Pac. 380.

Power of the states to discriminate against: 95 Am. Dec. 536, note; 24 L. R. A. 289, note. See, also, 19 Cyc. 1251; 12 Cent. Dig., cols. 2512-2515, §§ 2505-2509.

§ 484. —— Validity of Provision Against Removal of Cause to Federal Court.

[a] Provision that foreign corporation removing cause to federal court forfeits its rights is void.—San Francisco v. Insurance Co., 74 Cal. 119, 15 Pac. 380.

§ 485. What Constitutes "Doing Business" Within State.

[a] A single transaction does not constitute "doing business within the state" by a foreign corporation, authorizing service, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 411.—Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 289.

[b] Facts held insufficient to establish that a foreign corporation was "doing business" in California, so as to render it subject to the jurisdiction of the California courts.—Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 289.

§ 486. Designation of Resident Agent.

[a] Act of March 17, 1899 (Stats. 1899, p. 111, c. 94), provides that a foreign corporation which has failed to designate some person in the state on whom process may be served shall not maintain or defend any action in the courts of the state until the provisions of the act have been complied with. Act of March 8, 1901 (Stats. 1901, p. 108, c. 93), requires foreign corporations to file their articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State, and makes them subject to a fine for a failure to comply with the provisions of the act. Held, that the latter act does not repeal the former.—Keystone Driller Co. v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.

[d] An allegation in the complaint in an action against a foreign corporation, held to bring the case within Statutes of 1899, page 111, chapter 94, relating to foreign corporations appointing persons as agents on whom process may be served.—Olender v. § 487. Capacity to Sue and be Sued.

[a] Civil Code, section 299, does not preclude a foreign corporation from maintaining an action in California because of its failure to comply with such section before commencing the action, where it was accomplished before the filing of its amended complaint.—Ward Land etc. Co. v. Mapes, 147 Cal. 747, 82 Pac. 426.

[b] While a corporation confines the exercise of its powers within the state where it was incorporated, it is beyond the reach of the process of courts of other states.—Jameson v. Simonds Saw Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 289.

§ 488. Actions by or Against—Jurisdiction and Venue.

[a] Where a foreign corporation employed and retained a managing agent in California who openly exercised authority to act in its behalf, the corporation may be sued in the courts of that state.—Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258.

[b] Foreign corporation doing business here has no residence within the state, and an action against it may be tried in any county designated by the plaintiff in his complaint. Thomas v. Placerville G. Q. Min. Co., 65 Cal. 600, 4 Pac. 641.

[a] Corporations are included as nonresidents under Statutes of 1851, title 3, page 55, section 30, relating to service of process thereon by publication, and providing that "when the person on whom the service is to be made resides out of the state," etc.—Douglass v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 4 Cal. 304.

[b] Where a foreign corporation employed a managing agent in California who openly exercised authority therefor, service of process personally made on such agent constitutes service on the corporation.—Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258.

[c] When a foreign corporation, doing business in this state, has not designated a person upon whom service of summons may be made, it may be made upon its managing agent.—Thomas v. Placerville etc. Min. Co., 65 Cal. 600, 4 Pac. 641.

[d] Service of summons upon a foreign corporation is sufficient by service on a person designated by the corporation to receive the same, under the act of April 1, 1872, though, at the time of service, such person was not the agent, cashier, secretary, or other officer of the corporation.—Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co. v. Superior Court of Yuba County, 66 Cal. 311, 5 Pac. 490, 493.

[f] Where process was served in Alabama on a former agent of defendant insurance company, which was organized under the laws of, and had its office and principal place of business in, California, and had ceased to do business in Alabama before the action was brought, the courts of Alabama did not maintain jurisdiction of the defendant's person, and hence a judgment by default in Alabama would not sustain a suit against it in the California courts.—Eureka Mercantile Co. v. California Ins. Co., 130 Cal. 153, 62 Pac. 393.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 670, providing that in case of judgment by default, the judgment-roll consists of the summons, with affidavit of proof of service, the complaint, with memorandum indorsed thereon of defendant's default, and a copy of the judgment, a certificate of the Secretary of State, attached to a summons served on him for a foreign corporation, under Statutes of 1899, page 111, chapter 94, section 1, providing for such service in case no person is designated by the foreign corporation as an agent for the service of process, is not a part of the record and cannot be looked to, on a motion made on the record to quash the service and return, to supply an omission of the return to recite that the corporation had not designated an agent for the service of process.—Willey v. Benedict Co., 145 Cal. 601, 79 Pac. 270.

[h] Under Statutes of 1899, page 111, chapter 94, section 1, requiring foreign corporations to designate an agent for the service of process, and to file such designation with the Secretary of State, in such case process may be served on the agent, or, if no person is designated, on the Secretary of State, a return reciting service on the Secretary of State, but failing to state that there was no designation of an agent on file, is insufficient to confer jurisdiction over the corporation, and cannot be aided and rendered sufficient by a certificate of the Secretary of State, attached to the summons as returned, showing that the corporation had not made the required designation.—Willey v. Benedict Co., 145 Cal. 601, 79 Pac. 270.

[i] Statutes of 1899, page 111, chapter 94, held to substitute the service of process on the Secretary of State, in an action against a foreign corporation having no agent in the state for service by publication prescribed by Code of Civil Procedure, section 412.—Olender v. Crystalline Min. Co. (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1082.

[a] A foreign corporation, having a local existence and domicile in this state for the purpose of suing and being sued, may rely on the statute of limitations to the same extent as though chartered by the state.—Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258.

[d] Act of April 1, 1872 (Stats. 1871-72, p. 826, c. 566), as amended by acts of 1899 (Stats. 1899, p. 111, c. 94), section 3, held prospective, so that a corporation not having filed the required designation of a person on whom service might be made prior to an action against it was not entitled to plead limitations as a defense.—Black v. § 493. Insolvency—Jurisdiction of State Court.

[a] Under the California Insolvency act of 1880, which provides, in section 8, that the petition shall be filed in the county where the debtor resides, or has his place of business, and, in section 21, makes certain provisions in case of a nonresident debtor, the California courts have jurisdiction of involuntary proceedings against a foreign corporation which has property and a place of business in the state.—Castle Dome Min. etc. Co., In re, 18 Pac. 794.

[a] An act authorizing five per cent damages to be taxed as costs against the losing party in litigated cases in the city and county of San Francisco is not unconstitutional, as being in contravention of Constitution, article 1, section 11, which provides that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.—Corwin v. Ward, 35 Cal. 195, 95 Am. Dec. 93.

[b] The act of February 9, 1866, allowing the prevailing party, in certain actions tried in San Francisco, to include in his judgment five per cent on the amount recovered, is not repealed by the codes.—Whitaker v. Haynes, 49 Cal. 596.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1254, which provides that where, after an award in condemnation proceedings, a new trial is granted the owner, and he fails on such trial to obtain a greater compensation than on the first, the costs of the new trial shall be taxed against him, does not violate Constitution, article 1, section 14, providing that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation.—Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co. v. Rump, 104 Cal. 20, 37 Pac. 859.

[e] Political Code, section 4479, provides that any law passed at the session of the legislature which adopted the codes, and which is inconsistent with the provisions of either, must prevail over them. At the session of the legislature which adopted the codes of 1871-72, Practice Act, section 280, then in force, concerning referees' fees in partition was amended (Stats. 1871-72, page 230, chapter 187) so as to allow referees only the fees allowed by law, which were provided for by section 280 of the practice act (now section 1028, Code of Civil Procedure), at five dollars a day. Held, that a contention on appeal from an order fixing a referee's fee in partition that the amendment to practice act, being inconsistent with section 768 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which gives the trial court discretion in fixing fees of referees, superseded it, would not be sustained, section 768 having been contained in the code for many years, and the profession and courts having accepted it as controlling with entire unanimity, and it being a serious question whether Political Code, section 4479, applies to matters of procedure.—Mesnager v. De Leonis, 140 Cal. 402, 73 Pac. 1052.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1195, relating to the foreclosure of mechanics' liens, provides that the court must allow, as part of the costs, reasonable attorneys' fees, etc. Held, that this should not be construed as a provision against an actual outlay only, but that where there was an agreement to pay attorneys' fees plaintiff was entitled to a reasonable allowance.—Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 532, 16 Pac. 325; Chivell v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 532, 16 Pac. 328.

[b] A stipulation that certain designated persons should ascertain "the amount due" to the plaintiffs, and that "judgment shall be accordingly entered," does not exclude the attorney's fee which the court is to fix. Rapp v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 74 Cal. 532, 16 Pac. 325, 332.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 3. Discretion of Court—In Civil Actions, in General.

[c] In an action for the recovery of money or damages the prevailing party is entitled to his costs, and the court has no discretion in awarding them.—Stoddard v. Treadwell, 29 Cal. 281.

[d] Allowance of items of expense and disbursements incurred at trial must be left in nearly every instance to discretion of judge. Barnhart v. Kron, 88 Cal. 449, 26 Pac. 210.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1025, leaving the determination of the question of costs, with certain exceptions, to the discretion of the trial court, does not justify the court in allowing costs not properly chargeable.—Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158, 58 Pac. 442.

[f] In action for reconveyance of property, given to secure debt, award of costs is in discretion of court, and court is justified in imposing them on defendant when he repudiates plaintiff's title and refuses to account.—De Leonis v. Walsh, 140 Cal. 181, 73 Pac. 813.

See 11 Cyc. 36-38; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 35-48, §§ 20-25; cols. 269, 270, § 231.

§ 4. —— In Equity Suits.

[e] A decree that neither party recover costs is within the equitable discretion of the trial court.—Gutierrez v. Wege, 145 Cal. 730, 79 Pac. 449.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 C. C. A. 368, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 36-38; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 38-44, § 21.

§ 5. —— —— Injunction and Specific Performance.

[a] Where in an action for damages and an injunction the plaintiff was awarded perpetual injunction and damages for less than two hundred dollars, the allowance of costs beyond the costs incurred by reason of the injunction was within the discretion of the court below.—Esmond v. Chew, 17 Cal. 336.

[b] In an injunction suit, where a perpetual injunction is awarded, the allowance of costs to the plaintiff is within the discretion of the court.—Davidson v. Devine, 70 Cal. 519, 11 Pac. 664.

[c] In action for specific performance of a contract obtained by fraud, where a decree is entered for defendant on the merits, it is an abuse of the court's discretion to tax costs against defendant.—Kelly v. Central Pac. R. Co., 74 Cal. 565, 16 Pac. 390.

§ 6. —— Proceedings to Determine Heirship.

[a] In proceeding to determine heirship, under 1664, Code of Civil Procedure, court has discretion to apportion costs, but may award costs to successful claimants.—Lindy v. McChesney, 141 Cal. 353, 74 Pac. 436.

§ 7. Costs Dependent upon Amount of Recovery.

[a] In an action to abate a nuisance damages are only an incident to the action, and failure to recover them does not affect question of costs.—Hudson v. Doyle, 6 Cal. 101.

[c] In action to try right to use of water, and for damages for diverting it, where the amount for which judgment is given is less than two hundred dollars, it will carry costs. Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217.

[d] One who sues to recover possession of an undivided part of real estate, and recovers an undivided part, but a less interest than he sued for, is entitled to full costs even if the answer concedes his right to the interest recovered, but raises an issue on the question of the ouster from the part recovered.—Lawton v. Gordon, 37 Cal. 202.

[e] Libel and slander act of 1872 does not give costs to plaintiff recovering judgment for less than three hundred dollars.—Jacobi v. Baur, 55 Cal. 554.

[g] Where the aggregate of the judgments recovered by plaintiff in an action against several stockholders of a corporation to enforce their liability for a corporate debt exceeds three hundred dollars, but he does not recover any single judgment, joint or several, for three hundred dollars or more, he is not entitled to costs under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1022, entitling him thereto only in case of recovery of judgment for three hundred dollars or more.—Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287, 30 Pac. 820.

[h] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1025, providing that no costs can be allowed in an action for damages, where plaintiff recovers less than three hundred dollars, forbids recovery of costs by either party on a recovery of less than three hundred dollars.—Anthony v. Grand, 101 Cal. 235, 35 Pac. 859.

[j] Defendant is entitled to costs as of course, where he recovers one dollar on a counterclaim interposed to a complaint for over three hundred dollars, on which plaintiff recovers nothing, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1022, giving plaintiff costs as of course on a recovery of over three hundred dollars, and providing that defendant shall recover costs, on recovering, in cases in which plaintiff would, on recovering, be entitled to costs.—Davis v. Hurgren, 125 Cal. 48, 57 Pac. 684.

[k] In an action for damages, where plaintiff recovered less than three hundred dollars, he was not entitled to costs.—Kishlar v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 134 Cal. 636, 66 Pac. 848.

[l] Although Code of Civil Procedure, section 1025, provides no costs can be allowed in an action for damages where plaintiff recovers less than three hundred dollars, in an action to recover damages for trespass to realty and to restrain threatened waste, wherein a receiver was appointed, and the judgment adjudicated property rights, and ordered the receiver to deliver such property to the respective parties in accordance with the terms of the judgment, thus showing that the action and relief granted were equitable, the trial court had discretion to award costs, although the damages recovered by plaintiff were less than three hundred dollars. Bemmerly v. Smith, 136 Cal. 5, 68 Pac. 97.

[n] In suit in equity plaintiff is entitled to costs against all necessary parties who appear and defend, though judgment is for less than three hundred dollars.—Clark v. Brown, 141 Cal. 95, 96, 74 Pac. 548.

[o] In an action in the superior court, where plaintiff recovered less than three hundred dollars, he was not entitled to costs.—Boland v. Ashurst Oil etc. Co., 145 Cal. 405, 78 Pac. 871.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 8. Costs Dependent upon Joinder of Causes.

[a] Where neglect of a city to repair a sewer, and of its officers to properly repair it, combine to cause sewage to overflow land, though land owner can have but one satisfaction in damages, since she must sue each separately, she is not within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1023, prohibiting recovery of costs in more than one action where defendants, sued separately, "might have been joined as defendants in the same action." Butler v. Ashworth, 110 Cal. 614, 43 Pac. 386.

[b] Where the vendor of land, who had retained the legal title until the purchase price was paid, sued on the note given therefor, without asking for a sale of the land, he cannot recover costs in a subsequent proceeding against the land.—Longmaid v. Coulter, 123 Cal. 208, 55 Pac. 791.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 9. Right of Prevailing Party.

[a] Where the court, in the exercise of its discretion, divided the costs so as to award to each party the costs incurred in the trial of issues found in favor of each, if it appears that one of the issues was erroneously found in favor of the defendant, the cost of the trial of that issue should be retaxed in favor of the plaintiffs.—Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158, 58 Pac. 442.

[b] A party ultimately defeated is liable for the costs of previous trials, so far as they are legitimate and properly taxed.—Senior v. Anderson, 130 Cal. 290, 62 Pac. 563.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1022, providing that costs are allowed of course to the plaintiff on a judgment in his favor in an action which involves the title or possession of real estate, that portion of the finding and judgment of the court directing that each party in a proceeding to quiet title should pay his own costs is erroneous, where judgment was rendered for plaintiff. Schmidt v. Klotz, 130 Cal. 223, 62 Pac. 470.

[d] Plaintiff who fails to recover against a defendant is not entitled to any costs against him, notwithstanding his costs were largely incurred against a counterclaim of such defendant, upon which the defendant also failed to recover. In such case the court is allowed no discretion as to the costs.—Benson v. Braun, 134 Cal. 41, 66 Pac. 1.

[e] A judgment against one defendant and the plaintiff in favor of the other defendants for their costs is not subject to objection by the defendant against whom it was rendered on the ground that he was a codefendant, where he filed a cross-complaint, and thereby made it necessary for the other defendants to defend against his claim.—Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529, 76 Pac. 243.

[f] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1022, provides that costs are allowed of course to the plaintiff upon a judgment in his favor in an action for the recovery of real property, and in an action which involves the title or possession of real property; and section 1025 declares that, in an action other than those mentioned in section 1022, costs may be allowed, or not, in the discretion of the court. Held, that where plaintiffs, in an action between heirs to set aside certain conveyances of real estate by deceased to defendants, were successful, they were entitled to costs as of right.—Gibson v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 454, 78 Pac. 953.

[g] Where in an action to recover land, the court, before the transcript of the testimony was written up, ordered that the same should be prepared at the equal expense of both parties, the successful party, having paid one-half of the cost, was entitled to have the amount thereof allowed as a part of the costs in the case.—Bell v. Pleasant, 145 Cal. 410, 78 Pac. 957.

[h] Where the issue is found against plaintiffs, they are not entitled to recover any costs or disbursements incurred in the action. Lawrence v. Getchell, 4 Pac. 544.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 10 —— Litigated or Defended Cases.

[a] A case litigated on demurrer comes within a statute providing for an allowance to the prevailing party in litigated cases. Packard v. Wilson, 72 Cal. 124, 13 Pac. 220.

§ 11. —— Who is Prevailing Party.

[a] In an action to determine title, and to enjoin defendant from trespassing and asserting title, the court found plaintiff owner of part of the land, and not entitled to any relief. Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1022, 1024, allow costs to either party on judgment in his favor in an action which involves the title or possession of realty. Held, that defendant was entitled to costs.—Lawrence v. Getchell, 2 Pac. 746.

§ 12. —— Partial Success.

[a] Where plaintiff recovers judgment for a part of the demanded premises, and defendant for the residue in action of ejectment in which all the allegations of the complaint are denied, plaintiff is entitled to costs. Havens v. Dale, 30 Cal. 547.

[b] In an action of title, where defendants deny plaintiffs' title and ouster, and set up an adverse title, if the jury allow in a special verdict the land claimed by defendants, without passing on the question of title of plaintiffs, or of ouster, it will be considered a verdict for defendants, and entitle them to costs, if accepted by plaintiffs.—Gonzales v. Leon, 31 Cal. 98.

[c] When, in an action to determine an adverse claim to land, plaintiff succeeds in part and fails in part as to some of defendants, a judgment will not be reversed because the district court awarded costs against such defendants.—Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1025, which provides that in certain cases "costs may be allowed or not, and, if allowed, may be apportioned between the parties on the same or adverse sides, in the discretion of the court," in a suit for an injunction against several defendants, though plaintiff has judgment against one of defendants, where the issues are found in favor of the others, it is not an abuse of discretion to allow such defendants cost against plaintiff. Abram v. Stuart, 96 Cal. 235, 31 Pac. 44.

[a] Where action has been commenced against several defendants, and there has been judgment in their favor, they are not all entitled to recover separate costs to the amount allowed by the act, but can only recover jointly, as though there had been but one defendant.—Rice v. Leonard, 5 Cal. 61.

§ 14. Costs Incurred Under Void Order.

[a] The party who finally recovers in the case is not to lose costs necessarily incurred, because they were incurred under a void order, which was believed at the time to be valid.—Meyer v. City of San Diego, 132 Cal. 35, 64 Pac. 124.

[a] It is a general rule that a defendant who pleads a tender to entitle himself to costs must not only aver a tender, but that he has always been and is ready to pay the sum tendered, and the money must be brought into court.—Bryan v. Maume, 28 Cal. 238.

[b] Plaintiff may recover costs accruing before offer of judgment, though he obtain less favorable judgment than was offered. Duthitt v. Finch, 84 Cal. 215.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 71-82; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 185-221, §§ 137-164.

§ 16. Effect of Offer of Compromise.

[a] Offer of compromise under section 997, Code of Civil Procedure, does not bar plaintiff's right to costs if trial be concluded within five days after it is made.—Scammon v. Denio, 72 Cal. 396, 14 Pac. 98.

[b] Offer of compromise under section 997, Code of Civil Procedure, need not be refused by defendant, except by failure to accept.—Scammon v. Denio, 72 Cal. 379, 14 Pac. 98.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 17. Effect of Premature Commencement of Action.

[a] Where plaintiff in replevin had no right to the property at the time demand was made for it, and suit commenced, but he afterward acquired such right, and judgment was given in his favor for possession, defendant was entitled to costs.—O'Connor v. Blake, 29 Cal. 312.

[a] Costs are but an incident to a judgment; and if the court, by abatement of the action, loses power to render any judgment in the case before it, it is powerless to render any judgment for the costs incurred therein.—Begie v. Begie, 128 Cal. 154, 60 Pac. 667.

[b] Where no costs were allowed in the judgment, the appeal cannot be retained after the death of the appellant, to determine the question as to who is entitled to recover the costs upon appeal. Upon the abatement of an action or appeal by death of a party, there can be no judgment for costs in favor of the survivor, but each party must bear his own costs incurred prior to the death. Begie v. Begie, 128 Cal. 154, 60 Pac. 667.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 739, which provides that, if defendant in an action to quiet title disclaims in his answer any interest or estate in the property, plaintiff cannot recover costs, it is immaterial whether or not a defendant who, in his answer, makes such a disclaimer has ever before claimed an interest in the property, as in either event plaintiff would be entitled to judgment without costs.—Bulwer Consol. Min. Co. v. Standard Consol. Min. Co., 83 Cal. 589, 23 Pac. 1102.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 20. —— Joining Answer with Disclaimer.

[a] In an action to determine an adverse claim to land, defendant will not be exonerated from payment of costs by disclaiming any title or interest in himself, when, if at the same time, he answers, denying the allegation of possession contained in the complaint, thereby compelling plaintiff to prove that issue, and plaintiff finally succeeds on such issue.—Brooks v. Calderwood, 34 Cal. 563.

[a] Costs, by way of indemnity, ought not to be taxed in case of a nonsuit.—Rice v. Leonard, 5 Cal. 61.

[b] Where a nonsuit is granted in a civil case, and the jury discharged, the jury fees must be paid by the plaintiff, and no further proceedings should be allowed in the case until such payment.—Lukes v. Logan, 66 Cal. 33, 4 Pac. 883.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 22. On Second Successful Trial.

[a] When there have been two trials of an action for the recovery of money or damages, in both of which the plaintiff was successful, he is entitled as of right to his costs on both trials.—Stoddard v. Treadwell, 29 Cal. 281.

§ 23. On Opening Default.

[a] Where costs are imposed as condition for reopening case after the adjournment of the term, the acceptance of the costs by the opposite party will not be construed into a consent to have the cause reinstated.—Carpentier v. Hart, 5 Cal. 406.

[b] Under Practice Act, section 68, authorizing the setting aside of a judgment rendered through excusable neglect on such terms as may be just, and on payment of costs, it is error to set aside such a judgment without imposing the payment of costs as a condition of setting it aside.—People v. O'Connell, 23 Cal. 281.

[c] An order vacating a judgment by default is erroneous if it does not require payment of previous costs as a condition of vacating it, in view of the statute requiring the payment of costs when such a judgment is vacated.—(1865) Howe v. Independence Consol. Gold etc. Min. Co., 29 Cal. 72; (1866) Bailey v. Jaaffee, 29 Cal. 423.

[d] In order to release a party from a default judgment taken against him under Practice Act, section 68, it should only be granted on the promise of payment of all costs accruing to the adverse party to the time of service and filing of motion therefor. Leet v. Grants, 36 Cal. 288.

[a] Where judgment below is reversed on appeal, and a new trial had, the costs of the first trial are part of the final bill of costs.—Visher v. Webster, 13 Cal. 58.

[b] The party responsible for erroneous proceedings after a remittitur has been sent down from the supreme court must pay the costs of those proceedings, and also the costs of an appeal caused by them.—Argenti v. City of San Francisco, 30 Cal. 458.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 25. Entry of Judgment for Costs.

[a] Since Statutes of 1861, page 494, authorizes the clerk to insert the amount of the costs within two days after they have been taxed or ascertained, in a blank left in the judgment for that purpose, such insertion may be made after the judgment is entered, and after the court has adjourned for the term.—Antoine Co. v. Ridge Co., 23 Cal. 219.

[b] Under Practice Act of 1851, section 511, requiring the clerk to include the costs in the judgment, he had no authority to enter the judgment, and then, at a subsequent time, insert the costs. Any execution under such a so-called judgment for costs would be void. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 Pac. 418.

[c] The clerk has no authority to enter a judgment for costs while a motion to retax is pending.—Santa Clara Mill etc. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 71 Cal. 268, 12 Pac. 129.

§ 26. Assignment of Costs.

II. PERSONS AND PROPERTY LIABLE.

—— INTERVENERS, § 28.
APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS, § 29.
PROPERTY LIABLE, § 30.

§ 27. Persons Liable.

[a] Where defendants, wife and husband, in an action to set aside a deed to the wife, answered that the deed was made in good faith, for a valuable consideration, costs may be awarded against both defendants; for their answer, in effect, claimed a joint interest in the property, within Civil Code, section 164, providing that property acquired after marriage by a husband or wife is community property.—Collins v. O'Laverty, 136 Cal. 31, 68 Pac. 327.

[b] In an action of interpleader, where no issue is joined on the right of the plaintiff to bring the action, and the plaintiff is dismissed therefrom, he ceases to be a party to the action; and where the defendants litigate between themselves the right to the money deposited in court, the costs of appeal awarded to the appellant from the judgment between them can only be enforced against the respondent upon that appeal, and where they were sought to be enforced against the plaintiff in the action the court properly made an order perpetually staying execution against the plaintiff.—San Francisco Savings Union v. Long, 137 Cal. 68, 69 Pac. 687.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 1031, 1509, it is not necessary that there be a finding of mismanagement or bad faith before costs may be awarded against an executor.—Meyer v. O'Rourke, 88 Pac. 706.

[d] In the absence of statute authorizing imposition of costs against executors, etc., under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1022, providing for the allowance of costs to plaintiff on judgment in his favor, costs will be imposed upon an executor individually, leaving him the right to seek reimbursement from the estate should he be fairly entitled to it.—Meyer v. O'Rourke, 88 Pac. 706.

[a] Where the supreme court reverses a judgment for intervener, and orders the intervention dismissed, the costs of the trial should be taxed, with those of the appeal, against intervener.—Reay v. Butler, 99 Cal. 477, 33 Pac. 1134.

[a] In an action against several defendants for severally diverting water from a stream, so as to diminish the flow, it is proper to apportion the costs and damages recovered by plaintiff equally among defendants.—Hillman v. Newington, 57 Cal. 56.

[a] On a bill to dissolve a joint-stock association and distribute its assets, it being for the interest of all parties concerned that the company should be legally dissolved, held, that the costs and a counsel fee on each side should be paid out of the fund.—Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

[b] In an action by the creditors and assignee in insolvency of a grantor to set aside a conveyance, a decree of sale which allows the creditors' attorney's fees to be deducted from the proceeds of sale of the land, and, after paying the creditors, the residue to be paid to the grantee, and giving the assignee no share in the fund, is erroneous, as counsel fees are not recoverable by the successful parties against one who is adversely interested, nor is an assignee entitled to costs where the case was decided against him.—Miller v. Kehoe, 107 Cal. 340, 40 Pac. 485.

[c] The sheriff cannot apply the proceeds of sale under execution to the payment of keeper's fees and expenses under a writ of attachment which were not included in the cost-bill and judgment, and they are not part of the accruing costs allowed under section 697 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which include only such fees and expenses as are incurred in the execution of the judgment.—Hotchkiss v. Smith, 108 Cal. 285, 41 Pac. 304.

[d] Where it appears that, exclusive of the item of keeper's fees under a writ of attachment constituting no part of the judgment, the property sold under the execution is sufficient when properly applied, to satisfy the judgment, including the amount of costs claimed in the cost-bill and accruing costs, the defendant is entitled to have the proceeds so applied, and to have the judgment satisfied.—Hotchkiss v. Smith, 108 Cal. 285, 41 Pac. 304.

[e] Where an attachment of property of an insolvent building association is a valid lien, the costs of the action are secured by it, and should be paid in full from the proceeds of the sale of the attached property, the same as the original debt sued on.—Bories v. Union Building etc. Assn., 141 Cal. 79, 74 Pac. 554.

III. SECURITY FOR COSTS.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS, § 31.
TIME TO MOVE FOR SECURITY, § 32.
EFFECT OF FAILURE TO FILE IN TIME, § 33.
WAIVER OF FAILURE TO FILE IN TIME, § 34.
TIME TO FILE ADDITIONAL SECURITY, § 35.

In action for libel or slander. See Libel and Slander, § 23.

[a] Under Statutes of 1871-72, page 533, requiring plaintiff in an action for slander to file an undertaking with sureties who shall annex to such undertaking an affidavit that they are residents "within the county," and whose qualifications "shall be as required in their affidavits," such sureties must be residents within the county in which the action is brought.—Smith v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 421, 29 Pac. 34.

[b] A school district, being a distinct corporation, though having the same name and embracing the same territory as a city, is not within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1058, exempting a county or city from giving security in a civil action.—Mitchell v. Board of Education of City and County of San Francisco, 137 Cal. 372, 70 Pac. 180; Reeves v. Board of Education of City and County of San Francisco, 137 Cal. 372, 70 Pac. 180.

[c] In an action by a foreign corporation against residents of this state who demand security for costs and charges, under section 941 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the undertaking must be of the same nature as a cost bond upon appeal, that the sureties will pay such costs and charges as may be awarded against the plaintiff by the judgment, not exceeding three hundred dollars. The court has no power to fix a less sum, or to change the amount or condition of the bond fixed by the statute; and after the lapse of thirty days without the giving of the statutory bond, the action was properly dismissed.—Meade County Bank v. Bailey, 137 Cal. 447, 70 Pac. 297.

See 11 Cyc. 176; 13 Cent. Dig., col. 415, §§ 401, 402.

§ 32. Time to Move for Security.

[a] Notice requiring security for costs from a nonresident plaintiff was served December 12th, unaccompanied by an order staying proceedings. The following day, judgment was rendered for defendant, and January 19th the plaintiff perfected his appeal. Held, that defendant's motion to dismiss the appeal for plaintiff's failure to give security below was properly refused, as it was too late, after judgment, to move to dismiss the action.—Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77.

§ 33. Effect of Failure to File in Time.

[a] Acts of 1871, page 553, section 1, requiring an undertaking for costs, in actions for damages for libel, does not deprive the court of jurisdiction in case such undertaking is not filed; and the object of the statute is effected if, when the objection is made, an undertaking be executed and the defendant thus secured the costs and charges which may be awarded to him.—Dixon v. Allen, 69 Cal. 527, 11 Pac. 179.

suance of the summons, as required by act of March 23, 1872, but a few days afterward such an undertaking is filed, it is error to dismiss the complaint on an objection being made, months after the filing of the undertaking, that it was not filed in time.—Stinson v. Carpenter, 78 Cal. 571, 21 Pac. 304.

[a] A provision of an order requiring contestants to give additional security for costs requiring the security to be furnished within ten days, held ineffectual; contestants being entitled to thirty days under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1036, 1037.—Dean's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 13.

IV. ITEMS ALLOWABLE AS COSTS.

ATTORNEY'S FEES, § 36.
CLERK'S FEES, §§ 38, 39.
REPORTER'S FEES, § 40.
RECEIVER'S FEES, § 41.
PUBLICATION OF SUMMONS, § 42.
EVIDENCE—MAPS, § 43.
—— CERTIFICATE AND COPIES, § 44.
DEPOSITIONS, § 45.
WITNESS' FEES, § 46.
—— WITNESS SUBPOENAED BUT NOT EXAMINED, § 47.
—— EXPERTS, § 48.

§ 36. Attorney's Fees.

[a] Counsel fees not taxable as costs.—Selby v. Bark Alice Tarlton, 1 Cal. 103.

[b] As general rule counsel fees are not recoverable as costs by a successful party in actions either at law or in equity.—Williams v. MacDougall, 39 Cal. 80.

[d] Counsel fees are not, as a general rule, recoverable in actions either in law or in equity, although in some equity cases they may be awarded at the discretion of the court; but where the parties to an action in equity are hostile litigants, and each employs his own attorney, and contests the main issues of the case, the refusal of the court to allow the successful party his attorney's fees is not an abuse of discretion.—Salmina v. Juri, 96 Cal. 418, 31 Pac. 365.

[e] General rule is that counsel fees are not recoverable by a successful party in an action either at law or in equity, except in enumerated instances where they are expressly allowed by statute.—Miller v. Kehoe, 107 Cal. 340, 40 Pac. 985.

[f] Counsel fees are not costs or disbursements and cannot be recovered unless specifically asked for in prayer.—Brooks v. Forrington, 117 Cal. 221, 48 Pac. 1073.

[h] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1195, providing that the court must allow reasonable attorney's fees, no allegation and finding as to attorney's fees being necessary, a claim that a finding that an allegation that plaintiff was informed that a certain amount was a reasonable attorney's fee was insufficient to support the judgment for attorney's fees, is without force.—Ah Louis v. Harwood, 140 Cal. 500, 74 Pac. 41; Geung Hong v. Harwood, 140 Cal. 500, 74 Pac. 41.

[i] Counsel fees are not recoverable in an action of slander by a defendant in whose favor a judgment is rendered, unless such fees are included in his memorandum of costs.—McKinney v. Roberts, 8 Pac. 3.

[j] Statement of defendant's right under Statutes of 1871-72, pages 533, 534, chapter 377, sections 6, 7, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, to have counsel fees taxed as costs where a libel or slander suit is dismissed.—Gaffey v. Mann (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 424.

[k] In an action on note by pledgor, allowance of attorney's fees held improper.—Graham v. Light (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 373.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] When the case was set for trial, plaintiff waived a jury, and defendant stated that, while he did not demand a jury, he did not expressly waive it. On the day set for trial a jury was in attendance, and the parties then announced that they had agreed to try the case without a jury. Plaintiff did not pay or become liable for any jury fees. Held, that he could not recover the jurors' attendance fees as costs.—Freshour v. Hihn, 99 Cal. 443, 34 Pac. 87.

§§ 38, 39. Clerk's Fees.

§ 40. Reporter's Fees.

chargeable as costs.—Barkly v. Copeland, 86 Cal. 494, 25 Pac. 3.

[b] When transcript of evidence is made by order of court, half of reporter's fees paid by successful party may be recovered as costs.—Barkly v. Copeland, 86 Cal. 494, 25 Pac. 3.

[c] Verbal direction that reporter transcribe his notes and file them with clerk is sufficient order under section 274, Code of Civil Procedure.—Taylor v. McConigle, 120 Cal. 128, 52 Pac. 159.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 274, as amended by Statutes of 1880, page 54, requiring a party ordering the reporter to transcribe any portion of the testimony to pay the fees therefor, the cost of a transcription should not be taxed as costs where the parties arranged with the reporter, out of court, to furnish each a copy thereof at an agreed price.—City of Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585.

[e] Where the court refuses to order the transcribing of reporter's notes unless plaintiff will consent, and he refuses such consent, the reporter's fees for transacting such notes cannot be charged as costs.—Senior v. Anderson, 130 Cal. 290, 62 Pac. 563.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 41. Receiver's Fees.

[a] The compensation allowed a receiver is properly costs of suit.—Ephraim v. Pacific Bank, 136 Cal. 646, 69 Pac. 436.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 42. Publication of Summons.

[a] In an action by the state to annul a certificate of sale of state lands for failure of the purchaser to make certain payments thereon, where jurisdiction is acquired by defendant by publication of the summons, the cost of publishing it must be taxed against him, on the state's recovering.—Lawrence v. Booth, 46 Cal. 187.

§ 43. Evidence—Maps.

[a] A charge of five hundred dollars for a map in a bill of costs is not a necessary disbursement, appearing as such on its face, which, unless controverted, will control the court on taxation.—Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 91 Cal. 103, 27 Pac. 536.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Fees paid the clerk for certifying copies which are not required by law to be certified cannot be recovered as costs.—Edmondson v. Mason, 16 Cal. 386.

[b] In an action to quiet title to water rights, expenses for copies of papers containing certain homestead rights of a riparian proprietor, under whom one of the parties claimed, are not chargeable as costs, where it was not shown that such copies were likely to be needed in the case.—Senior v. Anderson, 130 Cal. 290, 62 Pac. 563.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Cost of taking depositions are properly allowed, though they are not used at trial, unless shown that it was unnecessary to take them or they should not be allowed for some special reason.—Lindy v. McChesney, 141 Cal. 353.

See 11 Cyc. 121-124; 13 Cyc. 1028, 1029; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 560-568, §§ 596-604.

[a] Character of testimony given by witnesses is not a test of necessity for incurring expense of subpoenaing them.—Barnhart v. Kron, 88 Cal. 449, 26 Pac. 210.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 114-121; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 675-700, §§ 715-743.

[a] Fees of witnesses summoned and attending, but not sworn on the trial, may be taxed, unless it appear that they were unnecessarily or unjustly summoned.—Randall v. Falkner, 41 Cal. 242.

[a] In the taxation of costs, expert witnesses should be allowed only the usual fees for daily attendance and mileage as witnesses, and the costs allowed cannot properly include their pay as experts, nor the expenses incurred by them in making surveys or preparing maps, when not acting under the direction of the court.—Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158, 58 Pac. 442.

[a] Where a will is contested, and the probate court frames issues and sends them to the district court, where the issues are tried by a jury, and the verdict is certified back to the probate court, the probate court has power, under the act relating to decedents' estates (section 35), to tax the costs accruing in the district court to the unsuccessful party.—Abila v. Padilla, 19 Cal. 388.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 50. Time for Application.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, requiring the party prevailing, and who claimed his costs, to secure a memorandum of the items thereof within five days after the verdict, or "notice" of the decision of the court or referee, he is not entitled to "notice" from the adverse party, but the five days begin to run from the verdict, or the prevailing party's actual knowledge of the decision.—O'Neil v. Donahue, 57 Cal. 226.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 51. —— Amendment.

[a] Where the original bill of costs is filed within the time prescribed by the act, an amendment allowed after the time relates back to the time of filing the original, of which it forms merely a part.—Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115.

§ 52. Cost-bill or Memorandum—Contents.

[a] Where the fees and expenses of a sheriff for the keeping of property held under a writ of attachment are not claimed by the plaintiff in the memorandum of costs, and are not included in the judgment, the failure so to claim and include them in the manner required by the statute is a waiver of such costs, and precludes a recovery thereof from the defendant.—Hotchkiss v. Smith, 108 Cal. 285, 41 Pac. 304.

[b] Under a judgment in a divorce proceeding, requiring "all costs, expenses, and disbursements provided for and contemplated in this decree or judgment" to be paid by the plaintiff exclusively out of his separate property, defendant has no right to include in her cost-bills items not taxable as costs.—White v. White, 33 Pac. 399.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Under the Practice Act, as it stood in 1854, a party who failed to file with the clerk a memorandum of costs within the time limited, waived his right to costs, whether they were clerk's and sheriff's fees or other costs; and, in the absence of such memorandum, the clerk had no power to include costs in the judgment.—Chapin v. Broder, 16 Cal. 403.

[b] Where a will is contested, and the probate court frames issues and sends them to the district court, where the issues are tried by a jury, and the verdict is certified back to the probate court, a bill of costs accruing in the district court must be filed in the probate court within the statutory time after the verdict was certified to that court, and a failure so to file the bill of costs operates as a waiver thereof, and the probate court has no power to render judgment therefor.—Abila v. Padilla, 19 Cal. 388.

[c] A memorandum of the costs of filing notice and undertaking on appeal and preparing the transcript for the supreme court should be filed in the office of the clerk of the court below at the time of filing the remittitur there, or within the time thereafter prescribed by the statute in other cases.—Ex parte Burrill, 24 Cal. 350.

[d] In the provision of the code prescribing the time within which a memorandum of costs must be filed the decision referred to is the finding of facts and conclusions of law signed by the court and filed with the clerk as the basis of the judgment.—Porter v. Hopkins, 63 Cal. 53.

[e] Memorandum of costs is not filed in time when filed more than five days after claimant knows of decision, though no notice of decision is served.—Mullally v. Irish etc. Soc., 69 Cal. 561, 11 Pac. 215.

[f] Under section 1033 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a judgment for costs entered by the clerk, in the absence of the filing or service of a memorandum of costs on the opposite party, is without jurisdiction and void. Riddell v. Harrell, 71 Cal. 254, 12 Pac. 67.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1011, providing for the service of papers on an attorney at his office, or, if it is not open, at his residence, and, if the residence is unknown, by depositing the paper in the post-office, though the attorney of plaintiff, who desired to serve a cost-bill on defendant's attorney, lived at a different postoffice from that of the latter, a deposit in the postoffice at the residence of defendant's attorney is not a valid service; the act requiring a service at his own residence to be personal.—Thompson v. Brannan, 76 Cal. 618, 18 Pac. 783.

[h] Costs cannot be recovered when cost-bill is not properly served.—Thompson v. Brannan, 76 Cal. 620, 18 Pac. 783.

[i] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, which provides that "the party in whose favor judgment is rendered, and who claims his costs, may deliver to the clerk and serve upon the adverse party, within five days after the verdict, or notice of the decision of the court, ... a memorandum of the items of his costs and necessary disbursements in the action or proceeding," etc., where a judgment was rendered for defendant on October 5th, his attorney having actual notice at the time, though no written notice was served on him, and he failed to file his memorandum of costs until the 11th of the same month, such filing was too late, and he was not entitled to costs.—Dow v. Ross, 90 Cal. 562, 27 Pac. 409.

[j] An affidavit by the attorney does not show "excusable neglect," under Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, when it sets out that he had notice of the judgment on October 5th, but was too busy to make the memorandum; that the 6th was Sunday; that the 7th he was unable to obtain the items; that on the 8th, he partly prepared it; and then forgot about it until the 11th, when it came to his attention, and he immediately prepared, served, and filed the same.—Dow v. Ross, 90 Cal. 562, 27 Pac. 409.

[k] Where a party appeals from a judgment in his favor, and the judgment-roll fails to show a cost-bill filed, or a motion for costs, he cannot complain that the court refused to allow the costs.—Crane v. Forth, 95 Cal. 88, 30 Pac. 193.

[l] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, which provides that a cost-bill must be filed within five days after the notice of the decision of the court, a cost-bill filed four days before the judgment is unauthorized, and should be stricken out.—Sellick v. De Carlow, 95 Cal. 644, 30 Pac. 795.

[m] Where the entry of judgment is stayed, a bill of costs may be filed at any time before such entry is made, though more than five days may have elapsed after notice of the decision; and under section 274 of the Code of Civil Procedure as it existed before the amendment of 1895, the service of notice upon the clerk that the reporter's fees had not been paid worked a stay of the entry of judgment, unless the court otherwise ordered. Taylor v. McConigle, 120 Cal. 123, 52 Pac. 159.

[n] A party entitled to costs, who had filed a cost-bill within five days after verdict or notice of decision, as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, which contemplates that a failure to comply with that section shall be deemed a waiver of costs, should not be permitted to file an amended cost-bill after the time limited for filing the original has expired, where there is no showing that his failure to claim omitted items within the time limited was due to mistake, inadvertence, or excusable negligence, as provided by section 473.—Galindo v. Roach, 130 Cal. 389, 62 Pac. 597.

[o] A motion to strike out a cost-bill as not being filed in time will not be sustained where the cost-bill was presented for filing within the proper time, but the clerk, without notifying such party, did not file it because a former item of cost was unpaid. Judgment (1899) 59 Pac. 387, reversed.—Beck v. Pasadena Lake Vineyard Land etc. Co., 130 Cal. 50, 62 Pac. 219.

[p] The service and filing of a cost-bill is fully within a proper construction of section 1054 of the Code of Civil Procedure, authorizing extensions of time of "a notice other than of appeal," and the trial judge has power to grant an extension of time therefor. Beilby v. Superior Court of Santa Cruz County, 138 Cal. 51, 70 Pac. 1024.

[q] A cost-bill in the probate court, in case of costs for any purpose other than the charges of officers appointed by the court, should be filed within the time specified for filing cost-bills in civil cases.—In re Ricaud, Myr. Prob. 158.

[a] If original affidavit to a bill of costs was a nullity, the defendant should have taken proper steps to set it aside, or have appealed from the judgment on the ground that the costs had been waived by operation of the statute.—Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115.

[b] Under the Practice Act an attorney is competent to swear to an affidavit of costs.—Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115, 58 Am. Dec. 389.

[c] Uncontroverted affidavit to cost-bill should control decision of court as to necessity for disbursements.—Barnhart v. Kron, 88 Cal. 450, 26 Pac. 210.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, requiring a cost-bill to be "verified by the oath of the party, or his attorney or agent, or by the clerk of his attorney," is sufficiently complied with when the affidavit is made by one who is familiar with the facts, and assisted at the trial, although not an attorney of record.—Yorba v. Dobner, 90 Cal. 337, 27 Pac. 185.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 55. Proof of Items.

[a] Where the prevailing party inserts a charge in his memorandum of costs which does not appear upon its face to be a necessary and proper disbursement, the burden of proof is upon the claimant.—Miller v. Highland Ditch Co., 91 Cal. 103, 27 Pac. 530.

[b] Where an item is included in the verified memorandum of costs, properly filed, it is prima facie correct, and the burden is upon one disputing its correctness to show that it was improper.—Meyer v. City of San Diego, 132 Cal. 35, 64 Pac. 124.

[a] An error in respect to costs cannot be corrected on an appeal from an order denying a new trial.—Stevenson v. Smith, 28 Cal. 102, 87 Am. Dec. 107.

[b] If court adds to judgment costs, after time for filing same has expired, and after an appeal has been perfected, the error can only be corrected by an appeal from the order.—Jones v. Frost, 28 Cal. 245.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where the defendant moved a retaxation of the plaintiff's bill of costs it was proper for the court, in its discretion, to allow such amendments as were just and necessary.—Burnham v. Hays, 3 Cal. 115.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., col. 733, §§ 792, 793; col. 750, § 808.

[a] Where a party is dissatisfied with the decision of the prothonotary as to costs, his remedy is by appeal from the taxation.—Empire Gravel Min. Co. v. Bonanza Gravel Min. Co., 67 Cal. 406, 7 Pac. 810.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, providing that "a party dissatisfied with the costs claimed may, within nve days after the notice of filing of the bill of costs, file a motion to have the same taxed by the court," the service and filing of a written notice of the motion within the five days, and making the motion viva voce on the day designated, though after the five days have expired, is sufficient.—Kishlar v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 134 Cal. 636, 66 Pac. 848.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 59. —— Retaxation on Motion.

[a] The mere fact that some of the items of costs are not legally taxable affords no ground for recalling an execution or denying another. The remedy is by motion to retax.—Meeker v. Harris, 23 Cal. 285.

[b] The improper taxation of costs is no ground for a collateral attack on the judgment, the remedy being by motion to retax the costs.—Rogers v. Druffel, 46 Cal. 654.

[c] An objection to the taxation of costs will not be considered where no motion was made to retax, and no exception reserved.—Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, provides that a party may, within five days after notice of filing of a bill of costs, file a motion for taxation thereof. Prior to amendment by act of March 24, 1874, section 1033, did not require service of the bill of costs on the adverse party, and made no provision for relief against improper items in the bill, but the practice had been settled that relief should be had by motion to retax. Defendant served proper notice of motion for retaxation, and made the motion orally, which the court refused to hear because not in writing. Held error, since the amendment was only declaratory of existing law as defined by the practice of the court, except in fixing the time and place for the motion, and an oral motion is a substantial compliance with the statute.—Carpy v. Dowdell, 129 Cal. 244, 61 Pac. 1126.

[e] A notice of motion to retax costs, not accompanied by any affidavit specifying the grounds of objection, but stating that the items mentioned were not legally chargeable, and were not necessary disbursements, is sufficient, since Code of Civil Procedure, section 1033, providing for motions for the taxation of costs by the court, does not specify what the notice shall contain.—Senior v. Anderson, 130 Cal. 290, 62 Pac. 563.

[f] On the hearing of a motion to retax costs, not accompanied by an affidavit specifying the grounds of objection to the items mentioned, but stating that such items were not legally chargeable as costs, and that the motion would be heard on the papers and any other testimony that might be procured, any evidence competent to prove the items of costs is admissible, over objection that no affidavit specifying the facts on which the objection was based accompanied the notice, since such notice was sufficient without the affidavit.—Senior v. Anderson, 130 Cal. 290, 62 Pac. 563.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 60. Review of Order Granting or Refusing Retaxation.

[a] An order denying a motion to retax costs, made before final judgment, should be reviewed by an appeal from the judgment, raising the question of the correctness of the taxation by a statement annexed to the judgment-roll, and not by an appeal from such order.—Levy v. Getleson, 27 Cal. 685.

[b] Practice Act, section 343, authorizing an appeal from a final judgment, does not include an order made on motion to retax costs after entry of judgment, but such an order may be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, as the order becomes a part of the judgment.—Lasky v. Davis, 33 Cal. 677.

[c] If an order on a motion to retax costs is made before the entry of judgment, it may be reviewed by an appeal from the judgment with a statement annexed to the record. If made after the entry of judgment, it is a special order made after final judgment, from which an appeal lies.—Dooly v. Norton, 41 Cal. 439.

[d] Where a motion to strike out the costs, if permitted, would have effected a modification of the judgment, the order refusing the motion can be reviewed only on an appeal from the judgment.—Flubacher v. Kelly, 49 Cal. 116.

[e] On appeal from a judgment, where the supreme court have only the judgment-roll before them, they cannot review an order denying a motion to retax costs. The memorandum of costs constitutes no part of the judgment-roll.—Kelly v. McKibben, 54 Cal. 192.

[f] Where the amount of costs allowed by the court is less than three hundred dollars, the action of the trial court relating thereto is not reviewable upon appeal, and a separate appeal from the order taxing the costs will be dismissed.—Foley v. California Horseshoe Co., 115 Cal. 184, 56 Am. St. Rep. 87, 47 Pac. 42.

[a] A decree will not be reversed for error in calculating costs where the matter was not brought to the attention of the trial court by motion to correct or to retax costs, or by some proceeding analogous to exceptions to a master's report.—Gronfier v. Minturn, 5 Cal. 492.

[b] Error in the taxation of costs cannot be reviewed, in the absence of a motion to retax in the trial court.—Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 416; (1889) Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

[c] The objection that costs were improperly taxed will not be reviewed unless presented to the court below.—(Cal. 1865) Stoddard v. Treadwell, 29 Cal. 281.

§ 62. —— Necessity of Taking Exception.

[a] An objection to the taxation of costs will not be considered on appeal where no exception was reserved below.—Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

§ 63. —— Necessity of Retaxation in Lower Court.

[a] A mistake in the calculation of interest, or taxation of costs, cannot be attacked for the first time in an appellate court. The party complaining must move, in the district court, to retax, and thus obtain, distinctly, the judgment of the court of original jurisdiction, upon the disputed items, before resort can be had to a higher tribunal.—Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 416.

§ 64. —— Time for Making Motion or Application for Retaxation.

[a] Where a new trial is granted on condition that the applicant pay the costs of the adverse party within a given time, and the bill of costs is erroneous, the court may retax the costs after the expiration of the time fixed for their payment in the order granting a new trial where the applicant tendered the real sum due within such time.—Higuerra v. Bernal, 46 Cal. 580.

[a] Where, on an appeal to retax costs, the various notes and affidavits filed are not embodied in a bill of exceptions or statement, judgment will be affirmed, on the presumption that the court below decided correctly upon all the evidence before it.—Gates v. Buckingham, 4 Cal. 286.

§ 66. —— Hearing and Determination Generally.

[a] The decision of a motion to retax costs will not be disturbed where the items appear proper on their face, and the objections thereto were heard and determined on conflicting evidence.—Hoyt v. Selby Smelting etc. Co., 90 Cal. 339, 27 Pac. 288.

§ 67. —— Questions Considered.

[a] Where plaintiff asked for an attorney's fee, and defendant contended that a smaller fee would be sufficient, and it was left to the discretion of the court to fix the amount, its decision will not ordinarily be disturbed.—Patent Brick Co. v. Moore, 75 Cal. 205, 16 Pac. 890.

§ 68. —— Retaxation by Supreme Court.

[a] When the supreme court has obtained jurisdiction of the case by appeal from a sufficient judgment, it can then correct the costs which are inserted in the judgment, as to any item which is improperly charged.—Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 89.

§ 68½. Curing Error by Reducing Amount.

[a] Error of the clerk in entering a judgment for costs against defendant in the sum claimed in plaintiff's cost-bill, before the determination of defendant's motion to tax costs, is cured by an order of court reducing the amount.—Foley v. California Horseshoe Co., 115 Cal. 184, 47 Pac. 42.

§ 69. In General.

[a] Costs upon appeal are properly the costs in supreme court, and the costs of making up the appeal in the court below, including the cost of making out the transcript.—Gray v. Gray, and Eaton v. Palmer, 11 Cal. 341.

[b] Appellant held entitled to costs on appeal.—Cannon v. Handley, 72 Cal. 145, 13 Pac. 315.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 204-253; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 769-960, §§ 832-1016.

§ 70. Effect of Failure to Consolidate Appeals.

§ 71. Prevailing Party.

[a] When allowance of interest below was excessive, judgment was affirmed, less interest, without costs to either party.—Lambert v. Schmalz, 118 Cal. 38, 50 Pac. 13.

[b] Upon the affirmance of an appeal from a judgment enforcing a mechanic's lien, the supreme court will not make any directions to the lower court respecting the allowance of an attorney's fee for defending the appeal. Under section 1195 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that matter rests exclusively with the trial court.—San Joaquin Lumber Co. v. Welton, 115 Cal. 1, 46 Pac. 735, 1057; Evans v. Judson, 120 Cal. 282, 52 Pac. 585.

[c] Where, on an appeal from an order granting a new trial, the order is at first reversed, but finally affirmed on a ground first suggested on the rehearing, costs of the appeal should be allowed to appellant.—Yule v. Bishop, 133 Cal. 574, 65 Pac. 1094.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 73. Amendment or Modification.

[a] The judgment in this case, being for too much interest, was modified by the supreme court in that particular, and then permitted to stand, at appellant's cost, on the principle that where the supreme court modifies the judgment below for an apparent error, which appellant might have corrected below, on motion, respondent will not be taxed with costs.—Cassin v. Marshall, 18 Cal. 689.

[b] Where a judgment was reported by a referee payable in gold coin, and there was nothing in the record warranting it, the supreme court will direct the judgment to be modified, but without costs to appellant, if he failed to ask the court below to make the modification.—Noonan v. Hood, 49 Cal. 293.

[c] A decision on appeal, in an action of claim and delivery, directing the trial court to correct its judgment so as to make it in the alternative is a clear and important modification of the judgment within the meaning of rule 24 of the supreme court, and, if the decision contains no direction as to costs of appeal, the clerk may properly enter upon the record, and insert in the remittitur a judgment for such costs in favor of the appellant, in compliance with that rule.—Meads v. Lasar, 93 Cal. 530, 29 Pac. 125.

[d] A defect in the decree of distribution in failing to contain a provision for the payment of small legacies, of five dollars each, will be ordered corrected in that respect by the trial court, without costs to the appellant.—Estate of Langdon, 129 Cal. 451, 62 Pac. 73.

[e] Costs held not to be awarded for modification on appeal of a decree for which the appeal was not taken.—Southside Improvement Co. v. Burson, 147 Cal. 401, 81 Pac. 1107.

[f] Costs on appeal from two improper judgments which, if enforced, would have cast heavy expense on appellant, are properly chargeable to respondent, on a reformation thereof.—Schaeffer v. Hofmann, 37 Pac. 932.

[a] On the dismissal by the county court of an appeal from a justice court for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter, costs may be awarded against appellant.—Blair v. Cummings, 39 Cal. 667.

[b] On the dismissal of an appeal for want of prosecution, costs may be awarded against appellant.—Blair v. Cummings, 39 Cal. 667.

[c] Where an appeal is dismissed because a new trial was granted, appellant is entitled to costs.—Blackburn v. Abila, 39 Pac. 797.

[a] Appellant here made to pay costs where the only error was in entering judgment non obstante veredicto, and the judgment was reversed, with permission to the court to enter judgment on the verdict if the plaintiff desired it.—Reniff v. The Cynthia, 18 Cal. 669.

[b] On appeal from a judgment and order denying a new trial, where the court orders the submission set aside as to the appeal from the judgment, and the hearing thereon continued until further orders, but on the other appeal reverses the order denying new trial, appellant is entitled to costs.—Dixon v. Pluns, 35 Pac. 1047.

[c] On reversal of a judgment, appellant or plaintiff in error is entitled to costs.—Schaeffer v. Hofmann, 37 Pac. 932.

See 11 Cyc. 207-210, 212-214; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 841-851, §§ 900-907; cols. 866-869, § 929.

§ 76. Trivial Error.

[a] An error, in a judgment of foreclosure appealed from, in the rate of interest after judgment, held insufficient to entitle appellant to the costs of the appeal.—Thrasher v. Moran, 146 Cal. 683, 81 Pac. 32.

§ 77. Error Corrected or Correctable Below.

[a] Where correction in judgment made on appeal would have been made in lower court on mere suggestion, costs are on appellant. Cutting F. P.Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 697, 698, 75 Pac. 569.

[a] If judgment is affirmed in part, costs of appeal may be allowed to appellant, and of lower court to respondent.—Cole v. Swanston, 1 Cal. 51, 52 Am. Dec. 288, 7 Cal. 148; Bradbury v. Barnes, 19 Cal. 120.

[b] Decree modified, each party to pay his own costs in the supreme court.—Bradbury v. Barnes, 19 Cal. 120.

§ 79. Security for Costs.

[a] Where defendant served on plaintiff, a nonresident, notice to give security for costs, the notice not being accompanied with an order staying proceedings, and on the next day judgment was rendered for defendant, and plaintiff appealed to the supreme court, held, on motion to dismiss the appeal, that after judgment it was too late to move to dismiss the action; that the undertaking on appeal is sufficient security for costs subsequently incurred, and that the motion must be denied.—Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 80. Items—Attorney's Fees to Lien Claimants.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1195, providing that, in actions to enforce liens, the superior court must allow, as a part of the costs, the money paid for filing and recording the lien, and reasonable attorneys' fees in the superior and supreme court, such costs and attorneys' fees to be allowed to each lien claimant whose lien is established, attorneys' fees in the supreme court are not costs, within Supreme Court Rule 24, providing that, where an order of reversal or modification contains no directions as to costs of appeal, the clerk will insert in the remittitur a judgment that appellants recover the costs.—Schallert-Ganahl Lumber Co. v. Neal, 94 Cal. 192, 29 Pac. 622.

[b] Under section 1195, the allowance of attorneys' fees in lien cases is in the hands of the superior court, and though, on appeal from judgment allowing a lien, the superior court is directed to modify the judgment as to a certain item, it may still allow the lien claimant attorneys' fees in the supreme court.—Schallert-Ganahl Lumber Co., v. Neal, 94 Cal. 192, 29 Pac. 622.

[a] Where the clerk of the supreme court, in entering up the judgment, adds the words "with costs," and annexes to the remittitur a copy of the bill of costs filed, these words are a sufficient awarding of costs for the clerk of the court below to issue execution for the same.—City of Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 212.

§ 83. —— Construction of Judgment or Order, in General.

[a] Where a case is remanded for further proceedings, and the costs awarded in this court in general terms, the costs on appeal only are included, leaving the costs of the former trial to abide the event of the suit. Gray v. Gray, and Eaton v. Palmer, 11 Cal. 341.

§ 84. Expenses of Record, Abstract or Transcript on Appeal.

[a] Supreme Court Rule 11, allowing the costs of obtaining the clerk's certification to the transcript to be taxed to respondent on his refusal or failure to certify to the correctness of the transcript within five days after its presentation to him for that purpose, was merely intended to give respondent the opportunity to protect himself from the payment of such costs in case appellant is successful, and does not permit costs to be cast on him for such refusal where the appeal does not succeed.—Loftus v. Fischer, 113 Cal. 286, 45 Pac. 328.

[b] Costs of appellant in procuring certification to transcript on failure of respondent to join in stipulation to its correctness cannot be taxed against respondent where judgment is affirmed.—Loftus v. Fischer, 117 Cal. 134, 48 Pac. 1030.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 85. —— Where Another Record Exists.

[a] An appellant is entitled to such costs only as his appeal rendered necessary. Therefore, where, after procuring and paying for a transcript of the evidence, but before the statement was settled, appellant appealed on the judgment-roll, and the cause was reversed, appellant cannot recover costs of such transcript.—Woodland Bank v. Hiatt, 59 Cal. 580.

§ 86. —— Unnecessary Matter.

[a] Where irrelevant matter to any considerable extent has been introduced into the record on appeal, the party who insisted upon its introduction must pay the costs of that portion of the transcript, whether he succeeds upon the merits of the case or not. Harper v. Minor, 27 Cal. 107.

[b] Where a printed transcript in the supreme court is unnecessarily long, the party responsible therefor will be adjudged to pay the cost of printing thus unnecessarily incurred.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[c] If matter clearly immaterial is introduced into the statement on appeal, against the objection and exception of one of the parties, and this fact is made to appear in the record, the party insisting on its introduction will be taxed with the costs of the immaterial matter, irrespective of his success on the appeal.—Kimball v. Semple, 31 Cal. 657.

[d] Where appellant had included in his transcript a large amount of irrelevant matter, it was ordered and adjudged that he recover the costs of appeal, less one-half of the expense of procuring and printing the transcript.—Sichel v. DeCarrillo, 42 Cal. 493.

[e] When appellant inserts unnecessary and irrelevant matter in transcript, he cannot if he succeeds on the appeal, compel the respondent to pay for it.—McDougal v. Downey, 45 Cal. 165.

[f] A transcript being voluminous, twelve hundred and one folios long, consisting in great part of the shorthand reporter's notes in full, appellant was not allowed his costs.—People v. Miles, 56 Cal. 401.

[g] A transcript being unnecessarily voluminous, containing eleven hundred and eighty-two folios of printed matter, consisting of the reporter's notes at length, questions and answers, remarks of court and counsel, etc., defendant was not allowed his costs.—Bullard v. Creditors, 56 Cal. 600.

[h] The respondent will not be taxed with any part of the costs of printing the transcript by reason of having proposed amendments to the statement, by incorporating therein the greater part of the evidence in the case, for the purpose of showing that the exclusion of the testimony sought to be stricken out would not change the result. Duffy v. Duffy, 104 Cal. 602, 38 Pac. 443.

[i] Where a judgment is reversed, additional costs will not be imposed on the respondent on account of their inserting in the transcript a large amount of unnecessary matter, as by the reversal they will be required to pay the expenses of printing the same. Estate of Robinson, 106 Cal. 493, 39 Pac. 862.

[j] Where the transcript on appeal is filled with matters foreign to the case, full costs will not be awarded to appellant on reversal. Jones v. Iverson, 131 Cal. 101, 63 Pac. 135.

§ 87. Damages for Frivolous or Delay Appeal.

[a] Where appellant's case is supported by neither law, justice, nor fact, the appeal will be affirmed with damages for the delay. Magruder v. Melvin, 12 Cal. 559.

[b] Where appeal is clearly without merit, damages will be imposed by the appellate court.—Bates v. Vischer, 2 Cal. 355; Gannon v. Dougherty, 41 Cal. 661; Goodcell v. Davis, 62 Cal. 617.

[c] Where appeal is frivolous, damages will be imposed upon the appellant.—Adler v. Winkle, 53 Cal. 187; Kincaid v. Johnson, 47 Cal. 618; Russell v. Hill, 59 Cal. 21.

[e] When appeal is evidently taken for delay, damages will be imposed by this court. Russell v. Williams, 2 Cal. 158; Bateman v. Blumenthal, 61 Cal. 628; Gieske v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 247, 19 Pac. 421; Dreyfuss v. Giles, 79 Cal. 409, 21 Pac. 840; Whitby v. Rowell, 82 Cal. 635, 23 Pac. 40, 382; Langan v. Langan, 86 Cal. 132, 24 Pac. 852.

[f] If no error appears in the record on appeal from an order denying a new trial to the prejudice of the appellant the judgment and order will be affirmed with damages. Gross v. Kelleher, 80 Cal. 519, 22 Pac. 293.

[h] Where only ground urged is that court did not properly consider conflicting evidence the appeal will be treated as frivolous, and the order will be affirmed with damages. Long v. Saufley, 89 Cal. 437, 26 Pac. 902.

[i] Where it is evident that an appeal is frivolous, and taken purely for delay, the appellant will be mulcted in damages. Muller v. Rowell, 110 Cal. 318, 42 Pac. 804.

[j] Where an uncontradicted affidavit shows that the appeal was taken for delay, on dismissing the appeal damages will be allowed respondent.—McFadden v. Dietz, 115 Cal. 697, 47 Pac. 777.

[k] Where an appeal is clearly frivolous, the judgment appealed from will be affirmed, with damages.—Hearst v. Hart, 128 Cal. 327, 60 Pac. 846.

[l] Where, in an action of unlawful detainer, plaintiff has recovered by way of penalty three times the amount of rent due, it would not be proper to also allow him damages for a frivolous appeal.—Block v. Kearney, 132 Cal. xviii, 64 Pac. 267.

[m] Where no circumstances showing peculiar hardship appear, damages for a frivolous appeal will not be awarded on a dismissal thereof.—Brite v. Briggs, 136 Cal. xix, 68 Pac. 973.

[n] Where an appeal is devoid of merit, and apparently is made for delay, damages in addition to costs will be imposed.—Boehm v. Gibson, 35 Pac. 1014.

§ 88. Power to Award.

[a] If the appellate court should, upon the hearing of an appeal in insolvency for an order settling his account by an assignee, be of the opinion that the legal rate of interest is not sufficient compensation for the delay, and that the appeal is taken solely for delay, it has the power to make an additional allowance by way of damages.—Matter of Sharp, 92 Cal. 577, 28 Pac. 783.

§ 89. —— On Dismissal.

[a] Where an appellant has failed to file a transcript of the record, showing that the appeal had been perfected, the court ordered it dismissed, with ten per cent damages and costs.—Pacheco v. Bemal, 2 Cal. 150.

[b] Where the respondents obtained a judgment on the 23d of December, 1851, and the appeal bond was filed on the 24th of December, and a certificate of the clerk of the same court, dated February 2, 1852, showed that no transcript, record, or other papers in the cause had been filed, and the affidavit of respondents showed that the appeal was taken for delay, the court ordered the appeal to be dismissed, with ten per cent damages and costs.—Buckley v. Stebbins, 2 Cal. 149.

[c] Upon the dismissal of an appeal for failure to file the transcript, damages cannot be imposed.—Vaughn v. Werley, 62 Cal. 181.

§ 90. —— Failure to File Briefs and Records or to Make Argument.

[a] Where, on failure of an appellant to appear with his cause is called, the judgment appealed from is affirmed, with damages for frivolous appeal, on motion of respondents, there being no brief on file, and it thereafter appears that failure to file a brief was due to appellant's ignorance that his cause was on the calendar, and an examination of the records shows that the appeal was not frivolous, that part of the judgment imposing damages for frivolous appeal will be set aside.—Emhoff v. McMann, 23 Pac. 302.

[b] Defendant in ejectment, after pleading the general issue and possession for the statutory period, filed a disclaimer of any interest, but from a judgment for plaintiff, after a trial by the court, findings of fact being waived, he appealed. The record, however, contained no bill of exceptions or other showing of error, and defendant filed no brief or points and authorities. Held that, the appeal being manifestly without merit, one hundred dollars damages would be directed for plaintiff as part of the costs on appeal.—De Pena v. Trujillo, 30 Pac. 560.

[c] To a complaint in the ordinary form of ejectment a general denial and the statute of limitations were pleaded. Findings of fact were waived, and judgment was rendered for plaintiff. Defendant, on appeal, furnished no bill of exceptions or other record of error, and filed neither brief nor points and authorities. Held that, the appeal being manifestly without merit, payment of one hundred dollars damages, as part of costs on appeal, would be directed for respondent.—Meyers v. Trujillo, 30 Pac. 579.

§ 91. What Constitutes Frivolous or Delay Appeal.

[a] Where the error relied on to reverse a judgment was that the trial was by reference and that the reference was not authorized, and the record showed that the reference was duly made on appellant's own motion, the judgment was affirmed with ten per cent damages and costs.—Bates v. Visher, 2 Cal. 355.

[b] Where questions raised by the record have been repeatedly settled by this court, or are decided by reference to plain elementary principles of law, the judgment of the court below will be affirmed with damages.—Pinkham v. Wemple, 12 Cal. 449.

[c] When an appeal is without merit, and it appears to the appellate court to have been taken for delay, the mere fact that the attorney for the appellant acted in good faith in its prosecution will not relieve the appellant from liability for damages under section 957 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Lemon v. Rucker, 80 Cal. 609, 22 Pac. 471.

[e] On motion to dismiss an appeal, respondent's attorney made affidavit that prior to giving notice of appeal, appellant urged him to take less than the amount of the judgment, and said that, unless such sum was accepted, an appeal would be taken, and collection definitely delayed; that delay was all he wanted; and that after his refusal, and after notice of appeal was given, and undertaking filed, appellant, through his attorneys, renewed the proposition to press the appeal if the less sum was not accepted. Appellant filed no transcript, and did not controvert such statement. Held, that the appeal should be dismissed, with damages against appellant for delay.—Koelling v. Rutz, 108 Cal. 664, 41 Pac. 781.

[f] Where an attorney's fee on foreclosure is taxable "in the bill of costs," an appeal from a judgment allowing costs, taxed at twenty-two dollars and ninety cents, and plaintiff's attorney's fee, of one hundred dollars, is frivolous.—Grogan v. Nolan, 36 Pac. 397.

[g] In view of the plain provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 662, and numerous decisions of the supreme court, an appeal taken on the ground that trial courts have no authority to set aside verdicts is frivolous. Poote v. Hayes, 39 Pac. 601.

§ 92. —— Affidavit of Frivolity or Delay.

[a] When it appears by the uncontradicted affidavit of respondent, on an appeal from a money judgment, that the appeal was taken merely for delay, and that there was no pretense of any defense, the court, on dismissing the appeal for failure to file a transcript, will award respondent damages for appellant's abuse of the right of appeal.—Duncan v. Grady, 99 Cal. 552, 34 Pac. 112.

[b] On the dismissal of an appeal, damages will not be awarded in the respondent's favor on his ex parte affidavit that he has been informed and believes the appeal to be without merit.—Kirby v. Harrington, 13 Pac. 218.

[c] Where an appeal appears to be frivolous, a mere oral assurance in argument, that it was taken in good faith, is insufficient to avoid the imposition of damages, but such assurance must find some support in the record.—Younglove v. Cunningham, 43 Pac. 755.

§ 93. —— Person Liable.

[a] Where only one defendant appeals, the twenty per cent damages ordered by the supreme court for frivolity is claim against him alone.—McMillan v. Vischer, 14 Cal. 232.

§ 94. —— Amount of Damages.

[d] Appeal without merit affirmed with five per cent damages.—Montgomery v. Robinson, 76 Cal. 229, 18 Pac. 261; Gieske v. Anderson, 77 Cal. 249, 19 Pac. 421; Gale v. Bradbury, 116 Cal. 40, 47 Pac. 778; Clark v. Nordholt, 121 Cal. 28, 26 Am. St. Rep. 20, 53 Pac. 400.

§ 96. Medium of Payment.

[a] Under the specific contract act of April 27, 1863, in an action on a contract for the payment of money in a specific kind of currency, costs and the interest will be made payable in the kind of money specified in the contract.—Carpentier v. Atherton, 25 Cal. 564.

§ 97. Recovery of Costs Paid on Reversal.

[a] While plaintiffs, in whose favor costs, have been decreed, are not estopped by receipt of them to question on appeal so much of the decree as is in favor of defendants, on reversal of the decree they will be required to refund such costs before they are allowed a new trial.—Stockman v. Riverside Land etc. Co., 64 Cal. 57, 28 Pac. 116.

§ 98. Conditions as to Payment.

[a] Where a motion to set aside a judgment is granted "on payment of all costs," a failure by the opposing party to file his cost bill, or to give notice under a rule of court allowing five days after notice for payment of costs will not operate to make the vacation of the judgment absolute.—Gregory v. Haynes, 21 Cal. 443.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 99. Staying Proceedings Until Fees Paid.

[a] When a judgment is reversed by the supreme court, and the case remanded for further proceedings, and the clerk of the court below issues an execution for all costs, as well those of appeal as those accruing before notice of appeal was filed, the judge of the court below has power to make an order staying the execution in the hands of the sheriff, until an application can be made to the court to retax and adjust the costs.—Ex parte Burrill, 24 Cal. 350.

[b] Under section 274, Code of Civil Procedure, and act of 1872, page 188, court has power to stay proceedings until party in whose favor verdict is rendered has paid fees of jury and reporter.—Rhodes v. Spencer, 68 Cal. 200, 8 Pac. 855.

[a] Where a cause is remitted from the supreme court to a district court, the clerk of the district court may issue an exception for the costs accrued thereon without the order of the district court.—City of Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 212.

[b] The clerk of the court below can issue an execution, if required by the prevailing party, for the costs included in the memorandum, and the costs of the clerk of the supreme court as certified by him on the remittitur.—Burrill, Ex parte, 24 Cal. 350.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 101. Actions for Collection.

[a] A mandamus is not the proper remedy where an inferior court refuses to enter a judgment for costs. The party complaining may appeal, or bring his action for the costs. Peralta v. Adams, 2 Cal. 594.

[b] Officers for whose benefit costs are adjudged to be due and payable are entitled to sue for them.—Wickersham v. Denman, 68 Cal. 389, 9 Pac. 723.

§ 103. Jurisdiction of County Court to Award.

[a] A county court has no jurisdiction, in a criminal case, to render a judgment for the costs against a prosecuting witness.—Warring, In re, 50 Cal. 30.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1016-1019, §§ 1086-1090.

§ 104. Liabilities of County—Fees of City Recorder.

[a] The recorder of the city of Sacramento is not a judicial officer who is prohibited from taking fees, but he stands on the same footing as a justice of the peace, who is allowed to take them. Hence, the county of Sacramento is not liable to such recorder for costs. Curtis v. Sacramento, 13 Cal. 290.

must trust to the possible future ability of such persons for his compensation.—Rowe v. Yuba County, 17 Cal. 61.

[b] Attorney appointed to defend a pauper cannot charge county for services.—Rowe v. Yuba County, 17 Cal. 61; Lamont v. Solano County, 49 Cal. 158.

[c] The compensation of an attorney for services rendered by him pursuant to an appointment by the court to defend a pauper indicted for a crime is not a charge against the county; nor can the attorney recover for moneys expended by him in conducting the defense.—Lamont v. Solano County, 49 Cal. 158.

§ 106. Effect of Change of Venue or Other Transfer.

[a] The order issuable under Criminal Practice Act, section 556, for paying a witness on behalf of the people, from without the county, etc., should, on a change in the venue of the action, direct the sum allowed, to be paid by the treasurer of the county where the indictment was found.—Sargent v. Cavis, 36 Cal. 552.

[b] Under act of 1851, concerning the costs of criminal actions, if a case is removed from the county where the indictment was found, for trial in another county, the county where the indictment was found is liable for the fees of the sheriff of the county to which the cause is removed, and the auditor of the latter county may draw his warrant on the treasurer of the former for the same, and mandamus will lie to compel such treasurer to pay it.—Needham v. Thresher, 49 Cal. 392.

[a] If a judgment of conviction imposes a fine without costs, or if a fine is collected, but the costs are not, the fees of the officers are to be paid out of the fine collected.—Petty v. San Joaquin County Court, 45 Cal. 245.

[a] Where a defendant is convicted of assault, and fined a certain amount and costs, he may be imprisoned for the fine, but not for the costs.—Petty v. San Joaquin County Court, 45 Cal. 245.

[b] A prisoner held in custody under Code, section 330, for a failure to pay a judgment for fine and costs for gaming, cannot pay by imprisonment at the rate of one dollar per day, as, in certain cases prescribed by other sections of the Code, he may do.—Harrison, Ex parte, 63 Cal. 299.

POWER OF STATES TO PUNISH, § 2.
JURISDICTION OF STATE COURTS, § 3.
INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION, § 4.
EVIDENCE, § 5.

§ 1. Nature and Elements of Offense.

[a] To constitute the crime of knowingly having in possession counterfeiting tools, etc., as created by section 78 of the statute in relation to crimes and punishments, the known possession by the defendant must be proved to have been with criminal intent.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[b] Both intent to fill up blanks and pass notes must concur.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 656.

[c] Section 480 of the Penal Code punishes counterfeiting of all bank notes and bills, both foreign and domestic, current in this state or otherwise.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 287, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

[d] Under Penal Code, section 480, to constitute the crime a mere possession and intention to use, though without ability to use, is sufficient.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 285, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 25 L. R. A. 341, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 302, 303; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1107-1116, §§ 1-10.

§ 2. Power of State to Punish.

[a] Section 78 of the act concerning crimes and punishments, which provides for the punishment of persons engaged in counterfeiting money, etc., held not to be in conflict with section 8, article 1, of the United States constitution, conferring upon Congress the power to punish counterfeiting, etc.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[b] Fact that counterfeiting foreign money is made offense by act of Congress does not prevent state from punishing same offense.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 289-292, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 480, punishing one having in his possession anything employed in counterfeiting bank notes or bills, state courts have jurisdiction of a prosecution for having possession of tools for counterfeiting notes of the Bank of England, though the offense is also punishable under the federal statute.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 285, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] An indictment for the possession of counterfeit coin charged that defendants "willingly, feloniously, and knowingly did have in their possession," etc. Held, that their knowledge of its spurious character was as directly affirmed as their knowledge that it was in their possession, and that the knowledge of both facts was sufficiently affirmed. The circumstance that the affirmation was made in respect to the two facts in connection did not vitiate or weaken the force of the allegation as to each separately.—People v. Stanton, 39 Cal. 698.

[b] In indictment for possessing counterfeit notes with intent to utter them, if legal existence of corporation be not made an issue, it is not necessary to charge that banking house whose bills have been imitated was incorporated. It would be equally an offense whether company be actually incorporated or not, so it is acting as corporation, and issues bank bills which are current anywhere.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

[c] Indictment in one count charged defendant with having in his possession "five hundred certain false, forged, and counterfeit blank and unfinished bank bills, each made in the form and similitude of a bill for the payment of money made to be issued by . . . . the chartered bank of India, Australia, and China, a foreign corporation then lawfully organized and incorporated under the laws of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland," doing business at Hongkong, with intent to procure the bills to be finished in order to utter them as genuine bills, and defraud the said bank. In a second count, which was preceded by a statement that the offense charged therein was the same as that described in the first count, it charged that the bills were in the form and similitude of bills for the payment of property. Held, that it was but a different description of the same offense, and that there was nothing repugnant in saying that the unfinished bills have the form and similitude of those which have been finished.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

[d] Information for counterfeiting notes of Bank of England need not allege incorporation of bank.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 288, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where a person was indicted for having counterfeit coin in his possession, with intent to pass the same and to defraud F. and others, evidence tending to prove that he had in his possession counterfeit coin for sale, and that he was induced by F. to sell the same to him, was held sufficient to prove the intent to defraud others.—People v. Farrell, 30 Cal. 316.

[b] On the trial of a defendant, for the crime of knowingly having in his possession counterfeiting tools and implements, it is competent, for the purpose of showing the criminal intent of such possession, for the people to prove that the defendant had counterfeit money also in his possession.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[c] In a prosecution, under Penal Code, section 480, providing for the punishment of anyone having in his possession anything employed in counterfeiting bank notes or bills, proof that the bank is known and acting as a corporate company, and as such issues bills which come within the statute, identifies the notes set out sufficiently to show that they are bank notes.—People v. McDonnell, 80 Cal. 285, 13 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 Pac. 190.

[d] Under subdivision 11 of section 25 of article 4 of the Constitution there may be a special law for holding and conducting an election "on the organization of new counties."—People ex rel. Scearce v. County of Glenn, 100 Cal. 419, 38 Am. St. Rep. 305, 35 Pac. 302.

[e] It must be presumed that the legislature intended, by the County Government Act of March 24, 1893, to comply with the constitutional requirements to provide for the election of county officers by a uniform law, applicable to all the counties in the state, and that the act should be operative throughout the state.—Hale v. McGettigan, 114 Cal. 112, 45 Pac. 1049.

[f] Statute providing for a system of county governments which in its terms is limited to a portion of the state, would be in contravention of the provisions of the constitution which require the legislature to pass a uniform system for the entire state.—Hale v. McGettigan, 114 Cal. 112, 45 Pac. 1049.

§ 3. Creation by Special Act.

[a] County is not corporation for municipal purposes within meaning of constitutional inhibition against creating such corporations by special act.—People v. McFadden, 81 Cal. 497, 15 Am. St. Rep. 66, 22 Pac. 851.

§ 4. Boundaries—Between Sonoma and Napa.

[a] Under Political Code, section 3872, the lines run by the surveyor general for the boundary between the counties of Sonoma and Napa are conclusive, and the section is not unconstitutional.—People v. Boggs, 56 Cal. 648.

§ 6. —— Between Merced and Stanislaus.

[a] The act of February 13, 1868, defining the boundary lines between Merced and Stanislaus counties, was operative to establish the boundary as indicated at once, upon its passage, and was not dependent upon the surveys.—People v. Henderson, 40 Cal. 29.

§ 7. —— Between Sutter and Yolo.

[a] Statutes of 1851, pages 176, 179, and Statutes of 1857, page 108, declared the Sacramento river to be the boundary between Y. and S. counties. Subsequently the course of the river changed so as to run through Y. county, as then described, whereupon the boundary statutes were repealed by Statutes of 1866, pages 162, 223, which defined the boundary between the two counties as "the middle of the Sacramento river." Held, that the boundary line was the middle of the river as it ran on the date of the passage of the latter acts, and not the middle of the river as it previously existed.—Waters v. Pool, 130 Cal. 136, 62 Pac. 385.

§ 8. —— Between Mariposa and Fresno.

[a] Since act of April 1, 1872 (Stats. 1871-72, p. 891, c. 602), as amended by act February 11, 1874 (Stats. 1873-74, p. 100, c. 88), defining the boundary line between Mariposa and Fresno counties, was passed at the same session of the legislature as the Political Code, such act was entitled to precedence over conflicting provisions of the code by virtue of sections 4478, 4479, thereof, providing that with relation to laws passed at such session the Political Code must be construed as though passed on the first day of the session, and, if the provisions of any other law passed at such session are inconsistent with the Code, the provisions of the law should prevail.—Mariposa County v. Madera County, 142 Cal. 50, 75 Pac. 572.

11, 1874 (Stats. 1873-74, p. 100, c. 88), establishing the boundary between Mariposa and Fresno counties, which line was thereafter adopted by act of 1893 (Stats. 1893, p. 168, c. 143) establishing Madera county, was not superseded by Political Code, sections 3938, 3939, defining a conflicting boundary, since though the act of 1874, was not approved until after the Political Code, it went into operation before the code.—Mariposa County v. Madera County, 142 Cal. 50, 75 Pac. 572.

[a] Where a survey of county boundary is made by a surveyor authorized by the surveyor general to make it, and is surveyor sanctioned and approved by the surveyor general, the survey becomes his act, and is made by the surveyor general within the meaning of sections 483 and 3969 of the Political Code, although the surveyor making the survey is not a deputy surveyor general; and each of the counties adjoining upon the boundary is liable to the surveyor appointed by the surveyor general for its proportionate share of the cost of surveying and definitely marking out the boundary line.—Rice v. Trinity County, 110 Cal. 247, 42 Pac. 809.

[b] The law, in casting upon the surveyor general the duty of making public surveys, clothes him with the requisite power to enable him to perform that duty, and it is competent for him to employ surveyors and other functionaries usual and necessary in running the lines and doing the detail work required, and he is the agent of the state for the making of such surveys, and may delegate the mechanical part of the work to others, nor is it necessary that the field work should be done by or under the direct supervision of a deputy.—Rice v. Trinity County, 110 Cal. 247, 42 Pac. 809.

[b] The court will not declare a statute defining a county boundary void and ineffective for uncertainty because of a mistake in description in one definition of the boundary, but will liberally construe the statute in support of the evident intention of the legislature.—County of Mariposa v. County of Madera, 142 Cal. 50, 75 Pac. 572.

§ 11. Alteration, Consolidation, and Division to Form New Counties.

[a] If the consolidation act for Sacramento be in conflict with the fifth section of the act of 1854 the former must yield.—English v. Supervisors of Sacramento, 19 Cal. 172.

[b] When a law is passed providing for the creation of a new county out of parts of counties already in existence, which act provides for the election of county officers, and fixes the time when they shall enter upon their duties, the territory described does not become a county until its organization is perfected by the election of officers.—People v. McGuire, 32 Cal. 140.

[d] Power to subdivide counties or create new ones is exclusively in legislature.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 197, 49 Pac. 8.

§ 12. Adjustment of Rights and Liabilities on Alteration or Division.

[a] Under the statute which provides for an adjustment of indebtedness between Amador and Calaveras counties, payment of the warrants issued under it, and assigned as above, may be remanded at any time, and the treasurer may make partial payments thereon as he has funds, and a receipt and indorsement on the warrant will protect the officer and the county.—Beals v. Evans, 10 Cal. 459.

[b] When a new county is organized out of a part of the territory before constituting another county, the claim of the old against the new county for the payment of the new county's proportion of the debt of the old county is of an equitable nature only, and requires legislation to enable the old county to enforce it.—Beals v. Supervisors of Amador County, 28 Cal. 449.

[c] When one county is made from territory of another, and is obliged to give its warrant to the old county for an amount sufficient to cover its proportion of the old county's debt, the legislature may afterward pass an act providing that the new county shall pay interest on its indebtedness to the old county, as evidenced by the warrant.—Beals v. Amador County Supervisors, 35 Cal. 624.

[e] Act of March 11, 1889, creating O. county out of a part of L. county, provides that certain commissioners shall ascertain and adjust the respective liabilities of the two counties. Held, that the commissioners are charged by such statute with the performance of quasi judicial duties, and an award by them is not a bar to a future action for a demand, not actually submitted to nor adjudicated by them, though it was in existence when the submission was made, and though the agreement was to submit all demands.—Orange County v. Los Angeles County, 114 Cal. 390, 46 Pac. 173.

[f] Where commissioners by mistake, and because they did not know of existence of a certain asset consisting of an indebtedness due L. county from the state, omitted to take it into consideration in adjusting the assets and indebtedness of counties, the court had no authority to adjust the matter, but it must be done by the legislature.—Orange County v. Los Angeles County, 114 Cal. 390, 46 Pac. 175.

[g] Where legislature makes no provision as to debts of old county, they remain with the old county.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 200-202, 49 Pac. 8.

[h] Value of public property remaining in old county might justify imposition of entire debt on it.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 199, 49 Pac. 8.

[i] Question of what, if any, proportion of debts of old county should be paid by new county is exclusively for legislature to determine.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 198, 201, 202, 49 Pac. 8.

[j] New county is not bound to contribute proportionate share of county bonds charged to old county under section 1432, Civil Code. Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 202, 49 Pac. 8.

[k] Old county cannot compel contribution from new county under section 2847, Civil Code.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 202, 49 Pac. 8.

[l] The county of Glenn, having without right received a portion of taxes paid into the state treasury, is liable in an action for money had and received upon its implied promise to pay the same, to the county of Colusa.—County of Colusa v. County of Glenn, 117 Cal. 434, 49 Pac. 457.

[n] Taxes paid to a new county upon the portion of the railroad traversed by it, under a subsequent reassessment made by the state board of equalization for previous years, in which the new county had no existence, and in which the original assessment and apportionment of county taxes had been made to the original county, may be recovered from the new county by the original county, whether the reassessment for those years be regarded as valid or invalid, the new county having received the money knowing that it was paid for county taxes assessed for those previous years.—County of Colusa v. County of Glenn, 124 Cal. 498, 57 Pac. 477.

[o] In an action by one county against another to recover the sum of money received by defendant county as taxes on a railroad beyond its apportionable amount, errors in the complaint as to the number of miles of railway on which defendant received taxes, making the complaint ambiguous, are not reached by a general demurrer. Judgment (1898) 55 Pac. 7, reversed.—San Diego County v. Riverside County, 125 Cal. 495, 58 Pac. 81, county, after the commissioners had acted, and judgment was rendered setting aside the acts of the commissioners and sending the matter back to them, with instructions to readjust the settlement and directing them to find as to several maters in controversy in a certain manner and different from the former findings. Held, that such judgment could not be sustained, as, the board having performed the functions for which it was created, its authority was exhausted.—Riverside County v. San Bernardino County, 134 Cal. 517, 66 Pac. 788.

[r] Act of March 11, 1893 (Stats. 1893, p. 158), erected a new county out of existing ones, and provided that commissioners should apportion the property and indebtedness of the old county and the new one. At that time certain railroad taxes were delinquent for each of the eight years, and the railroad company paid the first six years' taxes, but left the taxes for 1886-87 unpaid. Under the reassessment act of March 23, 1893 (Stats. 1893, p. 290), the state board of equalization reassessed the latter taxes, and apportioned the valuation and taxes between the two counties, according to the mileage in each. After the passage of the reassessment act, but before the reassessment, the commissioners apportioned the property of the old county, including taxes due, and fixed a ratio for the division of said taxes, excepting the taxes for 1886-87, and adjusted the indebtedness between the counties. The latter taxes were afterward paid into the treasuries of the new and old counties in the ratio established by the state board of equalization. Held that, the commissioners having made no adjustment of the respective rights of the counties in them, an action by the old county to recover the amount of said taxes paid to the new county would not lie.—San Diego County v. Riverside County, 55 Pac. 7.

Judicial notice of classification of counties. See Evidence, § 16.

[a] The census referred to in Political Code, section 4007, providing that, "whenever a new census is taken, the counties, on the first day of July thereafter, are, by operation of law, classified under such census," is the census taken by the United States.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 87, 27 Pac. 939.

[b] Power of legislature to classify counties by population includes power to fix number of classes.—Longan v. County of Solano, 65 Cal. 122, 3 Pac. 463.

[c] It is duty of legislature to classify all counties and it may classify them by population.—People v. McFadden, 81 Cal. 500, 15 Am. St. Rep. 66, 22 Pac. 851.

[d] The act of March 16, 1889 (Stats. 1889, p. 232), adding a new class of counties numbered thirty-nine and a half, having a population between five thousand and five thousand six hundred and forty, must be construed so as to reconcile a plain conflict with the re-establishment by the same act of classes forty and forty-one which is done by assuming a mistake in the use of numbers, and that the legislature intended to make class thirty-nine and a half include only counties having a population between five thousand six hundred and five thousand six hundred and forty.—Donlon v. Jewett, 88 Cal. 530, 26 Pac. 370.

[e] The act of March 11th was not repealed for inconsistency with the latter act in classifying Glenn county.—Sanders v. Sehorn, 98 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 58.

[f] Act of March 11, 1891, conditionally creating the county of Glenn, provided (section 14), with reference to county officers, that they should receive the same compensation then provided by general law in counties of the same class, and that until otherwise provided the county should belong to the thirty-seventh class. Under Constitution, article 11, section 5, the classification of counties is required to be made according to population. On March 11, 1891, Glenn county had a population of between six thousand five hundred and six thousand six hundred, which was the population of a county of the thirty-seventh class. On March 31, 1891, a county government act was passed, placing counties of from six thousand four hundred to seven thousand population in the forty-first class. Glenn county was organized May 11th. Held a county of the forty-first class; the act of March 11th not having been intended to fix its class irrespective of any future changes in the law, but only to determine its population.—Sanders v. Sehorn, 98 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 58.

[g] In arriving at the population of a county under laws of 1893, section 235, providing that when a county is reduced by the creation of a new county therefrom the supervisors shall classify the county, the board need not be controlled by the federal census of 1890, but may determine the same from such source as it sees fit.—Kumler v. San Bernardino County Supervisors, 103 Cal. 393, 37 Pac. 383.

[h] The classification of counties referred to in the act of March 27, 1895 (Stats. 1895, p. 207), relating to primary elections, and which is made to apply only to counties of the first and second classes, is not that contained in section 4006 of the Political Code as originally enacted, but that made by the act of March 14, 1883 (Stats. 1883, p. 299), which revised the entire law on the subject of county government, and for the most part superseded the old law.—Gett v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 111 Cal. 366, 43 Pac. 1122.

[i] The constitution authorizes the classification of counties for the purpose of fixing the compensation of officers in each class, and it is the province of the legislature to determine how many and what classes may be necessary for that purpose; and a law fixing such compensation in all the counties of a specified class, as authorized by the constitution, is neither a local nor special law, but is a general law, having a uniform operation, though there be but one county in the class specified.—Summerland v. Bicknell, 111 Cal. 567, 44 Pac. 232.

[j] Legislature can classify counties only for purpose of regulating compensation of county officers.—Sanchez v. Fordyce, 141 Cal. 429, 75 Pac. 56.

§ 14. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions Relating to Organization.

[a] An act which submits to a popular vote of the electors of a county the question whether a portion of the territory of an adjoining county shall be annexed to it, and provides that if a majority of the votes are for annexation, that the organization of the adjoining county shall be abandoned, and its territory shall be divided and annexed, in part to the county in which the vote was taken, and in part to another adjoining county, is not unconstitutional—People ex rel. Love v. Nally, 49 Cal. 478.

[b] It is no objection to a bill creating and providing for the original organization of a county that it does not divide the county into supervisor districts, but allows supervisors to be in the first instance elected at large, who, under the general law, have power to divide the county into districts.—People v. Glenn County, 100 Cal. 419. 38 Am. St. Rep. 305, 35 Pac. 302.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 15. Uniformity in County Government.

[a] Act of March 18, 1874, requiring the supervisors of two certain counties to issue bonds to provide funds for the construction of a certain road, does not violate the constitutional provision that county governments shall be as nearly uniform as practicable throughout the state.—People v. San Luis Obispo County, 50 Cal. 561.

[b] A law providing that all license taxes collected in counties of a certain class shall be returned to incorporated cities and towns where collected, for street improvements, violates the constitutional requirement of uniformity in county government.—San Luis Obispo County v. Graves, 84 Cal. 71, 23 Pac. 1032.

[c] Under section 4 of article 11 of the constitution the "system" or plan for the government of the several counties of the state is required to be uniform, so that its several parts shall be applicable to each county.—Welsh v. Bramlet, 98 Cal. 219, 33 Pac. 66.

[d] Act of March 31, 1891, section 162, creates counties of the thirty-third class, and section 195 allows the clerk of each of such counties a salary of three thousand dollars, and authorizes him to collect fees for services in settlement of estates based on the value thereof. Constitution, article 11, section 5, authorizes the classification of counties, for the purpose of regulating the compensation for county officers according to duties. Held, that section 195, in fixing a fee for official services in counties of the thirty-third class different from that in other counties, violates Constitution, article 11, section 4, directing the legislature to establish a system of county government which shall be uniform throughout the state.—Bloss v. Lewis, 109 Cal. 493, 41 Pac. 1081.

§ 16. Legislative Control of Acts and Funds of County.

[a] The legislature may compel a county to become a subscriber to a railroad already built, for the purpose of paying its debts, and to become a stockholder in the company, and issue its bonds for the stock, and to raise money by taxation, and appropriate it to the payment of the bonds.—Napa Valley R. Co. v. Napa County Supervisors, 30 Cal. 435.

§ 17. County Seat—Location and Establishment.

[a] When a legislature in establishing the county seat of a new county names a place that is outside the boundaries of the state, such establishment is absolutely void.—Reddy v. Tinkum, 60 Cal. 458.

[b] County of Mono is not liable for claims arising from fixing the seat of justice at Aurora, Nevada.—Reddy v. Tinkum, 60 Cal. 458.

[a] Act of 1850 as to contesting elections relates only to persons elected to county offices, and does not apply to an election for selecting a county seat.—Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

[b] An act submitting to the electors of a county the question which of two towns should be their county seat provided that, prior to the election, the citizens of a town to which it was sought to remove the county seat should raise a specified sum of money to pay expenses of removal, and to be applied to the erection of county buildings, and should deposit it with a banking firm to be designated by the board of supervisors. The money was raised, and tendered to a banking firm so designated, who refused to receive, and it was deposited with another banking firm, subsequently approved of by the board. Held, that the condition was sufficiently complied with.—Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

[c] Where an act for removal of a county seat provides that, before removal, the citizens of the town to which the removal is to be made, shall raise a certain sum of money, and deposit it with a banking firm to be designated, to defray the expenses of removal and of erecting new county buildings, and the money is raised and deposited, the citizens have no further power over it, and cannot designate for what purpose it shall be applied.—Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

[d] When an election is held for the removal of a county seat, under Political Code, part 4, title 1, chapter 2, and a majority of the electors vote in favor of retaining the county seat where it is, the board of supervisors may, at any time, upon the presentation of a proper petition, order a second election for the same purpose. The statute does not restrict the number of elections which may be held, so long as the place of the county seat is not changed.—Atherton v. San Mateo County Supervisors, 48 Cal. 157.

[e] Under Political Code, section 3976 et seq., providing that the board of commissioners may order an election to remove the county seat after receiving a petition signed by at least one-third of the electors, a petition actually signed by less than one-third, but filled out with signatures cut from an identical petition which had been circulated in an other part of the county at the same time, does not authorize the board to order such an election.—Fox v. San Mateo County Supervisors, 49 Cal. 563.

Jurisdiction of supervisors over roads in Yosemite Valley. See Highways, § 7.
County school boards. See Schools and School Districts, § 11.
County board of equalization. See Taxation, §§ 98-102.

§ 19. Construction and Validity of Statutes Affecting.

[a] The provision of act of March 20, 1855, section 2, that "the board of supervisors in these counties shall have authority at their last session before the general election in each year to change the boundaries of the [supervisor] districts in their said respective counties," is merely directory, and does not restrain the exercise of the same power at other sessions.—Tuohy v. Chase, 30 Cal. 524.

[b] Act of 1874 providing for removal and punishment of supervisors for malfeasance was repealed by County Government Act.—Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 154, 16 Pac. 764.

[c] Section 13 of the County Government Act of 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 454), permitting the electors of the county to frame and pass ordinances for the government of the county, "having the same force and equal effect as though adopted and ordained by the board of supervisors," is inconsistent with the legislative power granted under our system of government to the board of supervisors, and is invalid and void. (Beatty, C. J., dissenting.)—Anderson, Ex parte, 134 Cal. 69, 86 Am. St. Rep. 236, 66 Pac. 194.

§ 20. Appointment—Power of Superior Court.

[a] As the law now stands in California, the county government bill having been pronounced unconstitutional, the judges of the superior court are without the power to appoint a county supervisor.—Myers v. Alameda County Supervisors, 60 Cal. 287.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 21. Eligibility.

[a] An elector who has resided in the district he was elected to represent for one year immediately preceding his election as supervisor was eligible to the office, though he was not entitled to vote at such election for the reason that his name has not been entered on the great register of the county, as directed by Political Code, section 1094.—Bergevin v. Curtz, 127 Cal. 86, 59 Pac. 312.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 22. —— Power of Superior Court to Determine Election and Qualification.

[a] Provision of consolidation act that board of supervisors shall be judge of election and qualification of its own members was superseded by present constitution giving superior court jurisdiction in quo warranto cases.—People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 242, 22 Pac. 1039.

§ 23. Judicial Control Over.

[a] Liability to suit has no necessary connection with ability to sue. Boards of supervisors and bodies like them, without any legislative provision, by general law, are subject, with certain exceptions, to mandamus to enforce the performance of the duties devolved upon them, and to the writ of certiorari for the review of their acts when partaking of a judicial character, and in other ways are within the control of judicial proceedings.—Hastings v. City and County of San Francisco, 18 Cal. 49.

[a] One who has held the office of supervisor is, after the expiration of his term, and the election and qualification of his successor, no longer an officer, either de jure or de facto, but if he attempts to act as such, is a mere naked usurper.—Trinity County v. McCammon, 25 Cal. 117.

[b] First board elected under provisions of section 752 of municipal corporation act holds only until the next election and until their successors qualify.—Ruggles v. Board of Trustees, 88 Cal. 430, 26 Pac. 520.

[c] Political Code, part 3, title 2, chapter 11, provides for the canvass of election returns by the board of supervisors. Section 1284 provides that the county clerk, on the result of the election being ascertained by the supervisors, shall deliver to the successful candidates certificates of election. Section 907 provides that the oath of office of a supervisor must be subscribed and filed within ten days after he has notice of his election, or within fifteen days from the commencement of his term of office, when no such notice has been given. Respondent was re-elected to the office of supervisor, and, as chairmen of the board, signed the minutes of that body so certifying. The term to which he was elected began on the first day of January, 1899. Prior thereto he filed an official oath and bond. The bond was void. The county clerk had never issued a notice of election to respondent. Within fifteen days after the commencement of his term, respondent executed and filed a sufficient bond. Held that, though a member of the canvassing board, he was entitled to notice from the clerk, and his abortive attempt to file a bond and oath of office did not work a forfeiture of his right thereto; and hence, a sufficient bond having been filed within fifteen days after the commencement of the term, there was no vacancy in the office, to which the governor could appoint another.—People v. Shaver, 127 Cal. 347, 59 Pac. 784.

[a] Supervisors are not entitled to any remuneration for their services as such to the county, except their per diem and mileage, as fixed by law; hence cannot charge for a sale, authorized by law, of stock belonging to the county.—Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309.

[b] Supervisors of counties of thirty-third class are only entitled to one mileage for each session of board, and cannot charge for daily visits to and from their homes during session.—Howes v. Abbott, 78 Cal. 272, 20 Pac. 572.

[c] Under section 204, subdivision 15, of the County Government Act of 1893, the aggregate amount of the compensation that supervisors in counties of the forty-second class can receive is limited to four hundred dollars per annum, including both their per diem and mileage.—Chapin v. Wilcox, 114 Cal. 498, 46 Pac. 457.

[d] A county supervisor, elected in 1892 for the term of four years beginning in January, 1893, is not entitled to the compensation provided for county supervisors by Statutes of 1893, page 416, section 173, subdivision 15, to take effect in 1895, in view of page 512, section 234, providing that the compensation fixed therein "shall not affect the present incumbents."—Tulare County v. Jefferds, 118 Cal. 361, 50 Pac. 535.

[e] Supervisors are bound to perform their duties for compensation fixed by law and are entitled to compensation only in performing duties prescribed by law.—Irwin v. Yuba, 119 Cal. 688-691, 52 Pac. 35.

[f] Supervisors are not entitled to compensation and expense money in attending conventions called to consider matters relating to internal concerns of counties.—Irwin v. Yuba, 119 Cal. 688-691, 52 Pac. 35.

[g] Under the act of 1893, the intention was not to pay extra salaries as road commissioners to supervisors in those counties in which they were not provided for, and, the act being subsequent in point of time to section 2641, prevails over it.—Davis v. Post, 125 Cal. 210, 57 Pac. 901.

[h] Supervisor who, as ex-officio road commissioner, performs his duties within his road district, under the direction and supervision of the board, which, as a body, has general supervision of all the roads in the county (Pol. Code. secs. 2643, 2645), is in such respect a county officer, not a road district officer, and performs services "required of him by law" as a county officer, and his compensation is a "salary" to be paid out of the county salary fund.—White v. Hayden, 126 Cal. 621, 59 Pac. 118.

[i] Where plaintiff, a county supervisor, could not agree with the county auditor as to the amount due him as salary, his acceptance of the amount claimed by the auditor, under an agreement that it was to be on account, did not estop him from maintaining an action for the balance, since it was the duty of the auditor to issue the warrant for the amount due by law, and a partial performance did not exonerate him from further observance of his duty.—Ellis v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 478, 62 Pac. 734.

[k] A member of the board of supervisors, who attended a supervisors' convention in another county as one of a committee of the whole, authorized and appointed by the board so to do, cannot recover compensation from the county for his expenses, since not within the duties of the board as authorized by law.—Shepherd v. Keagle, 53 Pac. 702,

§ 27. Fiduciary Relation to County.

[a] Supervisors are trustees of the property interests in their counties, and the same good faith toward the county is required of them as of an ordinary trustee toward his cestui que trust, or an agent toward his principal. Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309.

[b] A member of board cannot be interested in or receive pay for work done on any contract growing out of or connected with public works or improvements.—Domingos v. Board of Supervisors, 51 Cal. 608.

[a] Supervisors exercise judicial, legislative and executive powers, from the necessity of the case, in matters relating to the police and fiscal regulations of counties.—People v. El Dorado County, 8 Cal. 58.

[b] The board of supervisors represents the county in legal proceedings.—People v. Marin Co. Supervisors, 10 Cal. 344.

[c] It was the intention of the legislature, by the twenty-fifth section of the act creating a board of supervisors throughout this state, to transfer from the courts of sessions to the boards of supervisors the general and special powers and duties of a civil character which had before the passage of that act been vested in such court.—People v. Bircham, 12 Cal. 50.

[d] The board of supervisors of a county is the proper authority to canvass the votes cast at a special election for a county seat, and to declare the result, although the act providing for the election does not in express terms make them so.—Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325.

[e] Act of March 28, 1863, authorizing the board of supervisors of Sonoma county to appropriate money for a map, the terms of which empower them and make it their duty to contract for a map, leaves the question to the judgment of the board, and is not mandatory on their part.—Bowers v. Sonoma County, 32 Cal. 66.

[g] Where services have been rendered for the benefit of the county in a manner authorized by law, the board of county supervisors, having had original power in the premises, may cure informalities in procedure by a subsequent ratification and recognition of its liability.—Power v. May, 114 Cal. 207, 46 Pac. 6.

[h] Board of supervisors has no power other than conferred upon it by statute. Merriam v. Barnum, 116 Cal. 622, 48 Pac. 727.

[i] Board of supervisors has no authority to appoint any of its members to attend conventions called to consider matters relating to internal concerns of the county. Irwin v. Yuba, 119 Cal. 688, 52 Pac. 35.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 388-397; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1266-1270, § 55.

§ 29. —— To Establish Rules of Evidence.

§ 30. —— To Appoint or Employ Special Counsel.

[a] The county board has power to employ counsel other than the official attorney to defend the county's interests in civil suits. Hornblower v. Duden, 35 Cal. 664.

[b] It not being the duty of the district attorney to prosecute or defend civil actions in which the county is interested pending in any other county than his own, the board of supervisors may decline his services when tendered in such an action, and employ other counsel.—Herrington v. Santa Clara County, 44 Cal. 496.

[c] The board of county commissioners have authority to employ counsel, other than the district attorney, to collect the money due to the county by the state for the support of indigent persons, and the choice of such counsel is a matter within their discretion, and cannot be reviewed.—Lassen County v. Shinn, 88 Cal. 510, 26 Pac. 365.

[d] The board of county supervisors has power to employ an attorney to collect a claim due the county from the state.—Lassen County v. Shinn (1891) 88 Cal. 510, 26 Pac. 365, followed.—Power v. May, 114 Cal. 207, 46 Pac. 6.

[e] The county board has no authority to employ counsel other than the official attorney to assist in the prosecution of criminal cases.—Modoc County v. Spencer, 103 Cal. 498, 37 Pac. 483.

[f] Board of supervisors has no power to employ special counsel for any purpose other than to prosecute or defend a suit.—Merriam v. Barnum, 116 Cal. 624, 48 Pac. 727.

[g] Supervisors only have power to employ counsel to assist district attorney or to take his place when he is disqualified from acting. Merced County v. Cook, 120 Cal. 277, 52 Pac. 721.

[h] County supervisors have no power to displace district attorney in conduct of county litigation and substitute other attorneys.—Merced County v. Cook, 120 Cal. 277, 52 Pac. 721.

§ 31. —— To Create Offices.

[a] The board of supervisors of a county have no authority to create the office of license tax collector.—County of Los Angeles v. Lopez, 104 Cal. 257, 38 Pac. 42.

[b] Board of supervisors cannot create office of license tax collector or fix his compensation.—Butte County v. Merrill, 141 Cal. 397, 74 Pac. 1036.

§ 32. —— To Appoint or Discharge County Physician.

[a] Supervisors cannot abolish office of county physician so as to impair contract for services.—McDonald v. Yuba County, 14 Cal. 444.

[b] The County Government Act cannot be construed, as making physicians employed by the county public officers, without involving an unconstitutional delegation of power to the board of supervisors, to fix their terms of office, prescribe their duties, and to regulate their salaries or compensation. The board has power under the act to appoint a number of physicians to take care of the indigent sick, and to fix their period of employment, duties, and compensation; and there is nothing in the act to indicate an unconstitutional intention on the part of the legislature to designate or treat as officers the physicians employed by the board. People v. Wheeler, 136 Cal. 652, 69 Pac. 435.

§ 33. —— To Fix Compensation of County Officers.

[a] In absence of any law fixing compensation of the county clerk the board of supervisors had authority to fix it.—Kinsey v. Kellogg, 65 Cal. 111, 3 Pac. 405.

[b] Supervisors cannot fix compensation of county officers.—Butte County v. Merrill, 141 Cal. 397, 74 Pac. 1036.

[c] Section 3678 of the Political Code, directing supervisors to provide for payment of additional clerical force to assist county assessor, is unconstitutional as leaving compensation of county officers to supervisors. Agard v. Shaffer, 141 Cal. 726, 75 Pac. 343.

[d] Purpose of section 5, article 11, of the Constitution is that legislature should regulate compensation of all county officers and it prohibits such regulation by board of supervisors directly or indirectly.—Agard v. Shaffer, 141 Cal. 727, 75 Pac. 343.

[a] Board of supervisors of a county cannot settle with the county treasurer at a special meeting of such board, unless they have first given public notice of such meeting, and specified in such notice that such business will be transacted.—El Dorado County v. Reed, 11 Cal. 130.

[b] In order to give the amplest opportunity to the district attorney, or citizens who desire to do so, to contest the allowance of improper demands against the public treasury, the business of the supervisors is required to be transacted at the regular meetings required by law; or if at special meetings, public notice must be given of the business to be so transacted; and unless such notice be given, the acts of the supervisors are a nullity.—El Dorado County v. Reed, 11 Cal. 130.

§ 35. Supervision of County Officers.

[a] Act of March 31, 1876, providing for the appointment of a superintendent for the house of correction of San Francisco by the board of supervisors, and "that said superintendent shall only be removed for just and sufficient legal cause after a fair and impartial investigation of his case by said supervisors," does not restrain or limit the power of removal to the manner indicated in the act, and the board of supervisors have power to remove the superintendent at their pleasure.—(1857) People v. Hill, 7 Cal. 97; (1881) Smith v. Brown, 59 Cal. 672; (1887) People v. Shear, 15 Pac. 92.

[b] A board of county supervisors, under its power to supervise the official conduct of all county officers and direct prosecutions for delinquencies, may employ an expert to examine the books and accounts of county officers.—Harris v. Gibbins, 114 Cal. 418, 46 Pac. 292.

[c] A county treasurer, acting under Statutes of 1893, page 346, section 220, which permitted him to transfer money from the general fund to the salary fund when necessary, transferred a sum in excess of a sum necessary to pay salaries for the month in which the transfer was made. Held, under Statutes of 1893, page 346, section 25, subdivision 1, which authorizes the supervisors to review the official conduct of the county officers, the board was empowered to order the treasurer to retransfer the excess from the salary fund to the general fund, and to procure a mandate to compel obedience to the order.—Modoc County v. Madden, 120 Cal. 555, 52 Pac. 812.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 36. Approval of Official Bonds.

[a] Refusal of supervisors to act upon official bond duly presented does not release sureties, or work a forfeiture of office. Doane v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 393, 432.

[b] In determining upon the sufficiency of bond of officer, and whether officer, by his failure to comply with requisition of supervisors to file new bond, has vacated his office, the supervisors exercise powers of a judicial character.—People ex rel. De Fries v. Supervisors of Marin County, 10 Cal. 344.

[c] Board of supervisors has no jurisdiction to reject official bond, except for the reasons that it is not, in form and substance, in compliance with the requirements of the statute, or is not executed by sufficient and responsible sureties; and the supreme court will review on certiorari and annul an order of a board rejecting a bond for any other than one or more of said reasons.—Miller v. Sacramento County, 25 Cal. 93.

[d] Board of supervisors of a county, after the passage of the act of March 20, 1855, became the body authorized by law to approve of the official bonds of county treasurers.—People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429.

[a] Though counties have power to contract for the collection of debts due them (Pol. Code, secs. 4001-4003, 4046), the board of supervisors, in the exercise of such power, is not authorized to delegate it to others to determine whether to commence a suit, and to select attorneys, and prosecute the suit, nor to make a compromise or settlement dependent on the written consent of strangers. Scollay v. Butte County, 67 Cal. 249, 7 Pac. 661.

[b] In an action to recover unpaid liquor license taxes under an ordinance passed by a board of supervisors, Monday, October 1, 1883, it appeared that prior thereto, on August 6, 1883, the board, pursuant to County Government Act of March 14, 1883, section 22, requiring the supervisors to provide for the holding of regular meetings, and which act repealed Political Code, section 4045, passed March 13, 1883, requiring the supervisors, on the first Monday of October, to fix rates of county licenses, passed an ordinance for the holding of regular meetings on the first Monday in February, May, August, and November, to continue in session until the business was disposed of. The ordinance was passed at a special meeting of the board held for the fixing of county taxes only. Held, that the ordinance passed October 1st is void. People v. Dunn, 89 Cal. 228, 26 Pac. 761.

[c] The board of supervisors, in the absence of positive law authorizing it to do so, cannot in any case appoint an agent to exercise powers which it cannot itself exercise; though in the exercise of powers conferred upon it, it may appoint agents to discharge ministerial duties not calling for the exercise of reason and discretion, but cannot go beyond this and delegate to others duties, the discharge of which, calling for the use of reason and discretion, are regarded as public trusts.—House v. Los Angeles Co., 104 Cal. 73, 37 Pac. 796.

[d] Board of supervisors, to whose discretion is committed the fixing of the manner of giving notice of an election for the incorporation of a municipality, must themselves fix the manner or time of giving notice, and cannot delegate to the clerk such power. People v. Town of Linden, 107 Cal. 94, 40 Pac. 115.

§ 38. Meetings.

[a] A session of the board of supervisors of a county was commenced May 7th, under Political Code, section 4032, and continued from day to day until May 16th. Held, that the session of the board was not terminated by an act which went into effect May 14th, requiring the board to provide for regular meetings thereof at the county seat, and that an ordinance adopted by it on May 16th was valid.—Ex parte Benninger, 64 Cal. 291, 30 Pac. 846.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 39. —— Calling.

[a] An order calling a special meeting of the board of supervisors sufficiently specifies the business to be performed when it sets forth that it is "for the purpose of considering a petition of the citizens of said county in reference to a railroad, and for the purpose of calling an election in and for said county, at which shall be submitted," etc.—Coleman v. Marin County Supervisors, 50 Cal. 493.

§ 40. —— Power of Majority of Quorum.

[a] Majority of a quorum of a board of supervisors, a quorum being present, can perform any act which a majority of the board could perform if all were present.—People v. Harrington, 63 Cal. 257.

[a] No irregularity in the proceedings of the board of supervisors of a county arises from the fact that the board took a recess as a board of supervisors from July 10th to July 19th, and, in the interim, acted as a board of equalization.—Ex parte Mirande, 73 Cal. 365, 14 Pac. 888.

[b] Board of supervisors has power to adjourn from time to time until its business is completed, and the use of the word "recess" instead of "adjourned" by the clerk is unimportant.—Ex parte Mirande, 73 Cal. 365, 14 Pac. 888.

§ 42. Minutes and Records.

[a] A deliberative body, like the board of supervisors, cannot be bound by acts in pais; the best and only evidence of its intentions is to be drawn from the record of its proceedings.—Phelan v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 531.

[b] A board of supervisors is a body with limited jurisdiction, and the jurisdictional facts must appear in the record of its proceedings.—Finch v. Tehama County Supervisors, 29 Cal. 453.

[c] The effect of the statute requiring the clerk and chairman of the board of supervisors to sign the record of its proceedings is merely to make their signatures evidence identifying the minutes.—People v. Eureka Lake etc. Canal Co., 48 Cal. 143.

[d] Clerk of board of supervisors is not clothed with power, of his own account, to correct a record of the proceedings of the board, even if it is shown that he made the correction in accordance with the true state of facts.—Dyer v. Brogan, 70 Cal. 136, 11 Pac. 589.

[e] Section 19 of the County Government Act, providing that the records and minutes of the board of supervisors must be signed by the chairman and clerk, merely has the effect to make their signatures evidence identifying the minutes; and their failure to sign the minutes does not render the record inadmissible as proof of the action of the board, in meeting and adjourning, for the purpose of showing the continuity of the session of the board at a regular meeting; but if the handwriting of the entries, their contemporaneous character, and the official custody from which the record is produced are proved, the minutes are competent to show the action of the board.—County of San Diego v. Seifert, 97 Cal. 594, 32 Pac. 644.

[f] The order of a board of supervisors appearing in their minute book is a record which the clerk of the board has no right to alter or amend, and parol proof is inadmissible to correct or change the record. Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 14 Pac. 843; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. 407 v. Ruble, 14 Pac. 846.

§ 43. Orders, Resolutions and Ordinances.

[a] An order of a board of supervisors directing the auditor to issue a warrant need not specify on what fund it is to be drawn. Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[b] Board of supervisors, though required by the county government act to proceed by ordinance for some purposes, can proceed "by order" in such case, as section 37 of that act so provides.—People v. Counts, 89 Cal. 15, 26 Pac. 612.

[c] An ordinance fixing rates, passed on the first Monday of October, without a regular meeting, or special meeting regularly called for that purpose, is void.—People v. Dunn, 89 Cal. 228, 26 Pac. 761.

[d] Object of statute requiring board to specify purpose for indebtedness is to be created and amount of bonds is to notify electors of these facts.—People v. Counts, 89 Cal. 19, 26 Pac. 612.

[e] A person who has performed important services for a county under the direction of the majority of the supervisors, who approved his claim for the services, is entitled to compensation, though no formal resolution to employ him was spread on the supervisors' minutes.—Power v. May, 123 Cal. 147, 55 Pac. 796.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 402-404; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1293-1295, §§ 71, 72.

§ 44. —— Requisites and Validity.

[a] The County Government Act does not require that the ordinance imposing county licenses should be passed on the first Monday in October.—County of Santa Clara v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 66 Cal. 642.

[b] County ordinance in conflict with valid general law is void.—San Luis Obispo County v. Graves, 84 Cal. 74, 23 Pac. 1032.

[c] It seems that county ordinance applicable to town or village containing five hundred inhabitants not giving boundaries of such towns or means whereby population can be ascertained is void for uncertainty and indefiniteness.—People v. Pearne, 118 Cal. 158, 50 Pac. 376.

[d] That supervisors intended to discriminate against a publisher in fixing a lower rate for the official publication of the delinquent tax list than for other county advertising would not vitiate the order.—Dodge v. Kings County (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 266.

[e] Evidence, in an action against a county to recover for county printing, held to sustain a finding that the action of the supervisors in fixing the rate for publication of delinquent tax list was not arbitrary or unnatural.—Dodge v. Kings County (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 266.

§ 46. —— Uniformity of Ordinances in Exercise of Police Power.

[a] Any restrictions of the rights of individuals to pursue a lawful avocation by virtue of the police power must extend to all individuals who might exercise that right within the same district.—County of Los Angeles v. Hollywood Cemetery Assn., 124 Cal. 344, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, 57 Pac. 153.

[a] If the board of supervisors consolidate the offices of recorder and auditor of the county, the ordinance making the consolidation must not only be passed and published, but must be published by order of the board. People v. Bailhache, 52 Cal. 310.

[b] Order of supervisors consolidating county offices must, under Political Code, sections 4106, 4107, be published by order of the board and the publication of the proceedings of the board containing the order, in a newspaper, is insufficient.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 87, 27 Pac. 939.

[c] Section 26 of the County Government Act of March 14, 1883, providing that an ordinance of the board of supervisors shall be published once a week in some newspaper published in the county, and that an order entered in the minutes shall be prima facie proof that it has been duly published, does not require that an order for the publication of an ordinance shall be made; but if such order is made, and a certain paper designated therein, the fact that the ordinance was published in another paper in the county does not invalidate it.—San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242, 11 Pac. 682.

[d] Under section 26 of the County Government Act of March 14, 1883, an ordinance of a board of supervisors of a county does not take effect until it has been published in its entirety, as required by that section; and a publication which omits the enacting clause of the ordinance is insufficient. People v. Russell, 74 Cal. 578, 16 Pac. 395.

[f] An order of the board of supervisors establishing the boundaries, and providing for the submission of the question of the incorporation of certain territory, is not an ordinance, and therefore need not be published.—People v. Town of Linden, 107 Cal. 94, 40 Pac. 115.

[a] County ordinance need not be recorded before it takes effect; publication and posting is only a prerequisite.—People v. Cole, 70 Cal. 60, 11 Pac. 481.

[b] The recording of an ordinance of a board of supervisors providing for the holding of regular meetings, is not essential to the validity of the ordinance.—Central Irr. Dist. v. De Lappe, 79 Cal. 351, 21 Pac. 825.

[c] Deering's Supplement, page 192, section 21, provides that the county board of supervisors must cause to be kept an ordinance book, in which must be entered all ordinances duly passed by the board. Held, that the record of an ordinance, with proof of proper publication, was sufficient to entitle it to be admitted in evidence, and is prima facie proof that the ordinance was passed, signed, and attested in the form in which it appears in the record, and the burden of showing its invalidity was on the party alleging the same.—San Diego County v. Siefert, 97 Cal. 594, 32 Pac. 644.

[d] Omission of a clerk of a board of supervisors to add the seal of the board to the record of an ordinance imposing a tax in the ordinance book does not render the ordinance invalid.—Santa Clara County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 66 Cal. 642, 6 Pac. 744; Santa Clara County v. Central Pac. R. Co., 6 Pac. 745.

§ 49. —— Time of Taking Effect.

[a] Statutes of 1897, page 474, chapter 277, section 56, provides that changes in townships shall not affect any present incumbent of the office of justice of the peace or constable; and section 26 provides that ordinances of the board of supervisors shall not take effect within less than fifteen days after their passage. An ordinance by which certain townships were abolished and a new township created from the territory formerly embraced within the two provided that the ordinance was "intended to" and should "take effect and be in force for the next general election for county and township officers." Held, that the ordinance took effect fifteen days after its passage, so far as it would be effective, and was then in force for all purposes of the next general election, the recital of the ordinance as to when it should take effect being merely declaratory of the law; and hence a contention that the ordinance was invalid because it could not be determined when it took effect was without merit.—Proulx v. Graves, 143 Cal. 243, 72 Pac. 1025.

[a] After the board of supervisors of a county has voted that act of March 31, 1891, establishing law libraries, shall be applicable to such county, it cannot evade the force and effect of the statute by repealing the adopting ordinance.—Board of Law Library Trustees v. Orange County Supervisors, 99 Cal. 571, 34 Pac. 244.

[a] County ordinance held within Penal Code, section 963, relating to pleading of private statutes.—Childs, Ex parte, 1 Cal. App. 39, 81 Pac. 667.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 963, relating to pleading of private statutes, complaint for violation of county ordinance forbidding handling of intoxicating liquors without license held sufficient.—Childs, Ex parte, 1 Cal. App. 39, 81 Pac. 667.

[a] The introduction of an ordinance from the record book of the board of supervisors, with the usual recitals as to its adoption, together with evidence that the board had acted in pursuance thereof, is prima facie proof that it was legally adopted, though there be no record evidence that such ordinance was ever published as required by law. People v. Baldwin, 117 Cal. 244, 49 Pac. 186.

[a] The judgments of the board of supervisors are as conclusive as those of a court of record, and only reviewable upon an appeal or some other direct proceeding. Waugh v. Chauncey, 13 Cal. 11.

[b] Objections that a bill for county printing is exorbitant and the result of an illegal combination by county newspapers can only be raised and determined before the board of supervisors.—Santa Cruz County v. McPherson, 133 Cal. 282, 65 Pac. 574.

[c] Statutes of 1893, page 347, authorizing a county to bring an action to recover money ordered paid by the board of supervisors, or paid by any officer without authority of law, does not authorize an action to recover money paid on the order of the board of supervisors for county printing, on the ground that such order was obtained by a fraudulent combination since the board is authorized to order such payment.—Santa Cruz County v. McPherson, 133 Cal. 282, 65 Pac. 574.

[a] Under the consolidation act of 1858, the board of supervisors of the city and county of Sacramento have no power to create the office of assistant clerk to the board, nor to raise the salaries fixed in the twenty-fourth section of the act, and their action, in creating such office and raising such salaries, may be reviewed on certiorari.—Robinson v. Board of Supervisors of Sacramento, 16 Cal. 208.

[b] If a general act creats an office in all the counties of the state, to be filled by election once in two years, and a special act passed afterward takes one county away from the provisions of the act, and this special act is afterward repealed by an act which restores the office as to that county, the provisions of the general act are revived as to the office.—People v. Hunt, 41 Cal. 435.

[c] The County Government Act of March 14, 1883, did not go into effect for the purpose of creating county offices until January 1, 1885, and therefore prior to that date there was no such office as county assessor of Alameda county.—Rosborough v. Boardman, 6 Pac. 449, 67 Cal. 116, 7 Pac. 261; Robinson v. Boardman, 7 Pac. 264.

[d] Under Constitution, article 11, section 5, declaring that the legislature, by general and uniform laws, shall provide for the election or appointment in the counties of supervisors, sheriffs, clerks, and such other county and municipal officers as public convenience may require, and shall prescribe their duties and fix their terms of office, a county cannot create the office of license tax collector, and make appointments therefor.—El Dorado County v. Meiss, 100 Cal. 268, 34 Pac. 716.

[e] Ordinance of supervisors creating office of license tax collector is void; duty of creating all county officers is vested in legislature.—San Luis Obispo v. Greenberg, 120 Cal. 305, 52 Pac. 797.

§ 55. Fiduciary Relation to State.

[a] A county surveyor is, under the statute, one of the agents of the state for the sale of swamp and overflowed lands. He cannot receive and file his own application to purchase, and make a survey for himself of the lands mentioned in his application; nor can he do these things nominally on the application of another, but really for himself, in whole or in part.—Edwards v. Estell, 48 Cal. 194.

[a] Act of March 27, 1850, relating to the office of county treasurer, provided that vacancies in the office should be filled by the court of sessions. Act of March 20, 1855, relating to the board of supervisors, provided that when any vacancy occurred in any county office, except that of county judge or supervisor, the board of supervisors should appoint a person to fill the vacancy. Held that, by such later act, a change was made in the appointing power in the event of a vacancy in the office of county treasurer. People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 329.

[b] Appointee of governor will hold over person elected to the same office at a special election ordered by the board of supervisors of the county.—People v. Martin, 12 Cal. 409.

[c] The seventy-fourth section of the general revenue act of 1860, as to the election of county auditor in certain counties, and separating his duties from those of county clerk, etc., does not repeal the special act of 1858, entitled "An act to separate the offices of county recorder, county auditor, clerk of the board of supervisors, clerk of the board of equalization, from the office of county clerk in the county of Placer"; and a person elected in the fall of 1860, as county recorder for Placer county, under the act of 1858, will hold in preference to a person elected at the same time as county auditor, under the revenue act of 1860.—People ex rel. Dunham v. Supervisors of Placer County, 17 Cal. 411.

[d] The act making the county treasurer of San Joaquin county ex officio tax collector, passed April 2, 1866 (Stats. 1865-66, p. 689), in so far as it provided for the transfer of such office, to take place before an election of such treasurer should occur, held to be unconstitutional and void.—People v. Kelsey, 34 Cal. 470.

[e] Act of March 14, 1883, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of county and township governments," authorizing the several county supervisors to impose a license tax, and to provide for its collection, includes the power to appoint an agent to collect the tax, and does not conflict with Constitution, article 11, section 5, giving the legislature power, by general and uniform laws, to provide for the election of county officers, and fix their compensation, duties, and term of office.—People v. Ferguson, 65 Cal. 288, 4 Pac. 4; People v. Ponet, 65 Cal. 288, 4 Pac. 4.

[f] Provision of section 2642 of Political Code, as amended in 1883, requiring board of supervisors of each county, upon petition of a majority of the taxpayers of a road district to appoint a road overseer therefor, is merely directory.—Davisson v. Solano County, 70 Cal. 612, 11 Pac. 680.

[g] Supervisors may appoint a collector of license taxes, and the bond given by that officer is an official bond and should be made payable to the state.—People v. Stacy, 74 Cal. 373, 16 Pac. 192.

[i] The word "deputy," in Constitution, article 11, section 8½, relative to county offices, includes employees, so that the civil service commission of the consolidated government of the city and county of San Francisco cannot hold examinations of copyists in the recorder's office, but the recorder may appoint them without examination.—Garnett v. Brooks, 136 Cal. 585, 69 Pac. 298.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 57. —— Time.

[a] A board of supervisors who have passed an ordinance calling for the appointment by themselves of a superintendent "annually in October" may make a valid appointment to such office in December.—People v. Murray, 15 Cal. 221.

[b] The constitution made no change in the time of electing city and county officers in San Francisco.—Barton v. Kalloch, 56 Cal. 95.

[c] The provisions of act of March 7, 1881, known as the "Hartson Act," directing elections of city and county officers in the even-numbered years, apply to San Francisco, as well as to other cities and counties. An election of such officers, therefore, must be held in November, 1882, notwithstanding that the "consolidation act" provides for elections in San Francisco in the odd-numbered years.—Staude v. San Francisco Election Commissioners, 61 Cal. 313.

[d] Under acts of 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 474) section 58, declaring that all elective county officers shall be elected at the time of the gubernatorial election, an election of a person at another time to fill the office of county auditor for the unexpired term or a former auditor was void, in the absence of other statutory provision for the election of county officers, and could not oust one regularly appointed to fill such vacancy.—People v. Col, 132 Cal. 334, 64 Pac. 477.

[a] County Government Act requiring county physician to be "suitable graduate in medicine" means that he be legally licensed to practice whether he holds degree of not.—People v. Eichelroth, 78 Cal. 143, 144.

[b] The election of a county surveyor who was in all respects qualified at the time of his election, with the exception that he had not then received the licensed land surveyor's certificate from the state surveyor provided for in section 135 of the County Government Act, which he obtained before his term of office commenced, cannot be successfully contested by an elector on that ground. The provision requiring such certificate does not go to his eligibility at the time of election, but only goes to his right to hold the office.—Ward v. Crowell, 142 Cal. 587, 76 Pac. 491.

§§ 60, 61. Official Bonds.

[a] Where an official bond, proper in form and substance, is signed and sealed by a treasurer of a county and his sureties, and is approved by the proper officer, and filed in the office appointed by law, it is both executed and delivered.—Sacramento County Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

[b] If statute providing for new county contains no provision in relation to official bonds, they must be given in conformity to the general law upon that subject.—People v. Ross, 28 Cal. 76.

[a] The county judge only, and not the supervisors, has authority to approve official bonds, and consequently to declare an office vacant for want of a bond.—People v. Marin County Supervisors, 10 Cal. 344.

[b] Since the special act of March 27, 1850, approval by the board of supervisors of a county treasurer's bond is sufficient.—People v. Breyfogle, 17 Cal. 504.

[c] Acceptance of a county treasurer's bond by the board of supervisors carries with it an approval as to the penalty, the form, and the sufficiency of the sureties.—People v. Breyfogle, 17 Cal. 504.

[d] A board of supervisors has no authority to reject an official bond unless it is not, in form and substance, in compliance with the requirements of the statute, or is not executed by sufficient and responsible sureties, and a rejection of a bond because the petitioner had resigned his office, where immediately before he gave the bond he filed notice of his withdrawal of the resignation, is ineffectual.—Miller v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93.

[e] In the approval of bonds of officers, boards of supervisors exercise judicial functions, and their action may be reviewed on certiorari.—Miller v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93.

§ 63. —— New Bonds.

[a] The consolidation act gives the officers named in the fourteenth section two days after the meeting of the board of supervisors in which to file new bonds. The meeting taking place on the 9th of July, the officers had the whole of the 10th and 11th of July to execute and present their bonds.—Doane v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 393.

[b] Supervisors are authorized to require new bonds "whenever they deem it necessary." The question is left not to their arbitrary, but to their sound legal, discretion, exercised after an examination of the facts in the case.—People v. Marin County Supervisors, 10 Cal. 344.

[c] Under a statute authorizing boards of supervisors to require new bonds of county officers whenever they deem it necessary, an order requiring a new bond must state the grounds on which it is made, or it is fatally defective.—People v. Marin County Supervisors, 10 Cal. 344.

[a] Officers first elected hold till the first general election for county officers throughout the state, after the expiration of the term of the two years fixed by the special act, and an election held before that time is void.—People ex rel. Vesey v. Church, 6 Cal. 76.

[b] Where act organizing a county only fixes term of officers first elected, future officers must be governed by general law.—People v. Colton, 6 Cal. 84.

[c] The constitution of 1879 changed the time for holding general elections to the Tuesday after the first Monday in November. It authorized the legislature to pass a general and uniform law for the election, in the several counties of the state, of such county, township and municipal officers, and provided that the first election held under the new constitution should be subject to the provisions of the old law. By it elections were held on the first Wednesday of September, and act of March 7, 1881, was passed, providing that elections for such county officers be held at the general elections in November. It did not provide for the filling of the office during the time between the September election and the November one. Held, that it did not attempt to extend the term of the then incumbents, contrary to the constitution prohibiting the extension of any officer's term beyond the period for which he was elected.—Treadwell v. Yolo County Supervisors, 62 Cal. 563.

[d] The treasurer, auditor, tax collector, and surveyor, being each required by the consolidation act to perform certain municipal duties not imposed upon officers of the same name by the County Government Act, are municipal officers, whose term of office is fixed at two years. Their successors are also to be elected at the general election to be held in November, 1896.—Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316, 46 Pac. 87.

[e] The term of office of the assessor was made four years by section 4109 of the Political Code, upon its adoption in 1872, and by section 3 of article 9 of the constitution the superintendent of schools is to be elected at each gubernatorial election. Such officers having been elected in 1894, for the term of four years, their successors are not to be elected at the general election to be held in 1896.—Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316.

[f] Section 57 of the County Government Act of March 24, 1893, designating the several officers of a county, section 60 of that act providing that "all elective county and township officers, except otherwise provided for in this act, shall be elected at the general election to be held in November, 1894, and every four years thereafter," and subdivision 26 of section 170, providing that "the officers mentioned in section 57 of this act, except as hereinafter provided, shall be elected in the year 1894, and every two years thereafter," must be construed so as to harmonize their apparent conflict; and so construed, it must be presumed that the legislature did not intend the provisions of subdivision 26 of section 170 should be applicable to any other counties than those in the eighth class.—Hale v. McGettigan, 114 Cal. 112, 45 Pac. 1049.

[g] Acts of 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 474), section 58, provides that all elective county officers shall be elected at the general election at which the governor is elected, and shall take office in January next succeeding their election. Section 25, subdivision 19, authorizes the board of supervisors to fill by appointment all vacancies that may occur in any elective county office; the appointee to hold office for the unexpired term, or until the next general election. Held, that the words "next general election" mean the next general election for the particular office so filled by appointment, and one appointed by the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy in the office of county auditor is entitled to that office until the next gubernatorial election.—People v. Col, 132 Cal. 334, 64 Pac. 477.

[h] The expressions, "unexpired term" and "the next general election," used in subdivision 19 of section 25 of the County

Government Act, are not necessarily synonymous. There may be cases in which the "unexpired term" would not mean until the "next general election"; and the latter phrase imports the next general election for county officers, including the officer whose term became vacant.—People v. Col, 132 Cal. 334, 64 Pac. 477.

§ 65. Filling Vacancies—Power of Supervisors.

[a] Power to declare office vacant is vested under statute, where the duty to approve of the bond of officer is lodged. That duty is imposed upon the county judge, and not the supervisors; and where the supervisors declared the office of constable vacant, because the constable failed to comply with order to file new bond, they exceeded their jurisdiction.—People ex rel. De Fries v. Marin County, 10 Cal. 344.

[b] Proclamation of supervisors is essential to validity of election to fill vacancy in a county office.—Tenney v. Miners' Ditch Co., 11 Cal. 339.

[c] By Statutes of March 20, 1855, supervisors are to exercise all powers previously given to the court of sessions, unless inconsistent with that statute. They are also to fill all vacancies until the next election, except in cases of judges. By statutes of March 27, 1850, it is provided that vacancies in the office of treasurer shall be filled by the court of sessions, and that the appointee shall hold during the remainder of the term. Held, that one appointed by the supervisors to fill a vacancy in the office of treasurer should hold through the term, though beyond the next election, as the provision as to him was special, and would control the general regulation of the same statute.—People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 329.

[e] A county board has no power to fill a vacancy which will certainly arise at a future time, when a different board is in control of the county affairs.—People v. Ward, 107 Cal. 236, 40 Pac. 538.

[f] Law does not favor repeal of statutes by implication; and legislation will not be implied to repeal the clause in consolidation act which devolves duty of filling vacancies in the office of superintendent of schools in San Francisco upon the board of education, by reason of the provision of the County Government Act giving the county boards of supervisors the power to fill vacancies in county offices generally.—People ex rel. Young v. Babcock, 114 Cal. 559, 46 Pac. 818.

§ 66. —— Vacancy Created by Forced Absence from State.

[a] Under Political Code, section 996, providing that an office shall become vacant before the expiration of the term on the incumbent's absence from the state, without permission of the legislature, beyond the period allowed by law; and section 4120, forbidding a county officer to absent himself from the state for more than sixty days, or for any period, without the consent of the board of supervisors—such absence, ipso facto, creates a vacancy in his office, and in the office of each of his deputies, and the appointing board may appoint another to fill the office. The fact that such treasurer was necessarily absent from the state on account of his health is immaterial.—People v. Shorb, 100 Cal. 537, 38 Am. St. Rep. 310, 35 Pac. 163.

[a] A physician under contract with the county for a definite term cannot be discharged within that term for a mere honest error of judgment as to the scope of his authority.—Grandley v. Santa Cruz County, 4 Pac. 390.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 69. —— Power of Legislature to Regulate.

[a] Legislature may regulate compensation of all county officers in proportion to duties and for that purpose classify counties by population.—Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 143, 8 Pac. 813.

[b] The legislature has peculiar discretion in determining the mode and measure of the compensation of county officers, and may provide that some officers may receive fees or per diem, and that others shall receive regular salaries, and may adopt diverse regulations applying severally to each class, and not to the other.—Vail v. San Diego Co., 126 Cal. 35, 58 Pac. 392.

[a] A statute concerning the office, and fixing the salary of a county clerk, "providing that he should collect all official fees, and on the first of every month pay the same over to the county treasurer, less his salary for the next preceding month," does not evince any legislative intention to limit his salary to the amount of fees received.—Sewell v. Placer County, 42 Cal. 650.

[b] The superintendent of irrigation, elected under act of March 10, 1874, entitled "An act to promote irrigation in the county of Los Angeles," was not a county officer, and was not entitled to compensation from the county; and act of March 7, 1878, providing from compensation for his services to be paid out of county funds, is unconstitutional. Knox v. Los Angeles County Supervisors, 58 Cal. 59.

[c] County Government Act of 1853 did not repeal acts allowing commissions and mileage to county officers on taxes and other revenue collected.—Smith v. Dunn, 68 Cal. 55, 8 Pac. 625.

[d] Provision fixing compensation of county officers at an annual sum must be construed as fixing rate of compensation to be paid for time officer actually serves.—Dillon v. Bicknell, 116 Cal. 115, 47 Pac. 937.

[e] Section 60 of County Government Act repealed section 4109 of the Political Code, and county officer is entitled to compensation, in proportion to his monthly salary, for time he holds over until his successor is qualified. Dillon v. Bicknell, 116 Cal. 113-115, 47 Pac. 937.

[f] Under acts of 1893, section 173, and acts of 1897, sections 59, 215, 233, the deputy county clerk of Tulare county who held office at the time of the enactment of the law of 1897 is entitled to the salary provided by the law of 1893.—McPhail v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Clark v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; De Witt v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Bliss v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735.

[g] Under acts of 1893, section 173, and acts of 1897, sections 59, 215, 233, the deputy county superintendent of Tulare county who held office at the time of the enactment of the law of 1897 is entitled to the salary provided by the law of 1893.—McPhail v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Clark v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; De Witt v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Bliss v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735.

[h] Under section 8½ of article 11 of the constitution, the city and county of San Francisco was authorized to fix the compensation of county officers, and to provide for the number of deputies that each shall have, and for the compensation payable to each of the deputies.—Matter of Dodge and the City and County of San Francisco, 135 Cal. 512, 67 Pac. 973.

[i] Political Code, section 3678, requiring the county recorder to transmit to the assessor abstracts of mortgages, etc., and providing that, "when necessary, the board of supervisors . . . . must provide for the payment of such additional clerical force" as the section necessitates, is in conflict with Constitution, article 11, section 5, providing that the legislature shall regulate the compensation of county officers.—Agard v. Shaffer, 141 Cal. 725, 75 Pac. 343.

[a] The special act of the legislature, approved April 4, 1857, fixing the compensation of the county clerk of the county of Placer at three thousand dollars, was intended in lieu of all fees for services rendered the county.—Mitchell v. Stoner, 9 Cal. 203.

§ 72. —— Auditor.

[a] Supervisors possess no power to allow county auditor compensation for the issuance and cancellation of warrants drawn on the county treasurer. Such claim is not authorized by law, and the power of the board to allow accounts against the county is confined to those "legally chargeable."—People ex rel. Raun v. Supervisors of El Dorado County, 11 Cal. 170.

§ 73. —— Persons Holding More than One Office.

[a] By act of February 28, 1876, the offices of county clerk, auditor, and recorder of Humboldt county were united in the same person, and the annual salary of the clerk for all services in these several offices was fixed at five thousand dollars. Subsequently the county was made of the second class, and the supervisors separated the offices of auditor and recorder from that of clerk, and fixed the latter's salary at two thousand seven hundred dollars. Held, that the clerk was not entitled to the five thousand dollars, and, as the act did not provide as to the proportion for each office on separation, it was inoperative.—Kinsey v. Kellogg, 65 Cal. 111, 3 Pac. 405.

§ 74. —— Reimbursement for Expenses and Clerk Hire.

[a] The county will not be liable for a new set of weights and measures purchased by a newly elected deputy sealer, who was aware that the county already owned a complete set, which were in the possession of the county clerk, who refused to give them up to him when demanded.—Levy v. Yuba County Supervisors, 13 Cal. 636.

[b] Constitution, article 11, section 5, provides that the legislature shall provide for county officers, and regulate their compensation; and by section 9 that such compensation should not be increased during their terms of office. Statutes of 1883, page 299, as amended by Statutes of 1885, page 178, fixed the salary of the county clerk of M. county, and made it full compensation for all services, including his deputy. Held that, where his term of office began January 7th, an order of the county board on the 10th, allowing him a deputy at a salary of fifty dollars per month, to be paid by the county, was an increase of his compensation, within the meaning of the constitution.—Dougherty v. Austin, 94 Cal. 601, 28 Pac. 834, 16 L. R. A. 161.

[c] The fact that the law under which the supervisors acted was in force prior to the election of the county clerk is immaterial, as it was the order and not the act of the legislature which increased the compensation.—Dougherty v. Austin, 94 Cal. 601, 28 Pac. 834, 16 L. R. A. 161.

[d] County Government Act, section 182, as re-enacted March 31, 1891, providing that the salary of auditor in counties of the twentieth class shall be eighteen hundred dollars per annum "and one clerk at a monthly salary of not exceeding fifty dollars," authorizes a salary of eighteen hundred dollars per annum, plus the salary, not exceeding fifty dollars per month, of one clerk employed by the auditor.—Farnum v. Warner, 104 Cal. 677, 38 Pac. 421.

[e] Under Statutes of 1893, page 367, section 61 (Stats. 1897, p. 475, sec. 59), declaring that every county officer may appoint as many deputies as may be necessary for the prompt and faithful discharge of the duties of his office, the county clerk may appoint additional deputies and assistants if the needs of his office so require; but allowance of compensation of these extra deputies and assistants out of the treasury is prohibited, as being in violation of constitution, article 11, section 13, providing that no person shall be granted power to control, appropriate, supervise, or in any way interfere with county funds.—City and County of San Francisco v. Broderick, 125 Cal. 188, 57 Pac. 887.

[b] The board of supervisors cannot fix or alter the salary of a county treasurer which is, under the general law, derived from a percentage on money recovered by him.—San Joaquin County v. Jones, 18 Cal. 327.

[c] When a statute (Pol. Code, sec. 1552) provides that a county officer shall receive such salary and reasonable traveling expenses, "to be estimated by the board of supervisors," as may be allowed by such board, but sets a minimum limit therefor, no salary can be collected until the amount thereof has been fixed by the board.—Peachy v. Redmond, 59 Cal. 326.

[d] Provision that salary of county officer cannot be increased during his term of office applies to one appointed to fill vacancy for unexpired term.—Larew v. Newman, 81 Cal. 590, 23 Pac. 227.

[f] Under Constitution, article 11, section 9, declaring that the compensation of any county officer shall not be increased after his election or during his term of office, and County Government Act of 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 528), providing that the county clerk of H county shall be paid a stated salary, in full compensation for all services rendered unless in the act otherwise provided, where the county clerk of such county collects data from his records to aid the county in enforcing a claim against the state at the instance of members of the board of supervisors, he is not entitled to compensation therefor.—Humboldt County v. Stern, 136 Cal. 63, 68 Pac. 324.

[a] Act of February 27, 1878, provided that no county officer shall pay in any month demands against the treasury exceeding one-twelfth of the amount allowed for the year. The board of supervisors limited the expense of the county clerk's office to seventy-two thousand dollars per year. The auditor refused to audit the bills of said office for a certain month, because they aggregated eight thousand dollars. These bills included salaries fixed by law. On mandamus to compel the audit, the auditor based his answer on constitution, article 11, section 18, which provides that no county shall incur any indebtedness exceeding in any one year the income and revenue provided for it for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the electors. Held, that the amount fixed by the board is not the limit of the revenue of the county clerk's office for salaries fixed by law, they being payable out of the general fund, and, in the absence of any showing that the general fund would be exhausted thereby, payment cannot be excused by the prohibition in the constitution.—Welch v. Strother, 74 Cal. 22, 16 Pac. 22.

§ 77. —— Actions to Recover.

[a] An action to recover compensation for services rendered as secretary of board of education is founded on a liability created by statute, and comes within the three years' limitation of section 338 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Banks v. Yolo County, 104 Cal. 258, 37 Pac. 900.

§ 79. —— Effect of Change from Fee to Salary Office.

[a] Where a county officer, whose compensation is derived wholly or in part from fees collected by him, is placed upon a fixed salary, the fees formerly retained by such officer are still to be collected by him, but are to be paid over to the county treasury.

§ 80. Powers and Duties—Source of Power.

[a] The district attorney, sheriff, county clerk, county recorder, coroner, and public administrator are officers whose powers and duties are given by the County Government Act, or by other general laws, and do not derive any authority from the consolidation act, or exercise any function in the municipal government of San Francisco. They are county officers, and their term of office, as well as the time of their election, are determined by the County Government Act of 1893.—Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316, 46 Pac. 87.

[a] The authority of a deputy county clerk in taking and certifying to acknowledgments of conveyances is coextensive with that of his principal.—Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150, 81 Am. Dec. 108.

[b] A county clerk may attest and sign as county clerk a certificate of acknowledgment, affixing thereto the seal of the court of which he is ex-officio clerk; and the seal affixed with its inscription will sufficiently designate the court of which, in that particular matter, he is acting as clerk.—Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150, 81 Am. Dec. 108.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, post, § 84.

[a] Auditor cannot refuse to draw county warrant because there is no money in the treasury.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[b] Except in cases where board of supervisors have exceeded their powers the auditor cannot assume to set up his judgment in opposition to theirs, in respect to the issuance of a warrant on an account against the county.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[c] Auditor is authorized to accept treasurer's receipt as sufficient evidence of payment.—Butte County v. Morgan, 76 Cal. 3, 18 Pac. 115.

[d] County auditor is not protected by order of board of supervisors allowing claim not chargeable against county, and in resisting such order is acting for county.—Lamberson v. Jeffers, 116 Cal. 494, 48 Pac. 485.

[e] Where auditor refuses to issue warrant without just cause, he has no claim against county to be reimbursed for costs.—Lamberson v. Jeffers, 116 Cal. 494, 48 Pac. 485.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 83. —— Treasurer.

[a] Warrant drawn by auditor on treasurer of county without having been ordered by a majority of the board of supervisors is void; and should the treasurer pay such warrant he would be liable to the county on his official bond.—Trinity County v. McCammon, 25 Cal. 117.

[b] When a county treasurer is authorized by statute to advertise for bids for the surrender of county bonds, in order that he may redeem them with money in the treasury, he has no authority, in the advertisement, to insert a condition upon which bids will be received, which is not to be implied from the duty to advertise, and which is not necessary to the exercise of his authority; such as that the bonds must accompany the bid. It is his duty to accept the most favorable bid, even if not accompanied by the bonds.—Mills v. Bellmer, 48 Cal. 124.

[c] It is the duty of a county treasurer to pay an auditor's warrant upon the school fund, if it is regular and legal in form, unless he has notice that it is not based upon a lawful demand, or has notice of facts sufficient to put an ordinarily prudent treasurer upon inquiry, which, if diligently prosecuted, would lead to a discovery of the illegality of the claim upon which the warrant was founded.—Los Angeles v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 153.

[d] Plaintiff paid a certain sum to a county treasurer, with the agreement that it was to be used to purchase certain land for a high-school site. The treasurer paid the money to the owner, who conveyed it to the supervisors, who failed to comply with the condition in the deed requiring them to begin the erection of a schoolhouse within two years, and the land reverted to the grantor. Held, that the county was not liable to plaintiff for what he had paid.—Walton v. McPhetridge, 120 Cal. 440, 52 Pac. 731.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, ante, § 82.

[a] Auditor of county is the mere clerk of the board of supervisors, and he has no power or authority to draw his warrant on the county treasurer for the payment of a claim, unless the board of supervisors have made an express order that the claim be paid.—Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447.

[b] In default of action by the board the auditor cannot fix the salary at the minimum provided in the code. The law does not authorize him to draw his warrant for the payment of a salary which has not been fixed.—Peachy v. Redmond, 59 Cal. 326.

[a] If a county treasurer receives money as belonging to the county, he is afterward estopped from denying that it is the money of the county.—McKee v. Monterey County, 51 Cal. 275.

[b] Where a county clerk, acting in his official capacity, and under color of his office, collects advance charges contrary to law, he must, at the end of his term, turn over to the county treasurer, and not to his own successor in office, the amount thereof remaining in his hands.—People v. Hamilton, 103 Cal. 488, 37 Pac. 627.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] The auditor of Placer county is not entitled to retain for his own use the fifty cents on each business license sold by the tax collector, and paid by him to the auditor under the revenue act of 1861. It is received for the use of the county.—Patton v. Placer County, 30 Cal. 175.

[b] If a county treasurer, upon his settlement with the controller of the state, is allowed by the latter officer to retain money, for official or other services, beyond the compensation to which he is entitled, it is his duty to pay such money into the county treasury, and to turn it over to his successor in office. He cannot claim the money on the ground that the controller exceeded his authority in making the allowance.—McKee v. Monterey County, 51 Cal. 275.

[d] A county clerk, whose salary was fixed by law, and who, under act of March 27, 1876, was ex-officio county recorder, and as such authorized to appoint a deputy county recorder, at a fixed salary to be paid by the county, came within the class of officers mentioned in such statute to whom no compensation should be allowed or paid other than the compensation and salaries prescribed, and who should collect and keep all fees and other compensation provided by law for services in their official capacity, and pay the same into the county treasury; and such an officer is liable to the county for fees so collected, and not paid over.—San Luis Obispo County v. King, 69 Cal. 531, 11 Pac. 178.

[a] Where the controller of state made a settlement with a county treasurer, and allowed him his commissions, which settlement has been acquiesced in for several years, the state cannot, in the absence of fraud or clear mistake, set aside the settlement and hold the treasurer to a resettlement.—People v. Lattimore, 19 Cal. 365.

§ 88. —— Actions by County.

§ 89. Personal Liability.

[a] The County Government Act of 1883, section 7, provided that "all supervisors, and any other officer, authorizing, or aiding to authorize or auditing, or allowing, any claim, ... against said treasury . . . . in violation of any of the provisions of this act, shall be liable in person . . . . to the person or persons damaged by such illegal authorization to the extent of his loss by reason of the nonpayment of his . . . . claim." A claim was allowed in favor of plaintiff's assignor, and a warrant therefor issued, but payment of the warrant was refused. It was admitted that the assignor's claim against the county and the warrant were invalid. Held, that no one had been "damaged" within the meaning of the statute; hence no action would lie against the supervisors and auditor. Bank of Santa Cruz County v. Bartlett, 78 Cal. 301, 20 Pac. 682.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Liability to private individuals of registers of deeds, county clerks, clerks of court, prothonotaries, etc.: 95 Am. St. Rep. 85, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 436-440, 444; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1376-1382, §§ 118-121; cols. 1401-1404, §§ 135, 136.

§ 90. Liability on Official Bonds.

[a] If a county treasurer receipts to persons who owe the state for land, without receiving the money, but with an understanding that such persons will pay him the money when he requires it to make a settlement, and the treasurer soon after dies, and such persons pay the money to his successor in office, who credits it to the account of the deceased, the treasurer's bondsmen cannot be holden for the money, the payment to the successor in office being a liquidation of the demand.—People v. Jacob, 49 Cal. 540.

[b] County Government Act, section 71, provides that the treasurer shall receive no money unless accompanied by the certificate of the auditor, as provided in section 115, or otherwise as provided by law. Section 115 provides that the auditor must settle the accounts of all persons holding money payable into the county treasury, and certify the amount to the treasurer, and, on the filing of the treasurer's receipt therefor, give him a receipt, and charge the treasurer with the amount. Political Code, section 3761, provides that the auditor must settle with the tax collector, and require from him the treasurer's receipt, or, if the treasurer is collector, require from him an immediate account for any existing deficiency. Held, that it is sufficient, where the same person is treasurer and collector, to charge him and his sureties as treasurer, that the auditor settled with him as collector, and handed him the certificate of the amount found due, which receipt was found in the county treasury, and at once credited him as collector, and charged him as treasurer with such sum.—Butte County v. Morgan, 76 Cal. 1, 18 Pac. 115.

[c] The sureties upon the official bond of a county treasurer are not responsible for a loss resulting from the payment of a genuine auditor's warrant in due form, without notice, actual or constructive, of any fraud or infirmity in the claim upon which the warrant was based.—Los Angeles v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 153.

[d] It is no part of the official duties of a county recorder, as such, to record notices of locations of mining claims, and any moneys which he may receive for so doing are not fees for which he or his bondsmen are accountable to the county.—County of San Bernardino v. Davidson, 112 Cal. 503, 44 Pac. 659.

[a] The liability of the sureties on the official bond of a county treasurer is not affected by the fact that it was approved by the county judge, who had no authority to give such approval.—People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429.

[b] The improper approval of a county treasurer's bond by the county judge, instead of the supervisors, does not render the bond invalid.—Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145.

[c] A bond for the faithful discharge of his duties, executed by a deputy county treasurer to the treasurer, and not to the state, as required by Political Code, section 958, which declares that the official bonds must be made payable to the state, is nevertheless an official bond, and may be sued on as such under section 963, providing that, if an official bond does not contain the conditions required by law, the party and sureties are equitably bound to the state or a party interested.—Hubert v. Mendheim, 64 Cal. 213, 30 Pac. 633.

§ 92. —— Contribution Among Sureties.

[a] In the case of sureties on the official bond of a county treasurer, they all contract together, and with reference to the common responsibility. In case of a breach or loss, each surety has his recourse for contribution on his fellows.—People v. Buster, 11 Cal. 215.

[b] A county judge has no jurisdiction in a proceeding to discharge the sureties on the official bond of a county treasurer, or to approve a new bond.—People v. Evans, 29 Cal. 429.

[c] Liability of surety on an official bond is not discharged by the failure of the county to present its claims arising on the bond to the executor of the estate for allowance, within the period fixed for notice to creditors.—Los Angeles v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 153.

§ 94. —— Scope of Liability.

[a] The sureties of a county treasurer are liable for public money received by him as treasurer after the expiration of his term, so long as he remains in possession of the office, and until he delivers it over to his successor. Placer County v. Dickerson, 45 Cal. 12.

§ 95. Actions on Official Bonds.

[a] It is error to dismiss an action brought by the district attorney in the name of the people, on the official bond of the county treasurer, to recover moneys of the state and county, fraudulently converted by him, on the ground that it was commenced without authority, where it appears that the act of the district attorney was ratified both by the supervisors and by the grand jury, which lawfully directed him to continue its prosecution.—People v. Madden, 133 Cal. 347, 65 Pac. 741.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where deposit is made by the clerk and receipted for by the treasurer as required by the act of 1864, and the latter regularly turns it over to his successor in office, by whom it is embezzled, any irregularity that there may have been in the manner of making the original deposit will not release the sureties on the official bond of the succeeding treasurer from liability.—Heppe v. Johnson, 73 Cal. 265, 14 Pac. 833.

obligation to four years; and County Government Act, section 87 (Stats. 1891, p. 318), requires the county treasurer to keep the county funds in his own possession until disbursed according to law. Held, that an action in 1896 on a county treasurer's official bond for money lost by him by deposit in a bank in 1891, which was then known to the county, was barred by limitations, though his term of office did not expire until 1893, since the cause of action arose when he lost control of the money, and not at the expiration of his term of office.—San Diego County v. Dauer, 131 Cal. 199, 63 Pac. 338.

§ 98. —— Parties Plaintiff.

[a] The board of supervisors of Sacramento county is the proper plaintiff in an action for a breach of the county treasurer's bond, which occurred in September, 1863.—Sacramento County Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

[a] An allegation in the complaint, in an action by a board of supervisors, on a county treasurer's bond, that the bond had been executed and delivered to the plaintiff, may be rejected as surplusage, when it is inconsistent with other allegations that it was executed and delivered to the state, as required by law, and the plaintiff corporation was not in existence when the bond was filed. Sacramento County Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

[b] Commission retained by a county treasurer on moneys paid the state cannot be recovered in an action on his bond, where the only breach alleged is that he failed to keep the money of the county in the safe provided for that purpose, but unlawfully withdrew the same, and converted it to his own use.—Sacramento County Supervisors v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

[c] If the complaint on the official bond of a county treasurer avers that the money for which the treasurer is in default belongs to the county, the action is properly brought in the name of the county.—Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145.

[d] Averment in complaint on county treasurer's official bond that he received money belonging to the county and retains it, and refuses to deliver it to his successor in office, is a sufficient averment of a breach of its conditions.—Mendocino County v. Morris, 32 Cal. 145.

[a] Receipts of a county treasurer, given to a tax collector for public money, after the expiration of his term, but before he has delivered possession of the office to his successor, are admissible as evidence to charge the sureties on his official bond.—Placer County v. Dickerson, 45 Cal. 12.

[b] In an action on a county treasurer's bond for conversion of funds, when the defense is that the treasurer was robbed and locked in the vault, in which he was found twelve hours after the alleged robbery, evidence of the effect of striking the sheet-iron sides of the vault was competent, since it was a fair inference that if his story was true, and knowing the effect of such a blow, he would naturally have tried to attract attention in that way.—Sonoma County v. Stofen, 125 Cal. 32, 57 Pac. 68.

[c] Evidence in action on bond held to create such suspicious circumstances as justified the jury in ignoring defendant's uncontradicted evidence.—Sonoma County v. Stofen, 125 Cal. 32, 57 Pac. 681.

[a] In an action against the principal and sureties on an official bond, the judgment should first fix the amount of the defalcation of, or recovery from, the former and then proceed with a separate judgment against each of the sureties for the full amount for which he has made himself liable in the bond and costs, and then close with a proviso to the effect that each shall be satisfied by the collection or payment of such defalcation or recovery and costs.—People v. Rooney, 29 Cal. 642.

[b] A finding that a payment by a county treasurer was made "upon what purported to be a county auditor's warrant," raises the presumption, in the absence of any finding to the contrary, that the warrant was genuine, and complied with the law in form and substance.—Los Angeles v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 153.

[a] Failure of county treasurer to reside at county seat of his county, as required by law, is not an "omission to perform any duty enjoined by law upon a public officer," within the meaning of a statute (Pen. Code, section 176) declaring such omission a misdemeanor. Such a statute should not be deemed to apply to conditions or qualifications upon which the incumbent's right to hold an office depends, but to nonperformance of duties pertaining to the office.—Harrold, Ex parte, 47 Cal. 129.

[a] State has never given any interest in its swamp lands to counties; they hold proceeds of sales of such lands in trust for state. Kings County v. Tulare, 119 Cal. 514-516, 51 Pac. 866.

§ 104. Power to Acquire.

[a] Authority by act of legislature to erect a courthouse and jail would necessarily embrace the power to purchase the land on which to erect them.—De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289.

[b] A court of sessions has no authority to purchase land for a courthouse, and a contract made by them with that end in view is void.—Phelan v. County of San Francisco, 6 Cal. 531.

§ 106. Regulation and Use.

[a] Boards of supervisors possess the power, as incidental to that of buying, selling, and leasing of property, and the management, care, and preservation thereof, as conferred by statutes (Stats. 1855, sec. 9, p. 51), to take all legal measures necessary to that end, by suit or otherwise, and therein are vested with large discretionary powers.—Hornblower v. Duden, 35 Cal. 664.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 144, which provides that if suitable rooms for holding the superior courts are not provided in any county by the supervisors thereof, together with the furniture, fuel, and lights sufficient for the transaction of business, the courts, or the judge or judges thereof, may direct the sheriff to provide such rooms, etc., does not authorize the judge of a department of a superior court to anticipate the action of the county court board in completing and furnishing a room of a county courthouse, designed for him, though the board are unreasonably delaying the work.—Los Angeles County v. Superior Court of Los Angeles, 93 Cal. 380, 28 Pac. 1062.

[c] Under statutes of 1883, page 299, authorizing supervisors to provide "county buildings and suitable rooms for county purposes," and to manage and control the same, the power of the supervisors to designate rooms in the courthouse for the use of county officers is not exhausted by one designation, but they may assign to the district attorney rooms occupied by the judges of the superior court, though such rooms were designated on the building plan as "Judges' Chambers." San Joaquin County v. Budd, 96 Cal. 47, 30 Pac. 967.

[d] The setting apart by the board of supervisors of a few feet for shelf room for a law library, in a large room occupied by the principal county officers, and by the board of supervisors when in session, where the books cannot be consulted or used with reasonable convenience, is not providing such a room for the use of the law library as is contemplated by act of March 31, 1891, providing for the establishment of law libraries in counties.—Board of Law Library Trustees v. Orange County Supervisors, 99 Cal. 571, 34 Pac. 244.

§ 107. Sale or Transfer.

[a] County may assign and transfer warrant drawn in its favor by another county on its treasurer, so as to invest the holder with the right to demand payment thereon without selling it at public auction.—Beals v. Evans, 10 Cal. 459.

[b] Prior to the enactment of the Political Code, section 4047, there was no limitation upon the general powers of the board of supervisors to contract either for printing or publication.—Maxwell v. Stanislaus County Supervisors, 56 Cal. 114.

[c] Though the tax collector is required by Political Code, section 3764, to make publication of the delinquent tax list, the supervisors must contract for the printing thereof; section 4047 providing that they must contract for all county printing.—Times Pub. Co. v. Alameda County, 64 Cal. 469, 2 Pac. 246.

[d] Act of March 14, 1883 (County Government Act), authorizes the county board of supervisors to issue bonds, and provides that the bonds shall be delivered to the county treasurer, by whom they shall be sold to the highest bidder. Section 25 further authorizes the board to do "all other acts and things . . . . which may be necessary to the full discharge of the duties of the legislative authority of the county government." Held, that the board did not have authority, under section 25, to employ an agent to procure bids to be made for such bonds.—Smith v. Los Angeles County, 99 Cal. 628, 34 Pac. 439.

[e] A county clerk had no authority, as the law stood in 1892, to bind the county by his contract to print the Great Register for the county; but the authority to provide printed copies of the Great Register was devolved, by section 34 of the County Government Act of 1891, upon the board of supervisors, who are the chief legislative and executive authority of the county.—Frandzen v. County of San Diego, 101 Cal. 317, 35 Pac. 897.

[f] The allowance by the board of supervisors to attorneys for assisting in the prosecution of criminal cases is void and creates no legal claim against the county. County of Modoc v. Spencer, 103 Cal. 498, 37 Pac. 483.

[g] The appointment by the board of supervisors of a county of an agent to procure the redemption of lands sold to the state for taxes, and to collect the amount of such taxes due the county, with an agreement to pay him a commission on the amount collected, is ultra vires.—House v. Los Angeles County, 104 Cal. 73, 37 Pac. 796.

[h] The act of receiving or collecting license taxes is an official function to be performed only by a county officer invested for that purpose with a part of the sovereign power of the state; and the board of supervisors has no power to make a contract with a private individual to collect license taxes for an agreed compensation, and such compensation cannot be enforced as a valid claim against the county.—Ventura County v. Clay, 112 Cal. 65, 44 Pac. 488.

[i] The supervisors of a county have authority under section 25 of the County Government Act to erect a jail, under a contract let to the lowest responsible bidder, provided plans and specifications therefor have been first adopted by the board prior to the sixty days' notice of the bidding upon which the bids are to be based; but they have no authority to let a contract upon plans and specifications to be drafted and submitted by the bidders, thereby preventing competition in bidding, and giving the board an opportunity for favoritism; and the carrying out of a contract so let may be enjoined at suit of a taxpayer.—Ertle v. Leary, 114 Cal. 238, 46 Pac. 1.

[k] Unfavorable results of suits brought for a county by attorneys employed therefor by the county commissioners is not conclusive against right of the commissioners to employ them at the expense of the county, but the test is whether there was room for an honest difference of opinion as to what the result would be.—Lamberson v. Jefferds, 118 Cal. 363, 50 Pac. 403.

[m] The boards of supervisors of adjoining counties have authority to contract with a railroad company for the payment of different sums of money from each if the railroad company to aid it in the construction of a new bridge across a river, constituting a boundary between the two counties, so as to make a separate roadway for teams and footmen, and another underneath, for the use of the railroad company, which new bridge is designed to replace an old dilapidated bridge, which had been long used both by the railroad company and the public, and which was less convenient and more dangerous to the public. The contract by the supervisors to pay the money so agreed to be paid to the railroad company, which constructs the bridge as agreed, is binding upon the county.—Croley v. California Pacific R. R. Co., 134 Cal. 557, 66 Pac. 860.

[a] Contract for the erection of county buildings is not void because it does not provide that eight hours shall be a day's work under it.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[b] Contract for publication of delinquent tax list must be made by board of supervisors in manner prescribed by section 3766, Political Code. Contract made with tax collector and approved by supervisors is no claim against county.—Harris v. Cook, 119 Cal. 455, 51 Pac. 692.

[b] Contract for county buildings may include both labor and material.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 110. —— Necessity for Proposals or Bids.

[a] The plaintiff proved that he did work, and furnished materials for repairing a public bridge in Napa county, at the request of the board of supervisors of the county, and that the board promised to pay him for the same; but he neither proved nor attempted to prove a compliance with the statute of 1860 in awarding the contract. Held, that he was properly nonsuited at the trial.—Murphy v. Napa County, 20 Cal. 497.

[b] Political Code, section 4047, requiring "all county printing" to be contracted for with the lowest bidder, after ten days' notice for bids, includes the printing of reports, statements, and advertisements of officers, and is not confined to the printing of forms, billheads, stationery, etc.—Maxwell v. Stanislaus County, 53 Cal. 389.

[c] Under Statutes of 1891, chapter 216, section 25, subdivision 23, providing that the board of supervisors shall fix the price of all county advertising, and each county officer shall procure such advertising at a price no greater than is so fixed, mandamus will not lie to compel a tax collector to publish a delinquent tax list in a certain newspaper, even though such newspaper has tendered the lowest bid for such publication.—Journal Pub. Co. v. Whitney, 97 Cal. 283, 32 Pac. 237.

[d] Construing subdivision 11 of section 2643 of the Political Code, as amended in 1893, with other sections of the Political Code in pari materia, the advertising for bids for sprinkling roads is in the discretion of the board of supervisors, and the exercise of their discretionary power cannot be controlled by mandamus.—Splivalo v. Bryan, 102 Cal. 403, 36 Pac. 780.

[e] Section 25 of the County Government Act of 1891, requiring all county buildings to be let by contract, after notice by publication for six days, has no application to a contract for making repairs or alterations in the courthouse, or for laying walks and making improvement upon the grounds surrounding the courthouse.—McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177, 40 Pac. 231.

[f] County cannot purchase supplies, sell public property or make contracts for constructive work otherwise than by advertising proposals of bidders.—Swasey v. Shasta County, 141 Cal. 395, 74 Pac. 1031.

[g] County cannot enter into contract for erection of fence around courthouse grounds without advertising for bids and letting contract to lowest bidder.—Swasey v. Shasta County, 141 Cal. 395, 74 Pac. 1031.

§ 111. —— Validity of Contract Payable in Warrants.

[a] A contract made by a county with another party, in which the county agrees to pay for services rendered, in county warrants, is in effect a contract payable in money, and is not void.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[a] Under County Government Act, section 25, subdivision 17 (Stats. 1891, p. 304), authorizing the supervisors "to direct and control the prosecution and defense of all suits to which the county is a party, and to employ counsel to assist the district attorney in conducting the same," the supervisors have no power to employ an attorney to defeat, by means of lobbying, a bill pending in the legislature by the passage of which the county in question would be compelled to pay a large sum of money to another county.—Colusa County v. Welch, 122 Cal. 428, 55 Pac. 243.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[b] Civil Code, section 25, subdivision 9, giving the board of supervisors power to erect a county jail, provides that it shall not be erected until plans shall have been made therefor, and adopted by the board. An architect sued a county for services in making plans for a jail, which had been adopted by the board on condition that they should receive a bid from some reliable person. After receiving bids, they refused to act on them, and rejected plaintiff's plans, alleging that he procured their adoption by fraud. Held, that the condition on which the adoption of the plans was based had been performed, hence the plans had been adopted within the meaning of the act, and that plaintiff could recover.—Hall v. Los Angeles County, 74 Cal. 502, 16 Pac. 313, reversing judgment (1887) 13 Pac. 854.

[c] A contract whereby a county, which had become entitled to a certain sum of money out of the state treasury, agreed with one of the defendants (himself not a county officer) to allow him twenty-five per cent for services in preparing evidence, etc., was not void, though the defendant employed certain county officers to do a part of the work for him.—Contra Costa County v. Soto, 138 Cal. 56, 70 Pac. 1019.

[d] Where a county having a well bored was to furnish the casing, the presumption that it should be suitable and of proper strength is not overcome by Civil Code, section 1654, providing that an uncertainty in a contract between a public body and a private person shall be presumed to be caused by the latter, and most strongly construed against him.—McPherson v. San Joaquin County, 56 Pac. 802.

and could not be made valid by subsequent ratification of the board of supervisors. Phelan v. County of San Francisco, 6 Cal. 531.

[b] To charge supervisors on their ratification of a void purchase by the court of session, it should be shown that they acted with a full knowledge of the facts.—Phelan v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 531.

[c] That the board of supervisors may cure previous informalities in letting contracts by subsequent ratification has no application where the board by failure to advertise for bids for county printing, as required by Political Code, section 3766, as amended in 1895, had no power to make the contract in the first instance.—Smeltzer v. Miller, 125 Cal. 41, 57 Pac. 668.

[a] Whatever may be the power of the legislature, the board of supervisors cannot contract for services for a year, and then rescind the contract and refuse to pay, by abolishing the office or refusing to have the services performed.—McDaniel v. Yuba, 14 Cal. 444.

[b] The board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco cannot extend the time for performing a contract forfeited, because not completed within the time agreed upon.—Fanning v. Schammel, 68 Cal. 428, 9 Pac. 427; La Societe Francaise D'Epargne et de Prevoyance Mutuelle v. Fishel, 10 Pac. 395.

[c] The board of supervisors are justified in rescinding contract if they had been induced to execute it through the fraudulent representations of the architect, but cannot rescind it on the ground that the architect had slandered certain members of the board. Hall v. County of Los Angeles, 74 Cal. 502, 16 Pac. 313.

[a] Whether county will gain or lose by executing void contract is immaterial in action to enjoin such execution.—Winn v. Shaw, 87 Cal. 637, 25 Pac. 968.

[b] County Government Act, section 8, providing that when any board of supervisors shall without authority of law pay out any money, the district attorney shall sue to recover the same, does not authorize a suit by the county to recover moneys paid under a void contract, which it is otherwise estopped to recover, where the other party to the contract has completed it in good faith, and the county has accepted the benefits thereof. Sacramento County v. Southern Pac. Co., 127 Cal. 217, 59 Pac. 568.

[c] A county agreed with a railroad company to pay to it thirty thousand dollars to construct a public roadway on its railroad bridge, and fifteen thousand dollars was paid when the work was commenced. The roadway was completed by the railroad in good faith, according to the terms of the contract, turned over to the county, and used by it. Held, in an action to recover the money paid on the ground that the contract was void because entered into without statutory authority, that the county, having permitted the railroad to construct the roadway in good faith, and accepted the benefits thereof, was estopped from recovering the money paid therefor.—Sacramento County v. Southern Pac. Co., 127 Cal. 217, 59 Pac. 568.

§ 118. —— Costs of Repairing Highways.

[a] County has no common-law obligation to repair highways.—Barnett v. Contra Costa County, 67 Cal. 77, 7 Pac. 177.

§ 119. —— Costs of Keeping Jails and Prisoners.

[a] Where persons are employed by a sheriff as a temporary guard for the protection of a county jail under section 29 of the act of April 29, 1851, the county is liable directly to such persons for their services, and not to the sheriff.—Neville v. Solano County, 29 Cal. 251.

[h] Penal Code, section 1611, which provides that the sheriff, for maintaining prisoners, shall be allowed a reasonable compensation, "to be determined by the board of supervisors," does not make the board's determination conclusive; and, if the sheriff is dissatisfied with their determination, he may sue the county for what he claims to be a reasonable amount.—Fulkerth v. Stanislaus County, 67 Cal. 334, 7 Pac. 754.

[c] Under Penal Code, section 1611, providing that the sheriff must receive all persons committed to jail by competent authority, it is immaterial, to the liability of the city to the county for board of prisoners, that the city recorder had no authority to commit prisoners convicted by him to the county jail, if he had jurisdiction to convict them.—Sonoma County v. City of Santa Rosa, 102 Cal. 426, 36 Pac. 810.

for jurors should be "for each cause two dollars, to be paid in civil cases by the successful party," was amended by Statutes of 1866, page 122, which declared that, if a cause occupied more than one day, jurors should receive two dollars for each day's attendance. Statutes of 1895, page 267, enacted to establish the fees of jurors throughout the state, declared that grand jurors or jurors in the superior court should receive two dollars for each day's attendance. Held, that the later act did not repeal the former, and hence jurors' fees in the county of San Francisco in civil cases were still payable by the successful party, and not from the public treasury.—Hilton v. Curry, 124 Cal. 84, 56 Pac. 784.

[b] The provision of statutes of 1895, page 267, that the board of supervisors may reject all bills for fees of justices and constables in criminal cases in which the district attorney has not approved the issue of the warrant of arrest, is in conflict with Constitution, article 11, section 5, providing that the legislature shall regulate the compensation of county and township officers in proportion to the duties they perform.—Westerfield v. Riverside County, 50 Pac. 929.

[a] County is entitled to state aid for support of indigent and aged persons under article 4, section 22, Constitution of 1879. Yolo County v. Dunn, 77 Cal. 135, 19 Pac. 262.

ACT EXEMPTING COUNTY CONSTRUED, § 122.
ACTS OF OFFICERS, AGENTS OR EMPLOYEES, § 123.
BREAKING OF COUNTY ROAD BRIDGE, § 124.
INJURIES BY MOBS, § 125.

§ 122. Act Exempting County Construed.

[a] The design and only effect of the twenty-fourth section of the consolidation act is to exempt the city and county from the liability for injuries which would otherwise attach to it, by reason of the exclusive control of the streets and public highways, conferred upon it by other sections of the statute, and to transfer such responsibility to individual officers, agents, and employees of the corporation.—Eustace v. Jahns, 38 Cal. 3.

[a] Quasi corporation, such as county, is not liable for acts of officers or employees which it appoints in the exercise of a portion of the sovereign power of the state by the requirement of a public law, simply for the public benefit, and for a purpose from which the county, as a corporation, derives no benefit.—Sherbourne v. Yuba County, 21 Cal. 113, 81 Am. Dec. 151, 81 Pac. 151.

[b] A county is not liable for damage sustained by reason of the unskillful treatment of an indigent sick person, in the county hospital, by the resident physician, nor by reason of insufficient and unwholesome food and other necessaries there supplied to the patient.—Sherbourne v. Yuba County, 21 Cal. 113, 81 Am. Dec. 151, 81 Pac. 151.

[c] By act of 1855 (Wood's Digest, p. 650), it is the duty of the board of supervisors of each county to divide the county into road districts, and appoint overseers therefor, removable at their pleasure, and the overseers are required to build and keep up the highways and bridges. Held, that the relation thus created between a county and its road overseers was not analogous to master and servant.—Crowell v. Sonoma County, 25 Cal. 313.

[e] County supervisors cannot authorize a road master to do an unlawful act; and their direction to do a lawful act, which results in injury, constitutes no defense to an action for damages, unless, at least, it affirmatively appears that the work could not be done equally well in such manner as would not produce injury.—Learned v. Tangeman, 65 Cal. 334, 4 Pac. 191.

[a] The act of the legislature compelling a county to pay for property destroyed by a mob created a new right, and provided a new remedy therefor, complete in itself.—Clear Lake W. W. Co. v. Lake County, 45 Cal. 90.

§ 126. Power to Incur debts.

[a] Board of supervisors are not empowered to create a debt or liability on the part of the county for any purpose except as provided by law.—Foster v. Coleman, 10 Cal. 278.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Eighth article of constitution, prohibiting state from creating debts over three hundred thousand dollars, or loaning its credit, etc., only applies to the state as a corporation—as a political sovereign, represented by her law-making power; and does not prevent the state authorizing counties or municipal corporations to create debts, when the debt of the state itself is up to the constitutional limit.—Pattison v. Yuba County, 13 Cal. 175.

[b] Political Code, section 4070, which declares, in effect, that the board of supervisors must not contract debts and liabilities which, added to the salaries of officers, etc., will exceed the revenue of the county for the year, does not mean, by "revenue," the actual amount of money received into the treasury, but the estimate of the board of what the revenue will be; and it is this estimate at the time an account is presented for allowance, of what the revenue of the year will be, which must control their action in allowing or rejecting it.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[c] Requirement of constitution, that "before or at the time of incurring indebtness provisions shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal," does not require that at the time of the sale or issuance of bonds, or the incurrence of the bonded indebtedness, a sinking fund or interest tax be levied. It only requires that at or before such time provision shall be made for their collection. Howlan v. Board of Supervisors, 109 Cal. 152, 41 Pac. 864.

[d] Where a county contracts for the erection of a building, the payment to be made in installments each year as the work progressed, the debt or liability created is not the aggregate amount of such installments, but only that which arises from year to year on the separate installments; and, if the installment is within the income each year it is not illegal, under the provisions of County Government Act of 1891 (sections 5, 36), forbidding counties to incur an indebtedness or liability exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for that year.—Smilie v. Fresno County, 112 Cal. 311, 44 Pac. 556.

[e] A claim under a contract between petitioner and the board of supervisors, by which petitioner was to bury the indigent dead for the fiscal year at a certain sum for each burial, is within Constitution, article 11, section 18, declaring that no county shall "incur any indebtedness . . . . in any manner or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for it for such year without the assent," etc., and therefore cannot be paid from the income of a succeeding year, it not being an obligation imposed by law, though statute of 1860, page 272, gives a supervisor authority to allow and order paid out of the general fund such sums as may become due for burying the indigent dead, and Penal Code, section 292, imposes the duty of burying the dead, first on relatives, next on the coroner, and next on those charged with the support of the poor, and section 293 provides that every person omitting to perform such duty shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable in treble damages to the person performing the duty.—Pacific Undertakers v. Widber, 113 Cal. 201, 45 Pac. 273.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 128. Submission of Question to Popular Vote.

[a] The election on the proposition of incurring the indebtedness, although held on the same day and at the same place as the general election, in pursuance of the privilege given by the act of 1891, page 295, is in legal effect a special election.—Howlan v. Board of Supervisors, 109 Cal. 152, 41 Pac. 864.

§ 129. General Administration, Appropriation, and Use of Funds.

[b] The treasurer of Sacramento county has no power to transfer to the redemption fund any part of the interest tax collected under act of April 25, 1863; but it is his duty, if two thousand dollars or upward remain, after payment of the interest due at any time, to advertise for proposals for the redemption of the bonds issued to the Central Pacific Railroad Company.—Crocker v. Wolson, 30 Cal. 663.

[c] Money in county treasury is presumptively money of county, and money illegally withdrawn by the treasurer will be held to belong to the county until the contrary is shown.—Sacramento v. Bird, 31 Cal. 66.

[d] No county indebtedness incurred in any one year can be paid out of income or revenue of any future year.—Schwartz v. Wilson, 75 Cal. 505, 17 Pac. 449.

[f] County funds can only be used in manner prescribed by law.—Potter v. Fowzer, 78 Cal. 497, 21 Pac. 118.

[g] Section 18 of article 11 of the constitution, providing that "no county, city, etc., ... shall incur any indebtedness or liability .... exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for it for such year," means that each year's income and revenue must pay each year's indebtedness and liability, and that no indebtedness or liability incurred in any one year shall be paid out of the income or revenue of any future year.—Smith v. Broderick, 107 Cal. 644, 48 Am. St. Rep. 167, 40 Pac. 1033.

[h] Under section 31 of article 4 of the state constitution, the credit of a county cannot be pledged for the payment of the liabilities of municipal or other corporations, and section 3819 of the Political Code is to be so construed as not to conflict with the constitution, and as not designed to authorize the recovery from the county of illegal taxes collected for the use of a school district, for which the county could have no recourse against the district, if compelled to pay them.—Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. San Diego, 112 Cal. 314, 41 Pac. 423, 44 Pac. 571.

[i] A county, as such, has no interest in the funds of a high school district, nor any control over the same in the county treasury; and no action will lie against the county, under section 3819 of the Political Code, to recover taxes paid into such funds under protest, upon the ground of alleged illegality of the high school tax.—Elberg v. San Luis Obispo, 112 Cal. 316, 41 Pac. 475, 44 Pac. 572.

[j] Statutes of 1893, pages 415, 416, section 173, granting authority to county officers to appoint deputies at a fixed maximum salary, the payment of such salaries to be out of county funds, does not conflict with Constitution, article 11, section 13, providing that no person shall be granted power to control, appropriate, supervise, or in any way interfere with county funds.—Tulare County v. May, 118 Cal. 303, 50 Pac. 427; Tulare County v. Jefferds, 118 Cal. 303, 50 Pac. 427; Gilmer v. May, 118 Cal. 303, 50 Pac. 427.

[k] The authority given to the board of supervisors to expend the funds of the county in constructing county roads is limited to localities outside of incorporated cities, and no tax can be levied for county road purposes upon any property in such city; and as property within the limits of the city of Sacramento would necessarily have to be taxed for the payment of the bonds of the county issued for the construction of such road, it follows that such bonds, if issued, are illegal, and the levy of a special tax for their payment will be enjoined at the instance of a taxpayer of the municipality.—Devine v. Board of Supervisors of Sacramento Co., 121 Cal. 670, 54 Pac. 262.

[l] Where an attorney had been employed by a county to collect a hospital fund due from the state, he to receive a certain per cent of the fund as compensation, the county treasurer, on receipt of the fund, should credit the entire amount to the hospital fund and thereafter pay therefrom the amount due the attorney.—Power v. May, 123 Cal. 147, 55 Pac. 796.

[n] No moneys held in the county treasury by the treasurer are subject to the payment of demands, unless received therein upon the certificate of the auditor required by sections 4145 and 4217 of the Political Code.—Meyer v. Widber, 126 Cal. 252, 58 Pac. 532.

[o] The supervisors have no power to defeat the law by designating a special fund for the payment of phonographic reporters, which is insufficient to pay all legal demands upon the treasury therefor, while there is sufficiency of money in the general fund to meet them.—Stevens v. Truman, 127 Cal. 155, 59 Pac. 397.

[c] County funds must be deposited with county treasurer, and cannot be placed with private depositary.—Yarnell v. Los Angeles, 87 Cal. 608, 25 Pac. 767.

[d] Political Code, section 4145, providing that the county treasurer shall receive no money into the treasury unless accompanied by a certificate of the auditor, has no application to money as damages for laying out a road deposited with the treasurer pursuant to section 2689.—Mariposa County v. Knowles, 146 Cal. 1, 79 Pac. 525.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 131. Aid to Corporations, and Investments in Stock—Right to Grant Aid in General.

[a] Legislature has power to authorize county to take stock in a railroad.—Pattison v. Yuba County Supervisors, 13 Cal. 175.

[b] Proposed Central Pacific Railroad, leading from the city and county of Sacramento to the eastern portion of the state is so far a public improvement, and sufficiently for the apparent interest of the city and county, that a law authorizing the municipality to become a stockholder in the railroad corporation is not unconstitutional as imposing a tax upon a local community for an improvement in which it has no peculiar interest.—Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379.

[a] Under the act of April 28, 1857, authorizing the supervisors of Yuba county to take stock in a railroad company, the stock may be taken in any railroad by which a railway connection shall be formed between Marysville and Benicia, or any point on the Sacramento river, at or near Knight's Ferry. The company in which the stock is taken need not be constituted for the express and only purpose of such connection, provided the effect of the work is to make the connection.—Pattison v. Yuba County, 13 Cal. 175.

§ 133. —— Submission to Question to Popular Vote.

[a] The legislature has a right to authorize a local tax for the purpose of internal improvements; it may authorize the local authorities to impose the tax; this authority may be given upon petition or without it, or by or without a submission of the proposition to the people, and it is not essential that the improvement should be within or confined to the locality taxed; and a subscription for stock, to be paid for by taxation, is a valid contract to pay it.—Pattison v. Yuba County, 13 Cal. 175.

[b] Act of April 25, 1863, providing for a subscription by the city and county of Sacramento to the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, upon a vote by the electors of the county in favor of the proposition, is, in its main features, constitutional, and authorizes the making of the subscription as therein directed.—Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379.

[c] An order submitting the question of aid to a railroad to the people may be made before the railroad is incorporated.—Coleman v. Marin County Supervisors, 50 Cal. 493.

[a] Under the act of 1860 (Stats. 1860, p. 133), relative to the issuance of the bonds of Butte county to the California Northern Railroad Company in certain contingencies, the basis upon which the supervisors are to proceed in estimating the work done by the company, so as to entitle it to bonds, is the actual expenditure by the company, and not the value of the work. This actual expenditure, connected with proof of the other facts required by the statute, prima facie constitutes the company's claim on the county for the bonds.—California Northern R. R. Co. v. Butte County, 18 Cal. 671.

[b] The county might refuse to issue the bonds if the expenditures were not really made, or if fraud had been committed in the contracts for such expenditures.—California Northern R. R. Co. v. Butte County, 18 Cal. 671.

§ 135. Warrants and Certificates of Indebtedness—Power and Duty to Issue.

[a] Auditor cannot draw warrant under act of 1851 for claims other than those audited by himself.—Draper v. Noteware, 7 Cal. 276.

[b] Under Woods' Digest, 715, article 3446, providing that the county auditor may draw warrants for claims "examined, settled, allowed, and ordered paid by the board," he is not authorized to draw a warrant for a claim "allowed" but not ordered paid.—Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447.

[c] Except in cases where the board of supervisors have exceeded their powers, the auditor cannot assume to set up his judgment in opposition to theirs, in respect to the issuance of a warrant on an account against the county. Nor can he refuse to issue a warrant, because the person in whose favor it is to be drawn, and whose account has been allowed, has committed a fraud on the county in relation to procuring the contract on which the warrant is to be issued.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

[d] Auditor may refuse to draw a warrant, but he cannot draw one in favor of some person other than one whom board has ordered paid.—Scheerer v. Edgar, 76 Cal. 572, 18 Pac. 681.

[e] County Government Act (Stats. 1891, p. 311), section 41, requiring a claim against a county to be itemized, "giving names, dates and particular services rendered," before it can be allowed, is directed to the board of supervisors alone, and does not control the county auditor in drawing warrants for claims allowed.—Sehorn v. Williams, 110 Cal. 621, 43 Pac. 8.

[f] County Government Act (Stats. 1891, p. 322), section 113, requires a county auditor to draw warrants for claims "legally examined, allowed and ordered paid by the board of supervisors," when he has received, as required by section 20, subdivision 4, a properly certified list of the claims allowed. Section 45 requires warrants drawn by order of the county supervisors to specify the liabilities for which they were drawn, and when they accrued. Held, that it is the duty of a county auditor to draw his warrant for a claim on a certificate of supervisors giving the name of the claimant and amount of the claim, and stating that it has been duly allowed, though it does not state what the claim was for, nor when it accrued.—Sehorn v. Williams, 110 Cal. 621, 43 Pac. 8.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] If a contract with a county is unauthorized and void, a warrant drawn on the treasurer by order of the county board for work done thereunder is also void, and he cannot be compelled to pay it.—Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372.

[b] Warrant issued in payment of claim for which county was not liable is void.—Bank of Santa Cruz v. Bartlett, 78 Cal. 303, 20 Pac. 682.

[c] Assuming that it is the duty of the auditor to designate in his warrant the particular fund against which it is drawn, it is his duty to draw his warrant in payment of such claim on the proper fund, notwithstanding the board of supervisors had erroneously ordered its payment from another fund.—White v. Hayden, 126 Cal. 621, 59 Pac. 118.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 137. —— Operation and Effect.

[a] Warrants are not intended to constitute a new debt or evidence of a new debt against the county, but are the means prescribed by law for drawing money from the county treasury.—Dana v. San Francisco, 19 Cal. 486.

§ 138. —— Negotiability and Assignment.

[a] County warrants acquire no greater validity in hands of third parties than they originally possessed in the hands of the first holder, no matter for what consideration they may have been transferred or in what faith they may have been taken. If illegal when issued, they are illegal for all time.—People v. Supervisors, 11 Cal. 170.

[b] Probably assignee of warrants would be protected as holder of a claim against the county. But this would result, not by virtue of the indorsement as passing to the assignee the legal title to the warrant, as an indorsee under the law-merchant, but because in equity the indorsement would be deemed to be an assignment of the debt for which the warrant was issued, and an authority to the assignee to receive the money.—Dana v. San Francisco, 19 Cal. 486.

[c] One who transfers a county warrant by indorsement is not liable to the transferee as an indorser of negotiable paper, nor, under the statute (Wood's Digest, p. 75), relating to bonds, due-bills, etc., as an assignor of a written instrument to pay money.—Keller v. Hicks, 22 Cal. 457, 83 Am. Dec. 78.

[d] A county treasurer cannot be compelled to pay a warrant to any other person than the one in whose favor it is drawn, without an assignment of it by the payee.—People v. Gray, 23 Cal. 125.

[e] Warrants drawn by a county auditor upon the treasurer are not negotiable, although payable to "A., or bearer."—People v. Gray, 23 Cal. 125.

[f] County warrant has not incidents of negotiable paper and assignee stands in shoes of original holder.—Bank of Santa Cruz v. Bartlett, 78 Cal. 303, 20 Pac. 682.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 537, 538; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1599-1601, § 249.

Interest on warrants. See Interest, § 11.

[a] Under a statute respecting county treasurers, passed March 22, 1850, party who registers his warrants becomes a preferred creditor, and is to be paid as soon as there are sufficient funds in the treasury, and the prior registered warrants are paid.—Taylor v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 332.

[b] The act creating the office of county treasurer provides that warrants drawn on the treasury shall be paid in the order of their registry, and this order of payment cannot be changed gy the supervisors.—Laforge v. Magee, 6 Cal. 285.

[c] There is nothing in the act of 1855, creating bonds of supervisors in the counties of this state, which entitles a warrant, drawn on the fund for current expenses during that year, to a priority in payment over a warrant of the same class drawn the year before. As it does not seem to have been the intention of the act to cut off all previous indebtedness, an honest creditor will not be postponed or denied the benefit of the act under which he contracted, and which provided that warrants should be paid in the order of registry.—McCall v. Harris, 6 Cal. 281.

[d] A warrant may be paid by installments, and payment of funds on hand may be enforced.—Beals v. Evans, 10 Cal. 459, 39 Cal. 593.

[e] The board of supervisors has no power to direct and authorize the treasurer to pay warrants in violation of the provisions of the statute.—McDonald v. Maddux, 11 Cal. 187.

[f] Act of 1854, to fund floating debt of city and county of Sacramento, forbidding the redemption of any warrants accruing prior to a certain date, except with the funds then on hand, or subsequently received and belonging to the revenue before that date, is obligatory upon county officers. The legislature is the paramount political power, and can control and direct them in this respect.—McDonald v. Maddux, 11 Cal. 187.

[g] Warrants drawn by the auditor of Sacramento county on the treasurer thereof, and duly registered and indorsed "not paid for want of funds," August 12, 1853, come within the preferred claims provided for in that clause of the thirty-sixth section of the consolidation act of 1858, 279, which says, in distributing the revenue, "and the balance to a general fund, which shall be applied to the payment of the outstanding auditor's warrants lawfully drawn on the treasury, and payable in the order of their registry."—McDonald v. Bird, 18 Cal. 195.

[h] Even if these warrants might have been funded under the act of 1858, it was a privilege, and not an obligation on the part of the holder, to fund; and his declining to fund did not take his warrants out of section 36 of the act of 1858.—McDonald v. Bird, 18 Cal. 195.

[i] Warrants drawn on the county treasurer, under act of 1860, funding the debt of Sonoma county, making no provision for their payment, must be paid under the provisions of act of 1850, concerning the office of county treasurer.—Cocke v. Hendley, 18 Cal. 369.

[j] Under the act of 1850, concerning the office of county treasurer, and that of 1857, concerning county warrants, a county treasurer is not required to pay all warrants which the county auditor may draw upon him, but only such as are founded on an order made by the board of supervisors for payment of a demand legally chargeable against the county and allowed by the board.—Keller v. Hyde, 20 Cal. 593.

[k] Where a road act provides what taxes may be imposed by a county for county purposes, and designates the purpose to which each fund shall be devoted, no provision being made for that class of indebtedness to which certain warrants belong, except the funding provisions contained in the act, where there are no funds in the treasury applicable to the purpose for which a warrant was issued when the holder demanded payment of the treasurer, his only remedy is to apply to the legislature to provide means of paying his debt.—Rose v. Estudillo, 39 Cal. 270.

[l] When illegal claims are allowed against a county and warrants drawn therefor, it is the duty of the treasurer to refuse to pay them.—Linden v. Case, 46 Cal. 171.

[n] Where a statute directs that damages due the parties entitled thereto for widening a street in the city and county of San Francisco shall be retained by the county treasurer, until the respective claims of the several parties shall have been adjusted, and the treasurer, knowing that there is a controversy as to who is entitled to the money, pays it over to one of them, he is responsible to the person entitled to it; and it is immaterial that the payment was made on presentation of a warrant, in form regular, but which the treasurer knew to have been improvidently issued.—Priet v. Hubert, 62 Cal. 9.

[o] Where the law requires all county school moneys to be apportioned, and the warrants drawn on the special funds, a finding that a payment of a school warrant was made from the general school fund is not equivalent to a finding that the warrant was not drawn on any special fund, so that the treasurer was liable for an illegal payment.—Los Angeles County v. Lankershim, 100 Cal. 525, 35 Pac. 556.

[p] Where the board of supervisors issue a warrant which they are authorized to issue, the treasurer can exercise no discretion in regard to paying it.—Von Schmidt v. Widbur, 105 Cal. 151, 38 Pac. 682.

[q] Where indebtedness was incurred within one fiscal year, it can only be paid out of the revenue provided for that fiscal year, and the board of supervisors have no jurisdiction or authority to carry the indebtedness over, and make it payable out of the revenue of the next fiscal year.—McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177, 40 Pac. 231.

[r] Where the demand upon the auditor was for a warrant for full payment of the salary of a stenographer employed by the city and county, part of which was applied on a judgment against him filed with the auditor, a mandate cannot be issued to compel the payment of the excess, which the auditor may pay upon demand for the correct amount.—Ruperich v. Baehr, 142 Cal. 190, 75 Pac. 782.

§ 140. —— Surrender or Funding.

[a] Holders of warrants on county treasury are not compelled to accept bonds for them, or, in other words, to fund them, where the state has passed an act to fund the indebtedness of a county; they are simply left unprovided for in any other way.—Hunsacker v. Borden, 5 Cal. 288, 63 Am. Dec. 130.

[b] Neither the act of 1861 nor the act of 1868 is compulsory on the creditors, and does not require them to surrender their evidences of indebtedness, nor forbid the county to pay its debts, if the creditors should refuse to accept the bonds.—Soher v. Supervisors Calaveras county, 39 Cal. 134.

[c] The legislature cannot require the creditors of a county to surrender their evidences of indebtedness, and accept new ones different in terms from the old, but it may refuse to provide funds to pay any portion of the old indebtedness, unless the creditors will accept new evidences in place of the old, and for a less sum.—People v. Morse, 43 Cal. 534.

[d] Act of April, 1880, providing for funding of county debt, although it adds five new sections to the Political Code, is an independent act.—University of California v. Bernard, 57 Cal. 612.

§ 141. —— Actions by Holders.

[a] The holder of county warrant cannot maintain an action upon it as a negotiable instrument.—Dana v. San Francisco, 19 Cal. 486.

§ 143. Bonds—Power to Issue.

[a] A statute authorizing a county to fund its outstanding warrants which did not draw interest, and to make the bonds given in exchange therefor bear interest, is valid.—Chapman v. Morris, 28 Cal. 393.

[b] Act of March 18, 1874, requiring two certain county boards to issue bonds to provide funds for a road, leaves no discretion in the boards as to whether or not they will issue the bonds.—People v. San Luis Obispo County Supervisors, 50 Cal. 561.

[c] Laws of 1870 authorize counties to aid in the construction of railroads by the issue of county bonds, payable within twenty years, and provide that the board of supervisors shall submit to the qualified electors of the county "the question whether such railroad aid shall be granted." An affirmative vote in pursuance of such statute authorized the board to issue such aid bonds upon such terms as might appear to them most advantageous to the county, the bonds to be delivered to the railroad company at a specified rate for every mile of completed track. The termini were specified in the submission, but the road was built over a portion only of the distance between them. Held, that an issue of the bonds by the board in proportion to the amount of completed track was within their powers and valid.—Nevada Bank v. Steinmitz, 64 Cal. 301, 30 Pac. 970.

[d] The levying of a tax for county road purposes on property in a city in which work and improvements on the street are done by virtue of laws relating to street work and improvements therein, being prohibited by Statutes of 1883, page 20, so that the road fund is one to which only part of the county contributes, and which is to be expended for the benefit of such part only, the county's bonds cannot be issued for construction of a road.—Devine v. Board of Supervisors of Sacramento Co., 121 Cal. 670, 54 Pac. 262.

§ 144. —— Power of Legislature to Require Issuance.

[a] Legislature may require a county to issue bonds for improvement of roads.—People v. Board of Supervisors, 50 Cal. 561.

§ 145. —— Submitting Question to Popular Vote.

[a] The clause in the act of April 20, 1858, authorizing the issuance of bonds requiring the action of the board of examiners to be submitted to a vote of the people on a contingency does not make the act any the less a law. The act took effect as a law immediately, and was not dependent on the action of any other body.—Blanding v. Burr, 13 Cal. 343.

[b] Order submitting bond issue to vote must specify amount of bonds required for each of several objects.—People v. Baker, 83 Cal. 152, 23 Pac. 112, 364.

[c] Proclamation that election would be held submitting question of issue of bonds to "vote of people" means to "qualified voters."—People v. Counts, 89 Cal. 22, 26 Pac. 612.

[d] Proclamation for bond election may be made by order of supervisors; ordinance is not necessary.—People v. Counts, 89 Cal. 22, 26 Pac. 612.

See 11 Cyc. 556-558; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1632-1640, §§ 269-273.

[a] Overissued bonds are void.—Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 337, 5 Am. St. Rep. 442, 16 Pac. 7; Sutro v. Rhodes, 92 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 93.

[b] Municipal bonds can only be issued by virtue of express legislative authority.—Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 336, 5 Am. St. Rep. 442, 16 Pac. 7.

[a] The act of March 14, 1883, known as the County Government Act, required that bonds issued by a county should refer to the act, and to that extent repealed section 4048 of the Political Code, which required reference to be made to that section in county bonds.—County of Merced v. Regents of the University, 66 Cal. 25, 4 Pac. 780.

[b] Specification of purpose to construct two wagon roads with bonds to be issued is not expression of more than one object.—People v. Counts, 89 Cal. 19, 20, 26 Pac. 612.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 563-569; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1641-1654, §§ 275-284.

§ 148. —— Statute Authorizing Issue as Part of Contract.

§ 149. —— Rights of Purchasers.

[a] When a funding act provides that a certain tax shall be levied to pay the bonds, a person who takes the bonds in place of his claim is entitled, as part of his contract, to have the tax so levied; hence any subsequent holder is entitled to such levy.—English v. Sacramento County, 19 Cal. 172.

[b] Where the statute authorizing the issue of county bonds prescribes their form, one is not obliged to receive them from the county unless they are in the form prescribed, even though, possibly, they may be valid.—Merced County v. California University, 66 Cal. 25, 4 Pac. 780.

[c] Purchasers of municipal bonds are bound to know power of municipal corporation and of its officers by whom the bonds were issued; and as the statute requires all county bonds to be recorded, and the fact of the overissue can be readily ascertained from the numbers of the bonds, any mistake of a purchaser of overissued bonds, as to the validity of the bonds, is a mistake of law from which he cannot be released.—Sutro v. Rhodes, 92 Cal. 117, 29 Pac. 98.

[a] Interest does not accrue on county or municipal bonds, except as authorized by statute.—Soher v. Calaveras County, 39 Cal. 134.

[b] Coupons on county bonds, after they become payable, bear interest from time they are presented for payment.—Davis v. Yuba County, 75 Cal. 453, 13 Pac. 874, 17 Pac. 533.

[c] It is only where county is made generally liable for annual interest on bonds, and means are provided for meeting it, that it is liable for interest upon interest not paid at maturity.—Davis v. Sacramento, 82 Cal. 563, 22 Pac. 1118.

[a] Twenty year bonds payable out of certain fund cannot, without consent of holder, be paid prior to maturity from different fund.—Davis v. Yuba County, 75 Cal. 453, 458, 13 Pac. 874, 17 Pac. 533.

[b] Purchaser of county bonds having twenty years to run, issued under statute providing that they might be paid before that time on happening of certain event, has right to hold them and collect interest for twenty years or until such event takes place, and cannot be compelled to accept payment before that time.—Davis v. Yuba County, 7 Cal. 453-458, 17 Pac. 533.

[c] The delay of the tax collector in making his settlement with the auditor cannot confer the right upon a bondholder to compel payment by the treasurer of bonds and coupons prior to the settlement. He should first compel such settlement before making his demand upon the treasurer.—Meyer v. Widber, 126 Cal. 252, 58 Pac. 532.

Power to levy and assess taxes. See Taxation, § 39.

[a] Limitation of tax for county purposes only applies to general fund, and not to special funds.—People v. Gerke, 37 Cal. 228.

[b] County has no power of taxation except as authorized by law.—Rose v. Estudillo, 39 Cal. 275.

[c] Under authority given by Political Code to boards of supervisors to levy such taxes annually as may be necessary to defray the "current expenses" of a county, not exceeding a certain fixed amount, a board has authority to levy a tax to pay the expenses of building a county jail.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 467, 575-584; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1686-1710, §§ 300-308.

[a] When a taxpayer might object to a contract made by the board of supervisors for building a jail, stated.—People ex. rel. Smith v. Myers, 15 Cal. 33.

[b] A court of equity, on the complaint of a taxpayer, will enjoin the payment of and cancel county warrants illegally drawn on the treasurer by order of the board of supervisors.—Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309.

[c] The County Government Act (section 8) making it the duty of a county attorney, whenever any money shall have actually been paid under an order of the supervisors, made without lawful authority, to institute suit for the said money in the name of the county, affords an adequate remedy at law where an order illegally allowing a claim against the county has been paid, but the interest which a mere citizen or taxpayer has in the matter does not entitle him to bring suit in his own name, untill after the matter has been laid before the attorney, and the latter has refused to act.—Burr v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 96 Cal. 210, 31 Pac. 38.

[d] A taxpayer may maintain a suit to enjoin the county auditor perpetually from drawing his warrant upon the county treasurer in favor of a publisher of the delinquent tax list who had no contract with the board of supervisors for such publication. Smeltzer v. Miller, 113 Cal. 163, 45 Pac. 264.

[e] A taxpayer may maintain a suit to enjoin the county auditor from drawing his warrant upon the county treasurer in favor of a publisher of the delinquent tax list, who had no valid contract with the board of supervisors for such publication, though the claim therefor has been allowed by the board of supervisors. Smeltzer v. Miller, 113 Cal. 163, 45 Pac. 264, affirmed, and held to be the law of the case.—Smeltzer v. Miller, 125 Cal. 41, 57 Pac. 668.

[f] A taxpayer cannot maintain an action to enjoin the board of supervisors from allowing an alleged illegal claim against the county for printing; nor can he in that action enjoin the auditor and treasurer from acting officially upon such claim.—McBride v. Newlin, 129 Cal. 36, 61 Pac. 577.

[g] Injunction will lie, at suit of a taxpayer, to restrain a county from incurring expense for equipping a ferry partly without the county, it having no authority to establish or operate such a one.—Johnston v. Sacramento County, 137 Cal. 204, 69 Pac. 962.

§ 154. Necessity for Presentation—Claim for Salary.

[a] Under act of March 4, 1878, providing that gas inspectors "shall be entitled to a salary to be paid and allowed" by the board of supervisors, a claim for such salary need not be presented to the auditor.—Ames v. City and County of San Francisco, 76 Cal. 325, 18 Pac. 397.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 155. Warrants.

[a] An act of the legislature creating a board of commissioners for the purpose of determining the legality of all claims or demands outstanding against a county, and for the funding of such as they shall consider legal and just, which further provides that no such demand or claim shall be a legal claim against the county unless it is presented to and allowed by such commissioners, is void in this last respect, and a warrant, issued by the auditor of a county, which has been duly presented by the holder to the treasurer for payment, and indorsed by him, "Not paid for want of funds," prior to the passage of the act, the holder having elected not to present it to the said commissioners, is nevertheless a valid claim against the county; and it is the duty of the treasurer to pay it from the first moneys in the treasury applicable to such payment.—Rose v. Estudillo, 39 Cal. 270.

§ 156. Statement or Itemization.

[a] A county board of supervisors is not bound nor has it the right, to allow a claim against the county for officers' fees or disbursements, unless all the items of the claim are given.—Christie v. Sonoma County Supervisors, 60 Cal. 164.

[b] A claim against a county for a specific sum due on a contract cannot be repudiated because not itemized as required by County Government Act, section 41 (Stats. 1891, p. 311), where no notice to itemize it was given to claimant pursuant to said section, and the supervisors allowed it.—Colusa County v. Welch, 122 Cal. 428, 55 Pac. 243.

§ 158. Time to Present.

[a] Under act of March 5, 1864 (Stats. 1863-64, p. 152), county officers can have no jurisdiction to audit or allow charges not presented within the year, and an order of allowance cannot give an outlawed charge any validity.—Carroll v. Siebenthaler, 37 Cal. 193.

[b] Statutes of 1893, page 363, section 41, does not bar a claim by a surveyor for his daily compensation due under Statutes of 1893, page 497, for a period more than a year before the statement was filed, where it also demanded pay for a period within the year.—Nelson v. Merced County, 122 Cal. 644, 55 Pac. 421.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent Dig., cols. 1723, 1724, § 315.

§ 159. Audit, Allowance or Disallowance and Effect Thereof.

[a] Supervisors of San Francisco cannot audit and claim upon the sinking fund. People v. Bond, 10 Cal. 563.

[b] A mandamus commanding proper officers to audit a claim does not compel them to allow it.—People v. Supervisors of City and County of San Francisco, 11 Cal. 42.

[c] Boards of supervisors are quasi judicial bodies so far as concerns examination and settlement of accounts and claims against a county; and the allowance and settlement by such boards are an adjudication of the claims, and conclusive. (Baldwin, J.)—El Dorado County v. Elstner, 18 Cal. 144; Colusa County v. De Jarnett, 55 Cal. 373.

[d] An order of the county supervisors, viz., "Account allowed J. J. Cloud, surveying Little Lake and Big River Road, $344.20," will not authorize the auditor to draw a warrant for the payment of the claim, and the treasurer cannot be compelled to pay such a warrant.—Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447.

[e] It is the duty of the boards of supervisors of the respective counties in this state to audit and allow the bills of organized volunteer companies for rent of armory, etc., and to direct a warrant to be issued therefor, payable out of the county funds in the hands of the county treasurer.—People ex rel. Cobb v. Supervisors of San Joaquin County, 28 Cal. 288.

[f] If the board of supervisors allow a claim against a county more than one year after it falls due, its action is void and the auditor should refuse to draw his warrant for the same.—Carroll v. Siebenthaler, 37 Cal. 193.

[g] A board of supervisors of a county in allowing or disallowing a claim exercise judicial functions.—Tilden v. Board of Supervisors of Sacramento, 41 Cal. 68.

[h] The board has no power to audit and allow accounts not legally chargeable to the county.—Linden v. Case, 46 Cal. 171.

[i] If claims not legally chargeable are allowed by a county board, neither the allowance nor the warrants drawn therefor create any legal liabilities, and it is the duty of auditor to refuse to draw warrants therefor. Linden v. Case, 46 Cal. 171.

[j] If claim against county is barred by statute of limitations, and the legislature passes an act requiring the board of supervisors to act upon and reject or allow it, notwithstanding the bar of the statute, the act does not have the effect of legalizing the claim if it is illegal.—Domingos v. Board of Supervisors, 51 Cal. 608.

[k] A resolution authorizing the payment of an unliquidated claim against a county must state the precise amount allowed. Spring Valley Waterworks v. Ashbury, 52 Cal. 126.

[l] Under San Francisco charter (Stats. 1856, p. 163), providing that "every ordinance providing for the expenditure of public moneys in sums exceeding five hundred dollars shall be published before final action upon the same," the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco may at one vote allow several claims against the city and county without passing an ordinance, even if the aggregate of the demands exceeds five hundred dollars, provided each claim is for less than five hundred dollars.—Sweeny v. Maynard, 52 Cal. 468.

[m] Board of supervisors is not required to allow or settle claims which courts are authorized to certify to and order paid. McAllister v. Hamlin, 83 Cal. 366, 367, 23 Pac. 357.

[n] Code of Civil Procedure, section 144, provides that if suitable rooms, etc., for holding the superior courts be not provided by the county supervisors, the courts, or the judge or judges thereof, may direct the sheriff to provide the same, and the expenses incurred, certified by the judge or judges to be correct, shall be a charge against the city and county treasury, and paid out of the general fund thereof. Held, that since the statute provides that the expenses incurred shall be audited by the judge, it is not necessary than they be audited by the county supervisors.—Widber, Ex parte, 91 Cal. 367, 27 Pac. 733.

[o] Under Statutes of 1891, page 301, section 25, subdivision 12, which gives the board of supervisors jurisdiction "to examine, settle, and allow all accounts legally chargeable against the county, except salaries of officers, and order warrants to be drawn on the county treasurer therefor," the board has jurisdiction to "examine, settle, and allow" a constable's claim for fees.—McFarland v. McCowen, 98 Cal. 329, 33 Pac. 113.

and orders the allowance thereof, it becomes res judicata, and, in the absence of fraud, cannot be attacked by the officer who is ordered to pay the claim.—McFarland v. McCowen, 98 Cal. 329, 33 Pac. 113.

[q] Statutes of 1891, page 322, section 113, provides that the auditor must draw warrants on the county treasurer in favor of all persons entitled thereto, in payment of all claims against the county which have been allowed, and ordered paid, by the supervisors. Held that, after a constable's claim for fees had been examined and allowed by the county board, the auditor could not refuse to draw warrants for the payment thereof on the ground that the services for which the fees were charged were never rendered.—McFarland v. McCowen, 98 Cal. 329, 33 Pac. 113.

[r] Act of May 17, 1861, empowers the board of supervisors to allow a sum not exceeding five thousand dollars in any one fiscal year as counsel fees. Act of February 25, 1878, provides that the board shall not pay out in any one month more than one-twelfth of any claim allowed by law for the fiscal year, and further provides that if, at the beginning of a month, any money remains which might have been expended in past months, it may be carried forward and expended in any succeeding months. Held, that the board may properly allow at one time a counsel fee of two thousand dollars.—Hunt v. Broderick, 104 Cal. 313, 37 Pac. 1040.

[s] One demanding payment of claim against county must show some statute authorizing it or some contract express or implied which itself finds authority of law; benefit to county is immaterial.—Irwin v. Yuba County, 119 Cal. 690, 52 Pac. 35.

[t] There being no requirement that the board of county supervisors should designate the particular fund out of which a claim allowed and certified by it should be paid, such a designation by it will not affect any duty of the county auditor, under County Government Act, section 121, and Political Code, section 4223, to so designate.—White v. Hayden, 126 Cal. 621, 59 Pac. 118.

[u] The board of supervisors, in passing upon a claim against the county, acts in a quasi judicial capacity; and it must be presumed that the board will do its duty, and will reject the claim if it is illegal.—McBride v. Newlin, 129 Cal. 36, 61 Pac. 577.

[a] An account audited against the county of San Francisco, but not paid at the time the consolidation act went into effect, need not again be audited to entitle it to payment. Knox v. Woods, 8 Cal. 545.

[b] A contract with a county for building a bridge provided that the price was payable on presentation of a certificate of the superintendent of construction of the bridge in warrants drawn on the first road district fund of the county. A claim under such contract presented to the county board of supervisors, without reference to the fund out of which it was to be paid, and without the superintendent's certificate, was rejected. Afterward claimant again presented a claim under the contract, asking that it be paid in warrants drawn on the road district fund in question, and the superintendent's certificate and a copy of the contract were attached, The certificate appeared to have been issued after the first claim was presented. Held, that the two claims were materially different, and a writ of mandate would lie to compel the county board of supervisors to act on the second claim.—Smith v. San Bernardino County Supervisors, 99 Cal. 262, 33 Pac. 1094.

§ 161. Effect of Allowance or Disallowance.

[a] The right to sue a county is not limited to cases of tort, malfeasance, etc., but is given in every case of account, after presentation to and rejection by the board of supervisors.—Price v. Sacramento County, 6 Cal. 254.

[b] After board of supervisors have reversed auditor's refusal to allow claim, duty of auditor to enter it is ministerial.—Falk v. Strother, 84 Cal. 547, 24 Pac. 110.

[c] Under sections 43 and 44 of the County Government Act, where the supervisors have allowed a portion of a claim presented, and rejected the remainder, the claimant, if dissatisfied with the rejection of the claim in part, is required to indicate to the supervisors his unwillingness to accept the amount allowed, and to give them an opportunity to again consider his claim for final action at the next regular succeeding session of the board, and a suit brought by the claimant before such final action is had by the supervisors upon the claim, is premature and cannot be sustained.—Arbios v County of San Bernardino, 110 Cal. 42 Pac. 1080.

[d] The allowance by county supervisors of the claim for services of attorneys employed by the supervisors to transact business for the county is conclusive on the auditor of the rendition and value of the services.—Lamberson v. Jefferds, 118 Cal. 363, 50 Pac. 403.

[f] Where a coroner's bill, consisting of items properly chargeable to the county, was duly audited and allowed by the board of supervisors, and paid by the county, the county could not recover the money back in a collateral proceeding on the ground that the coroner did not in fact perform the services for which the bill was rendered.—Alameda County v. Evers, 136 Cal. 132, 68 Pac. 475.

§ 162. Review of Decision.

[a] Before mandamus can be properly awarded board of supervisors must refuse to act upon claim, after it has obtained jurisdiction of it.—Tilden v. Board of Supervisors of Sacramento, 41 Cal. 68.

[b] Consolidation Act, section 92, providing for an appeal to the board of supervisors from the rejection of a claim by the county auditor, does not apply to claims already passed on by the board, or which must be presented in the first instance for its sanction.—Hunt v. Broderick, 104 Cal. 313, 37 Pac. 1040.

[c] If the board of supervisors exceeds its jurisdiction in the allowance of claims which are illegal and void upon their face, there is a remedy against such allowance; and there may be cases in which equity will set aside an allowance procured by fraud. But where the board acts within its jurisdiction, and without any fraud in the procuring of an allowance, its decision upon questions of fact in making the allowance is without remedy in the courts.—Alameda County v. Evers, 136 Cal. 132, 68 Pac. 475.

[a] Act authorizing county recorder of Yuba county to be paid out of county treasury, for certain specified services, contains no words which raise the presumption that he was to be allowed a preference over other creditors.—People ex rel. Benham v. Williams, 8 Cal. 97.

[b] Employment by the day in the service of a county under the same contract, at a stipulated compensation, is a proper subject of an account to be embraced in a single cause of action, the statute nowhere fixing a time for the payment of per diem compensation of officers.—Nelson v. Merced County, 122 Cal. 644, 55 Pac. 421.

[c] Under the provisions of the County Government Act of March 24, 1893, a claim of a supervisor for services rendered as such and as ex-officio road commissioner should be paid from the salary fund.—White v. Hayden, 126 Cal. 621, 59 Pac. 118.

§ 166. —— In Depreciated Warrants.

[a] And the supervisors cannot pay a debt in county warrants at the depreciated cash value, as the county is liable for the full value, and the supervisors have no right to make the county pay the difference by way of gift.—Foster v. Coleman, 10 Cal. 278.

§ 167. —— Recovery of Payments Made.

[a] Action against supervisors to recover amount of illegal claims alleged to have been paid by them should be brought in name of county as real party in interest, and district attorney is proper person to prosecute it.—Hedges v. Dam, 72 Cal. 520, 14 Pac. 133.

[b] Section 8 of the County Government Act, providing for the recovery of money paid by order of the supervisors "without authority of law," only applies to payments which the board has no general power to make, and does not affect the principle of equitable estoppel as applied to payments made within the scope of the general powers of the board, and by virtue of which it has acquired a benefit, or an interest of which it retains the enjoyment.—County of Sacramento v. Southern Pacific Co., 127 Cal. 21, 59 Pac. 568, 825.

[c] Under section 8 of the County Government Act of 1893, a claim allowed by the supervisors, which is paid by the county, cannot be recovered back, unless it was allowed and paid "without authority of law." County of Santa Cruz v. McPherson, 133 Cal. 282, 65 Pac. 574.

[d] The board of supervisors of a county, in passing upon a claim against the county, act as a quasi judicial body, and their allowance and settlement of the claim is an adjudication which is conclusive. Hence, no action can be brought by the county to recover money paid on such claim.—Placer County v. Campbell, 11 Pac. 602.

§ 168. Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

[a] A county government is a portion of the state government, and the county debt created by the authority of law, is a part of the public state debt, and in the same manner as there is no remedy against the state, there may be none against the county. Hunsaker v. Borden, 5 Cal. 288, 63 Am. Dec. 130.

[b] Counties are quasi corporations, and can sue and be sued.—Price v. County of Sacramento, 6 Cal. 254.

[c] At common law an action does not lie against a county; and in the absence of some constitutional or statutory provision counties are to be treated as political divisions of the state, created for convenience, and not liable for damages caused by the neglect of its officers or agents.—Tyler v. Tehama County, 109 Cal. 618, 42 Pac. 240.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Liability of counties, mode of its enforcement, and the power of the legislature to modify or impair: 68 Am. Dec. 291, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 607-614; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1760-1799, §§ 338-367.

§ 169. —— Statutory Provisions.

[a] Under act of April, 1854, counties have right of prosecuting and defending actions in the same manner as individuals.—Placer County v. Austin, 8 Cal. 303.

[b] Statute allowing a county to be sued does not give a vested right to a remedy for enforcement of the judgment.—Sharp v. Contra Costa Co., 34 Cal. 285.

[c] An action will not lie, under section 1050 of the Code of Civil Procedure, against a county for the purpose of determining an adverse claim which it is alleged the defendant makes against the plaintiff for a sum of money, under an ordinance imposing a license tax upon persons engaged in certain business, which ordinance the plaintiff claims is void.—Whittaker v. County of Tuolumne, 96 Cal. 100, 30 Pac. 1016.

[a] Supervisors cannot be sued in their official character, in ordinary common-law actions, for claims against the public, county or village they represent, without express statutory provision.—Hastings v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 49.

§ 171. —— People of County.

[a] The people of a county are not a corporation, nor can they sue or be sued.—People ex rel. Smith v. Myers, 15 Cal. 33.

§ 172. Right of County to Sue Another County.

[a] Under section 4 of the County Government Act one county may maintain an action against another as for money had and received, in a proper case, after the presentation of its claim to the board of supervisors of the latter.—County of Colusa v. County of Glenn, 117 Cal. 434, 49 Pac. 457.

§ 173. Rights of Action—By County.

[a] County may intervene to enforce lien of tax on property in custody of law, and creditors having no lien cannot object thereto.—Yuba County v. Adams, 7 Cal. 35, 37.

[b] Action may be brought in name of county to recover money belonging to general fund of the county.—Solano County v. Neville, 27 Cal. 465.

[c] Failure to take out license does not make defendant liable to county in action for debt.—Monterey County v. Abbott, 77 Cal. 543, 18 Pac. 113, 20 Pac. 73.

[d] A complaint in an action by a county to recover possession of rooms in the courthouse which alleges facts showing the plaintiff's right of possession of the courthouse, and of the rooms therein described, and that the defendants wrongfully withhold the possession of said rooms from the plaintiff, states a cause of action.—County of San Joaquin v. Budd, 96 Cal. 47, 30 Pac. 967.

[e] County may sue for nuisance to it in its proprietary capacity as owner of land injured.—Yuba County v. Kate etc. M. Co., 141 Cal. 363, 74 Pac. 1049.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 466, 467; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1762-1766, §§ 339, 340.

§ 174. —— Against County.

[a] The right to sue a county is not limited to cases of tort, malfeasance, etc., but is given in every case of account, after presentation to, and rejection by, the board of supervisors.—Price v. County of Sacramento, 6 Cal. 254.

§ 175. Form of Action.

§ 176. Conditions Precedent.

[a] A complaint in an action against a county for damages sustained by the location of a public highway over plaintiff's land, laid out under the act of 1861, fails to state a cause of action, unless it avers that the plaintiff had attempted to come to an agreement with the board of supervisors as to the amount of damages sustained, and could not agree with the board as to such amount.—Lincoln v. Colusa County, 28 Cal. 662.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 177. —— Presentation of Claim.

[a] Statute providing that no person shall sue county for any demand, unless the claim has first been presented to the board of supervisors, and been by them rejected, applies as well to actions arising out of tort as upon contract.—McCann v. Sierra County, 7 Cal. 121.

[b] Claim for damages caused by a mob need not be presented to supervisors before suit.—Clear Lake W. W. v. Lake County, 45 Cal. 90; Bank of California v. Shaber, 55 Cal. 322.

[c] Where a claim against a county was rejected by the supervisors on its first presentation, it was not necessary to present it again before suing thereon.—Millard v. Kern County, 147 Cal. 682, 82 Pac. 329.

[d] Statutes of 1893, page 346, sections 43, 44, requiring a second presentation of claims allowed in part to the board of supervisors before bringing suit for the balance, do not apply to claims wholly rejected.—San Diego County v. Riverside County, 55 Pac. 7.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 178. Venue.

[a] Section 16, article 12, of Constitution, prescribing place of trial in actions against corporations, does not relate to suits against counties.—Buck v. Eureka, 97 Cal. 135, 31 Pac. 845.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 610, 611; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1772-1774, § 345.

§ 179. Parties.

[a] County is corporation, and is proper party plaintiff to object to contract made by the board of supervisors for building a jail.—People ex rel. Smith v. Myers, 15 Cal. 33.

[b] The act of 1851 creating the board of supervisors of San Francisco county, and authorizing the board "to sue and defend on behalf of the county," did not authorize the board to bring suits on behalf of the county in its own name; nor did it render the board liable to be sued directly for a claim against the county.—Hastings v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 49.

[c] Where an action is prosecuted in behalf of a county by a taxpayer, instead of the district attorney, facts must be alleged in the complaint showing a refusal or neglect on the part of the district attorney to institute the action.—Hedges v. Dam, 72 Cal. 520, 14 Pac. 133.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 180. Pleading—Complaint in General.

[a] A complaint which alleges that the plaintiff, as a justice of the peace, performed services at the request of the district attorney of the county, in cases wherein the people of the state were plaintiffs, to the amount of three thousand two hundred dollars, and that the defendant thereby became, and is, liable to pay said sum, does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against said county, because it does not allege the means whereby the county became liable, nor that the services were for, or procured by, the county.—Miner v. Solano County, 26 Cal. 115.

[d] In an action against a county for publishing an election notice, plaintiff need not allege that there is money in the treasury to meet the demand, or that the allowance of the demand would not exceed the limit of liability which the county is authorized to contract for the fiscal year.—Johnson v. Yuba County, 103 Cal. 538, 37 Pac. 528.

[e] A complaint by a county against a county treasurer, to recover money alleged to have been paid out by him on a warrant issued for a claim on which the county was not liable, is not demurrable because it does not set out the contents of the warrant, where from the facts alleged its illegality must have been apparent on its face, if drawn in compliance with the statute (County Government Act, sec. 114), which provides that "all warrants must distinctly specify the liability for which they are drawn and when it accrued."—Ventura County v. Clay, 114 Cal. 242, 46 Pac. 9.

[f] In an action by one county against another for money alleged to be due, the ambiguity of the complaint caused by a mistake in figures, causing a discrepancy of allegation as to the number of miles taxed in the new county, which may be corrected by other figures given in the complaint, cannot be reached upon general demurrer.—County of San Diego v. County of Riverside, 125 Cal. 495, 58 Pac. 81.

[g] As Constitution, article 6, section 6, speaks of the counties of Yuba and Sutter, and Civil Code, section 1189, requires the venue and certificate of acknowledgment of a complaint to be expressed as "county of ——," a demurrer to a complaint, commenced in the name of the county of Sutter, on the ground that the name of the county is "Sutter," and not the "County of Sutter," should be overruled.—Sutter County v. McGriff, 130 Cal. 124, 62 Pac. 412.

[h] In an action against a county on a well contract, the petition alleged that the county entered into the contract, acted on it, and made payments under it; and the contract recited that the county made it through its duly authorized agent. Held, on demurrer, that the petition was not bad as not setting out the authority under which the agent acted.—McPherson v. San Joaquin County, 56 Pac. 802.

§ 181. —— Averments as to Presentation of Claim.

[a] In an action on a claim against the county, the plaintiff must aver all the matters required by the statute in relation to his presentation of the claim to the board of supervisors, and their rejection of it, and a mere allegation that it was duly presented and rejected is not sufficient.—Rhoda v. Alameda County, 52 Cal. 350.

[b] In an action on a claim against a county, a complaint, alleging presentation of the claim to the board of supervisors, and that the affidavit accompanying the claim, which was for a certain number of dollars, "is true and correct, and that the same is due and owing from said county to deponent," substantially complies with the provisions of the statute which requires an allegation of presentation of the claim to the board of supervisors, together with an affidavit "that the amount claimed is justly due," as a condition precedent to the right to maintain an action therefor.—Rhoda v. Alameda County, 69 Cal. 523, 11 Pac. 57.

[a] The complaint of A. against the county of N. alleged that work was done under a contract with the board of supervisors. The defendant's answer admitted a contract with A. and one W., and averred this to be the only contract made by them in relation to this work. Held, that the complaint must be understood as averring a contract in accordance with the statute, and that the answer was sufficient to put the plaintiff upon proof of his contract.—Murphy v. Napa County, 20 Cal. 497.

§ 183. Evidence.

[a] Deposit of auditor's certificate in treasury raises presumption that payment accompanies it.—Butte County v. Morgan, 76 Cal. 5, 18 Pac. 115.

[b] In an action by a constable against a county for fees, where the agreed statement of facts shows that part of the claim was rejected by the board of supervisors, but does not show the ground of rejection, such action will be presumed to have been correct unless the agreed statement shows it to have been erroneous.—Green v. Fresno County, 95 Cal. 329, 30 Pac. 544.

[c] In an action against a county, by a road overseer, for services and money expended in repair of county roads, testimony of the road commissioner that he had directed plaintiff not to run in debt in excess of the funds appropriated for such work, and that he did not know anything about plaintiff's doing the work until the bills therefor came in, is sufficient to show that the work was authorized by the commissioner.—Ludy v. Colusa County, 45 Pac. 166.

[d] In an action to compel a county treasurer to pay a warrant, plaintiff alleged that under a contract with the county he had collected certain money due it, for which his compensation was to be fifty per cent; that he presented his claim to the supervisors, who allowed it; that the auditor drew a warrant; and that the treasurer refused to pay it. The answer denied any agreement with plaintiff except a certain written contract, substantially as alleged by plaintiff. The answer averred that such contract was ultra vires and void, denied that plaintiff rendered any services under the contract, and alleged that the county from which the money was collected had instituted an action to recover it back, and that the same was still pending. The contract with plaintiff did not, on its face, appear to be ultra vires or void: Held, that the pleadings made a prima facie case in favor of plaintiff, and the burden of proof was on defendant to show facts, if any existed, to defeat the case thus made.—Kelley v. Sersanous (Cal.), 46 Pac. 299.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1792-1794, §§ 360-362.

§ 184. Judgment.

[a] Judgment against county has the force and effect of an audited claim.—People v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 668.

[b] The assignee of a claim against a county for nine hundred and fifty-two dollars and seventy-seven cents, presented it to the board of supervisors for allowance, and it was allowed for the amount of six hundred and forty dollars and seventy-seven cents only. He then sued and recovered judgment upon a portion of his original claim. Held, that such judgment was a bar to further proceedings to enforce the claim, as allowed by the board, under Laws of 1883, page 313, section 44, allowing suit by a claimant dissatisfied with the amount allowed him, as such suit must be for the whole amount.—Zirker v. Hughes, 77 Cal. 235, 19 Pac. 423.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 612; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1795, 1796, § 364.

§ 185. Execution—Payment.

[a] When money judgment is rendered against a county no execution can issue on it.—Emeric v. Gilman, 10 Cal. 404, 70 Am. Dec. 742; Alden v. County of Alameda, 43 Cal. 270.

[b] When a money judgment is recovered against a county the only remedy is to present it to the board of supervisors for allowance as an audited claim within the time prescribed by law (Stats. 1855, p. 51); and if the board refuse to perform its duty, by allowing it as such, it may be compelled to do so by mandamus.—Alden v. County of Alameda, 43 Cal. 270.

[c] The act of 1858 (Stats. 1858, p. 233), conferring power upon the board of supervisors to "order paid any final judgment against said city and county, out of the surplus fund," does not authorize the payment of such judgment out of the revenue collected for any subsequent year.—Smith v. Broderick, 107 Cal. 644, 48 Am. St. Rep. 167, 40 Pac. 1033.

§ 1. Jurisdiction Defined.

[a] "Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine"; but after the determination of a matter over which the court has this cognizance it cannot be contended that a law, fixing the mode by which effect is to be given to a lawful judgment, is not a mere subject of municipal regulation, which has nothing to do with a question of jurisdiction.—Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

[b] General definition of jurisdiction is power to hear and determine, and, as applied to a particular claim or controversy, is power to hear and determine that controversy.—Central Pac. R. R. Co. v. Placer Co., 43 Cal. 365.

[c] Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine, or to hear without determining, or to determine without hearing.—Bennett, Ex parte, 44 Cal. 84.

[d] Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine, and does not depend upon the rightfulness of the decision.—Sherer v. Superior Court, 96 Cal. 653, 31 Pac. 565.

[e] Jurisdiction defined.—Crew v. Pratt, 119 Cal. 148, 149, 51 Pac. 38.

See 11 Cyc. 659-661, § 682; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1826-1830, §§ 1-9; cols. 1918-1933, §§ 91-106.

§ 2. "Within the Jurisdiction" Defined.

[a] Within the jurisdiction of the court means within the state.—Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306.

§ 3. Jurisdiction of Subject Matter—Necessity for Actual Controversy, Fictitious or Moot Questions.

[a] The supreme court, on an application for a writ of mandate, will not review the action of the district court upon a question not presented in good faith in due course of litigation, but only in order to gratify the curiosity of counsel, or of a party who procured it to be raised against himself by others having no real interest in the contest. People v. Pratt, 30 Cal. 223.

[b] Parties cannot, by agreeing upon a statement of facts, invoke the aid of a court for the decision of what, to them, or either of them, is merely a moot question of law; and courts should not render judgments which cannot be enforced by any process known to the law.—Johnson v. Malloy, 74 Cal. 430, 16 Pac. 228.

[a] If nuisance was abated before commencement suit, county court had no jurisdiction for any purpose.—Grigsby v. Clearlake, 40 Cal. 396.

§ 5. —— —— Proceedings to Confirm Irrigation Bonds.

[a] Statutes of 1889, page 212, authorizing the directors of an irrigation district to petition the superior court to confirm their proceedings in the issuance of bonds of the district, is not, because it authorizes the court to determine the right of the parties interested in the bonds before any controversy as to such right, in conflict with Constitution, article 6, section 5, fixing the jurisdiction of the superior court.—Cullen v. Glendora Water Co., 113 Cal. 503, 39 Pac. 769.

§ 6. —— Place of Accrual of Cause of Action.

[a] Our courts have jurisdiction over a contract for the carriage of goods over the Isthmus to New York made here, no matter where the breach of it took place.—Ord v. The Uncle Sam, 13 Cal. 369.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, 11 Cyc. 662; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1834-1838, §§ 13-15; cols. 1846, 1847, § 28.

§ 7. —— Property Located Outside Territorial Limits of Jurisdiction.

[a] Superior court of San Francisco had no jurisdiction affecting real estate outside of city limits.—Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321.

See, also, 11 Cyc. 669, 670; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1861-1877, §§ 46-68.

§ 8. —— Lands Situated in Another State.

[a] Where a court of equity has acquired jurisdiction of the parties, it may declare void a deed to lands located in another state, and compel a reconveyance.—McGee v. Sweeney, 84 Cal. 100, 23 Pac. 1117.

§ 9. —— Action to Rescind Contract Made Here for Purchase of Land in Mexico.

[a] In action to rescind contract for sale of mining property in Mexico for fraud, offer to restore title to vendors does not deprive court of jurisdiction on ground that action involves title to land in foreign country.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707, 9 L. R. A. 376.

[b] Courts of this state have jurisdiction of action to rescind contract made here for purchase of land in Mexico, and to cancel notes and mortgage given therefor, and order so much of the money and property as remains in this jurisdiction to be delivered up.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 22-27, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707, 9 L. R. A. 376.

§ 10. Jurisdiction of the Person—Actions Between Resident Aliens.

[a] State courts have jurisdiction of suit between resident aliens for tort committed in a foreign country.—Roberts v. Dunsmuir, 75 Cal. 204, 16 Pac. 782.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Jurisdiction over foreigners and their property: 76 Am. Dec. 665, note.

Jurisdiction of courts over absent citizens: 53 Am. St. Rep. 179, note.

Jurisdiction to quiet title against nonresidents: 1 Am. St. Rep. 264, note.

Jurisdiction over foreigners and their property: 76 Am. Dec. 665, note.

Jurisdiction over unknown owners: 87 Am. St. Rep. 358, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 666-668; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1848-1860, §§ 32-45.

§ 11. —— Actions Quasi in Rem.

[a] Actions quasi in rem require jurisdiction of person.—Fresno Nat. Bank v. Superior Court, 83 Cal. 500, 24 Pac. 157.

§ 12. Mode of Acquiring Jurisdiction in General.

[a] In order to give a court jurisdiction of the subject matter, so as to enable it to issue orders of process, there must be a suit instituted in the court.—Ex parte Cohen, 6 Cal. 318.

[b] There are two modes of acquiring jurisdiction of the person: (1) by personal service of the summons and copy of complaint; and (2) by constructive service, or by what is commonly designated publication of summons.—Hahn v. Kelley, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[c] A court cannot, by rendering a decision in a cause, acquire jurisdiction of the subject matter denied it by the constitution.—Rogers v. Cady, 104 Cal. 288, 43 Am. St. Rep. 100, 38 Pac. 81.

[d] Court acquires jurisdiction upon service of its process and does not lose it by failing to make proof of such service a matter of record.—Hibernia v. Matthai, 116 Cal. 426, 48 Pac. 370.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 670-673; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1877-1890, §§ 69-74; cols. 1947-1949, §§ 129-133.

§ 13. —— Constructive Service of Process by Publication.

[a] Superior court of city of San Francisco could acquire jurisdiction of the person of a defendant by publication of a summons.—McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

[b] In proceedings in rem publication is equal to personal service of summons on nonresident.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 35, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707.

[c] Service by publication on nonresident is ineffectual in suit to determine personal rights.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 34, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707.

[d] Court acquires jurisdiction over property of resident of foreign country by publication without personal service or appearance of defendant here.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 28-33, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707.

[e] By the appointment of a receiver to take charge of property specifically described in the complaint in connection with the service of summons by publication the court acquires jurisdiction to render a judgment in rem affecting such property, notwithstanding the absence of the owner from the state, and the impropriety of rendering a personal judgment against him.—Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 266, 56 Am. St. Rep. 97, 47 Pac. 37.

[f] The jurisdiction of courts of general jurisdiction as to persons extends in a general sense to persons within their territorial limits who can be reached by their process, but as to proceedings in rem, where the property or subject of the action is within the territorial limits of the state, such courts may, by statutory provisions, procure jurisdiction of the person of a nonresident by constructive service of process.—McHatton v. Rhodes, 143 Cal. 275, 76 Pac. 1036.

§ 14. —— Seizure of Subject Matter.

[a] Rule that requires seizure of thing to give jurisdiction in actions in rem is altered by our statute. Service on a person standing in particular relation to the thing confers jurisdiction on the court from which the process issues.—Averill v. Steamer Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

[b] Unauthorized writ of attachment does not confer jurisdiction over property of nonresident served by publication.—Mudge v. Steinhart, 78 Cal. 39, 12 Am. St. Rep. 17, 20 Pac. 147.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Jurisdiction dependent on the attachment of property: 76 Am. St. Rep. 800, note.

§ 15. —— Effect of Irregularity in Acquiring Jurisdiction.

[a] There is a very decided distinction between want of jurisdiction and irregularity in procuring jurisdiction.—Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54.

[b] Irregularity in procuring jurisdiction is a want of jurisdiction in an inferior court, or when jurisdiction is special and statutory. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 64.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Decoying party within the state to be sued or served: 16 Am. Dec. 723, note.

§ 16. Consent as Conferring Jurisdiction.

[a] A court cannot properly, even upon consent of parties, pass upon questions not raised by the written allegations of the pleadings.—Biddle Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 279.

[b] Parties cannot by stipulation confer jurisdiction on the district court to try a case in a certain county, after the court had adjourned therein, and its term had commenced in another county in the same district.—Bates v. Gage, 40 Cal. 183.

[c] Neither the silence nor consent of the parties justifies a court in retaining jurisdiction of an action on a contract void as against public policy.—Ball v. Putnam, 123 Cal. 134, 55 Pac. 773.

[d] The lack of jurisdiction under the constitution cannot be waived by the action of one or both parties; nor can they vest a court with a jurisdiction which it does not possess under the constitution.—King v. Kutner-Goldstein Co., 135 Cal. 65, 67 Pac. 10.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 17. —— Particular Courts.

[a] The jurisdiction of an alcalde cannot be extended or enlarged by consent of parties.—Ladd v. Stevenson, 1 Cal. 18.

[b] Consent of parties cannot give a justice jurisdiction beyond two hundred dollars.—Feillett v. Engler, 8 Cal. 76.

[c] The municipal court of appeals of San Francisco could not acquire jurisdiction of a case except by transfer from the county court, and, in the absence of such transfer, the voluntary appearance could not confer jurisdiction.—Descalso v. Municipal Court of San Francisco, 60 Cal. 296.

[a] Jurisdiction of subject matter cannot be given or enlarged by consent of parties.—Ladd v. Stevenson, 1 Cal. 21.

[b] Where the jurisdiction of the court, as to the subject matter, has been limited by the constitution or by statute, the consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction.—Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562.

[c] Jurisdiction of the subject matter of an action cannot be conferred by consent of the parties.—Yore v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. 431, 41 Pac. 477.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 673-676; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1897-1901, §§ 76, 77.

§ 19. —— Jurisdiction of the Person.

[a] When limit of court's jurisdiction regards certain persons, they may, if competent, waive their privilege, and this will give the court jurisdiction.—Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 676; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1901-1903, §§ 79, 80.

§ 20. —— Nonresidents.

[a] By becoming suitors here nonresidents voluntarily submit to jurisdiction of court and may be compelled to comply with conditions attached to relief awarded.—Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 23, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707.

§ 21. Scope and Extent of Jurisdiction.

[b] Where power is specially conferred upon court of general jurisdiction to determine particular question, this includes power to take evidence to aid in such determination.—People v. Chew Lan Ong, 141 Cal. 552, 553, 99 Am. St. Rep. 88, 75 Pac. 186.

[c] Court has power of its own motion to declare void that which clearly appears to be void on face of records.—Winrod v. Wolters, 141 Cal. 403, 74 Pac. 1037.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 677; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1903-1917, §§ 82-90.

§ 22. —— Includes Means of Enforcing.

[a] The power which the judiciary possesses to declare a law unconstitutional comprehends the necessary authority of carrying its judgment into effect.—Nougues v. Douglass, 7 Cal. 65.

[b] Court can make all necessary orders respecting process issued or to be issued on its judgments.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[c] Section 187, Code of Civil Procedure, is inapplicable to case over which court is given no jurisdiction, such as consideration of purely legislative questions.—Tulare County v. Kings County, 117 Cal. 203, 49 Pac. 8.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 677-680; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1906-1916, §§ 84-87.

§ 23. —— Territorial Extent.

[a] The superior court may issue a writ of mandamus to run out of the county, or to be executed out of the county in which the court is held, and there is nothing in section

5 of article 6 of the constitution restricting the jurisdiction of the court in this particular to the county in which it is held.—Kings County v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 198, 39 Pac. 870.

§ 24. Exercise of Jurisdiction Outside of Territorial Limits.

[a] A judgment on demurrer rendered in the district court of the fifteenth judicial district of Contra Costa county, in open court, is valid, notwithstanding the order sustaining the demurrer was made in San Francisco, and entered on the minutes during vacation.—Agard v. Valencia, 39 Cal. 292.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 25. Entirety of Jurisdiction.

[a] Where court has general jurisdiction of subject it has power to make a full disposition of the matter, and conclude the litigation respecting it; or, in other words, the power to pass upon the question involved carries with it, as a general rule, the power to make the decision effectual for the purpose for which it was made.—Kennedy v. Hamer, 19 Cal. 374.

[b] Where a court has jurisdiction, it has a right to decide every question which occurs in the cause, and, whether its decision be correct or otherwise, its judgment, till reversed, is regarded as binding on every other court.—Hibernia Sav. etc. Soc. v. Lewis, 117 Cal. 577, 47 Pac. 602, 49 Pac. 714.

§ 26. Power of Court with Regard to Matters Disposed of by Predecessor.

[a] The present supreme court will not set aside an order of the late supreme court, adjudging that no appeal had been taken in a case.—Reed v. Allison, 54 Cal. 489.

See, also, post, §§ 44, 119, 152.

[a] Where the jurisdiction of a court is defined by the constitution, no statute can deprive it of its powers.—Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 219.

[b] The district courts of this state have the same control over the persons of minors, as well as their estates, that the courts of chancery in England possess. This jurisdiction is conferred by the constitution, and cannot be devested by any legislative enactment.—Wilson v. Roach, 4 Cal. 362.

[c] The cognizance of all cases, where the sum involved exceeds two hundred dollars, is by the constitution distributed between the supreme, district, county, and probate courts, and the court of sessions; and nothing is left by the constitution for the legislature to do in granting or defining jurisdiction.—Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230.

[d] So much of the act of 1855 as provides for the transfer to the district court of issues of fact already decided in the probate court is unconstitutional and void, as the effect of the act would be to indirectly confer appellate jurisdiction upon the district court.—Deck v. Gherke, 6 Cal. 666.

[e] The legislature has not the power to impair or take away the appellate jurisdiction of this court, but it has the power to prescribe the mode in which appeals may be taken.—Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 297, 68 Am. Dec. 323.

[f] Constitutional power of courts cannot be taken away or impaired by legislature.—Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 315.

[h] Act of March 31, 1870, establishing the municipal criminal court of San Francisco without providing for an appeal therefrom to the county court, is not repugnant to Constitution, article 6, section 8, giving county courts appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts, because, if the constitutional provision is self-executing, an appeal lies without any statute authorizing it, and, if not self-executing, it merely confers on the county court power to exercise a jurisdiction when the legislature shall provide means for doing so, but is in no sense a guaranty of the right of such appeal.—People v. Nyland, 41 Cal. 129.

[i] Legislature may confer jurisdiction of "special cases" upon the district courts and the county courts.—Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

[j] Jurisdiction could not be conferred on county judge as distinguished from county court.—Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

[k] Jurisdiction of supreme court is derived from constitution and can be neither enlarged nor abridged by legislature.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 463, 22 Pac. 742.

[l] Legislature has power to regulate, but not power to take away or defeat exercise of jurisdiction.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 470, 22 Pac. 742.

[m] Jurisdiction conferred by constitution cannot be taken away or abridged by legislature.—People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 242, 22 Pac. 1039.

[n] Manner of obtaining jurisdiction and procedure for its exercise are matters of state legislation.—Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 582, 21 Am. St. Rep. 67, 25 Pac. 51.

§ 28. Power to Take Jurisdiction from One Court and Give It to Another.

[a] The cognizance of all cases where the sum involved exceeds two hundred dollars is distributed to the supreme, district, probate, and county courts, and the court of sessions, by the constitution itself, and nothing is left for the legislature to do, in granting or defining jurisdiction; and it cannot deprive those courts of their jurisdiction in such cases, and confer it upon justices of the peace.—Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230.

§ 29. —— Power to Confer Extraterritorial Jurisdiction.

[a] Act extending process of municipal court beyond territorial limits held constitutional.—Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

§ 30. —— Power of Congress Over State Courts.

[a] Congress has no power to confer jurisdiction on state courts.—Knowles, Ex parte, 5 Cal. 302.

§ 31. Discretion of Court as to Exercise of Jurisdiction.

[a] The superior court has no power or discretion to refuse to try an action to recover the mesne profits of land until the conclusion of an action in the federal court, brought by the United States, to cancel the patent under which plaintiff claimed title.—Dunphy v. Belden, 57 Cal. 427.

[b] Court cannot by holding without reason that it has no jurisdiction, devest itself of jurisdiction.—Temple v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 212, 11 Pac. 699.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 683; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 1934-1937, §§ 107-111.

§ 32. —— Sending Suitor to Court of Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] Upon an application to the supreme court for a writ of mandate to compel the board of supervisors of a county to count the votes of certain precincts cast at an election for the removal of a county seat, held, that the facts that the district court of the county would not hold a term for two months, that delay in making improvements at the county seat would be an injury, that it was the practice of the supreme court to give people's cases the precedence, that nearly all the people of the county were disqualified as jurors, and that the attorney general resided at the capital of the state, and could not well attend court at the county, were not sufficient reasons why the application for the writ should not be made to the district court of the county, instead of to the supreme court.—People v. Kern County Supervisors, 47 Cal. 205.

§ 33. Loss or Divestiture of Jurisdiction—Loss of Jurisdiction in General.

[a] An action cannot be continued by the court to decide conflicting claims of the defendants, after the plaintiffs have withdrawn.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 31 Cal. 11.

[b] Court does not lose jurisdiction by creation of new county including property in suit.—Tolman v. Smith, 85 Cal. 281, 24 Pac. 743.

[c] Constitution, article 6, section 5, provides that an action for the enforcement of a lien on real estate may be commenced in the county in which the real estate, or any part thereof, is situated; and by Code of Civil Procedure, section 726, there can be but one action for the recovery of a debt secured by mortgage. Plaintiff, having a lien on two parcels of land, one situated in F. county and in another county, sued F. county to enforce the lien on the land therein, and judgment was erroneously rendered for a sale of that land, but on a motion for a new trial the judgment was set aside. Held, that the court did not lose jurisdiction to render a judgment directing a sale of the land in both counties to satisfy all liens thereon by reason of the erroneous judgment, which had been vacated after the ascertainment of error.—Kent v. Williams, 146 Cal. 3, 79 Pac. 527.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 34. —— Change of Position of Judge.

[a] A judge who begins to hear a case, and is appointed judge of a new court which supersedes the old, may continue the hearing without a resubmission of the case.—Seale v. Ford, 29 Cal. 104.

§ 35. Mode of Exercising Jurisdiction.

[a] Where a court has jurisdiction both of the parties and the subject matter, the manner of exercising that jurisdiction cannot make void the action of the court.—Cloud v. Eldorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[b] Under the present constitution, whenever a judge of the superior court is present at the place designated for the transaction of judicial business, and there assumes to transact such business, his acts are the acts of the "court."—Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511, 34 Pac. 109.

§ 36. Necessity that Record Show Jurisdiction.

[b] Want of jurisdiction appearing anywhere in the record is fatal.—Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321.

[c] When the jurisdiction of an inferior court or tribunal depends upon facts to be ascertained by such tribunal, its record must affirmatively show the existence and determination of such facts.—Bedell v. Scott, 126 Cal. 675, 59 Pac. 210.

§ 37. Presumption as to Jurisdiction.

[a] The presumption in favor of the judgment of a court of general jurisdiction is overthrown when the record of the entire case discloses a want of jurisdiction.—Gray v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 562.

[b] District courts are courts of general jurisdiction, and regularity of their proceedings is presumed. It rests with a party seeking to impeach them to show affirmatively the irregularity of acts or omissions which affect the validity of their judgments, especially after the jurisdiction of the person is once shown. People v. Robinson, 17 Cal. 363.

[c] Under our statute (Acts 1858, p. 95), the same presumptions as to jurisdiction attach to the proceedings of probate courts, within the jurisdiction conferred on them by law, as in the case of district courts.—Irwin v. Scriber, 18 Cal. 499.

[d] If it does not appear affirmatively upon the face of a record of a court of general jurisdiction that the court had jurisdiction of the defendant, that fact will be presumed, unless the record shows affirmatively that no jurisdiction was acquired.—Carpentier v. City of Oakland, 30 Cal. 439.

[e] Jurisdiction will generally be presumed in the case of superior courts.—Forbes v. Hyde, 31 Cal. 342.

[f] If a judgment is rendered against a defendant by a court of general jurisdiction, it will be presumed that the court acquired jurisdiction of the person, unless the contrary appears affirmatively in the record.—Sharp v. Daughney, 33 Cal. 505.

[g] In the absence of anything in the record to the contrary, jurisdiction will be presumed as to courts of general jurisdiction.—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742; Mahoney v. Middleton, 41 Cal. 41.

[i] Although the exercise of jurisdiction is presumed rightful, yet if it appears from the records of the court in any matter that it had not acquired jurisdiction, either of the subject matter or of the parties, this presumption is destroyed. It cannot exercise jurisdiction until it has acquired it in the mode prescribed by statute.—Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 27 Am. St. Rep. 91, 28 Pac. 54.

[j] Jurisdiction does not exist by virtue of mere decision of court that it has jurisdiction, but presumption of jurisdiction exists, because court is authorized to determine question of jurisdiction in same mode as any other question of fact upon which its judgment is to rest, and its decision thereon is presumed to have been made upon evidence sufficient to sustain it; and this presumption does not depend upon the existence of any record of the decision, but the necessity for the presumption arises only when the record is silent.—Estate of Eichhoff, 101 Cal. 600, 36 Pac. 11.

[k] The presumption which the law implies in support of the judgments of courts of general jurisdiction only arises where the record is silent, and cannot apply where it is not silent.—Latta v. Tutton, 122 Cal. 279, 68 Am. St. Rep. 30, 54 Pac. 844.

[l] As a general rule, with a few exceptions, jurisdiction of the person of the defendant in a court of record is to be conclusively presumed, if the contrary does not appear from the record.—Bennett v. Wilson, 133 Cal. 379, 85 Am. St. Rep. 207, 65 Pac. 880.

[m] In the absence of a showing to the contrary, everything is presumed in favor of jurisdiction of the court.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 143 Cal. 630, 77 Pac. 647.

§ 38. Objections to Jurisdiction.

Objections to jurisdiction as ground for abatement of action. See Abatement and Revival, § 1.
Mode of making, and who may make, objection to jurisdiction. See Abatement and Revival, §§ 5, 6.

[a] In an action in a state court against a foreign consul, the want of jurisdiction may be taken advantage of at any stage of the proceedings.—Miller v. Van Loben Sels, 66 Cal. 341, 5 Pac. 512.

§ 39. Waiver of Objections.

[a] Where the defendants in an action in a justice's court, which is personal in its nature, move for a dismissal on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction to try the cause, their subsequent withdrawal of the motion and consent to a trial on the merits is a waiver of the objection to the want of jurisdiction.—Luco v. Superior Court of Tuolumne County, 71 Cal. 555, 12 Pac. 677.

§ 40. Determination of Questions of Jurisdiction.

[a] First point decided by any court is that court has jurisdiction, although it may not be in terms.—Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 685.

[b] The superior court of the city of San Francisco had a clerk and seal; hence a judgment thereof which recites that the defendant was regularly served with process is conclusive of the question of jurisdiction, as it is a court of superior jurisdiction.—McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

[c] An inferior court possessing powers conferred by statute may determine conclusively its own jurisdiction, by adjudicating the existence of facts upon the existence of which its jurisdiction depends.—Grove Street, In re, 61 Cal. 438.

[d] Order of supervisors or other inferior boards determining existence of facts upon existence of which its jurisdiction depends is conclusive.—Humboldt County v. Dinsmore, 75 Cal. 607, 17 Pac. 710.

[c] Facts necessary to show that a court or board of special or limited power has acted within its jurisdiction may be proven by other competent evidence, in the absence of a statute requiring such facts to appear in the minutes, or other records of its proceedings.—Estate of Williams, 102 Cal. 70, 41 Am. St. Rep. 163, 36 Pac. 407.

[f] An inferior board may determine conclusively its own jurisdiction or power, when depending, not upon allegations in a petition, but upon the existence or nonexistence of matters in pais, to be established by evidence, by adjudicating the existence of the facts, upon the existence of which its jurisdiction or power depends.—People ex rel. v. Los Angeles, 133 Cal. 338, 65 Pac. 749.

§ 42. What are Courts of Record.

[a] A court which is entitled to have a seal is a court "having a seal," though it actually has none, such phrase denoting a court of record.—Ingoldsby v. Juan, 12 Cal. 564.

[b] A court of record is "a judicial tribunal having attributes and exercising functions independently of the person of the magistrate designated generally to hold it, and proceeding according to the course of the common law." This definition implies a written record, but not a seal. That a court has a seal, or even that a permanent record of its proceedings is kept, does not of itself stamp its character as a court of record.—Thistleton, Ex parte, 52 Cal. 220.

[a] Court as a legal entity is distinct from its officers, and may be established and preserved without reference to incumbency.—Stratman, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 522.

[d] Act of March 7, 1876, section 6, provides that the mayor and common council of the city of M. should elect all subordinate officers of a city, including police judge. Section 11 recites that the assessor shall be ex officio clerk of the police court, and section 13 declares that the police judge shall exercise certain powers. Held, that a police court was clearly established by the act.—Mauch, Ex parte, 134 Cal. 500, 66 Pac. 734.

[b] The jurisdiction of the district court is confirmed and defined by the constitution, and no statute can deprive it of its powers. Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 219.

[c] Under the provision of the constitution giving the legislature the power "to establish such municipal and other inferior courts as may be deemed necessary," the courts thus created could only be of inferior, limited, and special jurisdiction.—Meyer v. Kalkmann, 6 Cal. 582.

[d] The express permission in Constitution, article 6, section 1, to establish municipal courts, is within the exception in article 3 respecting the division of powers in the government. The term "municipal courts" has a legal meaning, and includes mayors' and recorders' courts.—Uridias v. Morrill, 22 Cal. 473.

[e] The act creating the late superior court of San Francisco was constitutional, under the provision of the constitution authorizing the legislature to "establish such municipal and other inferior courts as may be deemed necessary."—Vassault v. Austin, 36 Cal. 691.

[f] The effect of the amendment of 1862 was to limit the power conferred on the legislature by article 6 of the constitution to the establishment of municipal and inferior courts within the limits of an incorporated city.—Stratmann, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 517.

[g] Nothing in the constitution can be so construed as to deprive the legislature of the right to create an additional police judge's court in San Francisco, as was done by act of March 7, 1881.—Jordan, Ex parte, 62 Cal. 464.

[h] Act of March 5, 1889, increasing number of police judges in San Francisco, did not abolish existing courts or create new one. Lloyd, Ex parte, 78 Cal. 423, 20 Pac. 872.

[i] Statutes of 1885, page 213, conferring judicial power on police judge in cities having a population of from thirty thousand to one hundred thousand, governs police courts in the city of Oakland, though a charter adopted by that city in 1899 contained provisions for the organization of a police court. Ah You, In re, 82 Cal. 339, 22 Pac. 929.

[j] Courts can only be established by laws passed and approved by governor. Resolution is not sufficient.—People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 337, 24 Pac. 603.

[k] Provision in city charter adopted by legislature by mere resolution of approval, and not by law, establishing inferior courts, is void.—People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 337, 24 Pac. 603; Reilly, Ex parte, 85 Cal. 632, 24 Pac. 807.

[l] The fact that an act, passed after the adoption of the new constitution for the purpose of adapting the phraseology of the several codes to the nomenclature of the courts, omitted such change in any particular section of the code, did not prevent the superior court from exercising any jurisdiction conferred on it by the constitution.—Wickersham v. Brittan, 93 Cal. 34, 29 Pac. 51, 15 L. R. A. 106.

[m] By the constitution of 1879, district courts theretofore existing were superseded by the superior courts. Constitution, article 22, section, 11, declares that "all laws relative to the present judicial system shall be applicable to the judicial system created by this constitution." Held, that the superior courts were vested with the jurisdiction of the district courts to inquire into any election held "by any corporate body," pursuant to the provisions of Civil Code, sections 312, 315.—Wickersham v. Brittan, 93 Cal. 34, 29 Pac. 51, 15 L. R. A. 106.

[n] Jurisdiction conferred upon superior courts by constitution cannot be taken away by statute.—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 7, 73 Pac. 597.

[o] If legislative action on a subject omits any branch or feature or power existing inherently in a court, it does not follow that such power has ceased, nor that it is taken away.—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 4, 73 Pac. 597.

[p] An inferior court can be established only by the passage of an act of the legislature, and its approval by the governor, or its passage over his veto, in the same manner as any other law is enacted, under constitution, article 4, sections 15, 16.—People v. Toal, 23 Pac. 203.

[q] Statutes of 1887, pages 88-90 (Const., Amend. art. 16, amending art. 11, sec. 8) provides that any city of more than ten thousand and not more than one hundred thousand inhabitants may frame a charter for its own government "consistent with and subject to the constitution and laws of the state," and, if ratified by a majority of the qualified voters of the city, it shall be submitted to the legislature for its approval or rejection as a whole, and, if approved by a majority vote of the members elected to each house, it shall become the charter of such city, and the organic law thereof, and "shall supersede any existing charter, and any amendment thereof, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter." Held, that this does not dispense with the requirements of Constitution, article 6, section 13, that the legislature shall fix by law the jurisdiction of any inferior court established pursuant to section 1 of this article, and that the provisions of a charter establishing a police or inferior court in such city which depend alone for their validity on a joint resolution of approval of the charter by a majority of the members of the legislature, but in no way submitted to or passed on by the governor, are unconstitutional, and the acts of such court are void.—People v. Toal, 23 Pac. 203.

[r] Although inferior courts in incorporated cities can only be established by the constitution (article 6, section 1), and their jurisdiction, powers, and duties must be fixed by the legislature (Const., art. 6, sec. 13), still a valid provision for filling vacancies may be made by charter.—People v. Sands, 35 Pac. 330.

§ 45. Judicial Districts.

[a] Act of April 4, 1864, increasing the number of judicial districts to fifteen, is not in violation of Constitution, article 6, section 5, which provides that "the state shall be divided by the legislature into fourteen judicial districts, subject to such alteration from time to time, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both houses, as the public good may require."—People v. Sassovich, 29 Cal. 480.

[a] The judges of superior court in particular county, for the convenient dispatch of business, or for any other reason they may deem necessary, may assign and transfer cases for trial to any one or more of the several departments of such court, without notice to the parties.—Bell v. Peck, 104 Cal. 35, 37 Pac. 766.

[b] After a cause has been assigned to one department of the superior court, a transfer to another department, though irregular, will not render proceedings in the latter for contempt of an order made by the former, while the cause was under its control, void for want of jurisdiction, and subject, therefore, to review by certiorari, since the jurisdiction of causes is by the constitution, article 6, section 6, vested in the court, and not in departments.—White v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 110 Cal. 60, 42 Pac. 480.

[c] The rule that the judgment of the court first acquiring jurisdiction will prevail over that of another court subsequently acquiring jurisdiction does not apply to judgments rendered by different departments of the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco, as all departments of such court, combined, form but one court.—Brown v. Campbell, 110 Cal. 644, 43 Pac. 12.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 47. Abolition, Consolidation and Reorganization.

[a] The amendment to the sixth article of the constitution, adopted in 1862, providing that the judicial powers of the state shall be vested in the supreme court, in the district court, in county courts, in probate courts, and in justice of the peace and in such recorders and other inferior courts as the legislature may establish, did not abolish the police court and office of police judge of the city and county of San Francisco as they were then established by law.—People v. Provines, 34 Cal. 520.

[b] Under Constitution, article 22, section 3, the superior court succeeded to the powers theretofore possessed by the district and county courts, which were abolished, and acquired jurisdiction of proceedings then pending in the abolished courts.—People v. Colby, 54 Cal. 184; Toland, Ex parte, 54 Cal. 344.

[c] Under the provisions of the constitution of 1879, the superior courts succeeded to, and took jurisdiction of, actions pending in the district courts, and, as no change was made as to the character of actions regarding nuisances, the superior courts properly take jurisdiction of those actions.—Learned v. Castle, 67 Cal. 41, 7 Pac. 34.

[e] City courts, created by their charters, were not abolished by constitution of 1879.—Guerrero, In re, 69 Cal. 99, 100, 10 Pac. 261.

See 11 Cyc. 709; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2020-2023, §§ 181-183.

§ 48. Transfer of Jurisdiction.

[a] The probate court has no jurisdiction over estates of persons who died before the adoption of the constitution, and the acts establishing this court, and giving it jurisdiction.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

[b] Legislature cannot confer on one court the functions and powers which the constitution has conferred on another.—Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230.

[c] The superior court of the city and county of San Francisco is the successor of the late fifteenth district court, and in an action in the latter court to recover the possession of real estate situate in the county of Sonoma, held that, upon the abolition of that court, the superior court acquired jurisdiction of the case.—Gurnee v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 58 Cal. 88.

[d] The municipal court of appeals in San Francisco acquired jurisdiction of causes pending in the county court by the operation of the statute creating the court of appeals. An order transferring them was unnecessary. Davis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 63 Cal. 581; Millard v. Yee Teen, 63 Cal. 584.

§ 49. —— Time of Taking Effect.

[a] Under constitutional amendment, article 6, section 19, transferring the jurisdiction of certain courts, and providing that no officer shall be superseded, nor shall the organization of the civil courts be changed, until the election and qualification of the officers provided for in the amendment, the courts abolished by the amendment retained their jurisdiction until such election and qualification.—Gillis v. Barnett, 38 Cal. 393.

§ 50. —— Jurisdiction and Powers of Court to Which Transfer is Made.

[a] District court has no authority to allow counsel fees in cause transferred from the court of first instance into that court by the statute of February 28, 1850. Thus, in such a case, where counsel fees were allowed to the defendant to the amount of six hundred dollars, the judgment was reversed. Selby v. The Alice Tarlton, 1 Cal. 103.

[b] Where cases have been transferred by statute from the superior court to the district court, the district court has jurisdiction to arrest, on motion, all processes issued by the clerk on judgments which for any reason are void.—Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157.

[c] District court possessed full power over judgments of court of first instance, records of which were transferred to them.—Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

§ 51. Supreme Court Commissioners—Appointment and Functions.

Power of legislature to create supreme court commission. See Constitutional Law, § 63.

[a] Act authorizing appointment of supreme court commissioners is constitutional.—People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 116, 117, 17 Am. St. Rep. 211, 23 Pac. 1.

[b] Power of supreme court commissioner is not judicial.—People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 118, 17 Am. St. Rep. 211, 23 Pac. 1.

§ 52. Courtroom and Register Clerk—Salary.

[a] The salary of a courtroom and register clerk of the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco is fixed at one hundred and seventy-five dollars per month, by the acts of February 13, 1880, and of April 2, 1880.—Burke v. Edgar, 67 Cal. 182, 7 Pac. 488.

§ 53. Stenographers—Appointment and Compensation.

[a] An indictment will be set aside where a stenographer was present with the grand jury pursuant to act of March 26, 1872, allowing a shorthand reporter of the county court of San Joaquin county to attend the grand jury and take down the witness' testimony, since such act was repealed by act of March 30, 1874, repealing all general and special laws as to official shorthand reporters.—People v. Lon Me, 49 Cal. 353.

[b] Penal Code, section 869, as amended March 3, 1881, provides that a magistrate may require the testimony and proceedings in examinations of persons accused of crime to be taken down in shorthand, and for that purpose may appoint a shorthand reporter. Section 2 provides that the reporter's fees shall be paid out of the county or city treasury on the certificate of the magistrate, but there is no provision fixing the reporter's fees or authorizing the magistrate to fix them. Held, on an application for mandamus to compel the county treasurer to pay the stenographer his fees for such services, that, in the absence of any law prescribing the fees which he was entitled to charge for his services, the certificate of the magistrate that he had rendered services did not constitute a demand upon the county treasury which the treasurer was bound to pay.—Fox v. Lindley, 57 Cal. 650.

[c] The superior courts in the city and county of San Francisco have power to fix and order paid the compensation of phonographic reporters in criminal cases, and it is the duty of the treasurer of the city and county to pay the same upon the order of the court.—Reis, Ex parte, 64 Cal. 233, 30 Pac. 806.

[d] Penal Code, section 867, subdivision 6, providing that the compensation of a reporter for taking the testimony of witnesses before an examining magistrate "shall be fixed by the magistrate before whom the examination is had, and shall not exceed that now allowed reporters in the superior courts of this state, and shall be paid out of the treasury of the county . . . . in which the examination is had, on the certificate and order of the said magistrate," refers to Code of Civil Procedure, section 274, which declares that the official reporter shall receive as compensation for his services "a sum, to be fixed by the court, not to exceed $10 per day," and is not affected by the unconstitutional amendment (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 70) making the compensation of stenographers in the superior courts to depend on a salary to be fixed by the judge.—McAllister v. Hamlin, 83 Cal. 361, 23 Pac. 357.

[f] Section 869 of the Penal Code, authorizing the magistrate at a preliminary examination to appoint a shorthand reporter, only requires that he be competent to do the work; and that section is not to be construed as requiring the same qualifications prescribed for official reporters of the superior courts in chapter 3, title 4, of the Code of Civil Procedure.—People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

[g] Penal Code, section 871, makes it the duty of a magistrate after preliminary examination to indorse his order of discharge upon depositions taken and certified in the manner prescribed by section 869. Section 883 requires depositions so taken to be filed with the county clerk, whether defendant is discharged or held to answer. On examination of one charged with larceny, the justice appointed plaintiff to report in shorthand the proceedings at the preliminary investigation whereat accused was discharged. Held, that the reporter was not entitled to fees for transcribing the shorthand notes in such case.—Mattingly v. Nichols, 133 Cal. 332, 65 Pac. 748.

vide for the constitution and jurisdiction of police courts, and for the appointment and compensation of the attachés of the judges, the framers of the charter of the city and county of San Francisco were authorized to provide for the appointment and compensation of stenographic reporters, though in conducting preliminary examinations the judges acquire jurisdiction under the general law, and that provision of the charter limiting the appointments to two, and prescribing that they shall attend on the court and take notes of all preliminary examinations, and shall be paid specified annual salaries, superseded Penal Code, section 869, as far as it empowers a police judge in San Francisco to appoint a reporter for a preliminary examination of a felony charge, and to fix his compensation, section 8 of the Constitution declaring that authorized charter provisions shall supersede all laws inconsistent therewith.—Elder v. McDougald, 145 Cal. 740, 79 Pac. 429.

[i] The superior courts in San Francisco have power to fix and order paid the compensation of phonographic reporters in criminal cases, and the duty is imposed upon the county treasurer to pay the same on order of the court.—People v. Becker, 4 Pac. 942.

[j] Act of March 21, 1885, relative to compensation of official shorthand reporters, was not unconstitutional as in violation of the county government bill, requiring a uniformity in county governments, etc., nor as imposing a new set of officials on the people, in violation of Constitution, article 11, section 6.—Smith v. Strother, 7 Pac. 801.

[a] A person who is a witness on a criminal charge is not, on that account, incompetent to act as interpreter at the examination of other witnesses in the case before the grand jury.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1884, providing that an interpreter must be sworn when a witness does not understand the English language, the court is necessarily vested with a discretion which is not abused in refusing an interpreter to a foreigner charged with murder who appeared to sufficiently understand the language.—People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281.

§ 55. De Facto Courts.

[a] The judgments of the courts which exercised civil jurisdiction in California between the acquisition of the territory by the United States, and the adoption of the state code of laws of 1850, cannot be tested by strict rules of either the civil or the common law. They must, from the necessity of the case, be sustained as the proceedings of de facto courts, in many cases where their regularity cannot fully be made to appear by the records now existing.—Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69.

SESSION DEFINED, § 63.
TIME FOR SESSIONS, § 64.
ADJOURNMENT OF SESSIONS, § 65.
RECESSES DEFINED, § 66.

§ 56. Abolition of Terms of Court.

[a] Our constitution and codes have abolished terms of court.—Wiggin v. Superior Court, 68 Cal. 401, 9 Pac. 646.

[b] Terms of court and final adjournments were abolished by constitution of 1879.—Gannon, In re, 69 Cal. 544, 545, 11 Pac. 240.

§ 57. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions in General.

[a] At the regular term of the district court, held at the time appointed by statute, the court fixed the time of holding an adjourned term, by virtue of a statute, different from the one appointing the regular term. In the interval a statute was passed appointing other regular terms and repealing the previous law for their appointment. Held, that the law authorizing the court to fix the time of holding adjourned terms was impliedly repealed, and that the adjourned term held in pursuance of the adjournment above stated was not legally holden.—Domingues v. Domingues, 4 Cal. 186.

[b] Where a special term of the county court was held on the first day of May, upon notice to that effect given on the 24th of April, preceding, the proceedings of the court were irregular, if not void, the statute (Wood's Digest, 381) requiring a notice of not less than ten nor more than twenty days. People ex rel. Orman v. Riley, 16 Cal. 186.

[c] The special act of 1864, providing for holding a term of court in Nevada county in August, was not repealed by the amendment of 1868 to section 15 of the judiciary act of 1863.—People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 522.

[d] Effect of repealing clause on prior statute fixing terms was to declare that the terms should not thereafter begin on the days mentioned by virtue of any authority derived from the statute repealed.—People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2053-2055, § 207.

§ 58. Duration of Term.

[a] The fictions of law that a term of court is but one day, and that a day is indivisible, do not prevent the court from inquiring as to the day or the hour if it becomes important.—People v. Beatty, 14 Cal. 566.

[b] Term of county court begun before Code of Civil Procedure went into operation might be continued until all business was finished. People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 732-737; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2075-2078, § 230; col. 2091, § 246.

§ 59. Adjournment of Terms.

[a] Sheriff has no power to adjourn court for term for nonappearance of judge until end of full week.—Thomas v. Fogerty, 19 Cal. 644.

[b] A term of the court does not expire because the judges did not appear before noon, and neither the sheriff nor clerk adjourned the court to the next day, when the judges met later in the same day, and adjourned then.—People v. Sanchez, 24 Cal. 17.

[c] Permission for adjournment by sheriff from day to day has no application to adjourned portion of term.—People v. Ah Ying, 42 Cal. 18.

[d] Under act of March 1, 1864, a district judge may adjourn a general term of his court in one county over an intervening term in another county. The term so adjourned is a continuation of a regular term.—People v. Ah Ying, 42 Cal. 18.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 733-735; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2078-2089, §§ 231-242.

§ 60. —— Effect.

[a] The court does not lose its control over proceedings to condemn land, by reason of its adjournments, at any time, but they are continued as unfinished business, until the deed is made, and the money paid over, under order of court.—Stanford v. Worn, 27 Cal. 171.

[b] Final adjournment of term discharges jury. If there be no final adjournment, trial in progress may be completed notwithstanding close of term.—Johnson v. Pacific Cement Co., 50 Cal. 648.

§ 61. —— Time for Reconvention of Adjourned Term.

[a] Where the general February term of the sixth district court for Sacramento county, California, must have commenced on February 1st, and concluded prior to March 15th, and the general March term of the same court for Yolo county must have commenced on March 15th, and concluded prior to April 5th, held, that under the statute of 1864 (Stats. 1863-64, p. 118), relative to adjourned terms, such court could hold a legal session in Sacramento county after March 15th, and up to April 5th.—Talbert v. Hopper, 42 Cal. 397.

[a] A judgment rendered by a district court after the time appointed by law for its adjournment is invalid, and will be reversed on appeal.—Smith v. Chichester, 1 Cal. 409.

[b] Where parties stipulate to try a case before judge in vacation, and that the judgment shall be entered as if tried at the regular term, and judgment is so rendered, such judgment is a nullity.—Wicks v. Ludwig, 9 Cal. 173.

[a] The time and place of holding courts should not be left in doubt.—Ross v. Austill, 2 Cal. 183.

[b] Under the statute authorizing the county court to order a special term not less than two nor more than twenty days from date of notice, to hear and determine contested election cases, an order was made appointing a special term at a given date; but before the time appointed, and after the notice, the judge at chambers adjourned the case until a subsequent day, but did not adjourn the term, or meet on the day appointed. Held, that a judgment rendered at the time to which the judge at chambers adjourned the case was null and void, as there was in no legal sense a court.—Norwood v. Kenfield, 34 Cal. 329.

[c] Court may sit and exercise jurisdiction in trial of causes or transaction of any legal business at any time.—Gannon, In re, 69 Cal. 545, 11 Pac. 240.

[d] Superior courts are always open, intervals in which no business is transacted being regarded as "recesses," and time during which court is in fact engaged as a court as "sessions."—Falltrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 616, 51 Pac. 947.

thority, the adjournment was held to be a nullity, and a judgment entered by the court two days afterward was held to be valid.—Thomas v. Fogarty, 19 Cal. 644.

[b] Section 874 of the Code of Civil Procedure is remedial in its nature, and is to be liberally construed, with a view to effect its object, and give the parties an opportunity for a hearing upon the merits of their controversy. It is general in its terms, and controls other sections of the code in relation to the subject matter of its provisions.—Hall v. Kerrigan, 135 Cal. 4, 66 Pac. 868.

Fees of clerk for opening and adjourning court. See Clerks of Court, § 6.

§ 67. Power of Legislature to Regulate Procedure.

[a] The provision of the constitution conferring jurisdiction in equity cases on the district court does not take away from the legislature the power to abolish the writ of ne exeat, since it is the legislative province to establish the procedure by which the courts shall exercise their jurisdiction.—Harker, Ex parte, 49 Cal. 465.

§ 68. Power of Court to Adopt Rules.

[a] Power of supreme court to adopt rules includes power to ratify a mode adopted by court below.—Pieper v. Centinela, 56 Cal. 173.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Rules of courts, authority of courts to enact: 41 Am. St. Rep. 639, note.

§ 69. —— Regulations in Contravention of Statute or of Established Legal Rights.

[a] Where a statute gives a positive rule of practice, courts cannot exercise any discretion in the matter.—Stevens v. Ross, 1 Cal. 94.

[b] A rule of court is void so far as it operates to deprive a party of a statutory right.—People v. McClellan, 31 Cal. 101.

§ 70. Power of Court to Modify, Suspend, or Disregard Rules.

[a] Rules of supreme court are always under its control, and their application may be enlarged in special cases.—Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 300.

[b] Rules of court are but a means to accomplish the ends of justice, and it is always in the power of the court to suspend or modify its own rules, or to except a case from their operation, whenever justice requires it. People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280; Pickett v. Wallace, 54 Cal. 147; Symons v. Bunnell, 20 Pac. 859.

[c] A rule of court which requires each counsel to submit such instructions as he intends to ask to the opposite counsel before his final argument, upon penalty of having the same refused, may, in many cases, work injustice, if strictly adhered to, and where it is apparent that such will be the effect of enforcing it, it will not be enforced.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[d] Rules of court made in the exercise of a power conferred by statute are obligatory on the court equally with suitors. Thus if a rule provides that the time for asking a rehearing shall not be extended by the court, an extension asked in any particular case must be denied.—Hanson v. McCue, 43 Cal. 178.

[e] A court may, whenever the purposes of justice require it, suspend its rule requiring ex parte orders to be served, or except a particular case from its operation.—Sullivan v. Wallace, 73 Cal. 307, 14 Pac. 789.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 743, 744; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2122-2124, § 295.

§ 71. Construction and Operation.

[a] A rule of a district court requiring a party, on motion for a new trial, or for judgment on a special verdict, to prepare and submit a statement of the evidence at the trial, does not apply to issues submitted to a jury in a chancery cause.—Purcell v. McCune, 14 Cal. 230.

[b] Rules are to be enforced to advance the ends of justice, not to prevent their attainment.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 512.

[c] Rules of supreme court construed. Hutton v. Reed, 25 Cal. 478.

[d] If a rule of court provides that when a cause has been at issue for two years upon a question of either law or fact, and the plaintiff has not brought it on for a hearing, that the defendant shall be entitled to an order of dismissal without notice, the continuance of the time for the argument of a demurrer by consent takes away for two years thereafter the right of the defendant to move for a dismissal.—Poole v. Caulfield, 45 Cal. 107.

[e] Rules of procedure, whether statutory or made by the court, are intended to facilitate courts in doing justice between the parties, and when not jurisdictional, are intended for the convenience of courts and litigants, and should be liberally construed.—Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279, 30 Pac. 529.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 742; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2121, 2122, § 294; cols. 2124-2126, §§ 296-299.

§ 72. Setting Aside.

[a] A rule of the trial court may, in the discretion of the court, be set aside.—Chielovich v. Krauss, 9 Pac. 945.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 743, 744; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2126, 2127, §§ 302-304.

§ 73. Stipulations Waiving.

§ 74. Conduct of Proceedings—Duty of Court to Protect Litigants.

[a] It is duty of courts to protect rights of litigants even against incapacity of their attorneys.—Cook, In re, 77 Cal. 232, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431.

[b] A court should lean in favor of giving to litigants every reasonable opportunity of presenting their cases on the merits, and rules of procedure should be made to serve their true purpose of expediting and facilitating the disposition of causes according to their merits, rather than to convert them into a means of obstruction.—Flaggs v. Puterbaugh, 98 Cal. 134, 32 Pac. 863.

§ 75. Rule of Decision.

[a] Where authorities differ court ought to adopt that opinion which is most in unison with former condition of things in California, and which will best conduce to uphold and carry into execution intention of parties. (Per Bennett, J.)—Panaud v. Jones, 1 Cal. 488.

[b] This court is authorized by statute to render such judgment as substantial justice shall require; but by this is intended substantial legal justice, ascertained and determined by fixed rules and positive statutes, and not the abstract and varying notions of equity entertained by each individual.—Stevens v. Ross, 1 Cal. 94.

[c] In a case arising for the first time in this state the common-law rule of that case will not be disregarded, and a new rule created, merely because the English judges have frequently regretted the adoption of the rule.—Johnson v. Fall, 6 Cal. 359, 65 Am. Dec. 518.

[d] In matters of practice involving no principle, it is safer to acquiesce in a rule which has been established for several years in the inferior courts of this state, the abrogation of which might introduce confusion and operate hardly on litigants.—Ellissen v. Halleck, 6 Cal. 386.

[e] Courts are not to decide cases alone, but to settle principles first and decide cases according to those principles as applied to the facts.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 423, 22 Pac. 742.

[f] In deciding cases court is not authorized to consider apparent justice or hardship of particular cases.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 423, 22 Pac. 742.

§ 76. Previous Decision as Authority and Doctrine of Stare Decisis.

Effect of rehearing on authority of former opinion. See Appeal and Error, § 1044.

Opinions of attorney general as authority. See Attorney General, § 16.

[a] There is no principle which compels the observance of the doctrine of stare decisis when a rule, well settled and universally acquiesced in, has been violated.—Cohas v. Raisin, 3 Cal. 443.

[b] In construing statutes and the constitution, the rule is almost universal to adhere to the doctrine of stare decisis.—Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401.

[c] The question as to whether the act of the legislature, organizing the superior court of the city of San Francisco, was, in its general provisions, constitutional, is put to rest upon the doctrine of stare decisis.—Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

[d] The conservative doctrine of stare decisis was never designed to protect manifest innovations upon the well-settled principles of law.—Aud v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 282.

[e] The twenty-fifth section of act of Congress, 1879, commonly called the "Judiciary Act," providing for writs of error from the supreme court of the United States to state courts, is constitutional; the long course of adjudication by courts of the highest authority, state and national, commencing almost from the foundation of the government, and the acquiescence of nearly all the state governments in all their departments have given to this doctrine a recognition so strong and authentic that it can no longer be denied.—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

[f] Opinion of a judge is only authority to extent of special concurrence.—Cowell v. Buckelew, 14 Cal. 640.

[g] Decision is not authority when the judges do not concur in the grounds of judgment.—Stuart v. Allen, 16 Cal. 501, 76 Am. Dec. 551.

[h] Construction of a statute repeatedly recognized becomes part of the law.—Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 153.

[i] Where an appeal is submitted without argument, the decision is not satisfactory authority.—Franklin v. Merida, 35 Cal. 570, 95 Am. Dec. 129.

[j] Stare decisis, doctrine of, how far binding, discussed.—Houghton v. Austin, 47 Cal. 646, 667.

[k] The supreme court of California, as at present organized, follows, as authoritative, the construction placed upon any provision of constitution of 1849, by the highest judicial tribunal created by and under that constitution.—Davis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 63 Cal. 581.

[l] Construction of provisions of former constitution given by the highest tribunal created by that constitution will be followed. Moulton v. Parks, 64 Cal. 166, 179, 30 Pac. 613.

[m] When a case is new in instance, but not new in principle, failure to discover an exact precedent is of little consequence.—People v. Richards, 67 Cal. 418, 7 Pac. 828.

[n] On questions of mere construction, case cannot be regarded as authority unless in all respects similar to one under discussion. Stevens, In re, 83 Cal. 330, 17 Am. St. Rep. 252, 23 Pac. 379.

[o] A decision of the supreme court which has been in force for over twelve years, and has been accepted and acted upon as correct ever since, and which is not shown to violate any principle of law, or work injustice, will not be reversed, even if its correctness is doubted.—Estate of Dorris, 93 Cal. 611, 29 Pac. 244.

[p] The power of a judge who has tried a cause to settle a bill of exceptions therein, after the expiration of his term of office, conferred by section 653 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has been continuously recognized and declared by this court for too long a period of time to be now questioned as unconstitutional, and its validity is affirmed upon the rule of stare decisis.—Miller & Lux v. Enterprise Canal etc. Co., 124 Cal. 208, 75 Pac. 770.

[r] The power conferred on a judge by Code of Civil Procedure, section 653, providing that a judge may settle and sign a bill of exceptions after he ceases to be such a judge, has been continuously recognized and declared by the court, and the principle of stare decisis is applicable, though the question as to the constitutionality of the statute may not have been decided.—Miller & Lux v. Enterprise Canal etc. Co., 142 Cal. 208, 75 Pac. 770.

§ 77. —— Decisions Contrary to Law.

[a] Decisions contravening the plain letter of the statute are not binding as authority.—Ingraham v. Gildermester, 2 Cal. 161.

[b] Though, on questions of practice, previous decisions are entitled to very great weight, still a single decision, made without notice of a statute, and in fact setting aside the statute, cannot be invoked as authority on the principle of stare decisis.—Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 375.

§ 78. —— Long Practice as Evidence of Correctness.

[a] Practice of supreme court continued for many years, without observation impugning its correctness, is strong evidence that it is in accordance with law.—Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 340, 9 Pac. 187.

§ 79. —— Dictum.

[a] A mere obiter dictum is not authority. Haight v. Joyce, 2 Cal. 64, 56 Am. Dec. 311.

[b] No point of a decision is dictum because other points are sufficient grounds for the judgment.—Clary v. Rolland, 24 Cal. 150, 57 Cal. 550.

[c] Where a decision passes on any question not necessary for the determination of the appeal, it will not interpose any obstacle to a reinvestigation of such question on its merits, in any case that may be thereafter before the court in which the point is directly presented.—Trinity County v. McCammon, 25 Cal. 117.

[d] The discussion and determination, in an opinion of the supreme court, of other points not tending to the decision of the point upon which the appeal was disposed of, must be regarded as dicta, and not as the law of the case.—Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131.

[e] A point decided is not obiter when the judgment turns upon it.—Urton v. Wilson, 65 Cal. 13, 2 Pac. 411.

[f] Decision upon a point which arose and was decided is not dictum, though not necessary to disposition of appeal.—Gwinn v. Hamilton, 75 Cal. 266, 17 Pac. 212.

[g] Expression of opinion on question not before court for decision is not entitled to same consideration as it would if question were involved in case.—Magee v. North Pacific etc. R. R., 78 Cal. 433, 12 Am. St. Rep. 69, 21 Pac. 114.

[h] Dictum on point elaborately considered is entitled to great weight where opinion is concurred in by whole court in bank.—Adams v. Seaman, 82 Cal. 639, 23 Pac. 53.

[i] Decision is not even authority except upon point actually passed upon by court and directly involved in the case.—Norris v. Moody, 84 Cal. 149, 24 Pac. 37.

[j] Determination of point not necessary to decision of case is not conclusive.—United Land Assn. v. Knight, 85 Cal. 463, 24 Pac. 818.

[k] The expression of opinion in the decision of a cause which is not necessary to a determination of the case is to be regarded as a mere dictum, and, when it announces a doctrine which is inconsistent with the plain meaning and effect of a statute, it cannot affect a subsequent decision in accordance with the statute.—Cardenas v. Miller, 108 Cal. 250, 49 Am. St. Rep. 84, 39 Pac. 783, 41 Pac. 472.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 80. —— Rules of Property.

[a] Considerations of public policy and justice, as well as regard for individual rights acquired under the law, as announced by highest judicial tribunal, imperatively demand a strict adherence to the doctrines of the case of Cohas v. Raisin, 3 Cal. 443.—Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

[b] The rule that a deed executed before the act concerning conveyances (April 16, 1859) must be first recorded, in order to prevail against a subsequent deed taken in good faith, and for a valuable consideration, has stood too long to be set aside by the court.—Clark v. Troy, 20 Cal. 219.

[c] Where a decision was made many years before in reference to the title of certain property, and valuable rights have arisen under that decision, it is the duty of the court, on the principle of stare decisis, not to reverse the former decision.—Hihn v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 398.

[d] Where important rights of property had grown up under a decision of the supreme court, and many years have elapsed since the same was rendered, and its correctness has been tacitly admitted in other cases, the question will not be reopened.—Vassault v. Austin, 36 Cal. 691.

[e] When a rule by which the title to real property is to be determined has become established by positive law, or by deliberate judicial decision, its inherent correctness or incorrectness, its justice or injustice, in the abstract, are of less importance than that it should itself be constant and invariable.—Smith v. McDonald, 42 Cal. 484.

[f] Even if property rights have grown up under an erroneous decision with regard to the construction of a clause in the constitution, it is better that inconvenience should be submitted to, rather than such decision should stand, and a valuable provision in the fundamental law be obliterated.—San Francisco v. Spring Valley Water Works, 48 Cal. 493.

[g] Decisions settling rights of property should not be disturbed.—Kohl v. Lilienthal, 81 Cal. 389, 22 Pac. 689.

[h] Decision of long standing establishing property rights should be followed, though its soundness be questionable.—Monterey County v. Cushing, 83 Cal. 511; McDanial v. Cummings, 83 Cal. 519, 23 Pac. 700.

[i] The decisions of the supreme court upholding the validity of trust deeds to secure loans establish a conclusion which has become a rule of property, and will not be disturbed.

Sacramento Bank v. Alcorn, 121 Cal. 379, 53 Pac. 813.

[j] The decision of the supreme court that bonds of a corporation, issued in violation of Civil Code, section 309, are not void, is a declaration of a rule of property, and will not be overruled.—Smith v. Ferries etc. Ry. Co., 51 Pac. 710.

§ 81. —— Decisions in Department and in Bank.

[a] Court in department is bound by decision of majority of court in bank.—Arnold v. San Jose, 81 Cal. 620, 22 Pac. 877.

§ 82. —— Power to Overrule and Considerations Governing Its Exercise.

[a] A former decision of the supreme court will be overruled when it is apparent that a plain rule of law has been violated thereby.—McFarland v. Pico, 8 Cal. 626.

[b] No well-considered decision of this court ought to be overruled unless it clearly violates some established rule of law, and great evils are likely to flow from suffering it to stand as a rule of property. It is an additional reason for standing by a decision that it was based upon the construction of a statute and affects titles to real estate.—Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 105.

[c] Decisions of the supreme court cannot be overruled by an inferior court.—People v. McGuire, 45 Cal. 56.

[d] If, upon a fuller consideration, the court is satisfied that a former judgment upon a constitutional question is wrong, it is not precluded from asserting the correct rule if vested interests of great moment are not disturbed thereby.—People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15, 39, 21 Am. Rep. 677.

[e] Decision of long standing without challenge will be followed though it may seem illogical.—Stevens, In re, 83 Cal. 328, 329, 17 Am. St. Rep. 252, 23 Pac. 379.

[f] Rule which would upset innumerable judgments which have stood for years will not be declared unless required by inexorable mandate of law.—Oakland v. Oakland W. F. Co., 118 Cal. 253, 254, 50 Pac. 268.

[g] A decision construing a clause of the constitution will not be overruled in an action between parties who have acted on the same.—Angus v. Plum, 121 Cal. 608, 54 Pac. 97.

[h] Laws are not made by judicial decisions, and, in so far as they declare the law, they can only declare what it was and is, and cannot enact what it shall be. The court simply determines the existing rights of the parties in the controversy before it, and must always look to the past for its law. Judicial decisions are only persuasive authority for future cases, and may be overruled for cogent reasons; and existing controversies growing out of the past transactions should ordinarily be governed by the later decision.—Alferitz v. Borgwardt, 126 Cal. 201, 58 Pac. 460.

§ 83. —— What Constitutes Overruling Opinion.

[a] Long-continued practice in supreme court should not be considered overruled by expressions in an opinion which can be reconciled with it.—Sharon v. Sharon, 68 Cal. 340, 9 Pac. 187.

§ 84. —— Decisions of Higher Court.

[a] An inferior court cannot disregard the decisions of a court of last resort, but it must give them full effect, whatever its views may be as to their correctness.—People v. McGuire, 45 Cal. 56.

§ 85. —— Effect of Overruling Decision on Existing Contracts.

[a] Persons entering into a contract, relying on a decision of the supreme court, are bound in the performance thereof by the law as declared by a subsequent decision of the same court overruling the former decision as erroneous.—Allen v. Allen, 27 Pac. 30.

[a] As a general rule constitutions should be construed from their terms, rather than by authorities from other states, but if in other states like constitutional provisions have received a definite construction, the authority is entitled to the same weight as in other cases.—People v. Burbank, 12 Cal. 378.

[b] Supreme court will not overrule a settled rule of this state on account of its conflict with authorities of other states.—Spencer v. Houghton, 68 Cal. 91, 8 Pac. 679.

[c] Decisions of other state courts of last resort, while strongly persuasive, are not binding as authority on courts of this state.—People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 119, 17 Am. St. Rep. 211, 23 Pac. 1.

[d] Rule of law announced in a decision of our state supreme court takes precedence over numerous authorities contra from other states.—San Francisco etc. Co. v. Dumbarton etc. Co., 119 Cal. 275, 51 Pac. 325.

[e] People v. Benson, 6 Cal. 221, affirmed, as having evidenced the law of this state for many years, and as being supported by respectable authority, though the weight of authority may be to the contrary.—People v. Shea, 125 Cal. 151, 57 Pac. 885.

§ 87. —— Decisions of United States Courts as Authority in State Courts.

[a] The government of the United States is one of delegated powers; the right to decide ultimately upon the extent of powers granted has not been delegated to the United States, nor prohibited to the states, and is reserved to the states by the provisions of the tenth amendment to the constitution; and therefore the decision of the supreme court of the United States on such questions is not binding in the state courts. (Per Terry, C. J.)—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 176.

[b] The construction given by the supreme court of the United States to its decree confirming a Mexican grant of land in California, is of binding authority in the state courts.—Schmitt v. Giovanari, 43 Cal. 617.

[c] When the question involved in an appeal is one which falls within the jurisdiction of the United States courts, the supreme court of this state will adopt that view thereof which is in harmony with the adjudications of the United States courts.—Belcher v. Chambers, 53 Cal. 635.

[d] The finding of any fact involved in a contest before the land department of the United States is conclusive upon the courts of this state, in an action to hold the successful party as a trustee for the other, or to deprive him of the benefit of his success in the department, except, perhaps, in cases of fraud. Haven v. Haws, 63 Cal. 452.

[e] In cases involving federal questions, state courts are bound to follow decisions of federal court and disregard those of state court.—Tubbs v. Wilhoit, 73 Cal. 67, 14 Pac. 361.

[f] In cases where writ of error lies to federal supreme court, its decisions take precedence over decisions of state supreme court. San Benito County v. S. P. R. R. Co., 77 Cal. 520, 19 Pac. 827.

[g] Decisions of federal supreme court in relation to public lands prevail over those of state court.—Gale v. Best, 78 Cal. 240, 12 Am. St. Rep. 44, 20 Pac. 550.

[h] Decision of federal supreme court on question of right to public land is conclusive. Wright v. Roseberry, 81 Cal. 88, 22 Pac. 336.

[i] State court follows opinion of federal supreme court on questions reviewable by it. United Land Assn. v. Knight, 85 Cal. 477, 24 Pac. 818.

[j] The former decisions of this court, to the extent to which they hold that the interest of a settler on the public lands under the pre-emption or homestead laws attaches as against the appropriator of water rights on his tract only as of the time of his final proof or of obtaining a patent, must be controlled by the decision of the federal supreme court to the contrary.—McGuire v. Brown, 106 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 1060.

[k] Courts of this state are not bound by decision of federal supreme court on burden of proof in criminal cases.—People v. Allender, 117 Cal. 82, 48 Pac. 1014.

[l] Decision of federal supreme court upon federal question is binding upon state courts. Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 42, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

[m] A state court of last resort is not bound by the judgment of the United States supreme court construing a state statute, but is entitled to construe the same according to its own judgment.—People v. Linda Vista Irr. Dist., 128 Cal. 477, 61 Pac. 86.

[n] A decision of the United States supreme court in a matter of federal jurisdiction must be regarded as of binding authority on a state court of last resort.—United Land Assn. v. Pacific Imp. Co., 139 Cal. 370, 69 Pac. 1064.

[o] The decision of the United States supreme court as to what constitutes a fugitive from justice, within constitution of the United States, is binding on a state court.—Letcher, Ex parte, 145 Cal. 563, 79 Pac. 65.

§ 88. —— Decisions of Courts of Other Countries.

[a] Where the guardian of an insane man in Hawaii obtained a divorce for him, the judgment will not be invalid in California on the ground that, as there was no express statute permitting a divorce action by the husband's guardian, he could not do so under the general provision that the guardian of an insane person shall appear for and represent his ward in all legal suits and proceedings, since, as the courts of Hawaii have held otherwise, their construction of their statutes cannot be assailed.—McGrew v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 132 Cal. 85, 84 Am. St. Rep. 20-n., 64 Pac. 103.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 754; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2145, 2146, § 324.

§ 89. Previous Decision of Same Case as Law of the Case.

Decision on former appeal as law of the case. See Appeal and Error, §§ 1334-1344.

[a] Ruling of the court sustaining demurrers is not the law of the case in any such sense as to preclude the court from vacating the same. De La Beckwith v. Superior Court of Colusa County, 146 Cal. 496, 80 Pac. 717.

with certain criminal jurisdiction, does not authorize the holding of a court of sessions by the county judge and one justice.—People v. Ah Chung, 5 Cal. 103.

[b] Entry in records of court, when only county judge and one associate were present, of the resignation of an absent associate and the appointment by the court of a justice of the peace in his stead, is a nullity.—People v. Barbour, 9 Cal. 230.

[c] The court of sessions is composed of a county judge and two associates, and the presence of all is necessary to the transaction of business.—People v. Barbour, 9 Cal. 230.

[d] If, at the time appointed for holding the court of sessions, either of the associates be absent, it becomes the duty of the county judge to designate some justice of the county to take the place of the absentee, and until this is done there can be no court for any purpose.—People v. Barbour, 9 Cal. 230.

§ 91. —— District Court of Appeals.

[a] Where three justices of the district court of appeals fail to agree in a habeas corpus proceeding, as required by Constitution, article 6, section 4, the writ must be deemed denied.—Sauer, Ex parte (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 995.

§ 92. —— Supreme Court.

[a] Where majority of judges do not concur in overruling former cases, they are not to be considered as overruled.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 304.

[b] Majority consisting in four justices may decide any matter within jurisdiction of supreme court, and legislature cannot require concurrence of more.—Jessup, In re, 81 Cal. 472, 22 Pac. 742.

§ 93. —— Effect of Division and Change of Personnel.

[a] Constitution, article 6, section 2, provides that the supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and six associate justices, and the concurrence of four justices present at the argument shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment in bank, but if four justices so present do not concur in a judgment, then all the justices qualified to sit in the cause shall hear the argument; but to render a judgment a concurrence of four judges shall be necessary. On motion to affirm a judgment it appeared that the cause had been several times heard and submitted, in which no decision was reached owing to the change in the personnel of the court, and an equal division of opinion among the judges qualified to act; but before an opinion was written three new judges qualified to hear the case were selected. Held, that the cause should be presented on its merits before the newly constituted court, and the motion will be denied. Luco v. De Toro, 88 Cal. 26, 25 Pac. 983, 11 L. R. A. 543.

§ 94. Opinions—Preparation and Filing.

Duty of judge to decide case in ninety days. See Judges, § 18.

[a] When an action has been tried in the superior court of a certain county, the absence of the judge therefrom will not devest him of jurisdiction to prepare and sign the findings and decisions in the action while he is in another county; and the clerk, on receiving them, may file them and enter judgment.—Comstock Quicksilver Min. Co. v. Superior Court of Santa Cruz County, 57 Cal. 625.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., col. 2184, § 359.

§ 95. —— Necessity for Written Opinion.

[a] Legislature cannot require supreme court to render its opinions in writing.—Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24, 73 Am. Dec. 565.

[b] Practice of giving reasons in writing for judgments is of modern origin. And it is discretionary with the court whether it give an opinion upon pronouncing judgment; and, if given, whether it be oral or in writing.—Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24, 73 Am. Dec. 565.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 632, providing that, on the trial of a question of fact by the court, its decision must be given in writing and filed with the clerk in twenty days after the cause is submitted, and unless the decision is so filed the action must be tried again, is merely directory.—McQuillan v. Donahue, 49 Cal. 157.

[d] Decrees of court are required to be in writing and remain of record.—Cosby v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 45, 42 Pac. 460.

§ 96. —— Right of Supreme Court to Adopt Trial Court or Commissioners' Opinion.

[a] Duty of writing its opinions is not specifically imposed upon supreme court; it may adopt as its own the opinion of trial judge or its commissioners (concurring opinion).—Paige v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 123-125, 17 Am. St. Rep. 211, 23 Pac. 1.

§ 97. —— Construction.

[a] The rule is well settled, upon the soundest principles of reason, that the language of a judicial opinion, in general, must be held as referring to the particular case decided. People v. Winkler, 9 Cal. 234.

[b] It is a maxim, not to be disregarded, that general expressions in every judicial opinion are to be taken in connection with the case in which those opinions are used.—Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

[c] In construing judicial decisions, that only is held to be authoritatively decided which was necessarily involved in the decision of the cause.—Banks v. Moreno, 39 Cal. 233; Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 26, 27, 16 Pac. 345.

[e] Language of decision must be considered in light of circumstances involved in case before the court.—Coburn v. Brooks, 78 Cal. 446, 21 Pac. 2.

[f] General expressions in opinions must be construed with reference to facts involved. Havemeyer v. Superior Court, 84 Cal. 392, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121, 10 L. R. A. 627; Morris v. Moody, 84 Cal. 149, 24 Pac. 37.

[h] Expressions used in judicial opinions are always to be construed and limited by reference to the matters under consideration, and cannot be safely applied in their largest and most universal sense to dissimilar cases.—Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604; Estate of Johnson, 98 Cal. 531, 33 Pac. 460; Chapman v. State, 104 Cal. 690, 43 Am. St. Rep. 158, 38 Pac. 457.

[k] General expressions in opinions in a particular case are to be taken as pertinent only to facts then before the court, and not as applicable determination of questions not then in contemplation.—Grant v. Murphy, 116 Cal. 432, 58 Am. St. Rep. 188, 48 Pac. 481.

[a] When counsel in the argument of a case assume a certain principle advanced by them as correct law, and the court decides the case upon the assumption thus made by counsel, without discussing the correctness of this assumption, the opinion is not authority that such assumption is correct law.—Donner v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 500.

[b] The presumption is that all the facts in a record, bearing on the points decided, have received due consideration by the supreme court, whether all, or a part, or none, of those facts are mentioned in the opinion.—Mulford v. Estudillo, 32 Cal. 131.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 99. Records.

Record on appeal See Appeal and Error, X.
Court records as evidence. See Evidence, §§ 284, 304.
False records and alteration of records as forgery. See Forgery, § 12.

[a] At common law a record signifies a roll of parchment upon which the proceedings and transactions of a court are drawn up by its officers, and which is then deposited in its treasury in perpetuam rei memoriam. A court of record is that where the acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled in parchment for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the records of the court, and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. (Per Sawyer, C. J.)—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[b] The privilege of having these enrolled memorials constitutes the great leading distinction, in English and American law, between courts of record and courts not of record, or superior and inferior courts. (Per Sawyer, C. J.)—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[c] In the United States paper has universally supplied the place of parchment, as the material of the record, and the roll form has fallen into disuse, but whether on parchment or paper, in the roll form or otherwise, this judgment-roll is what is known in law as the record, and is what is meant by courts and law-writers when they speak of records of superior courts or courts of record. (Per Sawyer, C. J.)—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[d] This technical record is the only strict and proper proof of the proceedings of the courts in which they are preserved, and is regarded in law as proof of so absolute a nature as to admit of no contradiction, not even by the files and minutes of the court in which the record is preserved. But in those courts and tribunals where the proceedings are not enrolled or recorded, as well the existence of their proceedings as the truth of the matters therein contained shall, if disputed, be tried and determined by a jury. (Per Sawyer, C. J.)—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[e] Section 203 of the Practice Act provides for a judgment-roll, and prescribes what it shall contain, and it is made to embrace all the essentials of the common-law record. (Per Sawyer, C. J.)—Hahn v. Kelly, 34 Cal. 391, 94 Am. Dec. 742.

[a] Grounds of decisions of supreme court are required to be recorded for guidance of public in their business transactions.—People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 124, 17 Am. St. Rep. 211, 23 Pac. 1.

[b] When jurisdiction has once been acquired it is not lost by a failure to preserve a record of the acts by which it was acquired, and the acts of a court in exercising its inherent power to amend its record, or to supply a lost record, will be presumed to have been properly exercised.—Sichler v. Look, 93 Cal. 600, 29 Pac. 223.

[c] Decrees of court are required to be in writing and remain of record, and those affected thereby have a right to stand by such record, and, unless a change is made in the record, and knowledge brought home to the party sought to be charged thereby, he has a right to regard the decree as entered as the final direction of the court, and to disregard any oral modification thereof having only a mere potential existence.—Cosby v. Superior Court, 110 Cal. 45, 42 Pac. 460.

§ 101. —— What Constitutes Filing of Paper.

§ 102. —— Nunc Pro Tunc Entry.

[a] A court has no power, after the adjournment of a term, to direct the clerk to enter in the minutes, nunc pro tunc, an order made at the adjourned term, where there is nothing in the record to show that such order was made.—Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 764; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2187-2189, § 368.

§ 103. —— Amendment and Correction.

[a] While the term lasts the court has power to amend the record. After the term has passed, the record cannot be amended unless there is something in the record to amend by. The settled statement, until certified is not record.—Branger v. Chevalier, 9 Cal. 172.

[b] The records of courts are under the control of the judges so far as essential to the proper administration of justices, and this control is beyond the reach of legislation.—Houston v. Williams, 13 Cal. 24, 73 Am. Dec. 565.

[c] An error in the record of the proceedings of the supreme court cannot be attacked collaterally, but should be brought seasonably to the notice of the court by a direct motion to correct it.—Willson v. Broder, 24 Cal. 190.

[d] Clerical errors and misprisions with respect to entries of judicial proceedings may be corrected by the court even after the adjournment of the term, but the record itself must show the error.—Hegeler v. Henckell, 27 Cal. 491.

[e] Supreme court has no authority to correct records in the lower courts. Applications to correct errors in the records of district courts, if any exist, must be made in the lower courts.—Boston v. Haynes, 31 Cal. 107.

[f] When court had in fact jurisdiction of defendant, but return of constable failed to show that fact, record may be amended after judgment so as to show jurisdiction, if there are no intervening rights to be affected.—Allison v. Thomas, 72 Cal. 562, 1 Am. St. Rep. 89, 14 Pac. 309.

[g] All courts of record have the inherent power to correct their records so that they shall conform to the actual facts and speak the truth of the case; and such correction may be made at any time, either upon the motion of the court itself without notice, or at the instance of any party interested; and when made, the corrected record, as well as the order making the correction, is conclusive upon any other court in which the record is offered in evidence.—Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478, 23 Am. St. Rep. 491, 26 Pac. 1074.

[h] The power of a court to cause its acts and proceedings to be correctly set forth in its records, and to correct its records in accordance with the facts, extends to criminal as well as civil cases.—People v. Ward, 141 Cal. 628, 75 Pac. 306.

[i] The court has inherent power to correct a clerical misprision on the face of its records.—Fay v. Stubenrauch, 141 Cal. 573, 75 Pac. 174.

[j] The power of a court to correct is records is not lost by mere lapse of time, and the rule as to the effect of the adjournment of the term has become obsolete.—People v. Ward, 141 Cal. 628, 75 Pac. 306.

§ 105. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions Construed.

[a] Special cases are not included within the meaning of the word "cases" as it is used in that portion of the constitution which defines the jurisdiction of the supreme court. (Per Rhodes, C. J.)—Appeal of Houghton, 42 Cal. 35, 94 Am. Dec. 630.

[b] Special cases are special proceedings characteristically differing from ordinary suits at the common law. They do not proceed according to the course of the common law, but give new rights and afford new remedies. Such cases are not cases at law within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, as defined by the constitution, even though they involve questions of value. (Per Wallace, J.)—Appeal of Houghton, 42 Cal. 35.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 963, clause 1, authorizing an appeal to the supreme court in an action brought into the superior court from another court, does not apply to cases commenced in a justice's court, in which an appeal to the supreme court is denied by Constitution, article 6, section 4.—Edsall v. Short, 122 Cal. 533, 55 Pac. 327.

[d] Constitution, article 6, section 11, giving justice's courts concurrent jurisdiction with superior courts in cases to enforce liens on chattels, where the amount of the liens and the value of the chattels does not exceed three hundred dollars, does not give the supreme court jurisdiction of an appeal in such a case originally begun in a justice's court and appealed to the superior court; section 4 precluding the exercise of such jurisdiction in cases in equity arising in justices' courts.—Edsall v. Short, 122 Cal. 533, 55 Pac. 327.

[a] The constitution has not clothed supreme court with the powers and jurisdiction of the court of king's bench in England.—Attorney General, Ex parte, 1 Cal. 85.

[b] Supreme court cannot exercise functions not delegated.—Luther v. Master Ship Apollo, 1 Cal. 15, 66, 90, 92, 348.

[c] Powers of supreme court are exclusively appellate.—Knowles, Ex parte, 5 Cal. 306.

§ 107. —— Source and Determination.

[a] The supreme court being created by the constitution, and its powers being therein defined, the jurisdiction conferred by the constitution must be taken as exclusive of all other jurisdiction.—Attorney General, Ex parte, 1 Cal. 85.

[b] Jurisdiction of supreme court is derived from constitution alone, and the legislature can neither enlarge nor restrict it. When a special case is devised, the question whether the supreme court has jurisdiction in the matter must be determined by an interpretation of the provisions of the constitution, and not by reference to the statute. (Per Rhodes, C. J.)—Appeal of Houghton, 42 Cal. 35, 94 Am. Dec. 630.

§ 108. Original Jurisdiction.

[a] The supreme court is strictly an appellate tribunal, and has no original jurisdiction except in cases of habeas corpus, and consequently is not empowered to issue a writ of quo warranto for the purpose of inquiring by what authority a person exercises the duties of a collector of the foreign license tax. Attorney General, Ex parte, 1 Cal. 85.

[b] Supreme court has no original jurisdiction to try title to an office.—People v. Harvey, 62 Cal. 508.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2337-2472, §§ 499-791.

§ 109. —— To Determine Salary of Judges of District Court of Appeals.

[a] The supreme court is the only tribunal empowered to determine the amount of the salary of the justices of the district court of appeals.—Harrison v. Colgan (Cal. Sup.), 81 Pac. 1010.

§ 110. —— Disbarment Proceedings.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 287, supreme court will entertain accusation as an original proceeding for disbarment of an attorney only when prosecution is instituted by a bar association or other public body in the public interest.—In re Ashley, 146 Cal. 600, 80 Pac. 1030.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 287, proceeding for disbarment of attorney on accusation of private person alleging misconduct prejudicial to himself should be instituted in the superior court of the county where alleged misconduct occurred.—Ashley, In re, 146 Cal. 600, 80 Pac. 1030.

§ 111. Appellate Jurisdiction.

[a] Supreme court has jurisdiction of order of court of first instance, affecting the merits in the case, where the appeal was brought before the passage of the act of February 28, 1850.—Payne v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 1 Cal. 33.

[b] The discretion of the probate court is subject to review by the supreme court, and like all other matters of discretion in case of gross abuse would be corrected.—Keller v. De Franklin, 5 Cal. 432.

[c] Supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in insolvency cases.—Kohlman v. Wright, 6 Cal. 231.

[d] The supreme court has no jurisdiction on appeal, where the ad damnum in the complaint does not exceed three hundred dollars.—Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545.

[e] A fine imposed by the county court for wrongfully demanding and collecting a toll for the privilege of passing over a road is not a municipal fine, within Constitution, article 6, section 4, which defines the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, nor is the legality of the fine to be imposed upon conviction involved in the trial of the case under that section.—People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

[f] Constitution, article 6, section 4, giving the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all actions at law involving the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, or municipal fine, in which the demand for the value of the property in controversy exceeds three hundred dollars, vests it with appellate jurisdiction over an election contest in the county court.—Knowles v. Yates, 31 Cal. 82.

[g] The supreme court has jurisdiction of an appeal from a case commenced in a justice's court for damages in a less sum than three hundred dollars, and removed to the district court upon the filing of a verified answer showing that the determination of the action would necessarily involve the decision of a question of title to real property.—Doherty v. Thayer, 31 Cal. 140.

[h] The supreme court has jurisdiction to review all cases which the district courts have jurisdiction to try.—Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28.

[i] The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court exists, and is capable of effective assertion, independently of legislative aid, as to the procedure through which an appeal is to be exerted. (Per Wallace, J.)—Appeal of Houghton, 42 Cal. 35, 94 Am. Dec. 630.

[j] The supreme court has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal in special cases, such as a proceeding to condemn land for the use of a railroad company.—Stockton etc. R. Co. v. Galgiani, 49 Cal. 139.

[k] Though the constitution contains no provision conferring on the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in cases of mandamus, such jurisdiction exists.—Palache v. Hunt, 64 Cal. 473, 2 Pac. 245.

[l] The supreme court, having appellate jurisdiction "in all cases . . . . which involve the title or possession of real estate," has jurisdiction of defendant's appeal in an action under Civil Code, section 485, declaring a railroad company, in case it does not fence its right of way, liable for cattle killed by its train on its road, which passed through or along the property of the owner thereof—plaintiff having to show ownership, or at least possession, of the adjoining land, and issue thereon being raised by the pleadings; and it is immaterial that defendant, by his appeal, raises no question as to such ownership or possession.—Baker v. Southern California Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 455, 42 Pac. 975.

[m] The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court must be tested by the sum demanded in the complaint.—Henigan v. Ervin, 110 Cal. 37, 42 Pac. 457.

[n] A proceeding by accusation for alleged misdemeanors in office, under section 772 of the Penal Code, is a criminal proceeding not prosecuted by information or indictment, and is not within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, and an appeal from the judgment rendered therein will be dismissed.—Wheeler v. Donnell, 110 Cal. 655, 43 Pac. 1.

[o] In a proceeding by indictment against an officer for alleged misconduct in office, if the charges are substantiated, the fact that in such proceeding the court must enter a decree that the party accused be deprived of his office, and also enter a judgment in favor of the informer for the sum of five hundred dollars, does not make the demand a case at law for an amount greater than three hundred dollars within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court; but such judgment is for a fine, and the fact that it is payable to the informer, rather than into the county treasury, is wholly immaterial, and the provision therefor is purely incidental to the main purpose of the act, which is to secure the removal of the officer guilty of unlawful conduct.—Wheeler v. Donnell, 110 Cal. 655, 43 Pac. 1.

[p] Where the complaint in an action under Civil Code, section 485, imposing on railroads a liability to adjoining land owners for killing stock, avers ownership of adjoining land, as required, title to land is involved in the action so as to give the supreme court jurisdiction of an appeal from the judgment therein.—Boyd v. Southern California Ry. Co., 126 Cal. 571, 58 Pac. 1046.

[q] Statement of counsel, made for the purpose of having the evidence taken down, that the case involved title to land, cannot be accepted as a substitute for matter of record to show that title was involved, from which the jurisdiction of the court is to be ascertained. Raisch v. Sausalito Land etc. Co., 131 Cal. 215, 63 Pac. 346.

[r] Supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from an order, made after final judgment, refusing to strike out plaintiff's cost-bill, which amounts to less than three hundred dollars.—Ertle v. Placer County, 44 Pac. 229.

[s] Where the amount claimed was in excess of two thousand dollars, an appeal was properly taken to the supreme court under Constitution, article 6, section 4.—McAulay v. Tahoe Ice Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 912.

§ 112. Issuance of Prerogative Writs.

[a] The provision of the statute organizing the supreme court that it shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, supersedeas, certiorari, and such other writs and process as may be necessary to the exercise of its jurisdiction, is, in so far as it attempts to vest the court with original jurisdiction to issue original writs other than writs of habeas corpus, repugnant to Constitution, article 6, section 4, providing that the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction in certain stated cases, and have power to issue writs of habeas corpus and such other writs as are necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.—People, Ex parte, 1 Cal. 85.

[b] Supreme court had no original jurisdiction under old constitution in mandamus, supersedeas, or prohibition.—People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 144.

[c] Supreme court could only issue such writs and processes as were necessary to exercise of appellate jurisdiction.—Haight v. Gay, 8 Cal. 300.

[d] Supreme court has right to compel inferior tribunals to proceed to hear and determine causes of which they refuse to take cognizance, and this by virtue of its appellate powers and its authority to issue process necessary to give them effect.—Purcell v. McKune, 14 Cal. 230.

[e] Supreme court has only appellate jurisdiction, and is only authorized to issue writ of certiorari in and of such jurisdiction.—Milliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166, 169.

[f] The supreme court has original jurisdiction in cases of mandamus.—Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26.

[g] The supreme court has original jurisdiction to grant writs of certiorari.—Miller v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 25 Cal. 93.

[h] Power of county courts to grant writs of certiorari, except in aid of their appellate jurisdiction, doubted, but the point not decided.—Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7.

[i] In Constitution, article 6, section 4, the provision that the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, "and all other writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of the appellate jurisdiction," does not change the provision of the old constitution, having the words, "and also all the writs necessary," etc., and the supreme court still has original jurisdiction to issue the same.—Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353.

[j] In issuing prerogative writs the supreme court and the several superior courts are peers, each having original jurisdiction; whether the judgment of each is final, it is not necessary in this case to decide. Semble.—Santa Cruz etc. Co. v. Board of Supervisors of the County of Santa Clara, 62 Cal. 40.

[k] Where an appeal was taken to the supreme court from a judgment decreeing that a certain dam was maintained without authority, such court had no jurisdiction to grant a petition for an original injunction, alleging that certain of the defendants had threatened to enforce the judgment by removing the dam, and would do so unless restrained, such act amounting only to a threatened trespass by the parties, involving no act by the court. Rose v. Mesmer, 131 Cal. 631, 63 Pac. 1010.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 51 L. R. A. 33, note; 58 L. R. A. 833, note. See, also, 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2337-2472, §§ 499-791.

§ 113. Mode and Time of Exercising Jurisdiction.

[a] The supreme court is always open, Sundays and holidays included. Where, therefore, a cause has been heard and decided by one of the departments, a hearing in bank cannot be granted after the expiration of thirty days, although the last day of the thirty falls on Sunday.—Adams v. Dohrmann, 63 Cal. 417.

[b] The provision in the constitution that, within thirty days after judgment pronounced in a cause by a department of the supreme court, it may be ordered to be heard and decided in bank, is merely a provision for the consideration and determination thereof after judgment, and does not imply an additional or oral argument, the court having discretion to hear on the record and arguments or to direct additional arguments; and the word "heard" signifies the consideration, as distinguished from the trial, of a cause, and the court has control and jurisdiction of a cause for that period; and the department that pronounced the judgment itself, the court in bank, or the justices of the court, may proceed to reconsider the cause, and to modify, correct, or vacate the judgment, and do so of their own motion.—Niles v. Edwards, 95 Cal. 41, 30 Pac. 134.

[c] Under the constitution of this state there is but one supreme court, and the jurisdiction which is vested in it may be exercised either in bank or in department. The court in bank has the power to correct an error in or modify the judgment rendered in a department, at any time within thirty days, of its own motion, irrespective of any application therefor, and it is not necessary that the cause be argued in bank upon an order therefor, to give the court in bank jurisdiction thereof.—Niles v. Edwards, 95 Cal. 41, 30 Pac. 134.

[a] The discretion of the supreme court to order the removal of a cause from a district court of appeal to the supreme court for hearing under Constitution, article 6, section 4, as amended by Laws of 1903, page 738, will not be exercised to revise the decision of a district court of appeal as to the facts shown by the record.—People v. Davis (Cal. App.), 81 Pac. 716, 147 Cal. 346, 81 Pac. 718.

[b] Under Supreme Court Rule 32, held appeal involving more than the amount of which the court of appeal has jurisdiction will be transferred to the supreme court.—Weldon v. Rogers (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 352.

[c] Under Constitution, article 6, section 4, the district court of appeal has no jurisdiction of a direct appeal in an action for the enforcement of a trust and an accounting, and an appeal so taken will be transferred to the supreme court.—Marston v. Kuhland (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 357.

§ 115. Superior Court of San Francisco.

[a] Superior court of city of San Francisco has constitutionally all powers which are specified in the act creating it.—Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401.

[b] Whether superior court of San Francisco had jurisdiction to render judgment over two hundred dollars is no longer an open question. It has such jurisdiction on the principle of stare decisis.—Curtis v. Richards, 9 Cal. 33.

[c] Though the superior court of San Francisco is municipal court, and of inferior, limited, and special jurisdiction, there is nothing in the constitution to prevent the legislature from extending that jurisdiction, so that it can enforce its proper judgments by a levy on lands of the defendant outside the city.—Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

[d] Late superior court of San Francisco was a municipal and inferior court, but its character as such depended on the subjects of its jurisdiction and its relation to other tribunals, and not upon the form of its process or the counties to which it might be issued. Chipman v. Bowman, 14 Cal. 157.

[a] The superior court was no less "an inferior court" from the possession of the power to send its process out of the city. Its jurisdiction was not enlarged by the possession of that power. The prescribing of this mode or any other mode of enforcing its decree or exercising its powers is merely a matter of remedy or practice, which is left to the legislative direction.—Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

[b] Superior court was not intended to be an inferior court in respect to the mode of enforcing its process, but in respect to the character of the subjects of its jurisdiction and a subordinate relation to other tribunals. Hickman v. O'Neal, 10 Cal. 292.

[c] Superior court of San Francisco had jurisdiction of action for settlement of partnership real estate situated out of the county, but could not affect title by its decree.—Watts v. White, 13 Cal. 321.

[d] The superior court of San Francisco was a court of superior jurisdiction.—McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

[e] Jurisdiction of superior court to try the question of a usurpation of an office is not derived from any act creating a particular office, but from its constitutional grant of general jurisdiction in civil cases.—Henshaw, Ex parte, 73 Cal. 486, 15 Pac. 110.

[f] Where right of recovery depends on whether defendant had defective or good title to land, case involves title to land, and superior court has original jurisdiction.—Copertini v. Oppermann, 76 Cal. 186, 18 Pac. 256.

[g] Superior court is court of general jurisdiction.—Bishop v. Superior Court, 87 Cal. 231, 25 Pac. 435.

[h] Since the superior court has jurisdiction, both in equity and in probate, having jurisdiction of the person and subject matter, it may administer relief in equity, and also in accordance with the law relating to matters in probate.—Pennie v. Roach, 94 Cal. 515, 29 Pac. 956, 30 Pac. 106.

[i] The superior court has original jurisdiction of all questions pertaining to the title or possession of real property, and having jurisdiction of the parties upon the appeal from the justice's court, may properly try an issue as to the possession and right of possession of land.—Hart v. Carnall-Hopkins Co., 103 Cal. 132, 37 Pac. 196.

[j] Constitution, article 6, section 5, provides that actions in the superior court to recover possession of real estate, to quiet title thereto, and to enforce liens thereon, shall be commenced in the county wherein the property or a part thereof is situate. Held, that an action against a resident to have an absolute conveyance of real property situate without the state declared to be a mortgage, and to redeem therefrom, and to obtain an accounting of profits thereunder, is within the jurisdiction of the superior court, so far as the accounting is concerned, though no accounting can be ordered until the court determines that the conveyance is a mortgage.—Peninsular Trading etc. Co. v. Pacific Steam Whaling Co., 123 Cal. 689, 56 Pac. 604.

[k] The superior court has jurisdiction of an action to recover the sum of one thousand dollars for breach of a bond for that sum, which was exacted as a condition of granting a license to sell liquors under a municipal ordinance, and which provided that the applicant should conduct the business in a quiet, orderly and reputable manner, and not permit any disturbance of the public order or decorum by any noisy, riotous or disorderly conduct.—City of Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 226, 58 Pac. 530.

[a] The jurisdiction of the superior courts is conferred by the constitution, and cannot be taken away by any act of the legislature. City of Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 226, 58 Pac. 530.

§ 118. Equity Jurisdiction.

[a] An action to set aside an election of officers, as not held in conformity with law, is within the jurisdiction of the superior court sitting as a court of equity, though such jurisdiction has not been expressly conferred on it by statute.—Wright v. Central California Colony Water Co., 67 Cal. 532, 8 Pac. 70.

[b] Superior courts are given equitable jurisdiction in broadest terms by constitution. Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 305, 16 Am. St. Rep. 116, 22 Pac. 910, 1046.

[c] Every superior court has jurisdiction over all cases in equity, under the constitution, other than real actions, which must be commenced in the county where the real estate is situated. In all other cases in equity, the provisions of the statute regarding the change of venue do not affect the jurisdiction of the court in which the suit in equity was commenced.—Herd v. Tuohy, 133 Cal. 55, 65 Pac. 139.

§ 119. —— Power of Legislature to Regulate.

[a] While the constitution confers on the superior courts jurisdiction in equity cases, the legislature has the power to regulate the practice in such courts of granting preventive relief, including injunctions.—Wright v. Superior Court of Santa Clara County, 139 Cal. 469, 73 Pac. 145.

§ 120. Jurisdiction and Power While Sitting in Probate Cases.

[b] Probate jurisdiction of superior court is separate and distinct from its jurisdiction in civil actions.—Henry v. Hudson, 63 Cal. 454.

[c] Superior court has jurisdiction to determine rights and duties of executors and beneficiaries under probated wills.—Williams v. Williams, 73 Cal. 104, 14 Pac. 394.

[d] Superior court, while sitting as court of probate, has only such powers as are given by statute with incidental power necessary to exercise power conferred.—Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 378, 26 Pac. 206.

[f] The superior court, while sitting in matters of probate, is the same as it is while sitting in cases in equity, in cases at law, or in special proceedings; and, when it has jurisdiction of the subject matter of a case falling within either of these classes, it has power to hear and determine, in the mode provided by law, all questions of law and fact the determination of which is ancillary to a proper judgment in such case.—Estate of Burton, 93 Cal. 459, 29 Pac. 36.

[g] Superior court, acting in probate proceedings, obtains its authority to award costs from the statute, and not by virtue of its general probate jurisdiction. Its power is confined to the terms of section 1720 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—Henry v. Superior Court, 93 Cal. 569, 29 Pac. 230.

[h] The probate court has no power to determine suits between heirs or devisees and strangers as to the title to property.—Buckley v. Superior Court, 102 Cal. 6, 41 Am. St. Rep. 135, 36 Pac. 360.

[i] Proceedings for the administration of the estates of deceased persons and for their distribution are purely statutory; and the court, while sitting as a court of probate, has no other powers than those given it by the statute, and such incidental powers as pertain to it for the purpose of enabling it to exercise the jurisdiction conferred upon it.—Buckley v. Superior Court, 102 Cal. 6, 41 Am. St. Rep. 135, 36 Pac. 360.

[j] In this state the superior courts are given jurisdiction by the constitution of all matters of probate, in like manner as they are given jurisdiction of cases at law and in equity, and the grant of jurisdiction in regard to matters of probate is part of the general jurisdiction of the superior court. Burris v. Kennedy, 108 Cal. 331, 41 Pac. 458.

[k] There is no probate court of the city and county of San Francisco, but the superior court has jurisdiction of probate matters, and there is no law authorizing the designation of any one department of said court for probate jurisdiction; but each of the twelve judges has jurisdiction in probate matters.—Estate of Pearsons, 113 Cal. 577, 45 Pac. 849.

[l] Jurisdiction of superior court over probate matters is conferred upon it by constitution and is not limited to that given it by statute.—Heydenfeldt v. Superior Court, 117 Cal. 350, 49 Pac. 210.

[m] Superior court sitting in probate has no power to determine disputes between heirs, devisees or legatees and persons claiming to be grantees of their shares under conveyances made by them prior to ancestor's death.—Ryder's Estate, 119 Cal. 369, 370, 74 Pac. 993.

[n] Superior court sitting in probate is court of special limited jurisdiction circumscribed by provisions of statute conferring it.—Strong's Estate, 119 Cal. 666, 667, 51 Pac. 1078.

[o] Superior court sitting in probate exercises special and limited jurisdiction entirely statutory and restricted, in absence of express statutory authority, to controversies strictly within probate proceedings.—Ryder's Estate, 119 Cal. 368, 74 Pac. 993.

[p] The superior court, sitting in probate, has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the question of the allowance of preferred claims against the estate of a deceased person in any other proceeding than a proceeding in rem in which the statutory notice to all the world has been given, such as is required upon the settlement of accounts against the estate.—Estate of Smith, 122 Cal. 462, 55 Pac. 249.

[q] Cases for the construction of wills, and of trusts thereunder arising under the former constitution, which vested all equity jurisdiction in the district courts, and established separate probate courts, are inapplicable to the present judicial system established under the new constitution, which vests both equity and probate jurisdiction in the superior court. One judge of the superior court sitting in equity cannot control another sitting in probate.—Toland v. Earl, 129 Cal. 148, 79 Am. St. Rep. 100, 61 Pac. 914.

[r] Probate courts cannot determine conflicting interests of heirs or lienors in an estate except in an appropriate proceeding and under proper pleadings.—Heeney's Estate, In re (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 842.

§ 121. Cases Transferred from Justice Court.

[a] The jurisdiction of the superior court in causes transferred to it under section 838 of the Code of Civil Procedure is original, and not appellate, and if it would have had no jurisdiction if the action had been commenced therein it can have none by the filing of pleadings certified by a justice of the peace. It cannot exercise original jurisdiction in those matters in which its jurisdiction is only appellate.—Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 28 Pac. 54.

[b] The superior court cannot acquire jurisdiction of a cause improperly transferred to it from a justice's court by thereafter determining that it has jurisdiction and proceeding in the trial of the cause and rendering judgment therein.—Arroyo Ditch etc. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 28 Pac. 54.

§ 122. Case Irregularly Brought from Police Court.

[a] In an action to recover city taxes it appeared the police court wrongfully retained jurisdiction of the case after demand was made to transfer to the superior court, and appeal was taken from a judgment on the merits to the latter court. Parties appeared in the superior court, and trial was had on the issues. Held, that, as the superior court had original jurisdiction of the subject matter, such jurisdiction was not affected by the irregular manner by which it got jurisdiction of the parties.—City of Santa Barbara v. Eldred, 95 Cal. 378, 30 Pac. 562.

§ 123. Mandamus.

§ 124. Quo Warranto.

[a] The superior court of the city of San Francisco has no jurisdiction of proceedings by quo warranto; and a judgment of that court, by which it was determined that A was not entitled to hold his seat as a member of the board of aldermen of that city, was accordingly reversed on appeal.—People ex rel. Hughes v. Gillespie, 1 Cal. 342.

[b] Superior court has jurisdiction of quo warranto proceeding to oust supervisor from office.—People v. Bingham, 82 Cal. 242, 22 Pac. 1039.

§ 125. Jurisdiction Dependent upon Amount in Controversy.

[a] The superior court has no jurisdiction, where amount recoverable from each stockholder is less than three hundred dollars.—Myers v. Sierra Valley Stock etc. Assn., 122 Cal. 669, 55 Pac. 689.

[b] Under Constitution, article 6, section 5, the superior court has no jurisdiction of a complaint to recover one hundred and ninety-two dollars and fifty cents.—Napa State Hospital v. Flaherty, 134 Cal. 315, 66 Pac. 322.

[c] Plaintiff, the purchaser of certain prunes, sued to recover for their conversion by the seller. The contract of sale was for "an undivided interest equal to two per cent" of the seller's ownership. The value of the entire crop, which plaintiff claimed to recover, was alleged at seven hundred dollars. Held that, as the actual damage to plaintiff by the conversion was an amount equal to but two per cent of the entire crop (that is, fourteen dollars), the action was not within the jurisdiction of the superior court.—California Cured Fruit Assn. v. Ainsworth, 134 Cal. 461, 66 Pac. 586.

§ 126. —— Amount Claimed as Test.

[a] Where a court renders a judgment within its jurisdiction, the fact that the complaint prayed a recovery in excess of the jurisdiction will not affect the validity of the judgment.—Wratten v. Wilson, 22 Cal. 465.

[b] Ad damnum clause in complaint is test of jurisdiction.—Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545.

[c] The amount claimed by the plaintiff in a suit is the test of the jurisdiction of the court, and not the amount found due by the court or jury.—Solomon v. Reese, 34 Cal. 28;

Pennybecker v. McDougal, 48 Cal. 160; Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287, 30 Pac. 820.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 76, giving the superior courts original jurisdiction in cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest, etc., amounts to three hundred dollars, the ad damnum clause in the complaint is the test of jurisdiction; and where the demand, according to that clause, exceeds three hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, the superior court has jurisdiction of the action, though each of the separate claims united in the action is less than three hundred dollars.—Baily v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387, 4 Pac. 349; Galloway v. Jones (Cal.) 13 Pac. 712.

[f] Amount claimed in ad damnum clause of complaint is test of jurisdiction.—Greenbaum v. Martinez, 86 Cal. 461, 25 Pac. 12.

[g] Amount prayed for in complaint does not conclude question of jurisdiction, regardless of allegations on which it is founded.—Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 199, 48 Pac. 56.

[h] Amount sued for determines jurisdiction of court.—Lehnhardt v. Jennings, 119 Cal. 198, 199, 48 Pac. 56.

[i] The amount for which judgment is demanded in the complaint determines the jurisdiction of the court, and, if a plaintiff in good faith mistakenly alleges therein an amount due him sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, the subsequent discovery of the error will not deprive the court of jurisdiction.—Rodley v. Curry, 120 Cal. 541, 52 Pac. 999.

[j] The amount claimed in the complaint is the test of the jurisdiction of the superior court.—City of Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 226, 58 Pac. 530.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2232-2263, §§ 414-426.

§ 127. —— Amount Claimed in Counterclaim.

[a] Constitution, article 6, section 5, confers jurisdiction on the superior court in cases in which the demand is three hundred dollars. Code of Civil Procedure, section 438, subdivision 2, provides that, in an action on contract, any other demand may be set up as a counterclaim. Held, that where the contract pleaded in counterclaim is for a less sum than three hundred dollars, and shows that plaintiff's action is unfounded, because the contract sued on has been superseded by another, defendant is not entitled to judgment on his counterclaim.—Griswold v. Pieratt, 110 Cal. 259, 42 Pac. 820.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 437, providing that defendant's answer may contain a statement of any new matter constituting a counterclaim, and section 438, providing that such counterclaim may be set up in actions arising on contract, where plaintiff sues in the superior court on a demand arising on contract, defendant may set up as a counterclaim a demand also arising on contract with plaintiff, though his demand is insufficient in amount to give the court jurisdiction in an independent action.—Freeman v. Seitz, 126 Cal. 291, 58 Pac. 690.

§ 128. —— Joinder of Separate Claims to Make Amount.

[b] Under the law making the liability of stockholders to creditors several only, Civil Code, section 322, authorizing two or more separate actions to be united in one, but requiring separate judgments to be entered against each defendant, and Constitution, 1849, article 6, section 6, limiting the jurisdiction of the district court to demands not less than three hundred dollars, the district (now superior) court cannot, in an action against several stockholders alleging a liability less than three hundred dollars as to some of defendants, take jurisdiction as to them.—Derby v. Stevens, 64 Cal. 287, 30 Pac. 820.

[c] Where seven defendants are sued, and the complaint demands a several judgment against five of them for less than three hundred dollars, the superior court has no jurisdiction as to these five.—Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650, 23 Pac. 62.

[d] The fact that each indemnitor is bound for less than three hundred dollars does not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction to give judgment against each on supplemental motion, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1055, in an action against the sheriff of which it has jurisdiction.—Moore v. McSleeper, 102 Cal. 217, 36 Pac. 593.

[e] Parties having separate claims and having no joint interest in their aggregate cannot give superior court jurisdiction by joining their claims in one action.—Winrod v. Wolters, 141 Cal. 403, 74 Pac. 1037.

[f] A superior court has no jurisdiction of an action to recover from each of several stockholders of a corporation his proportion of a debt contracted by the corporation, where the amount sued for is less than three hundred dollars, though the aggregate amount sought to be recovered from the several stockholders be more than three hundred dollars.—Evans v. Bailey, 6 Pac. 424.

§ 129. —— Costs and Interest.

[a] Costs constitute no part of amount in controversy, and are not included for purpose of making a sum sufficient to give the supreme court jurisdiction.—Maxfield v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 545; Zabriskie v. Torrey, 20 Cal. 173; Votan v. Reese, 20 Cal. 89.

[b] Settled rule is that amount sued for exclusive of interest is test of jurisdiction in all cases where actions are brought to recover money. (Morrison, C. J., dissenting.)—Dashiell v. Slingerland, 60 Cal. 653.

[c] Constitution, article 6, section 5, giving the superior courts jurisdiction of cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to three hundred dollars, does not give them jurisdiction of an action on a note originally for less than three hundred dollars, but which, by compounding the interest, has created a new principal, amounting to more than three hundred dollars.—Christian v. Superior Court of San Diego County, 122 Cal. 117, 54 Pac. 518; Howe v. Halsey, 54 Pac. 748.

[d] The superior court has no jurisdiction of an action upon a note for two hundred dollars, though the amount of principal and interest exceeded three hundred dollars; and such action was properly dismissed.—Gallagher v. McGraw, 132 Cal. 601, 64 Pac. 1080.

§ 130. —— Cases in Which Jurisdiction Attaches Regardless of Amount.

[a] In an action by a landlord against his tenant for one hundred and eighty-three dollars, rent due under a lease, and, as a second cause of action, for the restitution of the same premises, which were alleged to have been unlawfully detained after the expiration of a subsequent lease thereof, with damages for such unlawful detention, judgment was rendered for the rent demanded (one hundred and eighty-three dollars), but restitution of the premises was denied. Held, that the superior court had jurisdiction to render the judgment in question, though it was for less than the jurisdictional amount (three hundred dollars) of such court, since the relief demanded in prayer of judgment was within the jurisdiction of the court.—Bailey v. Sloan, 65 Cal. 387, 4 Pac. 349; Lord v. Thomas, 27 Pac. 410.

[b] Action against tax collector for fraudulent assessment does not involve "legality of tax," and superior court has no jurisdiction where amount involved is less than three hundred dollars.—Perkins v. Ralls, 71 Cal. 88, 11 Pac. 860.

[c] The superior court has jurisdiction of an action under Civil Code, section 2941, providing that where a mortgage is paid, and the mortgagee refuses to satisfy the same of record, he shall forfeit to the mortgagor one hundred dollars, where the answer puts in issue plaintiff's title to the mortgaged land.—Randolph v. Kraemer, 106 Cal. 199, 39 Pac. 533.

§ 131. Appellate Jurisdiction.

[a] The constitutional provision that the superior courts "shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices' and other inferior courts, in their respective counties, as may be prescribed by law," limits the exercise of their jurisdiction to the extent and mode which the legislature may prescribe. Sheer v. Superior Court of Lassen County, 94 Cal. 354, 29 Pac. 716.

§ 132. History.

[a] There was no probate court in California prior to organization of state.—Castro v. Castro, 6 Cal. 158.

§ 133. Statutes Construed.

[a] Act of 1863 concerning probate courts did not apply to courts previously existing. Pryor v. Downey, 50 Cal. 389, 19 Am. Rep. 656.

§ 134. Nature and Extent of Jurisdiction.

[a] Probate court is court of special and limited jurisdiction. Most of its general powers belong peculiarly and originally to the court of chancery, which still retains all of its jurisdiction.—Clarke v. Perry, 5 Cal. 58.

[b] Probate court has jurisdiction to try and determine issues of fact arising in proceedings before it.—Keller v. De Franklin, 5 Cal. 432.

[c] Probate court is inferior court, and therefore cannot take jurisdiction or administer remedies other than those given in, and in the manner prescribed by, the statute.—Grimes' Estate v. Norris, 6 Cal. 621.

[d] The probate courts, though limited to certain specified subjects, are upon the footing of courts of superior common-law jurisdiction. Irwin v. Scriber, 18 Cal. 499.

[e] Courts of probate in this state, in the construction of their proceedings had before the passage of the act of 1858, are to be regarded as courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction.—Townsend v. Gordon, 19 Cal. 188.

[f] Under section 1597 of the Code of Civil Procedure, probate court has no jurisdiction in cases of part performance, but only where contract is written.—Cory v. Hyde, 49 Cal. 469.

[g] Functions of alcaldes and courts of first instances, over estates of deceased persons, were not transferred to probate court.—McNeil v. First Congregational Soc., 66 Cal. 106, 4 Pac. 1096.

[h] A contest for proceeds of insurance policy payable by its terms to widow and minor children of deceased cannot be inaugurated in probate court.—Heydenfeldt v. Jacobs, 107 Cal. 373, 40 Pac. 492.

[i] The probate court has only a limited and statutory jurisdiction, and can only set-

§ 135. Over Estates of Decedents.

[a] Constitution does not confer on probate court jurisdiction of all matters relating to estates of deceased persons, but of such matters only as the statute directs it to exercise jurisdiction over.—Bush v. Lindsey, 44 Cal. 121.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2301-2309, §§ 469, 470, 472.

§ 136. Over Guardians.

[a] Probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to settle accounts of living guardian.—Allen v. Tiffany, 53 Cal. 16.

[b] The probate court has no jurisdiction to adjudge that a ward is indebted to his guardian for money advanced by the guardian to the ward at his request after he had become of age, and after his estate had been expended for his benefit.—Kincaid's Estate, In re, 120 Cal. 203, 52 Pac. 492.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2302-2304, § 470.

§ 137. Equitable Powers.

[a] Probate courts have no equitable jurisdiction.—Meyers v. Farquharson, 46 Cal. 190.

[b] The probate court proceeds in accordance with the principles of equity, and, having jurisdiction of a cause for one purpose, may afford complete and adequate relief in the premises.—In re Clary, 112 Cal. 292, 44 Pac. 569.

[c] The court of probate is of special and limited jurisdiction, and has not the requisite machinery to try a question of fraud committed therein against the rights of interested parties; and it is the peculiar province of a court of equity to grant relief from such fraud at the instance of the aggrieved parties, who have no adequate remedy in the court of probate.—Curtis v. Schell, 129 Cal. 208, 79 Am. St. Rep. 107, 61 Pac. 951.

§ 138. Actions Involving Title to Land.

[a] Probate court cannot determine question of title to homestead.—Davis v. Caldwell, 12 Cal. 125.

[b] The probate court has no jurisdiction of a petition of the heirs of a deceased person to have his homestead divided between the widow and themselves.—James, In re, 23 Cal. 415.

[c] A probate court has no authority, on the petition of an executor, to order him, on the receipt of money loaned, to reconvey real estate conveyed to his testator by deed absolute on its face, but intended only as security of such money.—Anderson v. Fisk, 41 Cal. 308.

[d] The probate court, in setting apart, for the use of the family of the deceased husband or wife, property which has been dedicated as a homestead, under the homestead act, does not change, transfer or adjudicate the question of title, but the purpose and effect of such an order is that the property is relieved from administration, and does not constitute assets of the estate of the deceased.—Rich v. Tubbs, 41 Cal. 34.

[e] Title to land cannot be tried by the probate court in a proceeding to set apart a homestead to a widow, though the court may examine the titles to the several parcels for purposes of selection.—Burton, In re, 64 Cal. 428, 1 Pac. 702.

[f] After the homestead has been set apart to the widow, the court has no jurisdiction over it for the purpose of distribution.—Gilmore, In re, 81 Cal. 240, 22 Pac. 655.

[g] Probate court has no jurisdiction to inquire into consideration, validity or operation of deed of separation between testator and his widow.—Corker v. Corker, 87 Cal. 650, 651, 25 Pac. 922.

[h] On a petition to set apart as a homestead property inventoried as belonging to the decedent's estate, the probate court has no jurisdiction to try adverse claims to such property.—Kimberly, In re, 97 Cal. 281, 32 Pac. 234.

[i] On a final settlement by an executor, a legatee under the will objected, on the ground that the executor had personal property of the estate in his possession not accounted for, The executor set up that such property did not belong to the estate, and that he held it as guardian of E., a minor, whose property it was. Held that, the legal title to such property being directly in issue, the probate court had no jurisdiction to hear and determine to whom it belonged, and a finding by such court that the property was a part of the estate, and a decree charging the same to the executor in his account, is beyond its power.—Haas, In re, 97 Cal. 232, 31 Pac. 893.

[j] Probate court will not be prohibited from proceeding under sections 1461 to 1468, Code of Civil Procedure, either upon ground that those provisions are unconstitutional, or upon ground that proceedings in probate court involve passing upon title to property, and are not within jurisdiction of court.—Levy v. Superior Court, 105 Cal. 600, 38 Pac. 965.

[k] The probate court has no jurisdiction to determine the rights of those claiming adversely to the estate; but if serious questions arise from such claims, the court may delay the final decree until they can be determined in another forum.—Estate of Burdick, 112 Cal. 387, 44 Pac. 734.

dents.—Crew v. Pratt, 119 Cal. 149, 51 Pac. 38.

[m] Probate court has no jurisdiction to determine rights of those claiming adversely to estate.—Plass v. Plass, 121 Cal. 135, 53 Pac. 448.

[n] Probate courts have jurisdiction to determine whether or not an estate has any interest in or title to property, in order to determine whether there is anything to distribute. They will not cumber their records with orders of distribution where there is nothing to distribute; but, where there is some title, the court has not jurisdiction to determine its quality.—Dunn, In re. Myr. Prob. 122.

§ 139. Setting Aside Void Administration.

[a] The court which granted administration upon the estate of a man supposed to have been dead, but who afterward appeared, is the proper court to which application should be made for an order vacating and annulling the proceedings.—Stevenson v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 62 Cal. 60.

[b] In a proceeding to set aside the administration of an alleged decedent afterward found to be alive, the probate court, after declaring the grant of administration and all subsequent proceedings void, had no authority to order the administrator to pay over money he had received, and, in default, that execution issue.—Costa v. Superior Court of Santa Clara County, 137 Cal. 79, 69 Pac. 840.

§ 140. In General.

[a] Whenever new right is created by statute, and the enforcement of such right is committed to a court even of original jurisdiction, such court quoad hoc is an inferior court, and must pursue the statute strictly.—Cohen v. Barrett, 5 Cal. 195.

[b] Where an act of Congress confers jurisdiction on a court to determine the title to certain lands, the court cannot adjudicate on the title to other lands not mentioned in the act.—Umbarger v. Chaboya, 49 Cal. 525.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 658, 771-789; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2205-2299, §§ 404-468.

§ 141. Alcaldes.

[a] Under the laws of Mexico, an alcalde alone has no judicial power; but with certain exceptions, of which the right of possession to real estate is not one, every suit must be brought before the judge of the first instance. Ladd v. Stevenson, 1 Cal. 18.

§ 142. County Courts.

[a] Although the county court is authorized to try cases of forcible entry and detainer upon appeal de novo, still such a trial is an exercise of appellate, and not of original, jurisdiction.—Townsend v. Brooks, 5 Cal. 52.

[b] When an action had been commenced in a district court in good faith for a sum greater than two hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, a judgment may be rendered for an amount less than the sum limiting the jurisdiction of the court in the commencement of the action, as prescribed in the constitution. Jackson v. Whartenby, 5 Cal. 94.

[c] County court has no jurisdiction to enforce a mechanic's lien where the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred dollars.—Brock v. Herrick, 5 Cal. 279.

[d] County judge had no power to grant ferry franchise.—Chard v. Harrison, 7 Cal. 113.

[e] A proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien is a special statutory action, in the nature of a proceeding in rem; and it is no objection to the jurisdiction of the county court in such a suit that the amount of the lien exceeds the sum limited as fixing the general jurisdiction of that court.—Van Winkle v. Stow, 23 Cal. 457.

[f] The proceeding in a county court to determine conflicting claims to town lots under the act of 1860 (Laws 1860, p. 6), is original and not appellate, and the action is governed by the same rules applicable to actions commenced in a court of record.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 31 Cal. 11.

[g] Answer pleading that grain replevied was harvested by defendant on his own preemption claim does not necessarily involve right to real property.—Beguhl v. Swan, 39 Cal. 411.

[h] A judgment rendered by the county court upon appeal for the sum of three hundred dollars is void.—Will v. Sinkwitz, 39 Cal. 570.

[i] County courts were courts of superior jurisdiction.—Yenawine v. Richter, 43 Cal. 312.

[j] A county court had a right to grant a new trial.—(1858) Dickinson v. Van Horn, 9 Cal. 207; (1872) Yenawine v. Richter, 43 Cal. 312.

[k] County courts had general appellate jurisdiction over inferior tribunals.—Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7.

[l] County courts have not the general power of supervision over inferior tribunals which pertains to the court of king's bench in England.—Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7.

§ 143. —— What are "Special Cases."

[a] Term "special cases" in the constitution does not include any class of cases for which the courts of general jurisdiction have always supplied a remedy.—Parsons v. Tuolumne Water Co., 5 Cal. 43, 63 Am. Dec. 76.

[b] An act conferring upon the county courts jurisdiction to prevent or abate nuisances is unconstitutional and void.—Parsons v. Tuolumne Water Co., 5 Cal. 43, 63 Am. Dec. 76.

[c] Cases of insolvency under the act of 1852 are special cases within the meaning of the constitution.—Harper v. Freelon, 6 Cal. 76.

[e] Aside from previous decisions of this court the true construction of our constitution (art. 4, sec. 9) is that the legislature has power to confer on county courts jurisdiction in such specially enumerated and defined cases as, in its discretion, should be confided to those tribunals. Cases from New York quoted and approved. In this state a more restricted view has been taken.—People ex rel. Jacks v. Day, 15 Cal. 91.

[f] Proceeding before corporate authorities of the town, under the act of 1860, is a "special case" within article 6, section 9, of the constitution. It is a purely statutory proceeding, commenced and prosecuted for the ascertainment of a particular fact to guide the corporate authorities in the execution of the trust devolved upon them under the act, and not an ordinary action at law or equity, nor conducted according to the forms of such action.—Ricks v. Reed, 19 Cal. 551.

[g] The proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien is "a special case," within the meaning of the state constitution, over which the legislature had authority to give jurisdiction to the county courts.—McNiel v. Borland, 23 Cal. 144.

[h] Mandamus is not a special case.—People v. Kern County Supervisors, 45 Cal. 679.

[i] The constitution gives jurisdiction of "special cases" to the county courts, unless the statute confers jurisdiction upon some other court.—Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

[j] Act conferring jurisdiction on county judge in condemnation proceedings is unconstitutional.—Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

§ 144. District Courts.

[a] District court had no jurisdiction beyond statute.—Selby v. Bark Alice Tarlton, 1 Cal. 103.

[b] On petition of attorney general for a writ of quo warranto against a tax collector, held, that the court had no jurisdiction, and the prayer of the petition was denied.—Ex parte Attorney General, 1 Cal. 85.

[c] To give the district court jurisdiction, the amount sued for must be not less than two hundred dollars, exclusive of interest.—Arnold v. Van Brunt, 4 Cal. 89.

[d] District court is court of general original jurisdiction; its process is coextensive with the state.—Reyes v. Sanford, 5 Cal. 117.

[e] In suit for divorce and partition of property acquired during coverture the jurisdiction of the district court is not limited as to the amount.—Deuprez v. Deuprez, 5 Cal. 387.

[f] As the jurisdiction of the fourth district court extends over the entire city of San Francisco, an allegation, in an insolvency petition to the judge of that court, that the insolvent is a resident of the city of San Francisco, is sufficient to show jurisdiction of the court.—Slade v. Creditors, 10 Cal. 483.

[g] The district court, by virtue of its common-law powers alone, derives its power to try issues of fact, and that court, as a court of law, has no jurisdiction over probate matters. Its jurisdiction over matters of account and the like is derived from its grant of equitable power in the constitution, and in that respect it has only concurrent jurisdiction with the probate court.—Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495.

[h] That an offset pleaded, added to the amount sued for, exceeds two hundred dollars, does not give jurisdiction.—Myres v. Liening, 13 Cal. 650.

[i] The district court has jurisdiction of any case, no matter what be the amount sued for, if the title to real property is involved, unless the entire value of such property is shown to be so small as not to confer the jurisdiction.—Cullen v. Langridge, 17 Cal. 67.

[j] Fourth district court, although the district only comprises a portion of the county of San Francisco, is a court for the whole county, having jurisdiction over persons and subject matter therein. The territorial limits assigned to this court are given for the purposes of convenience in elections, etc., and not for the purpose of limiting its powers.—People v. Robinson, 17 Cal. 363.

[k] District court has jurisdiction in an action for foreclosure of mortgages upon estates of deceased persons.—Pechaud v. Rinquet, 21 Cal. 76.

[l] If total amount of tax exceeds jurisdictional sum, district court has jurisdiction.—People v. Leet, 23 Cal. 164.

[m] Under Constitution, article 6, section 6, as amended, the district court has authority to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus.—Perry v. Ames, 26 Cal. 372.

[n] An action to recover taxes is an action at law under the act of 1861 when the complaint prays for a money judgment; but it is a suit in equity under the act of 1862 when the complaint prays for a foreclosure of the lien and sale of the premises.—People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

[o] An action under the revenue law of 1861, which provides for a judgment in the nature of a money judgment, is not a suit in equity, and the district court will have no jurisdiction unless the amount in dispute exceeds three hundred dollars.—People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

[p] If action is brought under provisions of act of May 12, 1862, it is a case in equity, and the district court has jurisdiction, although the amount claimed is less than three hundred dollars.—People v. Mier, 24 Cal. 61.

[q] District courts, by article 6, section 6 of the constitution, have "original jurisdiction in all cases in equity," and an act of the legislature depriving them of that jurisdiction or transferring it to any other court is unconstitutional and void.—Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490.

[r] When, in actions to recover taxes, the amount sued for is less than three hundred dollars, and there is no prayer for the foreclosure of the tax lien, order of sale, etc., the district courts have no jurisdiction.—Bell v. Crippen, 28 Cal. 327.

[s] District courts have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandate regardless of the amount involved in the action. (Per Sawyer, J., Curry, C. J., concurring.)—Cariaga v. Dryden, 30 Cal. 244.

[t] District courts have jurisdiction of actions to recover one-half value of partition fence, although the amount sought to be recovered is less than three hundred dollars. Such actions involve the title of the parties to their respective lands.—Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338.

[u] Section 6 of article 6 of the constitution gives the district court jurisdiction of all actions in which the title or possession of real property is an issuable fact in the case, upon which the plaintiff relies for a recovery, or the defendant for a defense. It is not necessary that the title or possession be put in issue, but one or the other must be an issuable fact, necessary to be averred in the pleadings.—Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338.

[v] District courts have jurisdiction of all actions to recover damages for trespass upon lands, regardless of the amount of damages claimed.—Holman v. Taylor, 31 Cal. 338.

[w] Under Constitution, article 6, section 6, as amended by act of 1862, the district courts have no jurisdiction in probate matters, as the amendment omits all reference to issues joined in probate courts, while the section prior to the amendment conferred unlimited jurisdiction in all issues of fact found in probate matters.—Bowen, In re, 34 Cal. 682.

[x] District courts in this state, by virtue of their organization and common-law powers, have full authority, except when limited by the constitution or Practice Act, to pronounce such judgment as the exigency of each case shall require.—Stewart v. Levy, 36 Cal. 159.

[y] It is the intention of the constitution to give exclusive jurisdiction to the district courts in actions of trespass in those cases only in which the right to the possession of land is involved.—Pollock v. Cummings, 38 Cal. 683.

[z] District courts have jurisdiction of actions for collection of delinquent taxes, when the tax amounts to more than three hundred dollars, and also, regardless of amount, when it is sought to enforce the lien of the tax.—People v. Olvera, 43 Cal. 492.

[aa] When jurisdiction is limited to a county, "district" is synonymous with county.—McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 356.

[bb] District courts have jurisdiction to make all necessary orders respecting process issued, or to be issued, on their judgments. Clark v. Sawyer, 48 Cal. 133.

[cc] District courts have jurisdiction of actions to recover value for goods sold for use of vessel on high seas.—Crawford v. Roberts, 50 Cal. 235.

[dd] Code, section 564, subdivision 6, is but declaratory of the equity jurisdiction conferred upon the district courts by the former constitution, in giving them jurisdiction of "all cases in equity," and includes only the suits in which it has been the usage of courts of equity to appoint a receiver.—Bateman v. Superior Court, 54 Cal. 285.

§ 145. —— Appellate Jurisdiction.

[a] The supreme court alone has a revisory jurisdiction, by way of appeal, over judgments of courts of first instance; and, in respect to such judgments, district courts are not courts of review, and have no jurisdiction to examine into their regularity or validity, unless, perhaps, in case of a judgment fraudulently rendered.—Belt v. Davis, 1 Cal. 135.

[b] Constitution article 6, section 6, confers on the district courts original jurisdiction in cases where the amount in dispute exceeds two hundred dollars. The fourth section of the same article gives appellate powers to the supreme court, and the ninth section permits the legislature to give to county courts original or appellate jurisdiction in all cases, or in cases arising in justice's courts. Held, that an act providing for appeals to the district court is unconstitutional.—People v. Peralta, 3 Cal. 379; Caulfield v. Hudson, 3 Cal. 389.

[e] The sixth section of article 6 of the constitution, which provides that in all issues of fact joined in the probate courts the jurisdiction of the district courts shall be unlimited, does not give the district court appellate jurisdiction from the probate courts, and acts conferring it are void.—Reed v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 342.

[f] The supervisors of a county are a quasi political corporation, and as such the district courts of this state, by virtue of their general jurisdiction as superior courts, have a supervisory power and control over their proceedings, to the exercise of which appellate power is not necessary.—People ex rel. Church v. Hester, 6 Cal. 679.

[g] There is no relation of inferiority in the constitution or powers of the probate court as respects the district court. They are unlike, but, within their respective spheres, equal. They are both constitutional courts. No appeal lies from one to the other.—Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495.

[h] The general power of supervision over inferior tribunals which pertains to the court of king's bench in England pertains to the district courts in this state.—Miliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166.

§ 146. First Instance Courts.

[a] Court of first instance had jurisdiction of divorce cases within sphere of its ordinary jurisdiction, when marriage was not a sacrament but a civil contract.—Harman v. Harman, 1 Cal. 215.

[b] Under Mexican law, courts of first instance had jurisdiction of divorce, in case of marriage without sanction of the church.—Harman v. Harman, 1 Cal. 215.

[c] Court of first instance had jurisdiction of estates of deceased persons prior to probate act.—Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69.

§ 147. Municipal Court of San Francisco.

[a] The San Francisco municipal court is a court of inferior jurisdiction, within Constitution, article 6 section 1, as amended in 1862. Stratman, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 517.

[b] The municipal criminal court of San Francisco, established by act of the legislature March 31, 1870, is a constitutional court. Stratman, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 517, affirmed on this point.—People v. Nyland, 41 Cal. 129.

[c] The city criminal court of the city and county of San Francisco is a court of record, because it has a clerk and bailiff, and has power to fine and imprison, although it has no seal.—Thistleton, Ex parte, 52 Cal. 220.

§ 148. Police Court.

[a] In an action brought in a police court to recover a license tax for the transaction of business, if the answer denies the legality of the tax, the police court cannot try the cause, but must transfer it to the district court.—City of Santa Barbara v. Stearns, 51 Cal. 499.

[b] Police judge's court of city and county of San Francisco is court within meaning of section 1388 of the Penal Code, and may exercise jurisdiction granted by that section. Boys and Girls' Aid Society v. Reis, 71 Cal. 627, 12 Pac. 796.

[c] Judges of the police court are not named in the County Government Act of 1893, either as county or township officers, and no provision is found therein relative to their duties or term of office. That court has its existence by virtue of section 1 of article 6 of the constitution, authorizing the legislature to establish inferior courts in any incorporated city, town, or city and county, and the act of 1893, page 9, establishing it in the city and county of San Francisco. Their term of office is fixed at two years, and their successors are also to be elected at the general election to be held in November, 1896.—Kahn v. Sutro, 114 Cal. 316, 46 Pac. 87.

[d] Police court of Sacramento was abolished by adoption of freeholders' charter in 1894.—Sparks, Ex parte, 120 Cal, 397, 52 Pac. 715.

§ 149. Sessions Court.

[a] Court of sessions is vested with power of taxation and appropriation for county purposes.—Thompson v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 68.

[b] Under the act of 1851 the court of sessions was authorized to appropriate one-half of the current revenue to the current expenses to the exclusion of prior indebtedness. Thompson v. Rowe, 2 Cal. 68.

[c] Court of sessions must be composed of three persons: the county judge and two associate justices.—People v. Ah Chung, 5 Cal. 103.

[d] Court of sessions has no appellate jurisdiction in either civil or criminal cases. Their jurisdiction is original, not appellate. In all cases where an appeal lies from a justice's court it must be taken to the county court.—People v. Fowler, 9 Cal. 85.

§ 151. Validity of Judiciary Act.

[a] The twenty-fifth section of the act of Congress of 1789, commonly called the Judiciary Act, is constitutional.—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2473-2477, § 792.

§ 152. Power of State Legislature.

[a] There is no provision in the constitution which delegates to the legislature of California the power to enlarge the jurisdiction of the federal courts.—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 176.

[b] It is not within the constitutional power of a state legislature to confer jurisdiction upon federal courts or prescribe the means or mode of its exercise.—Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 845; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2480-2486, §§ 795, 796.

§ 153. Actions Between Aliens.

[a] United States courts have no jurisdiction, based upon the citizenship of the parties, over actions between aliens and aliens, but only over actions between citizens and aliens. Orosco v. Gagliardo, 22 Cal. 83.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 865, 866; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2576-2578, §§ 847-849.

§ 154. Cases Involving Construction of Treaty.

[a] United States supreme court has jurisdiction of cases involving construction of treaty with Mexico.—Gardner v. Miller, 47 Cal. 570.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 857; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2364, 2365, § 840.

§ 155. Custody of Accused Pending Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

§ 156. What Constitutes Federal Question.

[a] Whether proceeding by information instead of indictment is violation of federal constitution is federal question.—Edgar, Ex parte, 119 Cal. 126, 127, 51 Pac. 29.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 857; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2538-2545, §§ 820-824.

§ 157. Adoption of Practice of State Courts.

[a] Statute of the several states, regulating remedies by means of judicial proceedings, are to be understood as intended to apply only to proceedings in the courts of the particular state where adopted, unless it clearly appears that they were intended to have a wider scope.—Majors v. Cowell, 51 Cal. 478.

[b] A statute authorizing the filing of a notice of lis pendens, and declaring its effect, should be construed as applying only to suitors in state courts.—Majors v. Cowell, 51 Cal. 478.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 5 C. C. A. 594, 27 C. C. A. 392, notes. See, also, 11 Cyc. 884-890; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 2660-2716, §§ 899-938.

§ 158. Review of Decisions of State Courts.

[a] Neither a writ of error nor appeal lies to take a case from a state court to the supreme court of the United States.—Johnson v. Gordon, 4 Cal. 368.

[b] Appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States, conferred by the second section of article 3 of the constitution, does not extend to the state courts, but is confined to the inferior courts mentioned in the preceding section. (Per Terry, C. J.) Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 176.

[c] There is no provision in the federal constitution from which a supervisory power over the state courts can be vested in the supreme court of the United States by any fair or legitimate implication or construction. (Per Terry, C. J.)—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

[d] A doctrine that the right of appeal from the decisions of the state courts to the United States supreme court is unlimited would permit writs of error in every case, whether civil or criminal, and would delay the whole machinery of justice in the courts of the state in every case, however destitute of any right to a writ of error.—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

[e] An action of ejectment, raising the question whether a grant made by the Mexican government passed title to the tract within the limits of the grant is not a case in which a writ of error lies under the judiciary act.—Ferris v. Coover, 11 Cal. 175.

[g] It is only final judgments or decrees of the highest court of a state which can be re-examined upon a writ of error by the supreme court of the United States.—Hart v. Burnett, 20 Cal. 169.

[h] Action of the presiding judge of a state court on the application for a citation upon a writ of error, directed to the justices of that court, issued by the clerk of the circuit court of the United States, is so far judicial in its nature that he may refuse to issue the citation when, in his judgment, it is clear that the writ of error will not lie for want of jurisdiction.—Hart v. Burnett, 20 Cal. 169.

[i] A judgment of this court on appeal, reversing the judgment of a lower court in an action of ejectment, and remanding the cause for a new trial—following a decision finally determining certain questions of law arising in the case which will control the court below in its further action—is not a final judgment within the meaning of the twenty-fifth section of the judiciary act of 1789.—Hart v. Burnett, 20 Cal. 169.

[j] The true test as to whether a writ of error lies to the supreme court of the United States from the final judgment of a state court is to be arrived at, not from mere averment in the pleadings, but from the matter decided as developed in the whole record.—Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604.

[k] The citation upon a writ of error, by which a cause is removed from the highest court of law or equity in a state to the supreme court of the United States, is not a writ of right, but the court may award it or not, according as it determines, from an examination of the record, that it is within that class of cases that may be thus removed.—Greely v. Townsend, 25 Cal. 604.

[l] A decision that the title of a claimant of land upon which he has settled, under the pre-emption laws of the United States, is superior to the title acquired by a subsequent location under a school land warrant and a patent issued under the laws of the state, does not necessarily involve the construction of any act of Congress, but only of the state law under which the location under the warrant was made; and in such a case a writ of error to the United States supreme court will not lie.—Athearn v. Poppe, 25 Cal. 631.

[m] If a judgment is reversed by the supreme court of the United States, with directions to the court below to enter a decree in accordance with the opinion, and its mandate is filed in the lower court, the judgment is set aside, even if the lower court does not make any order conforming its judgment to that of the supreme court, and if the lower court denies a motion made to thus modify the judgment.—Reynolds v. Hosmer, 45 Cal. 617.

[n] If an appeal is taken to the United States supreme court from a decree of the district court confirming a title, an order entered thereafter by the district court pending the appeal that the appeal was thereby dismissed, is absolutely void.—Younger v. Pagles, 60 Cal. 517, 519.

[o] The action of this court, upon the presentation of a writ of mandate from the supreme court of the United States, is limited by the directions found in the writ; and where the mandate contains no reference to the affirmation of the judgment theretofore rendered by this court in the cause therein specified, it is useless for the court to reaffirm its order of judgment, and an order reaffirming it will be stricken from the record. Blythe, Estate of, 118 Cal. 347, 50 Pac. 545.

§ 159. Appeal from Circuit to Supreme Court as Suspending Death Sentence.

[a] Appeal from order of United States circuit court denying petition of condemned person for writ of habeas corpus suspends proceedings under death sentence of state court.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 203, 204, 51 Pac. 185.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 160. Jurisdiction of District Courts.

[a] If a district court of the United States is authorized by special act of Congress to adjudicate on the validity of a Mexican grant to a tract of land described in a petition filed by the claimant in that court, the court has jurisdiction to reject the grant except a portion thereof, and confirm that portion not thus rejected.—Umbarger v. Chaboya, 49 Cal. 525.

[b] If an act of Congress gives jurisdiction to a district court of the United States to adjudicate on the title to certain lands, the court has no authority, under the act, to adjudicate on the title to lands other than those mentioned in the act.—Umbarger v. Chaboya, 49 Cal. 525.

[c] It seems that a federal court cannot rightfully transfer property from this state to another state for the mere purpose of giving to the courts of that state jurisdiction to distribute such property, thereby depriving the courts of this state of such jurisdiction; but a United States district court may, without violation of that principle, order the distribution of the surplus proceeds of a vessel taken under a libel in admiralty from the custody of a receiver of a state court in Oregon, to be made to such receiver as the only person having a vested interest therein. Swinnerton v. Oregon Pac. R. R. Co., 123 Cal. 417, 56 Pac. 40.

Conflicting jurisdiction in condemnation proceedings. See Eminent Domain, § 94.
Effect of judgments of courts of concurrent jurisdiction. See Judgment, § 441.

§ 161. Exclusive or Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] Under the constitution the district courts of the state have jurisdiction in cases of nuisance. The grant, by the legislature, of jurisdiction in such cases, to the county courts, cannot take away the jurisdiction given to the district courts by the constitution.—Fitzgerald v. Urton, 4 Cal. 235.

[b] Justices' courts have jurisdiction in cases of forcible entry. The ninth section of the sixth article of the constitution cannot be construed to confer exclusive original jurisdiction in all special cases upon the county courts.—O'Callaghan v. Booth, 6 Cal. 63.

[c] The grant of original jurisdiction in the constitution, to a particular court, of a class of cases, without any words excluding other courts from exercising jurisdiction in the same cases, does not necessarily deprive other courts of concurrent jurisdiction in such cases.—Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 30 Cal. 573.

[d] Grant of jurisdiction to a court does not imply that it is exclusive.—Rosenberg v. Frank, 58 Cal. 403.

[e] Where a will creates no trust estates, and the questions relating to the distribution thereof are purely legal, a court of equity has no jurisdiction of a suit by the administrator for a decree instructing the probate court as to such distribution, since the jurisdiction of such questions by the probate court is exclusive.—Toland v. Earl, 129 Cal. 148, 79 Am. St. Rep. 100, 61 Pac. 914.

§ 162. Constitutionality of Act Conferring Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] The provision of the constitution that district courts shall have jurisdiction of suits in which the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred dollars, and that the legislature may establish such municipal and other inferior courts as may be deemed necessary, does not require the jurisdiction of the district court to be exclusive, and hence the provision of the statute establishing the superior court of San Francisco, giving it jurisdiction of certain suits in which the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred dollars, is valid.—Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401.

[b] The legislature cannot confer upon one court the functions and powers which the constitution has conferred on another.—Zander v. Coe, 5 Cal. 230.

[c] The legislature, in conferring jurisdiction of cases of insolvency on both the district and the county courts, acted in the exercise of a legitimate power, and these courts have concurrent jurisdiction.—Harper v. Freelon, 6 Cal. 76.

[d] Constitutional provision conferring jurisdiction in all matters of probate or superior court held not to prevent legislature from determining which court has jurisdiction in any particular estate.—Dungan v. Superior Court of Fresno County (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 767.

§ 163. Effect of Statute Creating Cause of Action and Conferring Jurisdiction on Particular Court.

[a] Where a statute creating a new right, and prescribing a particular remedy for violation thereof, provides that the remedy must be pursued in a particular court, no other court has jurisdiction.—Reed v. Omnibus R. Co., 33 Cal. 212.

§ 164. Jurisdiction Concurrent with that of Probate Court.

[a] The jurisdiction vested in the probate court over the estates of deceased persons does not devest the district courts of their general jurisdiction over actions concerning partnerships, even when brought by the administrator of a deceased partner.—Griggs v. Clark, 23 Cal. 427.

[b] If the real estate which the testator owns at the time of his death is devised by will to his children, and an executor is appointed with full power to sell, and he sells the real estate and converts it into money, the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to compel to him to account.—Auguisola v. Arnaz, 51 Cal. 435.

[c] Probate courts have exclusive jurisdiction to compel an executor to account for the personal property of the estate which has come into his hands, whether it be such as the testator owed at the time of his death, or the proceeds of other property of the estate sold by the executor under a power in the will, or the proceeds of real estate owned by the testator and also sold by the executor under a power in the will, and they have also exclusive jurisdiction of the final distribution of the estates of decedents.—Auguisola v. Arnaz, 51 Cal. 435.

§ 165. Jurisdiction Concurrent with that of Justices of the Peace.

§ 166. Actions to Abate Nuisance.

[a] Actions to prevent or abate nuisances are cases in equity, and the grant in the constitution to the county courts of original jurisdiction in such actions does not deprive the district courts of concurrent jurisdiction under their equity powers.—Courtwright v. Bear River etc. Min. Co., 30 Cal. 573.

§ 167. Right to Elect Tribunal.

[a] The jurisdiction of the fourth district court in the county of San Francisco continues the same as it was previous to the creation of the twelfth judicial district. The jurisdiction of the fourth district court and of the twelfth district court, within the limits of the city of San Francisco, is equally extensive, and proceedings may be commenced in either court, at the option of the suitor.—Slade v. His Creditors, 10 Cal. 483.

§ 168. Priority of Jurisdiction.

[a] Court of concurrent jurisdiction first acquiring jurisdiction retains it until judgment.—Sharon v. Sharon, 84 Cal. 430, 23 Pac. 1100, 1102.

[b] The rule that the judgment of a court which first acquires jurisdiction of the subject matter of a cause of action and of the parties thereto will prevail over the judgment of another court whose jurisdiction was subsequently acquired, rests upon comity and the necessity of avoiding a conflict in the execution of judgments rendered by independent courts of distinct of concurrent jurisdiction.—Brown v. Campbell, 110 Cal. 644, 43 Pac. 12.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 169. Scope and Effect of Prior Proceedings.

[a] The fact that a child is under the jurisdiction of a court, under Civil Code, section 138, in divorce proceedings between its parents, does not prevent another court from having jurisdiction of the same child in proceedings for its adoption on the consent of the parent to whose custody it has been given. Younger v. Younger, 106 Cal. 377, 39 Pac. 779.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 170. Proceedings in Probate Courts and Other Courts.

[a] The district court has no jurisdiction over a claim for services rendered to a former administrator of an estate while the administration is still in the hands of the probate court.—Gurnee v. Maloney, 38 Cal. 85, 99 Am. Dec. 352.

§ 171. Proceedings in Equity and in Probate Court.

[a] A mortgage creditor of an estate of a deceased person may maintain an action for the foreclosure of his mortgage in the district court, without waiting for the settlement of the estate in the probate court.—Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490.

§ 172. Granting Injunction in Case Pending in Another Court.

[a] There is no prohibition in the constitution against granting authority to the county judge to issue injunctions in cases brought in the district court.—Thompson v. Williams, 6 Cal. 88.

[b] Grant of authority to county judge to award injunctions in cases in district court is a mere power to issue mesne process auxiliary to the proper jurisdiction of the district court, and is not trenching upon it.—Thompson v. Williams, 6 Cal. 88.

§ 173. Antagonistic Judgments Rendered in Court of Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] The fact that two courts of concurrent jurisdiction render judgments antagonistic to each other, involving the same subject matter does not prove that the judgment of either is void, or, necessarily, that either is erroneous, but, the question being which shall prevail, the question may be raised when an attempt is made to enforce the judgment in the court below.—Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26.

§ 174. Prisoners Under Arrest, Commitment or Sentence.

[a] A prisoner's application for discharge, under Penal Code, section 1382, on the ground that an indictment was not found against him at the next term of court at which he was held to answer, must be made, in the first place, to the court where the prosecution against him is pending.—Fennessy, Ex parte, 54 Cal. 101.

§ 175. —— Discharge of Insolvent Held Under Process of Another Court.

[a] The rule that, in actions in rem, exclusive jurisdiction is given to that tribunal which acquires it by a judicial seizure, has been changed by the Practice Act, and the service of process on a person standing in a particular relation to the thing is equivalent to its seizure, for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction; and therefore jurisdiction in rem may exist in several courts at the same time over the same subject.—Averill v. The Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

[b] Under the law making service of process in an action in rem on a person standing in a particular relation to the thing seized equivalent to its seizure, the court whose process has made first actual seizure of the thing has exclusive power over its disposition and the distribution of the fund arising therefrom.—Averill v. The Hartford, 2 Cal. 308.

§ 176. Injunction or Prohibition Against Proceedings.

[a] A court has no jurisdiction to enjoin review, or interfere with the judgment or proceedings of a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.—People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 149.

[b] One district court cannot mandamus another.—People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 149.

[c] Rule that one court cannot restrain proceedings of co-ordinate court is not altered in a case where the suit in equity brings in other parties not included in the action at law sought to be enjoined.—Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

[d] Where the provisions of the code require the action to be tried in a particular county, there would be an exception to the rule that one court cannot restrain the proceedings of a co-ordinate court, as the positive provision of the statute must be carried out.—Uhlfelder v. Levy, 9 Cal. 607.

[e] The prosecution of a suit in one court cannot be enjoined by another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.—Judson v. Porter, 51 Cal. 562.

[f] Prosecution of a suit in one court cannot be enjoined by another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the court in which it is pending being able to afford adequate relief.—Wilson v. Baker, 64 Cal. 475, 2 Pac. 253.

[g] Superior court cannot enjoin execution of mandate of supreme court. Order of supreme court controls conflicting order of superior court.—Quan Wo Chung v. Laumeister, 83 Cal. 387, 17 Am. St. Rep. 261, 3 Pac. 320.

[h] Court will not allow proceeding before it in violation of injunction of co-ordinate court.—Sharon v. Sharon, 84 Cal. 432, 23 Pac. 1100, 1102.

[i] The superior court of one county has no jurisdiction upon a bill of discovery filed therein, to enjoin the parties from proceeding with the trial of a prior action pending between them in the superior court of another county, and prohibition will lie to prevent the enforcement of such injunction. (Shaw, J., dissenting.)—Wright v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 469, 73 Pac. 145.

§ 177. Enjoining Enforcement of Judgment.

[a] Courts have no power to interfere with the judgments and decrees of other courts of concurrent jurisdiction.—Anthony v. Dunlap, 8 Cal. 26.

[b] Party cannot bring suit in one court to restrain a decree of another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.—Revalk v. Kraemer, 8 Cal. 66, 68 Am. Dec. 304.

[c] District courts have no power to restrain the execution of the judgments or orders of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Gorham v. Toomey, 9 Cal. 77.

[d] One district court cannot restrain the execution of a judgment or decree of another district court. Proceedings for such purpose should always be instituted in the court rendering the judgment or decree and having control of its execution.—Crowley v. Davis, 37 Cal. 268.

[e] One district court has no jurisdiction to enjoin a judgment rendered in another district court. The fact that the judge of the court where the judgment sought to be enjoined was rendered is disqualified from sitting in the case does not constitute an exception to the rule.—Flaherty v. Kelly, 51 Cal. 145.

§ 178. Vacating Judgment of Co-ordinate Court.

[a] Injunction granted by county judge may be controlled or dissolved by district judge. Borland v. Thornton, 12 Cal. 440.

[b] One department of superior court may vacate order erroneously made by another department.—Dorland v. Hansen, 81 Cal. 204, 15 Am. St. Rep. 44, 22 Pac. 552.

§ 179. Transfer of Causes.

[a] Causes may be removed from one district or county to another county or district in the manner provided by statute.—Reyes v. Stanford, 5 Cal. 117.

[b] The fact that the judge of the municipal court of San Francisco was not appointed when certain cases were transferred to it from the county court did not vitiate the transfer.—Stratman, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 517.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 992-996; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 3072-3101, §§ 1288-1323.

§ 180. —— From Supreme Court to District Court of Appeals.

[a] Motion to transfer a cause from the supreme court to the district court of appeal denied.—Gates v. Green (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 37.

[b] Where a notice is of an appeal to the wrong court, the proper practice is to file the record and make a motion in that court to transfer the cause.—Russell's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 155; Russell v. Maria Kip Orphanage (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 155.

[c] An application to transfer an appeal from the district court of appeals to the supreme court in bank held not filed within sixty days after the judgment of the district court of appeals became final, as provided by Constitution, article 6, section 4.—National Bank of California v. Los Angeles Iron etc. Co. (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 468.

§ 181. —— Causes Which may be Transferred.

[a] It is doubtful whether, in an action purely for a forcible entry and detainer, the title can be involved in the controversy, so that the statute authorizing the removal of the suit to the district court from a justice of the peace would be applicable; but the title may be involved, and the suit capable of removal, where it is an action against a tenant and others for unlawfully holding over after a lease had expired, and where it is an action not founded on forcible entry and detainer.—Henderson v. Allen, 23 Cal. 519.

§ 182. —— Sending Issues from Probate Court to Another Court for Trial.

[a] Rule 50, established by this court, requiring the probate judge, when an issue of fact is joined, to certify it for trial to the district court, is intended to be limited to cases proper for such action.—Keller v. De Franklin, 5 Cal. 432.

[b] The issues of fact joined in the probate court, and which are sent to the district court for trial, are of that class upon which the probate judge is unwilling to pass his judgment, or where, from great conflict of evidence, a reasonable doubt must exist in his mind as to which side has the right. Keller v. De Franklin, 5 Cal. 432.

[c] Since the adoption of the constitutional amendment of 1862, district courts have no jurisdiction to try issues framed in the probate courts, and sections 20, 294, of the probate act, authorizing the trial of such issues, have become inoperative.—Tomlinson In re, 35 Cal. 509.

§ 183. Effect of Transfer, and Proceedings had Thereafter.

[a] The probate court does not lose its jurisdiction over a subject of which it has taken cognizance, by adopting the proceeding of an issue whereby to determine the issue advisedly; the finding of a jury in the district court is merely in aid of its jurisdiction, by settling the facts, and thus furnishing the material upon which it is to act, and after such findings the functions of the district court cease.—Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495.

[b] Issues of facts are sent from the probate court to the district court, not as from an inferior to a superior tribunal, but for the sake of convenience, because the probate court has not the machinery of jury trial and its incidents. But it was never intended to transfer any portion of the jurisdiction of probate courts to the district courts. Nor was it designed by the act of 1855, directing these issues, to make the judgments of district courts binding upon the courts of probate.—Pond v. Pond, 10 Cal. 495.

[c] On petition of creditors of an insurance company, under Insolvent Act of 1880, the superior court of San Francisco, department 10, adjudged such corporation to be insolvent. Afterward the attorney general applied in department 4 of such court, under Political Code, section 601, to dissolve such corporation for insolvency, and the insolvency proceedings were transferred to department 4. Held, that such transfer did not confer on the court any greater jurisdiction in the action by the attorney general than it otherwise had.—State Inv. etc. Co. v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 101 Cal. 135, 35 Pac. 549.

§ 184. Courts of Different States or Counties—Prisoners Under Arrest or Commitment.

[a] Superior courts of this state have power to issue writs of habeas corpus commanding the production of the body of a prisoner held under authority of a warrant for his arrest issued by the governor of this state, upon the requisition of a governor of another state, that the causes of his detention may be inquired into; and the refusal of the custodian to obey the writ is a contempt of court.—Robb, In re, 64 Cal. 431, 1 Pac. 881.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1017-1019; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 3214-3227, §§ 1431-1449.

§ 185. State and Federal Courts—Exclusive or Concurrent Jurisdiction.

[a] The federal government, in taking private property in California for a fort site, under the act of the legislature of February 14, 1859, providing for relinquishing to the United States lands for sites of lighthouses and other purposes, etc., may properly proceed in the state courts.—Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 229.

[b] Where the United States acquires territory by convention with another sovereign power, it has authority to enact laws for the protection and determination of the property rights of the inhabitants of such territory in accordance with the terms of the treaty, and such laws, affecting title to real property within a state, must be construed by the United States courts.—Gardiner v. Miller, 47 Cal. 570.

[c] The action of a federal court in vacating and setting aside a decree rendered therein is not open for review in a state court.—Blythe Co. v. Bankers' Inv. Co., 147 Cal. 82, 81 Pac. 281.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

State courts cannot lawfully interfere with execution of final process of federal courts: 76 Am. Dec. 223, note; 48 L. R. A. 33, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 996-1003; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 3102-3125, §§ 1324-1342; cols. 3154-3157, §§ 1372-1375.

§ 186. —— Assumption and Exercise of Conflicting Jurisdiction.

[a] On appeal to the supreme court of California, the point that the subject matter of the action has been adjudicated and determined against the respondent by a United States circuit court cannot be presented for the first time in the supreme court by the presentation of the proceedings and judgment of said court, where it appears that, conceding said last-named judgment is paramount to that of the court below, both of said courts had jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties, and that, without the pendency of the action in the federal court being brought to its attention, the court below proceeded to final judgment.—Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26.

[b] Upon the hearing of a motion for alimony, it appeared that the decree of divorce was based upon a contract of marriage signed by the parties; that the divorce suit was still pending, an appeal having been taken from the decree entered therein; that before the present proceedings, defendant sued plaintiff in the circuit court of the United States, and a decree was entered in such suit declaring said marriage contract fraudulent and void, and an order was entered perpetually enjoining the plaintiff from alleging the validity of the contract, and from making any use of the same in evidence or otherwise to support any claim under it. Upon interposing this decree on the hearing of the motion the defendant asked the court to compel the plaintiff to obey said injunction. Held, that it was error to refuse this request and enter a judgment for alimony. Sharon v. Sharon, 84 Cal. 424, 23 Pac. 1100.

§ 187. —— Court First in Possession of Subject Matter.

[a] There is no common arbiter between the state and federal courts and comity between them becomes a necessity and is a law which cannot be disregarded; and when a federal court is first in possession of the subject of the litigation, it must be left to determine when its possession and control of the property has ended, without interference from a state court.—Swinnerton v. Oregon Pac. R. R. Co., 123 Cal. 417, 56 Pac. 40.

[b] An order directing a receiver of a state court to turn over the property to a United States marshal holding a writ of assistance, pending an appeal in which a supersedeas had been filed, held an abuse of discretion. Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 147 Cal. 663, 82 Pac. 319.

[c] Where a suit was brought in a federal court to cancel a lease against an assignee alone, it was immaterial that the property was in the hands of a receiver of the state court, and that leave had not been obtained to sue.—Isom v. Rex Crude Oil Co., 147 Cal. 663, 82 Pac. 319.

§ 188. —— Admiralty Cases.

[a] In an action for freight money, brought in the courts of this state, it is not a sufficient answer to set up that the vessel has been libeled, for the nondelivery of freight, in the district court of the United States. Both actions may proceed at the same time, without the fear or danger of any collision or clashing of jurisdiction.—Russell v. Alvarez, 5 Cal. 48.

[b] It is only on the distinct ground that the appellate power of the supreme court of the United States extends to the state courts in proper cases, that the concurrent original jurisdiction of the state and federal courts over civil admiralty cases can be sustained. (Per Burnett, J.)—Warner v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 9 Cal. 697.

[c] State and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction to enjoin removal of moorings from navigable waters.—Cresent City etc. Co. v. Simpson, 77 Cal. 289, 19 Pac. 426.

§ 189. —— Bankruptcy Proceedings.

[a] The state court is not deprived of jurisdiction of an action brought on a bond given by a defendant in an attachment proceeding conditioned to pay any judgment which might be entered against him, by an assignment by the defendant pursuant to the bankrupt law, prior to judgment in the attachment suit but after the execution of the bond.—Goodhue v. King, 55 Cal. 377.

§ 190. —— Cases Affecting Ambassadors and Consuls.

[a] Under Constitution of the United States, article 3, section 2, providing that the judicial power of the United States shall extend to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, a state court has no jurisdiction in a civil case over the person of a consul of a foreign government resident in the state.—Miller v. Van Loben Sels, 66 Cal. 341, 5 Pac. 512; Wilcox v. Luco, 45 Pac. 676.

[b] Under Constitution of the United States, article 3, section 2, extending the judicial power of the United States to all cases affecting ambassadors, public ministers, and consuls, a state court has no jurisdiction in a civil case over the person of a foreign consul residing in the state.—Wilcox v. Luco, 118 Cal. 639, 62 Am. St. Rep. 305, 45 Pac. 676.

[c] In the absence of statutory provisions, exclusive jurisdiction of an action against a consul of a foreign government is not vested in the federal courts by Constitution of United States, article 3, section 2, declaring that the judicial power of the United States shall extend to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls. Wilcox v. Luco, 118 Cal. 639, 62 Am. St. Rep. 305, 50 Pac. 758.

§ 191. —— Prisoners Under Arrest, Commitment or Sentence.

[a] The courts or judges of a state have no authority to release a prisoner upon a habeas corpus when the prisoner is in the custody of the authorities of the United States, pursuant to a judgment of conviction by a federal tribunal of exclusive jurisdiction in the case.—Le Bur, Ex parte, 49 Cal. 159.

§ 192. —— Enjoining Proceedings.

[a] State court cannot enjoin proceedings of federal court.—Phelan v. Smith, 8 Cal. 520.

[b] That some of the defendants, in an action in a state court for the wrongful death of plaintiff's intestate on a sailing vessel, made application, as the owners of the vessel, to a federal court, for a limitation of their liability under the United States statutes relating to the merchant marine, and that the federal court enjoined plaintiff from further proceedings in the state court against these defendants, is not a bar to the plaintiff proceeding in such court against the other defendants, where he has received no satisfaction for the wrong complained of.—Grundel v. Union Iron Works, 127 Cal. 438, 78 Am. St. Rep. 75, 59 Pac. 826, 47 L. R. A. 467.

§ 3. Implied Covenants.

Implied covenants and leases. See Landlord and Tenant, § 15.

[a] The law will not imply covenants of seisin in a conveyance of land by deed.—Fowler v. Smith, 2 Cal. 39.

[b] Words "good and sufficient deed" import only a conveyance good in form, and sufficient to pass the title actually held by the covenantor, and not that he would convey a good title.—Green v. Covillaud, 10 Cal. 317, 70 Am. Dec. 725.

[c] Words "grant, bargain and sell," do not warrant title.—Bryan v. Swain, 56 Cal. 616.

[d] A deed of grant, expressly granting a water right as an appurtenance to the land conveyed, implies a covenant against a previous conveyance thereof; and where such water right was appurtenant to the land, when the negotiations for purchase thereof were begun by the grantee, and was conveyed to a third person, prior to such deed of grant, the purchaser is entitled to recover from his grantor the value of the water right, as damages for the breach of such implied covenant.—Lyles v. § 4. In General.

[a] If a deed conveys a tract of land by metes and bounds, excepting therefrom such portion of such land as may have before been conveyed by the grantor to other persons, and contains a general covenant of warranty of the land thereby intended to be conveyed, and also a covenant that if any portion of the land has been before conveyed to other persons the grantor will convey to the grantee other lands of like quantity and quality; the former covenant relates to lands which the deed purports to convey, and not to the land which the grantor covenanted to convey in the latter covenant.—Vance v. Pena, 33 Cal. 631.

[b] Declaration in deed of general purpose to be accomplished near certain point in certain way is only a recital and not part of the covenant.—Roberts v. Krafts, 141 Cal. 28, 74 Pac. 281.

§ 5. Real or Personal.

[a] A proviso, in the habendum clause in a deed, to the effect that, if the grantee should ever sell any of the land conveyed, it should be sold to the grantor at a stipulated price, if construed as a covenant, is merely personal.—Maynard v. Polhemus, 74 Cal. 141, 15 Pac. 451.

ing on heirs or assigns.—Maynard v. Polhemus, 74 Cal. 143, 15 Pac. 451.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 1113, providing that conveyances of realty, unless otherwise restrained, shall be subject to an implied covenant that it is free from incumbrances, which may be sued on as if expressed in the deed, a suit for breach of such implied covenant may be maintained against a mortgagee joining in the conveyance with the owner, since his obligation arises from the personal covenants implied in the deed.—Holzheier v. Hayes, 133 Cal. 456, 65 Pac. 968.

[c] A covenant in a deed to a yacht club, that "in consideration of the conveyance," the lot should not "be used for any business or store purposes, other than for hotel or lodging-house, or club purposes," is a personal covenant, which only binds the yacht club during its tenure, and does not bind it affirmatively to use the lot for club purposes, nor preclude the use thereof for a ferry by a successor in interest, whose deed contained no restriction, where such use is not shown to be injurious to the remaining property of the original grantor, and is in its nature beneficial to the public.—Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 Pac. 308.

[d] Personal covenants bestowing benefits and imposing restrictions on the use of land may be enforced in equity against a subsequent purchaser with notice.—Hunt v. Jones (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 686.

§ 7. Persons Liable on Real Covenants.

[a] A conveyed land to B, bounding it on a certain street not laid out. He granted the right of way in the street, the "street forever to be and remain free and open as a public street." A died, and his other land, including the street, was partitioned among his heirs, his widow administering his estate. B prayed that A's heirs be compelled to open the street. Held, that he was not entitled to the relief sought; that there was no covenant binding the heirs; and that, if there was a breach of a covenant of seisin, plaintiff should have presented his claim for damages to A's administratrix.—McDonald v. McElroy, 60 Cal. 484.

§ 8. Dependent, Independent or Divisible.

Dependent and independent covenants in contracts. See Contracts, § 121.

[a] Covenant to pay taxes is divisible.—Ellis v. Bradbury, 75 Cal. 236, 17 Pac. 3.

[b] Covenant for purchase money and covenant to convey are independent.—Donovan v. Judson, 81 Cal. 338, 22 Pac. 864.

[c] Intention of parties to make covenants dependent or independent is ascertained from their written agreement.—Donovan v. Judson, 81 Cal. 338, 22 Pac. 864.

[d] Where, by the terms of a contract for the sale of real estate the vendor agreed to execute a conveyance of the property on or before a specified date, provided the purchasers should, on or before that date, pay the balance of the purchase price, the covenants are mutual and dependent, and the purchasers cannot sue for damages for failure of the vendor to make the conveyance, unless the complaint alleges a full performance, or offer to perform, on their part; but it is sufficient to aver an offer in writing by the purchasers to pay the residue of the purchase money, accompanied by a demand for a deed; and it is not incumbent upon the purchasers to allege or prove an actual production or tender of the money to the vendor, in order to enable them to maintain the action, if the vendor did not signify his acceptance of the offer.—Peckham v. Stewart, 97 Cal. 147.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1053; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 51-53, § 25.

§ 9. Limitation to Premises Conveyed.

[a] P. conveyed to V. a certain tract of land, describing it by metes and bounds, excepting from it all that portion of land lying in a certain locality which might have been before conveyed to other persons by the grantor. The deed contained a covenant that, if any portion of this land had been before conveyed to any person except to one F., the grantor would convey to the grantee other lands equal in quality and quantity. The deed also contained a general covenant of warranty of the land "thereby intended to be conveyed." Held, that the covenant of warranty related to the land which the deed purported to convey, and not to the land contemplated by the former covenant.—Vance v. Pena, 33 Cal. 631.

vendor's title, and that he should then execute a deed. Held, that the title passed by the first deed at the time of its delivery, that the confirmation of title was not a condition precedent thereto, and that the agreement was merely for further assurance, and not for a future conveyance of the title.—Smith v. Brannan, 13 Cal. 107.

[b] Defendant's grantor executed an instrument by which he released and quitclaimed to defendant land on which he had only a school land certificate of purchase, and by which he further agreed to perfect his title, and make defendant a good deed. Held, that the instrument was a quitclaim deed, and conveyed all the grantor's interest, and that the agreement for a subsequent deed was only a covenant of further assurance.—Wholey v. Cavanaugh, 88 Cal. 132, 25 Pac. 1112.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1073; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 82, 83, § 45.

§ 12. —— Covenants Against Encumbrances.

[a] Grantor covenants against his own acts in creating mortgage, not against those of his grantor.—Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 297, 63 Am. St. Rep. 106, 51 Pac. 2.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1070; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 80, 81, § 43.

§ 13. Covenants Running with the Land.

[a] A and B, owning tracts of land separated by a stream, agreed that the waters thereof should be conducted to a reservoir on A's lands by ditches and flumes constructed at their joint expense, and that B might construct ditches and convey one-half the water to his own land. Held, that the agreement ran with the land, and that A's successor in interest could not, by going to a point higher up the stream and diverting the water to the reservoir, claim the whole of it for his own use.—Weill v. Baldwin, 64 Cal. 476, 2 Pac. 249.

[b] Covenants running with the land must be contained in grants of the estate.—Simson v. Mills, 80 Cal. 118, 22 Pac. 25.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Running with the land, what are: 56 Am. Rep. 151, note.

What covenants run with the land: 82 Am. St. Rep. 664, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 1080-1102; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 89-148, §§ 52-92.

§ 14. —— Effect of Agreement of Parties.

[a] A provision in an agreement between a land owner and an irrigation company, that the covenant to take water and pay therefor should "run with and bind the land," creates a lien on the land as against a subsequent purchaser with notice, but does not bind such purchaser personally.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Rowell, 80 Cal. 114, 13 Am. St. Rep. 112, 22 Pac. 53.

§ 15. —— Covenants Conferring Benefits.

[b] A covenant in a deed, made for the benefit of the land conveyed, will run with the land, and inure to a grantee thereof. But a covenant between the grantor and grantee of a deed in fee, which merely imposes a burden of restrictions upon the grantee, and does not reserve or create any interest in the grantor, or establish a condition subsequent to the grant, and does not purport to inure to the protection of an assignee of the grantor, or to bind the assignees of the grantee, is personal in its nature, and does not run with the land or charge an assignee of the grantee with such burden.—Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 Pac. 308.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1089; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 95-99, § 58.

§ 16. —— Covenant to Pay Taxes.

[a] Covenant to pay taxes runs with the land.—Ellis v. Bradbury, 75 Cal. 236, 17 Pac. 3.

§ 17. —— Covenant of Seisin.

[a] Where the covenantor is disseised at the time of making the deed, the covenant of seisin is broken as soon as made, and, being a chose in action, does not pass with the land to the assignee.—(Cal. 1871) Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Consideration necessary to sustain covenant to stand seised: 8 Am. Dec. 366, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 1085; 13 Cent. Dig., cols. 99-101, § 59.

§ 18. —— Covenant of Right to Convey.

[a] The covenant of right to convey being broken, if at all, as soon as made, the right of action thereon is a mere chose in action and does not run with the land.—Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1086; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 101, 102, § 60.

§ 19. —— Covenant Against Encumbrances.

[a] The covenant against encumbrances, if broken at all, is broken upon the execution of the deed containing it; and therefore does not run with the land to a subsequent grantee.—Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

[b] Covenant against encumbrances is personal and does not run with the land.—Woodward v. Brown, 119 Cal. 294, 63 Am. St. Rep. 108, 51 Pac. 2.

[c] A covenant in a deed that the land conveyed is free from tax liens is a personal covenant of the same character as a covenant against any other encumbrances, and does not run with the land, or pass to the convenantee's assignee.—McPike v. Heaton, 131 Cal. 109, 63 Pac. 179.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1086; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 102, 103, § 61.

§ 20. —— Covenant of Warranty.

[a] In real estate the covenant of warranty runs with the land, and the vendor is liable directly to the person evicted.—Blackwell v. Atkinson, 14 Cal. 470.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Covenants of warranty, married woman's liability upon: 43 Am. Dec. 426, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 1088; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 104-106, § 64.

§ 21. —— Covenants Imposing Burdens.

[a] Under Civil Code, sections 1460-1466, specifying what covenants run with the land when contained in a grant of the estate, the covenants in a contract to furnish water to certain land for irrigation purposes do not run with the land, not being contained in the grant of the estate, and no personal judgment can be had against a purchaser of the land for his refusal to perform them.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Rowell, 80 Cal. 114, 13 Am. St. Rep. 112, 22 Pac. 53; Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Dunbar, 80 Cal. 530, 22 Pac. 275.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1089; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 106-110, §§ 65, 66.

§ 22. —— Covenants as to Use of Property.

[a] A railway company obtained a right of way through land owned by a married woman in consideration of one dollar, and the covenants to maintain a depot, run daily trains, etc. The roadbed was abandoned, but not until after title to the property was acquired by the husband. Held, that the covenants, not being "made for the direct benefit of the property, or some part of it," as required by Civil Code, section 1462, did not run with the land, and the husband, not showing an express assignment of his wife's interest in the contract, and his wife not having joined in the action, cannot recover for failure on the part of defendants to perform.—Lyford v. North Pac. C. R. Co., 92 Cal. 93, 28 Pac. 103.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 1462, providing that every covenant contained in a grant of realty which is made for the direct benefit of the property runs with the land; and section 1461, directing that "the only covenants which run with the land are those specified in this title and those which are incidental thereto—a covenant that the property conveyed shall not be used for any business purposes does not run with the land, but is a personal covenant, not binding on the assigns of the covenantor, nor inuring to the benefit of the successors or assigns of the covenantee.—Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 Pac. 308.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Covenants restricting right to build on adjacent parcel of land: 35 Am. Dec. 716, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 1091; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 110-114, §§ 67-69.

§ 23. —— Covenants Creating Easements or Liens.

[a] Covenant creating a water right as an appurtenance or easement runs with the land. Weill v. Baldwin, 64 Cal. 476, 2 Pac. 249.

[b] An agreement by a land owner to take water for irrigation purposes for a certain length of time from a certain company, it being stipulated that such covenant is to "run with and bind the land," is not a covenant running with the land, though it creates a lien on the land, as against any purchaser with notice.—Fresno Canal etc. Co. v. Rowell, 80 Cal. 114, 13 Am. St. Rep. 112, 22 Pac. 53.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 24. Breach in General.

[a] Premises are discharged from covenant of reconveyance if payment is not made or tendered as specified.—Low v. Henry, 9 Cal. 551.

[b] Without an eviction there is no breach of the covenant; but it is not necessary that the eviction should be by process of law, consequent on a judgment.—McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360, 2 Am. Rep. 456.

[c] A covenant that the tract conveyed, or that the grant under which it is held, includes a specified quantity, is personal, and, if broken, is broken as soon as made.—Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

[d] Where covenants are mutual and dependent, neither party can put other in default without tendering performance unless it is waived.—Heine v. Treadwell, 72 Cal. 220, 13 Pac. 503.

[e] Whether a breach of covenant is so material as to justify the other party in abandoning performance of the contract is to some extent a question of fact; and it is a question of fact whether a part performance was so deficient as to justify such abandonment.—Fountain v. Semi-Tropic Land and Water Co., 99 Cal. 677, 34 Pac. 497.

§ 25. Covenant of Seisin.

[a] The covenant of seisin is personal, and, when broken, is broken as soon as made.—Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 1107-1110; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 161-171, §§ 104-109.

§ 26. Covenant of Title.

[a] A purchaser of personalty, who has taken possession under a bill of sale purporting to convey title, and who is in the undisputed possession and enjoyment thereof, is not entitled to recover substantial damages based on the breach of the seller's covenant to furnish a good title.—Barnum v. Cochrane, 143 Cal. 642, 77 Pac. 656.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 1106; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 158-160, §§ 101-103.

§ 27. Covenant of Right to Convey.

[a] The covenant of right to convey, if not true, is broken as soon as made.—Lawrence v. Montgomery, 37 Cal. 183; Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 1110; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 171-173, § 110.

§ 28. Covenant Against Encumbrances.

[a] The covenant against encumbrances, if not true, is broken as soon as made.—(1871) Salmon v. Vallejo, 41 Cal. 481.

[b] The fact that one of the deeds under which a grantor deraigned title contained a covenant that no liquor saloon should be maintained on the premises, with a condition of reversion in case of breach of such covenant, did not constitute a breach of the grantor's implied covenant against encumbrances, in the absence of any eviction or disturbance of the grantee, or any damage suffered by him.—Thurgood v. Spring, 139 Cal. 596, 73 Pac. 456.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 1111-1118; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 173-198, §§ 111-129.

§ 29. Covenant for Quiet Enjoyment—Acts of Trespassers.

Damages for breach of. See post, § 1.

[a] The covenant for quiet enjoyment does not warrant against the acts of trespassers. (1862) Playter v. Cunningham, 21 Cal. 229; (1866) Branger v. Manciet, 30 Cal. 624.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 11 Cyc. 1118-1120; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 198-206, §§ 130-137.

§ 30. —— Eviction.

[a] The warranty implied in a sale made by general terms, under the system of the civil law, is equivalent to a covenant that the buyer shall quietly possess and enjoy, and nothing more. And to give a buyer a right of action upon this warranty, there must have taken place an actual judicial eviction, by the sentence of a competent tribunal, and this sentence carried into effect.—Fowler v. Smith, 2 Cal. 568.

[b] Eviction need not be by legal process to constitute breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment.—Levinson v. Schwartz, 21 Cal. 229.

[c] The rejection by the United States of the Mexican claim under which the covenantor held is sufficient eviction to support an action for a breach of the covenant of quiet enjoyment.—McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360, 2 Am. Rep. 456.

[d] A covenant for quiet enjoyment in a deed is broken whenever there has been an involuntary loss of possession by reason of the hostile assertion of an irresistible title. The paramount title need not be established by judgment before the covenantee will be authorized to surrender possession, nor need there be an actual dispossession. If the paramount title is so asserted that he must yield or leave, the covenantee may purchase or lease of the true owner, and this will be considered a sufficient eviction to constitute a breach.—McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360, 2 Am. Rep. 456.

[e] The fact that the title to land conveyed by a deed stands in a third person does not constitute a breach of the covenants implied therein, nor of an express covenant for quiet enjoyment, where the grantee enters and remains in the undisturbed possession of the land.— Bryan v. Swain, 56 Cal. 616.

[f] There is no breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment without actual or constructive eviction.—Levitzky v. Canning, 33 Cal. 299; McAlester v. Landers, 70 Cal. 82, 11 Pac. 505.

§ 31. Covenant to Procure Reconveyance.

[a] Where vendor covenanted to procure a reconveyance to himself of portions of the land described in the deed which he had conveyed to others, such covenant is broken upon a failure to procure such conveyance within a reasonable time, or to convey to the vendee other lands of equal value, and the statute of limitations will commence running from such breach.—Vance v. Pena, 41 Cal. 686.

§ 32. Covenant of Warranty.

Damages for breach of covenant of warranty. See post, § 42.

[a] Where defendant conveyed to plaintiff by a deed of warranty, the covenants in the deed are not broken by the act of the defendant's grantor in claiming that his deed was intended merely as a mortgage, and bringing an action against the plaintiff and defendant to redeem the same, where the plaintiff defended such action successfully.—West v. Masson, 67 Cal. 169, 7 Pac. 452.

§ 36. Defenses.

[a] In an action for breach of implied covenant against encumbrances, that plaintiff failed to perform his agreement as to the satisfaction of a deficiency judgment against one of the defendants is immaterial, where no damage was suffered thereby.—Holzheier v. Hayes, 133 Cal. 456, 65 Pac. 968.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1135-1138; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 249, 250, § 175; cols. 257-264, §§ 179-185.

§ 37. Equity Jurisdiction.

[a] Equity has jurisdiction in proper cases, to enforce personal covenants imposing restrictions upon the use of lands contained in grants thereof; but it will not enforce all such covenants that may be desired, and will not enforce them, unless the facts of the case justify equitable relief. In determining whether to enforce them or not the court will consider not only the effect which the use complained of would have upon the property of the plaintiff, but also the effect upon the interest of the public.—Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 Pac. 308.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1133; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 250, 251, § 176.

§ 38. Accrual of Cause.

[a] Cause of action for breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment accrues at time of eviction, actual or constructive.—McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360, 2 Am. Rep. 456.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 11 Cyc. 1134; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 252-257, §§ 177, 178.

[b] P. and V. were owners of a tract of land under a Mexican grant, and afterward patented to them by the United States government. P. conveyed a portion of said land to the plaintiff, excepting a certain portion previously conveyed by P. and V., and covenanted that, if any portion of said land had been conveyed by P. and V., he would convey to the plaintiff other lands in quantity and quality of equal value. Held, that a complaint for breach of the covenant which did not allege such joint conveyance was bad, as not stating a casus fœderis under the covenant counted on.—Vance v. Pena, 33 Cal. 631.

[c] Complaint against the heirs for a breach of covenant of warranty must allege that the heir was named in and bound by the covenant. McDonald v. McElroy, 60 Cal. 484, 496.

[d] Complaint in action for breach of covenant to pay taxes need not set forth all steps necessary to constitute valid assessment.—Ellis v. Bradbury, 75 Cal. 236, 17 Pac. 3.

[e] Where the cause of action upon the covenant set forth in the original complaint was defectively pleaded, but the defects were supplied in the amended complaint, in which the new cause of action upon the distinct covenant was pleaded, which was barred by the statute of limitations, it was error to sustain a general demurrer to the amended complaint.—Storer v. Austin, 136 Cal. 588, 60 Pac. 297.

§ 40. Evidence—Judgment as Evidence of Eviction or Paramount Right.

[a] S. conveyed to H. a tract of land which he held under a Mexican grant, and cove-nanted that such grant was valid, and that, if the title should not be confirmed by the United States courts in which it was there pending, upon the final adjudication of the same the said S. and his legal representatives would be liable to H. for the purchase money. The United States district court adjudged the title to be invalid, but no appeal was taken from the judgment, nor was there any waiver of the right to appeal, or acquiescence in the finality of the judgment on the part of S. within the five years allowed for such appeal. Held, that the judgment was not final, within the meaning of the term as used in the covenant, until the time for appeal had expired.—Hills v. Sherwood, 33 Cal. 474.

§ 41. Damages—Covenant for Quiet Enjoyment.

[a] The measure of damages in an action for a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, where there has been an actual dispossession, is the purchase money and interest. Where the plaintiff has purchased the paramount title, it is the sum actually and in good faith paid therefor, and the amount expended in defending his possession, provided such damages do not exceed the purchase money and interest.—McGary v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 360, 2 Am. Rep. 456.

[b] Damages for breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment are prescribed in section 3304 of Civil Code.—McAlester v. Landers, 70 Cal. 83, 84, 11 Pac. 505.

Measure of damages in actions for breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment: 58 Am. Rep. 606, note. See, also, 11 Cyc. 1167-1172; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 352-354, § 243.

[a] Where defendant in good faith sold and attempted to convey to plaintiff by warranty deed the land within a certain inclosure, but did not have full title to, and her deed did not cover, a portion of the land, plaintiff's remedy would be in an action for damages for breach of the warranty, which, under Civil Code, section 3304, would be such portion of the price as the value of the property affected by the breach bore at the time of the granting to the value of the whole property.—Hoffman v. Kirby, 136 Cal. 26, 68 Pac. 321.

§ 43. —— Costs and Expenses of Litigation.

[a] Where the covenantee is obliged, by the acts of the covenantor, to bring an action to recover possession of the premises, his damages in a subsequent action on the covenants include his costs and counsel fees in the former action.—Levitzky v. Canning, 33 Cal. 299.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 44. Findings of Court.

[a] In an action for breach of covenant in a deed, the complaint alleged a certain money consideration, upon which issue was joined; the answer alleging the consideration to consist of certain contracts between the parties, which contracts plaintiff had violated. The findings of fact showed a contract resembling the one set up in the answer, and that plaintiff had violated it; but there was no finding whether the deed rested for its consideration on the payment of money as alleged by plaintiff, or on the contract set up in the answer, though there was evidence touching this issue. Held, that a judgment for defendant was not supported by the findings.—Holzheier v. Hayes, 52 Pac. 838.

§ 1. Nature and Scope of Remedy.

[a] Creditor's bill may be filed against a partnership upon an attachment lien.—Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626, 73 Am. Dec. 603.

[b] A suit by a creditor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by the debtor is not strictly a creditors' bill.—Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 48.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 5; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 407-411, §§ 1, 2.

§ 2. Adequate Remedy at Law.

[a] A bill in equity to subject the assets of an absent debtor to plaintiff's claim must show that plaintiff is without remedy in law. Lupton v. Lupton, 3 Cal. 120.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 5; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 416-422, §§ 5-8.

§ 3. —— Proceedings Supplementary to Execution.

[a] Proceedings supplementary to execution are a substitute for a creditor's bill, but not an exclusive remedy.—Swift v. Arents, 4 Cal. 390.

[b] Proceedings supplementary to execution, whereby a judgment debtor is required to answer concerning his property, are a substitute for, and supersede, a creditors' bill.—McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

[c] Supplementary proceedings, as established by Code of Civil Procedure, providing that a debtor may be examined and compelled to deliver property, placed beyond reach of execution, into the hands of receiver appointed to dispose of it in aid of execution, are a substitute for a creditors' bill.—McCullough v. Clark, 41 Cal. 298.

[d] It seems that supplementary proceedings take place of creditors' bill in this state.—Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 357, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, 20 Pac. 874.

[e] Before equity can be invoked in a creditor's bill it must be shown that the remedies at law are unavailing, and the bill must aver that an execution has been returned unsatisfied.—Herrlich v. Kaufmann, 99 Cal. 271, 37 Am. St. Rep. 50, 33 Pac. 857.

[f] A creditors' bill to reach property transferred by defendant to his codefendant, and which is claimed by the latter adversely to defendant, will lie, since the remedy by proceedings supplemental to execution (Code Civ. Proc., secs. 717-720) would in such case be inadequate.—Rapp v. Whittier, 113 Cal. 429, 45 Pac. 703.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 421, 422, § 7.

§ 4. Property or Rights Which may be Subjected—Patent Rights and Interests Therein.

[a] A patent right may be subjected by a bill in equity to the payment of a judgment debt of the patentee.—Pacific Bank v. Robinson, 57 Cal. 520, 40 Am. Rep. 120.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Choses in action, whether subject to, creditors' suit: 14 Am. Dec. 542, note.

Life insurance, when subject to creditors' suit: 29 Am. St. Rep. 360, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 25-33; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 425-450, §§ 12-41.

§ 5. Conditions Precedent—Judgment or Lien.

[a] Lien by attaching enables a creditor to file a creditor's bill without waiting for judgment and execution.—Conroy v. Woods, 13 Cal. 626, 73 Am. Dec. 605.

[b] The right to maintain a creditor's suit to subject moneys, alleged to have been fraudulently transferred by a debtor to his wife, to the payment of a judgment against him, does not depend on the validity of a lien attempted to be created by garnishment in aid of execution before the commencement of the action. Judgment (1899), 57 Pac. 73, reversed.—Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644, 59 Pac. 143.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 6. —— Exhaustion of Ordinary Legal Remedies.

[a] A creditor must exhaust his legal remedies before he can maintain a creditors' bill in equity.—Mesmer v. Jenkins, 61 Cal. 151.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 6-25; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 468-470, §§ 67-72.

§ 7. —— Execution and Return.

[a] A creditors' bill to have the property of his debtor applied in satisfaction of his debt must show either that he has recovered a judgment on which an execution has been issued and returned no property found, or that he has a lien on the property.—Castle v. Bader, 23 Cal. 76.

[b] Insolvency or its equivalent, execution returned nulla bona, is necessary to support a creditor's bill to reach equitable assets.—Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 48.

[c] Where a debtor has had execution on his judgment returned unsatisfied, showing that he has exhausted his remedy at law, he may file a bill to subject property of the debtor which is not subject to execution at law to payment of the judgment.—Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 48.

[d] Although a complaint filed after judgment upon a prior creditor's bill by a subsequent judgment creditor is misnamed a complaint in intervention, it may be regarded and treated as an independent original complaint if it states a cause of action, notwithstanding the misnomer, or redundant matter relating to the original creditor's bill.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 12 Cyc. 16-24; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 471-492, §§ 73-87.

§ 8. Venue.

[a] Creditor's bill to set aside a fraudulent conveyance is not an action to enforce a lien, and need not be brought where land is situated.—Beach v. Hodgdon, 66 Cal. 187, 5 Pac. 77.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 12 Cyc. 34; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 500, 501, § 98.

§ 9. Parties Plaintiff.

[a] Judgment creditor who has exhausted his legal remedy by execution returned nulla bona may alone, or with other judgment creditors, file a bill against persons holding property of the debtor which cannot be reached by execution.—Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129, 29 Am. St. Rep. 97, 30 Pac. 136.

[b] Creditor's bill brought by two judgment creditors jointly, to reach assets of a corporation, is not demurrable for misjoinder of parties plaintiff.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[c] Where a judgment creditor sues to subject equitable assets to his judgment, defendants cannot require other judgment creditors to be brought in as parties, inasmuch as a creditor commencing such action acquires an equitable lien on such assets, and a priority over other judgment creditors who have not previously commenced any such suit.—Seymour v. McAvoy, 121 Cal. 438, 53 Pac. 946.

[d] A creditor of an insolvent corporation not a party to a suit against directors to recover misappropriated assets held not entitled to recover any part of the proceeds of the settlement.—Niccolls v. Rice, 147 Cal. 633, 82 Pac. 321.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 12 Cyc. 36; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 503-513, §§ 100-111.

§ 10. Parties Defendant.

[a] Corporation and all wrongdoers are necessary parties to creditor's bill against a corporation for misappropriation of funds.—Reed v. Goldstein, 53 Cal. 296.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 11. Interveners.

[a] One who is a creditor at large without judgment in his favor at the time of rendition of judgment upon such creditor's bill, cannot after subsequently obtaining judgment in his favor, intervene in the action after judgment, or avail himself of a provision in the judgment that any other judgment creditor of the corporation be allowed to become a party to the suit to establish his claim and to have execution against the defendants.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Co., 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

[b] Upon a judgment creditor's bill in equity to subject the unpaid balance due from stockholders to the corporation for subscription to its stock, judgment creditors of the same class with the plaintiff are entitled to intervene before trial, pursuant to section 387 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and mere creditors at large are entitled to no relief whatever.—Baines v. West Coast Lumber Company, 104 Cal. 1, 37 Pac. 767.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 12. Pleading.

[a] In an action by a creditor under a judgment by confession to establish a priority of lien on property of the judgment debtor in the hands of subsequent judgment creditors, it should be directly alleged that, at the time the judgment by confession was entered, the money for which it was confessed was unpaid or then due.—Denver v. Burton, 28 Cal. 549.

[b] A creditor's bill to reach equitable assets must allege insolvency or execution returned nulla bona.—Hager v. Shindler, 29 Cal. 47.

[c] A creditor's bill, based on a valid and subsisting judgment, wholly unsatisfied, against an insolvent corporation, need not allege that the judgment was based on a valid and subsisting debt.—Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129, 29 Am. St. Rep. 97, 30 Pac. 136.

[d] An objection of defect or misjoinder of parties plaintiff in a creditor's bill cannot be taken by general demurrer on the ground that other creditors should be joined, when the complaint does not show on its face that there are other creditors.—Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129, 29 Am. St. Rep. 97, 30 Pac. 136.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 38-43; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 550, §§ 154-177.

§ 13. Trial.

[a] Where, in an action to subject land to a judgment, a person to whom the land was conveyed before the commencement of the action is, by order of the trial court, made a party thereto, he may demand that a deposition already taken be stricken out, and that he be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses who have already testified.—Lange v. Braynard, 104 Cal. 156, 37 Pac. 868.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 14. Judgment.

[a] Where fund can only be divided satisfactorily among certain class of person, decree must be so framed that all of them may be brought in for their distributive shares, but even then the bill may often be filed by any one of them on his own behalf. It is only when it subsequently appears to the court that a distribution must be made that a decree will be made for the benefit of all.—Tatum v. Rosenthal, 95 Cal. 129, 29 Am. St. Rep. 97, 30 Pac. 136.

[b] Grantee of land who acquires title thereto prior to the commencement of an action in the nature of a creditor's bill against his grantor and his predecessors in interest is not affected by the judgment therein, unless he is made a party to the action.—Lange v. Braynard, 104 Cal. 156, 37 Pac. 868.

[c] Persons accused of crimes alleged to have been committed before the Penal Code took effect are to be tried in accordance with the forms of procedure provided in the code. People v. Mortimer, 46 Cal. 114.

[d] "Knowingly" when used in Penal Code imports only knowledge of facts.—People v. Burns, 75 Cal. 630, 631, 17 Pac. 648.

[e] Question whether certain conduct constitutes crime must be decided from language used in statute, not from supposed intent of its framers.—McNulty, Ex parte, 77 Cal. 168, 11 Am. St. Rep. 257, 19 Pac. 237.

[f] Statute conferring power on court to determine degree of crime under plea of guilty is valid.—People v. Chew Lan Ong, 141 Cal. 552, 99 Am. St. Rep. 88, 75 Pac. 186.

§ 4. —— Effect of Amendment on Pending Cases.

[a] Where act is passed between time of commission of act and death of victim defining the offense, and providing for its punishment, and providing that upon trials for crimes committed previous to its enactment the party shall be tried by the laws in force at the time of the commission of the crime, the prisoner must be tried under the law in force when the violation of the law was committed.—People v. Gill, 6 Cal. 637.

[b] Act of 1863, amendatory of, and which refers in terms to, section 293 of the Criminal Practice Act, will be construed as referring to section 296 of that act, as that is the only section of the statutes to which the amendment can properly apply, and, otherwise, it must be held that the amendment is not only a nullity, but that the legislature intended it as a nullity, and the court is forbidden so to hold.—People v. King, 28 Cal. 265.

[c] An amendment of a statute reducing an offense from a felony to a misdemeanor, and the punishment from a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the state prison not exceeding two years, or by both, to a fine not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years, or by both, operates as a repeal of the former statute.—People v. Tisdale, 57 Cal. 104.

§ 5. Criminal Intent and Malice.

See, also, references under Intent.

Intent as element of embezzlement. See Embezzlement § 4.

Intent to detain and take from state as element of crime of kidnaping. See Kidnaping, § 1.

Intent as element of larceny. See Larceny, § 3.

[a] Intention is essential to crime.—People v. Freelon, 8 Cal. 519.

[b] To constitute a crime, the criminal act must be accompanied by a criminal intent or criminal negligence.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[c] Presence or absence of motives is important in determining question, when actual insanity is not made out.—People v. Messersmith, 61 Cal. 246.

[d] A person is presumed to intend all the natural, probable, and usual consequences of his own act, but not all the "possible" consequences of his act.—People v. Munn, 65 Cal. 211, 3 Pac. 650.

[e] Caveat emptor as to notice cannot apply to criminal responsibility.—People v. Brown, 74 Cal. 309, 16 Pac. 1.

[f] In determining intention of defendant it is reasonable to believe that when he made the arrest he intended to do with his prisoner what the evidence shows he did do, and that he had no other purpose. Acts indicate the intention, and the law, in some cases, judges of a man's previous intentions by his subsequent actions.—People v. Fick, 89 Cal. 144, 26 Pac. 759.

[g] Law does not recognize man's criminal intention as a crime, and he can only be prosecuted for an offense actually committed and not for an offense he may have intended to commit.—People v. Elliott, 90 Cal. 586, 27 Pac. 433.

[h] Criminal intent need not be shown, when an act in general terms is made indictable, unless from the language or effects of the law a purpose to require the existence of such intent can be discovered.—People v. O'Brien, 96 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 45.

[i] Corpus delicti is made up of certain facts forming its basis, and the existence of criminal agency as the cause of them.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

§ 6. Felonies and Misdemeanors.

Degrees of particular crimes. See specific crimes.

[a] Some offenses may be punished either as felonies or as misdemeanors, and in such cases the punishment inflicted must determine the grade of the offense, and the right of appeal depends on the nature and extent of the punishment.—People v. Cornell, 16 Cal. 187.

[b] Under the provisions of sections 4 and 5 of the Criminal Practice Act, distinguishing felonies and misdemeanors, any offense which may be or is liable to be punished by death or imprisonment in a state prison is a felony; and any offense which is not liable to such punishment, that is, for which that grade of punishment cannot, under any circumstances, be inflicted, is a misdemeanor.—People v. War, 20 Cal. 117.

[c] Misdemeanor is act or omission for which punishment, other than death or imprisonment, is denounced by a statute; that is, by a legislative act.—Pillsbury v. Brown, 47 Cal. 477.

[d] Felony defined.—People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 605, 11 Pac. 481.

[f] Distinction between high and low misdemeanors has never been recognized in this state.—Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 562, 21 Pac. 307, 541.

[g] Penal Code, section 666, providing that the punishment for petit larceny committed by one who has before been convicted of burglary shall be imprisonment in the state prison not exceeding five years, makes petit larceny in such case a felony.—People v. Smith, 143 Cal. 597, 77 Pac. 449.

§ 7. Deliberation and Willfulness.

[a] Deliberation is action after consideration and reflection.—People v. Sheldon, 68 Cal. 437, 9 Pac. 457.

[b] Deliberate act is willful act.—People v. Sheldon, 68 Cal. 437, 9 Pac. 457.

[c] To do a thing willfully is to do it by design, with a set purpose.—People v. Sheldon, 68 Cal. 437, 9 Pac. 457.

[d] "Willfully" implies purpose or willingness to commit act.—People v. Von Tiedeman, 120 Cal. 135, 52 Pac. 155.

§ 8. Defenses.

Insanity as defense. See post, §§ 10-12.

[a] The command of a master to a servant, or principal to his agent, or parent to his child, will not justify a criminal act done in pursuance thereof.—People v. Richmond, 29 Cal. 414.

[b] The conviction of one person for an offense has no tendency to prove that another person did not commit it, and hence is no bar to a prosecution of such second person. So held on an indictment for burglary.—People v. Johnson, 47 Cal. 122.

[c] Promise of immunity by committing magistrate for turning state's evidence is no ground for discharge.—People v. Peter, 48 Cal. 250.

[d] Ignorance of law is no defense.—People v. Burns, 75 Cal. 630, 17 Pac. 646.

[e] Duty to retreat before using violence in self-defense. Authorities reviewed.—People v. Lewis, 117 Cal. 191-194, 48 Pac. 1088.

[f] Ignorance of law, if it renders impossible the special state of mind required to constitute the offense, takes it away, the same as any other cause having that effect.—People v. Goodin, 136 Cal. 455, 69 Pac. 85.

[g] It was error for court to instruct the jury to the effect that the belief of the defendant that he had the legal right to do what he did, if he had in fact no such right, did not justify his acts, and that it is no defense for the defendant to claim that he thought, or had an honest belief, that he had a right to dig up or injure the public highway, and to strike out the defendant's testimony stating the grounds of his belief that he had a right to fence up the road, and to exclude evidence that other portions of the old road had been fenced and plowed, which, if proved, would tend to show an actual abandonment of the old road.—People v. Goodin, 136 Cal. 455, 69 Pac. 85.

§ 9. Attempts and Solicitation.

See, also, references under Attempt to Rape. See Rape, § 6.

Attempt to rob. See Robbery, § 4.

[a] Attempt contemplated by statute must be manifested by acts which would end in the consummation of the particular offense but for the intervention of circumstances independent of the will of the party.—People v. Murray, 14 Cal. 159.

[b] Person may by single act endeavor to accomplish two or more criminal results.—People v. Milne, 60 Cal. 71.

[c] "Attempt" to commit crime is an effort to carry out formed design or intent. Mere intent or preparation long beforehand is not.—People v. Stites, 75 Cal. 575-579, 17 Pac. 693.

[d] Going out to meet confederate with dynamite in possession in furtherance of prearranged plan to place it on track, carrying out of which was frustrated by police, is an attempt.—People v. Stites, 75 Cal. 571-579, 17 Pac. 693.

[e] If actual transaction has commenced which would have completed the crime if not interrupted, there is an attempt.—People v. Stites, 75 Cal. 577, 17 Pac. 693.

[f] Where criminal result of attempt is not accomplished simply because of an obstruction in the way of the thing to be operated upon, and these facts are unknown to the aggressor at the time, the criminal attempt is committed.—People v. Lee Kong, 95 Cal. 666, 29 Am. St. Rep. 165, 30 Pac. 80.

Crimes by insane persons. See Insane Persons, § 29.

§ 10. Test of Accountability in General.

[a] In a trial for murder, a charge "that the true test of insanity is whether the accused, at the time of the commission of the crime, was conscious that he was doing what he ought not to do" is proper.—People v. Hobson, 17 Cal. 424.

[b] To establish a defense on ground of insanity, it must be clearly proved that at time of committing act accused was laboring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature or quality of the particular act with which he stands charged, or, if he did know its nature and quality, that he did not know it was wrong.—People v. Coffman, 24 Cal. 230.

[c] An instruction by the court to the jury to the effect that, if they should find that defendant was insane at the time of the alleged shooting, they should declare him not guilty, without regard to the degree of insanity, is too broad.—People v. Best, 39 Cal. 690.

[d] In attempting to reconcile foreknowledge and providence of divinity with freedom and responsibility of men, law adopts theory of responsibility of men, notwithstanding controlling supervision of Providence.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 655, 656.

[e] Insanity, as recognized in the criminal law of this state, is such a diseased and deranged condition of the mental faculties as to render the person incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong in relation to the particular act with which he is charged.—Marceau v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 101 Cal. 338, 35 Pac. 856, 36 Pac. 813.

[f] Evidence indicating mental change in defendant, and that he had an unbalanced mind, does not establish an excuse for crime where, as tested by the rules of the common law, the jury were authorized to find from the evidence that the defendant was not so insane as to be irresponsible.—People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

[g] Where defendant pleaded insanity as an excuse for the crime, an instruction that if defendant's mind was so affected that he had not sufficient will power to abstain from killing the deceased he should be found not guilty was properly refused.—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

[a] Weakness of mind, and fear and excitement caused by the deceased, to such an extent that the defendant did not know what the effect of his act would be with reference to the crime of murder, are no defense.—People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390.

[b] Plea of insanity is not to be encouraged. People v. De Cleer, 60 Cal. 382.

[c] If defendant has certain special delusions which completely possess him, but is perfectly sane on all other subjects, he must be judged as though facts with respect to which delusions exist were real.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 221, 63 Am. St. Rep. 72-n., 51 Pac. 329.

[d] In a prosecution for robbery, where defendant pleaded temporary insanity, an instruction that the laws of the state did not recognize transitory mania or temporary insanity as a defense to crime was error.—People v. Ford, 138 Cal. 140, 70 Pac. 1075.

§ 12. Irresistible Impulse or Emotional Insanity and Moral Insanity.

[a] An irresistible impulse is not an excuse for the commission of a crime, where the person committing it is capable of knowing right from wrong.—People v. Hoin, 62 Cal. 120, 45 Am. Rep. 651.

[b] Moral insanity, as distinguished from mental derangement, is no excuse for crime, nor an exemption from punishment therefor. People v. Kerrigan, 73 Cal. 222, 14 Pac. 849.

[c] Irresistible impulse, so called, is not, of itself, a legal defense to a charge of felony. Marceau v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 101 Cal. 338, 35 Pac. 856, 36 Pac. 813.

[d] Doctrine that in some forms of insanity patient or sufferer knows nature of his act fully, but at same time he cannot prevent it through paralysis of will power, known as "uncontrollable impulse," has no legal standing in this state.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[e] On a murder trial, it appeared that the killing was done under the influence of anger not caused by any adequate provocation, and after the lapse of a sufficient cooling time. There was evidence that defendant was to some extent mentally unsound as a result of long-continued abuse of intoxicating liquors, though not insane to the extent of not knowing what he was doing, or that his act was a crime. Held, that it was not error to instruct that any partial defect of understanding, which might cause defendant more readily to give way to passion than a man ordinarily reasonable, cannot be considered for any purpose.—People v. Leary, 105 Cal. 486, 39 Pac. 24.

[f] In our courts there is no such doctrine established or recognized as moral insanity, distinguished from mental derangement, as an excuse for crime, and as an exemption from punishment therefor.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[g] Where defendant knows fully the nature of his act, the doctrine that he could not prevent it through paralysis of the will power, or through uncontrollable or irresistible impulse, has no legal standing in this state, and is not a legal defense to crime.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[h] Irresistible impulse is no defense to crime if at time accused had requisite knowledge as to nature and quality of act and its wrongfulness.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 223, 16 Am. St. Rep. 72-n., 51 Pac. 329.

[i] Irresistible impulse is not of itself a defense to a charge of felony.—People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251.

[j] Uncontrollable impulse or emotional insanity beginning on the eve of the criminal act and ending with its consummation is no legal defense to the crime.—People v. Trebilcox (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 684.

B. DRUNKENNESS.

IN GENERAL, § 13.
EXISTENCE OF SPECIFIC INTENT ESSENTIAL TO OFFENSE, § 14.
INSANITY RESULTING FROM DRUNKENNESS, § 15.

§ 13. In General.

[a] A defendant indicted for voting twice may show that he was intoxicated when he voted the second time, as tending to show that his mental condition was such that he did not know he was committing the offense. People v. Harris, 29 Cal. 678.

[b] Drunkenness is no defense to the fact of guilt. Evidence of drunkenness can only be received and considered by the jury for the purpose of determining the degree of guilt, and for this purpose it should be received with great caution.—People v. Lewis, 36 Cal. 531.

[c] Drunkenness is never an excuse for crime, except where it has continued so long and been carried to such an excess as to produce delirium tremens or some other form of permanent insanity.—(Cal. 1880) People v. Ferris, 2 Ky. Law Rep. 190, 55 Cal. 588.

[d] Voluntary drunkenness neither excuses nor justifies crime.—(Cal. 1869) People v. Lewis, 36 Cal. 531; (1884) People v. Blake, 65 Cal. 275, 4 Pac. 1.

[e] Act is not less criminal because committed by one voluntarily intoxicated, though his condition may be considered in determining intent.—People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[f] Evidence that defendant was frequently under the influence of liquor, and when so affected, was abusive and quarrelsome, and that he "had been drinking" on the day previous to the morning on which, shortly after midnight, he killed deceased, does not call for an instruction on intoxication at the time of the killing.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[g] Intoxication has nothing to do with the degree of the crime of burglary, but is only relevant in considering the question of the intent with which the entry was made, but the degree is determined solely by the question as to when the entry was made—whether in the day or at night-time.—People v. Dowell, 141 Cal. 493, 75 Pac. 45.

[h] The defense of intoxication on a trial for assault with intent to murder, held insufficient to overcome a verdict of guilty.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

§ 14. Existence of Specific Intent Essential to Offense.

[a] Intoxication is no justification or excuse for crime; but evidence of excessive intoxication by which the party is wholly deprived of reason, if not indulged in to commit crime, may be submitted to the jury for it to consider whether in fact a crime has been committed, or to determine the degree, where the offense consists of several degrees.—(Cal. 1863) People v. Belencia, 21 Cal. 544; (1865) People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95; (1872) People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344; (1892) People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425, 30 Pac. 581.

[b] Intoxication is no justification or excuse for crime; but evidence of excessive intoxication by which the party is wholly deprived of reason, if not indulged in to commit crime, may be submitted to the jury for it to consider whether in fact a crime has been committed, or to determine the degree, where the offense consists of several degrees.—People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95.

[c] Evidence of accused's intoxication when he committed a criminal act is admissible, not as an excuse for the crime, but to enable jury to determine whether his mental condition was such that he knew he was committing an offense.—People v. Harris, 29 Cal. 678.

[d] Intoxication is no justification or excuse for crime; but evidence of excessive intoxication by which the party is wholly deprived of reason, if not indulged in to commit crime, may be submitted to the jury for it to consider whether in fact a crime has been committed, or to determine the degree, where the offense consists of several degrees.—People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344.

[e] Intoxication is no excuse for crime, but should be considered as affecting defendant's mental condition, with reference to his capability of a specific intent.—(Cal. 1880) People v. Ferris, 55 Cal. 588; (1893) People v. Lane, 100 Cal. 379, 34 Pac. 856; (1894) People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[f] Intoxication is no justification or excuse for crime; but evidence of excessive intoxication by which the party is wholly deprived of reason, if not indulged in to commit crime, may be submitted to the jury for it to consider whether in fact a crime has been committed, or to determine the degree, where the offense consists of several degrees.—People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425, 30 Pac. 581.

[g] Intoxication is no excuse for crime, but should be considered as affecting defendant's mental condition, with reference to his capability of a specific intent.—People v. Lane, 100 Cal. 379, 34 Pac. 856.

[h] Intoxication is no excuse for crime, but should be considered as affecting defendant's mental condition, with reference to his capability of a specific intent.—People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[i] Under Penal Code, section 22, providing that, whenever the existence of any particular motive is necessary to constitute any particular crime, the jury may consider the fact that the accused was intoxicated at the time in determining his motive, a jury is warranted in holding accused responsible for a robbery committed while intoxicated, which he confessed to when in full possession of his faculties.—People v. Gilmore, 53 Pac. 806.

§ 15. Insanity Resulting from Drunkenness.

[a] Insanity produced by voluntary intoxication does not destroy responsibility.—People v. Lewis, 36 Cal. 531.

[b] Insanity produced by intoxication does not destroy responsibility for crime if the accused, when sane, voluntarily made himself intoxicated.—People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344.

[c] If permanent insanity is produced by habitual drunkenness, then, like insanity produced by any other cause, it excuses an act which otherwise would be criminal.—People v. Blake, 65 Cal. 275, 4 Pac. 1.

[d] Temporary insanity produced immediately by intoxication does not destroy responsibility where the accused, when sane and responsible, made himself voluntarily drunk.—People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 233, 26 Pac. 88.

[f] Penal Code, section 26, subdivision 5, providing that persons committing a crime without being conscious thereof shall not be responsible, applies to cases of somnambulism and the like, and not to a defense, in a trial for murder, of insanity induced by delirium tremens.—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

§ 16. Principals, Aiders, Abettors and Accomplices.

[a] There is no distinction in this state between principals in the first and second degrees.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

[b] Person who incites, counsels, hires, or commands another to commit a crime, but is not within such convenient distance as to be able to come to the immediate assistance of his associates, if required, or to watch to prevent surprise, is an accessary, and not a principal in the second degree.—People v. Hodges, 27 Cal. 340.

[c] Principals in the second degree and accessaries before the fact are all deemed chief actors, that is, principals in the first degree in the commission of the felony, and are to be indicted, tried, and punished as such principals.—People v. Outeveras, 48 Cal. 19.

[e] Rule that detective pretending to be an accomplice in order to ferret crime may prove that he was not an accomplice by showing that he disclosed his acts to his superior was carried too far in this case.—People v. Fong Ching, 78 Cal. 174, 175, 20 Pac. 396.

[f] One who participates in fraudulent misappropriation of funds of corporation by its secretary, under circumstances clearly indicating guilty knowledge and criminal intent, is liable as a principal coworker in performance of acts constituting corpus delicti.—People v. [h] Penal Code, section 32, states the common-law rule with respect to accessaries.—Ex parte Goldman (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 819.

§ 17. Principals in First Degree.

[a] Distinction between principal of first and second degree and between principal and accessary before the fact is abolished.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 184, 185; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 687, § 75.

§ 18. Principals in Second Degree.

[a] Principal in second degree and accessaries before the fact may be indicted and tried as principals.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

[b] In an indictment of M. and N. for murder (the former as principal, the latter as accessary) charging that he was an aider and abettor, separate trials were had, and M. was convicted of manslaughter. Held, that under the statute N. might still be tried and convicted as an aider and abettor.—People v. Newberry, 20 Cal. 439.

[c] Mere fact that one person is with another who enters dwelling-house and steals therefrom, and sees him steal without interference on his part to prevent it, does not render him guilty of the crime of maliciously entering a dwelling-house in the daytime with intent to steal property therein, nor will the proof of such facts cast on him the burden of proving himself innocent.—People v. Ah Ping, 27 Cal. 489.

[d] Merely standing by is not an offense if no act is done to aid and abet.—People v. Woodward, 45 Cal. 293, 13 Am. Rep. 176.

[e] If B and C have had a quarrel with A, and A approaches B and C, and B commands him to halt or he will shoot him, and C then shoots A, the circumstances do not necessarily import a common criminal intent between B and C to kill A, so as to make B guilty.—People v. Leith, 52 Cal. 251.

[f] One who merely encourages another to tie a person is not an accessary to a murder committed by the latter in doing so.—People v. Keefer, 65 Cal. 232, 3 Pac. 818.

[g] To be guilty as a principal, a person must both aid and abet, under Penal Code, section 971, declaring guilty as principals all persons who aid and abet in the commission of a crime.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

§ 19. Accessaries Before the Fact.

[a] Distinction between accessary before the fact and principal is abrogated by section 971, Penal Code. One who, at common law, would have been an accessary, is under statute, guilty as principal.—People v. Rozelle, 78 Cal. 87-89, 20 Pac. 36.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Aiding and abetting the commission of a felony: 13 Am. Rep. 177, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 190-192; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 297-700, §§ 87-91.

§ 20. Accessaries After the Fact.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 32, providing that "all persons who after full knowledge that a felony has been committed conceal it from the magistrate, or harbor and protect the person charged with or convicted thereof, are accessaries," mere silence, after knowledge of the commission of a felony, is not sufficient to constitute one an accessary, without some affirmative act looking toward the concealment of the crime.—People v. Garnett, 129 Cal. 364, 61 Pac. 1114.

[b] To constitute one an accessary, under Penal Code, section 32, for harboring and protecting a "person charged" with felony, there must have been a formal complaint, information, or indictment filed against the criminal.—People v. Garnett, 129 Cal. 364, 61 Pac. 1114.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Accessaries after the fact: 80 Am. Dec. 95, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 192, 193; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 700-703, §§ 92-95.

§ 21. Prosecution and Punishment of Principals in the First and Second Degree.

[a] At common law aiders and abettors might be convicted, though the principals in the first degree had been acquitted. The statute of this state has not altered the law in that respect.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

[b] Under act concerning crimes and punishments, section 11, abolishing the common-law distinction between principals of the first and second degrees, and the distinction between them and accessaries before the fact, so far as such distinction is capable of abolition, accessaries may be convicted or acquitted without reference to the acquittal or conviction of the principal.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 193; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 703-705, §§ 96-102.

§ 22. Prosecution and Punishment of Principals and Accessaries.

[a] Accessary may be convicted, though principal is acquitted.—People v. Barss, 10 Cal. 68, 20 Cal. 439.

[b] Accessary before the fact must be accused and tried as a principal.—People v. Rozelle, 78 Cal. 89, 20 Pac. 36.

[c] In order to hold an accessary before the fact as a principal in case of felony, he must aid and abet in the commission of the offense, though not present. A disjunctive instruction that such an accessary may be charged as a principal, if he aids or abets in the commission of the felony, is erroneous. People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[d] Where there was conflicting evidence as to whether the defendant was present at the commission of a mayhem by castration, and if an alibi was proved, there was no sufficient evidence to indicate an aiding and abetting that would make him a principal in the crime, it was error to instruct the jury that they need not acquit the defendant, even though they believed that he was not present at the commission of the crime.—People v. Schoedde, 126 Cal. 373, 58 Pac. 859.

Civil jurisdiction of courts of justices of the peace. See Justices of the Peace, §§ 21-48.

§ 23. Nature and Scope of Criminal Jurisdiction in General.

[a] The defendant was charged with having committed an assault by means likely to produce great bodily injury. The lower court sustained a demurrer on the ground that it had no jurisdiction of the offense charged. Held, error.—People v. Fahey, 64 Cal. 342, 30 Pac. 1030.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 196, 197; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 713, §§ 112-114.

§ 23¼. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] Constitution vests legislature with power to confer such jurisdiction on justices' courts as are not exclusively vested in other courts. The act conferring criminal jurisdiction on justices' courts is constitutional. People v. Fowler, 9 Cal. 85.

[b] Under Constitution, article 22, section 3, the superior court of a county is the successor of the district court, and has jurisdiction to make an order to carry into execution a judgment of death rendered by the district court.—People v. Colby, 54 Cal. 184.

[c] Under Constitution, article 6, giving the superior courts jurisdiction of all misdemeanors not otherwise provided for, and Statutes of 1871-72, page 84, creating a police court of the city and county of San Francisco, and giving it jurisdiction of all misdemeanors punishable by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment for one year, or both, the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco has no jurisdiction to try any misdemeanors, as the latter section covers all misdemeanors.—People v. Joselyn, 80 Cal. 544, 22 Pac. 217.

[d] A person was convicted in a police court attempted to be created under an unconstitutional law. All the processes issued from said court. The pretended trial was held at a session thereof, and judgment was entered by its so-called judge on its records. Held, that the proceedings were void, because the tribunal, being unconstitutional, had no jurisdiction whatever.—Giambonini, Ex parte, 117 Cal. 573, 49 Pac. 732.

[e] San Francisco freeholders' charter, section 2, conferring "concurrent" jurisdiction of misdemeanors on the city's police court, under Constitution, article 11 section 8½, held unconstitutional as opposed to Constitution, article 6, section 5.—Robert v. Police Court of City and County of San Francisco (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 838.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 23½. Courts Vested with Criminal Jurisdiction.

[a] The county court has jurisdiction to try an indictment for misdemeanor; the jurisdiction of justices of the peace being exclusive as to misdemeanors where no indictments have been found.—McCarthy, Ex parte, 53 Cal. 412.

[b] Superior court has no jurisdiction of cases of petit larceny, or such other misdemeanors as have been committed by the legislature to the justice's court.—Wallingford, Ex parte, 60 Cal. 103.

[c] Superior court has no jurisdiction of indictment for violation of Sunday law. Gafford v. Bush, 60 Cal. 149.

[d] Superior court has jurisdiction of prosecution for second offense of petit larceny.—People v. Gutierrez, 74 Cal. 83, 15 Pac. 444.

[e] Superior court has no jurisdiction over misdemeanors when such jurisdiction has been conferred on police court.—Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 558, 559, 21 Pac. 307, 541.

[f] Superior court has jurisdiction exclusive of police court where fine might exceed one thousand dollars.—Neustadt, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 275, 23 Pac. 124.

[g] Superior court has no jurisdiction over misdemeanors.—People v. Lawrence, 82 Cal. 182, 22 Pac. 1120.

[i] Superior court is successor of municipal criminal court.—Williams, Ex parte, 87 Cal. 83, 24 Pac. 602.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 200, 201; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 729-734, §§ 125-129.

§ 24. Jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace, Police Justices and Other Officers.

[a] The act of April 20, 1863, concerning courts of justice in this state, takes away from justices of the peace the power to try and punish Indians for grand larceny conferred upon them by the act of April 22, 1850, for the protection and punishment of Indians. People v. Antonio, 27 Cal. 404.

[b] Whether, when justice of peace had examined witnesses against accused, and proceeded, in other respects, in accordance with the statute, such proceeding would necessarily oust the authority of another magistrate to proceed anew to investigate the same charge, not decided.—Walsh, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 705.

[c] The police judge of San Francisco is vested by the statute with the powers of a magistrate.—Levy v. Brannan, 39 Cal. 485.

[d] The police court of the city and county of San Francisco is not of inferior jurisdiction, in the sense that upon mere collateral inquiry nothing is to be intended in support of its judgment when rendered in a particular case, included by general definition in that class of criminal cases over which jurisdiction has been conferred upon it by law.—Murray, Ex parte, 43 Cal. 455; Simpson, Ex parte, 47 Cal. 127.

[e] Penal Code does not repeal act prescribing jurisdiction of police court of San Francisco.—Simpson, Ex parte, 47 Cal. 127.

[f] Justice court has no jurisdiction of prosecution for public nuisance injurious to health.—Kurtz, In re, 68 Cal. 413, 9 Pac. 449.

[g] Criminal jurisdiction conferred on justice courts is exclusive.—Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 563, 21 Pac. 307, 541.

[h] Fact that particular misdemeanor must be presented by indictment or information does not affect justice's jurisdiction.—Green v. Superior Court, 78 Cal. 564, 21 Pac. 307, 541.

[i] The police judge's court has no jurisdiction of the offense of obtaining money by false pretenses, as the fine may exceed one thousand dollars.—Neustadt, In re, 82 Cal. 273, 23 Pac. 124.

[j] A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction of the crime of embezzlement committed in another county.—Cook, Ex parte, 39 Pac. 16.

[k] Prosecution for obtaining property under false pretenses is not triable by police court but is within jurisdiction of superior court.—People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 472, 24 Pac. 298.

[l] Conviction by justice is valid if he has jurisdiction as justice, though he is acting as police judge under void appointment. Reilly, Ex parte, 85, 633, 24 Pac. 807.

[n] The exclusive jurisdiction vested by the act of March 18, 1855, in police courts, over misdemeanors committed in cities having thirty thousand and under one hundred thousand inhabitants, depends upon the fact that the city has the specified number of inhabitants, and not upon any report or proclamation of that fact.—People v. Wong Wang, 92 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 270.

[o] A justice of the peace has jurisdiction to try violations of a county ordinance by the sale of intoxicating liquors, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 115, providing that justices' courts shall have jurisdiction of all misdemeanors punishable by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both.—Noble, Ex parte, 96 Cal. 362, 31 Pac. 224.

[p] Criminal jurisdiction of a justice of the peace being limited to cases where the punishment by imprisonment cannot exceed six months, nor the fine five hundred dollars, he has not jurisdiction of a violation of the game laws, which Penal Code, section 636, declares a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred, or by imprisonment for not less than one hundred days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Anear, Ex parte, 114 Cal. 370, 46 Pac. 172.

[q] The fact that the purported police judge was also a justice of the peace, and, as such, would have had jurisdiction of the offense and the offender, did not validate the judgment, since it was essential to its validity that the court which rendered it should have had jurisdiction.—Giambonini, Ex parte, 117 Cal. 573, 49 Pac. 732.

[r] The fact that Constitution, article 11, section 8, provides that freeholders' charter shall supersede all laws inconsistent therewith, did not authorize the city of Santa Barbara by freeholders' charter to confer exclusive jurisdiction of breaches of the peace committed therein on its police court, and thereby deprive justices' courts in such city of jurisdiction under the general law.—Dolan, Ex parte, 128 Cal. 460, 60 Pac. 1094.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 201, 204; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 734-754, §§ 130-136.

§ 24½. Jurisdiction of Offense.

[a] City recorder has jurisdiction of assault and battery.—People v. A. L. King, 4 Cal. 307.

[b] Under Woods' Digest, section 132, organizing the court of sessions, and providing that it shall have jurisdiction of all offenses except murder, manslaughter, and arson, it has jurisdiction of an indictment for fighting a duel with fatal results, as that crime is not murder.—People v. Bartlett, 14 Cal. 651.

[c] An indictment cannot be sustained in a state court for swearing falsely before a land officer of the United States, relative to a claim or proceeding affecting the public lands, in violation of the laws of the United States. The state tribunals have no power to punish crimes against the laws of the United States, as such. The same act may, in some cases, be an offense against both governments; then it is cognizable in state courts, so far only as it is an offense against state laws. When the criminal character of the act is impressed upon it by the laws of the United States only, it is cognizable exclusively in their courts.—People v. Kelly, 38 Cal. 145, 99 Am. Dec. 360.

[d] The district courts have jurisdiction of an action commenced, under act of March 1[illegible], 1853, to prevent extortion in office, and to enforce official duty; and the county courts have not jurisdiction of such actions.—Marks, In re, 45 Cal. 199.

[e] Increasing the capital stock of a corporation, and issuing new shares, to be sold at less than par to supply a fund actually needed by the corporation, is not a "fictitious increase of the stock," within Constitution, article 12, section 11, avoiding such increases.—Stein v. Howard, 65 Cal. 616, 4 Pac. 662.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 205-220; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 755-801, §§ 137-191.

§ 25. Locality of Offense.

[a] When property has been stolen in one county and carried into another, jurisdiction of the offense is in either county.—People v. Robles. 29 Cal. 421.

[b] An agent residing out of this state, of a principal who lives in this state, commits the crime of embezzlement in this state if he draws telegraphic checks, in the course of his agency, on his principal, and converts the money to his own use, with intent to embezzle the same.—Hedley, Ex parte, 31 Cal. 108.

[c] Where goods are stolen in one jurisdiction and carried into another, in legal contemplation the crime of larceny is committed in both jurisdictions, and may be punished in either; and, where stolen property is brought into this state from another state or territory, jurisdiction over the offense is conferred by the Penal Code upon any county of this state into or through which the stolen property has been brought.—People v. Staples, 91 Cal. 23, 27 Pac. 523.

[d] Under Penal Code, section 497, providing that one stealing property in another state or country, and bringing it into California, "may be convicted and punished" in the same manner as if such larceny had been committed in California, the superior court of the city and county to which the property was brought had jurisdiction of the accused and the offense.—People v. Black, 122 Cal. 73, 54 Pac. 385.

[e] Penal Code, section 789, providing that the jurisdiction of an action for stealing property in another state and bringing it into California is in any county into which it has been brought, does not apply to property stolen in Canada.—People v. Black, 122 Cal. 73, 54 Pac. 385.

[f] Where the representations on which a prosecution was based were made in letters transmitted by mail, and there was no evidence as to where any of them had been mailed or received, jurisdiction did not appear for want of proof of venue.—People v. Griffith, 122 Cal. 212, 54 Pac. 725.

[g] The legislature has power to declare that a crime committed in part within the state shall be punishable under the laws of the state.—People v. Botkin, 132 Cal. 231, 84 Am. St. Rep. 39, 64 Pac. 286.

[h] If A, in California, prepares and sends a poisonous article to B, in Delaware, with murderous intent, and the article causes B's death in the latter state, such acts constitute the crime of murder committed in part in California, and are within the meaning of Penal Code, article 27, subdivision 1, declaring that "all persons who commit, in whole or in part, any crime within this state," are "liable to punishment under the laws of this state"; and A is triable and punishable under the laws of California, as if the crime had been committed entirely within that state.—People v. Botkin, 132 Cal. 231, 84 Am. St. Rep. 39, 64 Pac. 286.

§ 27. Mode of Acquiring Jurisdiction.

[a] Consent of defendant cannot confer jurisdiction on the court to try him for any other offense than that charged in indictment when it is found and returned by grand jury.—People v. Granice, 50 Cal. 447.

[b] Jurisdiction of court is not impaired by manner in which accused is brought before it. People v. Pratt, 78 Cal. 349, 20 Pac. 731.

[c] When accused is brought before court it has power to try him, and judgment is valid, regardless of validity of proceedings by which he was produced.—Clark, Ex parte, 85 Cal. 204, 24 Pac. 726.

[d] Where the grand jury submitting an indictment had no authority in the matter, the court is without jurisdiction.—(1899) Terrill v. Superior Court of Santa Clara County, 60 Pac. 38, rehearing denied (1900) 127 Cal. xviii, 60 Pac. 516.

[b] To enable officer to take party arrested before another magistrate for examination in case of absence or inability to act it is not essential that the warrant of arrest should contain a direction to that effect.—Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[c] The transfer of the criminal cause from one department of the superior court to another, shortly before the hour of trial, is not a violation of law, and is the exercise of a discretion which is not reviewable, where no abuse of discretion appears, and where the record does not disclose any injury suffered by the transfer.—People v. Venue in civil actions. See Venue.

A. PLACE OF BRINGING PROSECUTION.

§ 33. Locality of Offense.

[a] The crime of embezzlement may be prosecuted in any county through or into which the property was taken by the accused.—(Cal. 1864) People v. Garcia, 25 Cal. 531.

[b] Where property stolen in one county is sold in another to a person who knows it to have been stolen, the courts of the county where the larceny was committed have no jurisdiction to inquire into the guilt of the receiver.—People v. Stakem, 40 Cal. 599.

[c] In prosecution for larceny, venue may be laid in any county into which stolen property may be conveyed.—People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

[d] If a person in one county is intrusted by another with personal property, to be returned to the owner, and afterward takes it to another county, and there embezzles it, he cannot be tried for the crime in the county where he received it, unless he had conceived the intent of committing the crime when he received it.—People v. Murphy, 51 Cal. 376.

[e] The venue of an indictment for obtaining property under false pretenses is properly laid in the county where the representations had final effect, although they were made in another county.—People v. Cummings, 123 Cal. 269, 55 Pac. 898.

[f] Penal Code, section 267, provides that every person who takes away any female under the age of eighteen years from her father, without his consent, for the purpose of prostitution, is punishable, etc. Held, that the gravamen of the offense was the intent with which the female was abducted, and hence, where there was sufficient evidence to warrant a finding that at the time defendant took the female from her home in B county with her father's consent it was for a proper purpose, and that defendant's intent to use her for purposes of prostitution did not arise until after she had been taken by him into A county, the court of A county had jurisdiction of the offense.—People v. Lewis, 141 Cal. 543, 75 Pac. 189.

§ 34. Principals and Accessaries.

[a] The jurisdiction of the offense of an accessary, before or after the fact, is in the county where the accessorial acts were committed, although the offense of the principal was committed in another county.—People v. Hodges, 27 Cal. 340.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 238; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 849, 850, § 228.

§ 35. Organization of New County.

[a] Where an act creating a new county out of an old one assigns it to a different judicial district, an indictment found in the old county for a crime committed in the new county after its creation, but before its organization, should be tried in the judicial district for the new county, if trial be not had until after the new county is organized.—People v. McGuire, 32 Cal. 140.

[b] Where an act creates a new county out of a portion of an old county, and provides for its organization in the future, the old county has jurisdiction for the purposes of indictment of all offenses committed within the new county after the passage of the law and previous to its organization.—People v. McGuire, 32 Cal. 140.

[c] Where, after a prosecution is commenced, the part of the county in which the offense was committed is organized into a new county, such new county has jurisdiction of the offense, the prosecution in the old county having been dismissed.—People v. Stokes, 103 Cal. 193, 42 Am. St. Rep. 102, 37 Pac. 207.

B. CHANGE OF VENUE.

RIGHT TO CHANGE, JURISDICTION AND DISCRETION OF COURT, § 36.
GROUNDS FOR CHANGE AND STATUTES ALLOWING CONSTRUED, § 37.
TIME TO MOVE FOR CHANGE, § 38.
APPLICATION AND PROCEDURE, § 39.
EFFECT OF CHANGE OF VENUE AND SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS, § 40.

Change of venue, as denial of right to trial by jury of peers. See Jury, § 40.

§ 36. Right to Change, Jurisdiction and Discretion of Court.

[a] The legislature, as representative of the state, who is party to the record, may consent to change of venue in a criminal case, upon the application of the accused.—People ex rel. Smith v. Judge of Twelfth District, 17 Cal. 547.

[b] An application to change the place of trial in a criminal case is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, to be disposed of in furtherance of substantial justice.—(Cal. 1872) People v. Congleton, 44 Cal. 92; (1874) People v. Perdue, 49 Cal. 425; (1889) People v. Elliott, 80 Cal. 296, 22 Pac. 207.

[c] Under Penal Code, section 1035, granting or refusing of an application for a change of venue is not a matter of mere discretion of the trial court, but must be warranted by the facts disclosed by the record. (1879) People v. Yoakum, 53 Cal. 566; (1890) Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 600, 24 Pac. 995.

[d] Jurisdiction to change venue in a criminal case is special, and can be exercised only under section 1033 of the Penal Code.—People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327.

[e] Application for change of venue is addressed to discretion of trial court.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 339, 19 Pac. 161.

[f] Change of venue in justice court is discretionary.—Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 602, 24 Pac. 995.

[g] Justice is not ousted of jurisdiction by mere filing of affidavit of prejudice and bias. Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 600, 24 Pac. 995; Wright, Ex parte, 119 Cal. 401, 402, 51 Pac. 639.

§ 37. Grounds for Change and Statutes Allowing Construed.

[a] Upon an application in a criminal case to change the place of trial, on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county where the prisoner was indicted, it is sufficient to state in the affidavit that a jury cannot be selected from a certain portion of the county, who would give the prisoner a fair and impartial trial. People v. Baker, 1 Cal. 403.

[b] Where one hundred citizens united in employing counsel to prosecute the defendant, this was held to be a sufficient ground for a change of venue.—People v. Lee, 5 Cal. 353.

[c] The unsupported affidavit of a defendant charged with larceny that he is the victim of general prejudice in the county is not a sufficient reason for changing the venue.—People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180.

[d] The fact that thirty or forty persons have, upon solicitation, contributed small sums to employ a lawyer to assist the prosecuting attorney in a criminal case does not show such a state of feeling in the whole county as to preclude the obtaining of an impartial jury, or to interfere with the impartial administration of the laws.—People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

[e] Bias or prejudice of judge is not ground for change of venue.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[f] The fact that the trial judge made an erroneous ruling in a previous trial of the same case is no evidence that he is biased or prejudiced.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[g] In an application for a change of the place of trial in a criminal case, where the affidavits set forth merely that in the belief or opinion of the affiants the prisoner could not have a fair trial owing to the popular prejudice against him, and where there was no difficulty in obtaining a jury wholly free from bias or prejudice against the prisoner, it was no abuse of the discretion of the court to deny the motion.—People v. Congleton, 44 Cal. 92.

[h] If it is shown by many affidavits that extreme hostility exists throughout the county, venue should be changed.—People v. Yoakum, 53 Cal. 570.

[i] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 71, providing a mode of securing the attendance of another judge when a trial judge is disqualified, an order changing the place of trial in a criminal case on the ground of disqualification of the judge is void.—People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327.

[j] Fact that mayor presided over council, etc., held not ground for change of venue in prosecution before him as judge of city court for violating ordinance.—Guerrero, In re, 69 Cal. 101, 10 Pac. 261.

[k] Local prejudice existing shortly after commission of crime is not ground for change of venue if it has subsided at time of trial. People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 339, 19 Pac. 161.

[l] When, at time of trial, public mind is wrought into frenzy and press sustains enraged citizens organized to avenge crime and only superior force of police prevents mob execution, change of venue should be granted. People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 339, 19 Pac. 161.

[m] Subdivision 2, section 1033, Penal Code, so far as it authorizes change of venue on application of state without consent of accused, is void.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 360, 25 Pac. 481.

[n] Under statute allowing change of venue where no jury can be obtained, change should not be granted until all legal means to procure jury have been exhausted in vain.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 361, 25 Pac. 481.

[o] Penal Code, section 1033, directs a grant of a change of venue in a criminal case on a showing that a fair trial cannot be had or a jury cannot be obtained. Defendant, who was a man of bad repute, made an assault on a person who had filed an information against him, and fired several shots into his house. The sheriff went to the house of defendant, and was shot by him. A mob was formed, composed of persons of standing in the community, and mob violence was only prevented by prompt removal of defendant to another county. The defendant was denounced in the pulpit and by the press, and public opinion was unanimous that the death penalty should be inflicted. Sixty-eight jurymen were examined on their voir dire, and all but eight had formed an opinion as to defendant's guilt, and three of these were excused. Held, that it was error to refuse a change of venue.—People v. Suesser, 132 Cal. 631, 64 Pac. 1095.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 244, 245; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 868-879, §§ 242-244.

§ 38. Time to Move for Change.

[a] After twelve competent trial jurors have been obtained in a criminal case, it is too late for the defendant to ask for time to prepare affidavits as the basis of an application for a change of venue, on the ground that the defendant cannot have a fair and impartial trial before the jurors passed upon and received.—People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 247; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 882-885, § 249.

§ 39. Application and Procedure.

[a] Affidavit for a change of venue in a criminal case, alleging that accused could not obtain a fair trial in the county where the case is pending without stating the facts or grounds on which such conclusion is based, is insufficient.—People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379; People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

[b] An affidavit that deponent believes that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had is insufficient to support an application for a change of venue.—People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379; People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490.

[c] An accused waives any objection to the denial of his motion for a change of venue, where he is afterward given an opportunity to renew his motion, and fails to call it up or ask the court to pass on it.—People v. Plummer, 9 Cal. 298; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161; People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[d] It is not error in court, on trial for murder, to postpone consideration of a motion on the part of the defendant for a change of venue until an attempt is made to impanel a jury.—People v. Plummer, 9 Cal. 298.

[e] Where a motion is thus postponed, and counsel for prisoner afterward declines, on the intimation of the court, to renew the motion, he cannot take advantage, on appeal, of the failure of the court to order a change of venue.—People v. Plummer, 9 Cal. 298.

[f] Where defendant, in applying for a change of venue, files an affidavit that he is the victim of general prejudice in the county, the fact that there is a failure to get a jury on the first day of the trial is not such a confirmation of the affidavit as to require the court to grant the change of venue when again requested to do so.—People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180.

[g] On an application for a change of venue, an affidavit of the bias of the judge, based on facts asserted on information and belief, does not merit any consideration, when it does not give any sources of information, nor assign any motive.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[h] A deposition by defendant that he is informed by his counsel that the judge or the sheriff and his deputies are biased or prejudiced against him is not sufficient to support an application for a change of venue. People v. Schuler, 28 Cal. 490.

[i] Requisites of affidavits in support of application to change the place of trial of a criminal action, on the ground that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county where the indictment is pending, pointed out.—People v. Yoakum, 53 Cal. 566.

[j] Application for change of venue must show in writing that defendant cannot have an impartial trial in the county.—People v. McGarvey, 56 Cal. 327.

[k] Upon an application by a defendant in a criminal case for a change of the place of trial, counter-affidavits may be filed by the prosecution controverting defendant's statements.—People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 52 Am. Rep. 295, 3 Pac. 597.

[l] Party failing to renew motion for change of venue temporarily denied is not entitled to change.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 339, 340, 19 Pac. 161.

[m] An application for the issuance of subpoenas for witnesses to prove a ground for a change of venue is properly denied, where such application is supported only by the statement of defendant's attorney not made under oath, especially where it does not appear that the clerk had, on application, refused to issue the subpoenas, or that defendant could not procure the attendance of such witnesses.—People v. Elliott, 80 Cal. 296, 22 Pac. 207.

[n] Opinion of defendant that he cannot have fair trial is insufficient to change venue. He must state facts on which he bases opinion.—Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 602, 24 Pac. 995.

[o] Under Penal Code, section 1035, giving the court discretion to grant a change of venue when satisfied that a fair trial cannot be had because of local prejudice, the refusal of a motion, based on local prejudice, supported only by affidavits on information and belief of defendant and his counsel, though opposed by no counter-affidavits, is not an abuse of discretion, the court having already witnessed the examination of a large number of jurors.—People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425, 30 Pac. 581.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 40. Effect of Change of Venue and Subsequent Proceedings.

[a] Although the affidavit upon which the application to change the venue of an action is made may not show any legal cause for such change, still, if the court grants the application, it has acted judicially upon a matter within its cognizance and where it was clothed with a discretion, and by the order the place of trial becomes changed.—People ex rel. Meminger v. Sexton, 24 Cal. 78.

[b] The "copy of the record, pleadings, and proceedings," required by Penal Code, section 1036, to be transmitted on change of venue, does not include a bill of exceptions taken on former trial, nor charges to jury given on such trial.—People v. Bush, 71 Cal. 602, 12 Pac. 781.

[c] Under a statute providing that, on a proper showing in a criminal action, an order must be made "transferring the action" to the court of another county, the court to which the action is transferred acquires jurisdiction on the making of the order, without regard to the transmission of the records as required by Penal Code, sections 1036, 1038.—People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

[d] Though Penal Code, section 1036, provides that, on the removal of a criminal action, the clerk must transmit to the court to which the action is transferred a certified copy of the order of removal, record, pleadings, and proceedings in the action, and contemplates the retention of the original papers in the court from which the transfer is made, yet the irregularity in transmitting the original records as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 399, for the transfer of civil cases, is waived by failure to object thereto in the trial court.—People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

VI. LIMITATION OF PROSECUTION.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS, § 41.
LIMITATION APPLICABLE, § 42.
EXCEPTIONS AND SUSPENSION, § 43.

Limitation of prosecution for assault and battery. See Assault and Battery, § 34.

§ 41. Statutory Provisions.

[a] Article 1443 of the Criminal Practice Act (Wood's Digest, 278), providing that "if when the offense is committed the defendant be out of the state, the indictment may be found within the term limited after his coming within the state, and no time during which the defendant is not an inhabitant of, or usually resident within, the state shall be a part of the limitation," includes the case of a defendant leaving the state after the commission of the crime, as well as the case of his absence from the state at the time of its perpetration, and applies to all offenses.—People v. Montejo, 18 Cal. 38.

§ 42. Limitation Applicable.

[a] A conviction for manslaughter, though had on an indictment for murder, cannot be sustained, unless the indictment was presented within the limitation applicable to manslaughter.—People v. Miller, 12 Cal. 291.

[b] As against the crime of murder, whether of the first or second degree, there is no limitation of time within which a prosecution may be commenced. The phrase "any other felony than murder" does not mean any other felony than murder in the first degree.—People v. Haun, 44 Cal. 96.

[c] A criminal prosecution for a misdemeanor is barred in one year.—People v. Salorse, 62 Cal. 142.

[d] Penal Code, section 801, requiring indictment or information for a misdemeanor to be brought or filed within one year, applies where the information or indictment charges a felony, and defendant is convicted of a misdemeanor.—People v. Picetti, 124 Cal. 361, 57 Pac. 156.

[e] Though the crime of seduction under promise of marriage may be punished either as a felony or as a misdemeanor, when it is punished as a misdemeanor the offense must be deemed a misdemeanor for all purposes; and where the indictment was not found within one year after the commission of the offense, the criminal action is barred by the statute of limitations.—People v. Gray, 137 Cal. 267, 70 Pac. 20.

§ 43. Exceptions and Suspension.

[a] Granting of continuances at request of defendant until bar of statute against information is no waiver of bar.—People v. Oyhens, 85 Cal. 89, 24 Pac. 635.

[b] All misdemeanors prosecuted under indictment or information, under which a defendant may be convicted of a misdemeanor, whether appearing on its face or not, are barred by the statute of limitations in one year.—People v. Picetti, 124 Cal. 361, 57 Pac. 156.

IDENTITY OF OFFENSE, § 53.

Plea of former jeopardy or former acquittal. See post, § 71.

Degree of proof requisite to establish former conviction. See post, 281.

§ 44. In General.

[a] Plea of former conviction is properly overruled where it is not supported by the evidence.—People v. Way, 11 Cal. 392.

[b] Penal Code, section 667, authorizing an increased punishment for a second offense, is not unconstitutional as placing accused twice in jeopardy for the same offense.—People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401.

[c] Sections 1112 and 1021 of Penal Code conflict with constitution, article 1, section 8, as to jeopardy.—People v. Hunckeler, 48 Cal. 334.

[d] Defendant, while on trial, ran away. Held, that he could not be heard to plead "former jeopardy" in bar of another trial. People v. Higgins, 59 Cal. 357.

[e] Where a person is charged with a previous conviction of a similar offense he is not twice put in jeopardy for the same offense within the meaning of the constitution. People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[f] Sections 1021 and 1165, Penal Code, are not in conflict with provision that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for same offense.—People v. Oreileus, 79 Cal. 181, 21 Pac. 724.

[g] Penal Code, section 1180, provides that, on grant of a new trial, all testimony must be produced anew, and the former verdict cannot be used or referred to, either in evidence or in argument, or be pleaded in bar of any conviction which might have been had under the indictment. Held that, if such statute authorizes the placing such defendant on trial for the higher offense after a conviction of the lower offense has been set aside at his instance, the statute is in conflict with Constitution, article 1, section 13, which provides that "no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense." People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

[h] Under Constitution, article 1, section 13, declaring that "no one shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense," and Penal Code, section 687, providing that "no person can be subjected to a second prosecution for a public offense for which he has once been prosecuted and convicted or acquitted," one tried without a plea of former jeopardy cannot for the first time raise the question of former acquittal on motion for new trial, though both trials were in the same court and before the same judge.—People v. Bennett, 114 Cal. 56, 45 Pac. 1013.

[i] Even if a verdict rendered on the void direction of the court may be pleaded as former jeopardy, such plea is a personal privilege, which may or may not be availed of. People v. Stoll, 143 Cal. 689, 77 Pac. 818.

§ 45. Nature and Elements of Former Jeopardy.

[a] Waiver of examination for a felony is not a bar to further examination before another magistrate.—Walsh, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 705.

[b] Where a person is placed on trial, on a valid indictment, before a competent court, and a jury is impaneled, sworn, and charged with the case, he is then in jeopardy, within the meaning of the constitutional provision which declares that no person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.—People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323, 17 Am. Rep. 436.

[c] When jeopardy attaches stated.—People v. Horn, 70 Cal. 18, 11 Pac. 470.

[e] Person is in legal jeopardy when he is tried upon sufficient indictment or information and competent jury has been regularly charged with his deliverance.—People v. Travers, 77 Cal. 177, 178, 19 Pac. 268; Fenton, Ex parte, 77 Cal. 184, 19 Pac. 267.

[f] Where a defendant has once been placed on trial on a valid information before a legal jury, and in a court of competent jurisdiction, he has been placed in jeopardy, and is forever protected from a second prosecution for the same offense, unless the jury was prevented from rendering a verdict by some legal necessity.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

[g] Jeopardy attaches when party is placed upon trial before competent court and jury, upon valid indictment.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 26, 50 Pac. 15.

[h] Impaneling of jury is a part of the trial, and the defendant is on trial, and his legal jeopardy attaches, when the jury has been impaneled and sworn to try the case.—People v. Hawkins, 127 Cal. 372, 59 Pac. 697.

§ 46. Void Judgment.

[a] Void judgment of conviction by court without jurisdiction does not put accused in jeopardy.—People v. Woods, 84 Cal. 443, 23 Pac. 1119; People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 472, 24 Pac. 298.

§ 47. Indictment or Information.

[a] Where defendant is acquitted because of variance between the proof and the indictment, and the variance is such that a conviction is legally impossible, he has not been "in jeopardy" within the constitution, and cannot plead his acquittal in bar to a second indictment.—People v. McNealy, 17 Cal. 333.

[b] If a party be acquitted on the ground of immaterial variance, he cannot be again prosecuted for the same offense. The error of the court or jury, in regarding as material a variance between the allegations and proof will not render the acquittal less available and conclusive, as a bar to a subsequent prosecution; but, if the variance be material, the acquittal will not bar a subsequent prosecution.—People v. Hughes, 41 Cal. 234.

[c] Evidence of an order setting aside an indictment and submitting the case to another grand jury does not sustain a plea of former acquittal.—People v. Varnum, 53 Cal. 630.

[d] Penal Code, section 869, authorizes a proceeding by information only where a defendant has been examined and committed as provided by section 872. Held, that where defendant, proceeded against by information, was committed without the oral testimony of the witnesses having been reduced to writing, as provided by section 872, the dismissal of the information against him before trial constituted no bar to a second prosecution.—Kalloch v. San Francisco Superior Court, 56 Cal. 229.

[e] The sustaining of a demurrer to an information, no direction for a new information being given, is a bar to another prosecution; and the case is not altered by the fact that a new information was filed before the judgment on the demurrer.—People v. Jordan, 63 Cal. 219.

[f] Defendant was convicted of murder. On appeal, the conviction was set aside for defect in the information, and the case remanded for further proceedings. The court below dismissed the prosecution, under Penal Code, section 1385, which allows such dismissal when "in furtherance of justice," and allows the retention of defendant in custody for proceedings on a new information. Held, that defendant was properly proceeded against under a new information, and that his pleas of "once in jeopardy" and "former conviction" constituted no defense.—People v. Schmidt, 64 Cal. 260, 30 Pac. 814.

[g] An erroneous conviction under an information which failed to charge the defendant with the commission of any crime will not support a plea of former conviction or once in jeopardy.—People v. Clark, 67 Cal. 99, 7 Pac. 179.

[h] Conviction based on a void information is a nullity and does not put accused in jeopardy.—People v. Larson, 68 Cal. 19, 8 Pac. 517.

[i] Direction by court to district attorney to file new information when demurrer is sustained is sufficient compliance with section 1008, Penal Code.—People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 34, 18 Pac. 856, 22 Pac. 24.

[j] Penal Code, section 1021, provides that, if the defendant was formerly acquitted on the ground of variance between the indictment or information and the proof, it is not an acquittal of the same offense. Section 1165 provides that, if there be an acquittal for such variance as may be obviated by a new information, the court may detain the prisoner till such information is preferred. Defendant was charged with felonious assault, and the proof showed an assault on a person having an entirely different name from the one alleged in the indictment, and who had never been known by the alleged name, and a verdict of not guilty was ordered, and a new information preferred. Held, that defendant has not been once in jeopardy, notwithstanding section 956, providing that, where an offense involving the commission of a private injury is in other respects sufficiently described to identify the act, an erroneous allegation as to the person injured is not material.—People v. Oreileus, 79 Cal. 178, 21 Pac. 724.

[k] Penal Code, section 1008, providing that a judgment allowing a demurrer to an information shall bar another prosecution for the same offense, unless a new information is directed to be filed, does not apply to a case where no demurrer was interposed.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15.

[l] No jeopardy attaches when party is placed upon trial upon fatally defective indictment.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 26, 50 Pac. 15.

[m] Where former information did not charge an offense, charge that plea of former jeopardy is not sustained is proper and not charge on question of fact.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 28, 29, 50 Pac. 15.

[n] Where defendant procured a judgment, on appeal, that the indictment on which he was tried and convicted is void, he cannot rely on such conviction as a bar to a second prosecution for the same offense, since he was not in jeopardy on a valid indictment.—People v. Terrill, 133 Cal. 120, 65 Pac. 303.

§ 48. Arraignment and Plea.

[a] Defendant pleaded guilty to an indictment, and his plea was entered on the record. Held that, in a second indictment for the same offense, this could be pleaded as a former conviction, although no judgment was pronounced by the court upon his plea of guilty.—People v. Goldstein, 32 Cal. 432.

[b] On a conviction of grand larceny, an order granting a new trial was, upon appeal, reversed. The trial court, however, was deceived into believing that an order denying a new trial had been reversed, and thereupon accepted a plea of guilty of petit larceny, inflicted a fine, and discharged defendant. Afterward, discovering the deceit, the court set aside the judgment, ordered the money returned, caused defendant to be rearrested, and entered judgment upon the verdict. Held, that this judgment was valid, since the plea of guilty of petit larceny was void, and defendant had never been in jeopardy thereon.—People v. Woods, 84 Cal. 441, 23 Pac. 1119.

§ 49. Nolle Prosequi or Dismissal.

[a] Section 597 of the Criminal Practice Act, which empowers the courts to set aside indictments on motion of the prosecution, is not limited to cases of defects in the instrument itself, and such a dismissal is no bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense when it amounts to a felony.—People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

[b] Where defendant has been held to answer by a justice of the peace for a felony, and the grand jury then recommend that it be referred to the next grand jury, and the county court then order that defendant be discharged from custody, the order is not a bar to another prosecution by defendant for the same offense, under code, section 1387, providing that an order for the dismissal of an action is a bar to any other prosecution for the same offense if it is a misdemeanor, but that it is not a bar if the offense is a felony.—Cahill, Ex parte, 52 Cal. 463.

[c] As the dismissal, under code, section 1382, requiring the court, where an indictment has not been found against a party at the next term at which he has been held to answer, to dismiss the prosecution against him, is in the nature of a judgment of nonsuit, another prosecution does not put in second jeopardy.—Clarke, Ex parte, 54 Cal. 412.

[d] An order setting aside an indictment does not operate as an acquittal of the defendant for the offense therein charged, and is not a bar to his further prosecution for the same offense by indictment or information.—Foss, Ex parte, 102 Cal. 347, 41 Am. St. Rep. 182, 36 Pac. 669.

[e] Under Penal Code, sections 1008, 1009, a mere permissive order, sustaining a demurrer, "with leave" to file a new information, entitles defendant to a discharge.—Williams, Ex parte, 116 Cal. 512, 48 Pac. 499.

[f] Several successive dismissals of informations against one charged with a felony, and a grand jury's neglect to consider the charge after investigation, are not a bar to a further prosecution for the same offense.—Patterson v. Police Court of City and County of San Francisco, 123 Cal. 453, 56 Pac. 105.

[g] Defendant was charged with the misdemeanor of petit larceny on an information before a justice of the peace. The information was dismissed, on motion of the district attorney, pursuant to Penal Code, section 1385, and a new information was filed in the superior court, charging defendant with the same petit larceny and with a prior conviction of burglary. Held, that the dismissal was not a bar to the prosecution.—People v. Smith, 143 Cal. 597, 77 Pac. 449.

§ 50. Discharge of Jury Without Verdict.

[a] The discharge of the jury in a criminal case after the adjournment of the court, by the officer having charge of them, in accordance with an order of the court before adjournment to discharge them if they did not agree within a certain time, does not preclude a second trial of the case.—People v. Shotwell, 27 Cal. 394.

[b] If a party is once placed upon his trial, before a competent court and jury, upon a valid indictment, the "jeopardy" attaches, to which he cannot again be subjected, unless the jury be discharged from rendering a verdict by a legal necessity, or by his consent, or in case a verdict is rendered, it be set aside at his instance.—People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467.

[c] The discharge of the jury impaneled in a criminal case, without the consent of the defendant, because after mature deliberation they are unable to agree on a verdict, is not an acquittal of the defendant, and does not entitle him to immunity from further prosecution for the same offense.—McLaughlin, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 211, 10 Am. Rep. 272.

[d] Discharge of jury without consent of defendant appearing on minutes of court, except in cases specifically provided for, operates as an acquittal.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 59, 17 Pac. 941.

[e] Discharge of jury without rendering verdict with consent of accused is not acquittal or jeopardy.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 59, 17 Pac. 941.

[f] Discharge of jury after trial commenced on account of illness of juror without consent of defendant does not constitute jeopardy or acquittal.—People v. Ross, 85 Cal. 383, 24 Pac. 789.

[g] The absence of defendant at the discharge of the jury, when waived by his counsel, does not affect the question of his jeopardy.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

[h] Defendants have been placed in jeopardy where they have been tried for petit larceny, but, before verdict, the court, believing they have been guilty of a greater offense, which includes the crime charged, dismisses the case; and they cannot be rearrested and tried for the same or a higher offense involving the same facts.—People v. Ny Sam Chung, 94 Cal. 304, 28 Am. St. Rep. 129, 29 Pac. 642.

[i] On a trial for assault the court instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, but that they were not bound by his instruction. When the jury were brought into court, and asked if they had agreed on a verdict, the foreman said that they had disagreed; that they did not wish to render a verdict, but that the court would discharge them; that, if they were discharged without a verdict, it would leave the case for the district attorney and the court to handle; and that they did not wish to be placed in the position of acting as a scapegoat. Held, that the failure of the jury to agree, and their consequent discharge, avoided a plea of once in jeopardy; Penal Code, section 1140, providing that the jury may be discharged if, "at the expiration of such time as the court may deem proper, it satisfactorily appears that there is no reasonable probability that the jury can agree."—People v. James, 97 Cal. 400, 32 Pac. 317.

[j] Where defendant was tried on an information charging assault with intent to commit murder, and was convicted of an assault with a deadly weapon, and the jury was discharged without his consent, and on appeal the verdict was set aside as a nullity, defendant was entitled, on a second trial, to his discharge on the ground that he was placed in jeopardy on the first trial.—People v. Arnett, 129 Cal. 306, 61 Pac. 930.

§ 51. Acquittal or Discharge.

[a] A discharge of one of two defendants, jointly indicted under the act of 1851, for the purpose of using him as a witness against his codefendant, operates as an acquittal in legal effect, and is a bar to another prosecution.—People v. Bruzzo, 24 Cal. 41.

[b] Trial and acquittal upon charge of forging indorsement on instrument and uttering it, knowing indorsement on it to have been forged, does not necessarily make the judgment of acquittal of itself an estoppel upon any matter except the forgery of the indorsement by defendant.—People v. Frank, 28 Cal. 507.

[c] A person charged with an offense cannot, after having been once acquitted thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction, be again held to answer for the same offense at the instance of the state, regardless of the errors in the trial resulting in the acquittal, under Constitution, article 1, section 8, providing that no person shall be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense.—People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467.

[d] If, while a jury is out deliberating upon their verdict in a criminal case, and before the expiration of the term, the judge, without calling the jury into court, adjourns the court for the term, it is equivalent to an acquittal of the defendant.—People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323, 7 Am. Rep. 436.

[e] Discharge under indictment for manslaughter, because evidence shows a higher degree, is an acquittal.—People v. Hunckeler, 48 Cal. 331.

[f] Where court, on motion of defendant, instructed jury to acquit, whereupon they retired, and after deliberating returned and rendered verdict of not guilty, defendant had been once in jeopardy, though court had no power to instruct jury to acquit.—People v. Horn, 70 Cal. 17, 11 Pac. 470.

[g] Person is not placed in jeopardy by examination before a magistrate and discharge. Fenton, Ex parte, 77 Cal. 184, 19 Pac. 267.

[h] Acquittal on ground of variance between information and proof is not former acquittal.—People v. Oreileus, 79 Cal. 179, 21 Pac. 724.

[i] Where, after introduction of evidence by the people, a verdict of not guilty is rendered at the "command" of the court, defendant cannot be tried for the same offense, though the court was authorized only to "advise" such a verdict.—People v. Roberts, 114 Cal. 67, 45 Pac. 1016.

[j] On a trial for forgery, the court excluded the instrument claimed to be forged, on the ground of variance with the indictment, and directed a verdict for defendant; and a verdict was returned of "not guilty, on the ground of a material variance between the note set forth in the indictment and the note offered." Held, that defendant could not be again tried for the offense, since by the verdict he was acquitted, and it was immaterial what reason the jury gave for the acquittal, or that there was in fact no material variance.—People v. Terrill, 132 Cal. 497, 64 Pac. 894.

[k] On a trial for forgery, the court excluded the instrument claimed to be forged, on the ground of variance with the indictment, and directed a verdict for defendant. In fact, there was no material variance. Held, that Penal Code, section 1021, providing that if the defendant was formerly acquitted on the ground of variance between the indictment and the proof, without a judgment of acquittal, it was not an acquittal of the same offense, had no application except when there was in fact a material variance; that the variance here, being immaterial, should have been disregarded, and the case is governed by section 1023, providing that, when defendant has been once placed in jeopardy on an indictment, the jeopardy is a bar to another indictment for the same offense, or for any offense necessarily included therein of which he might have been convicted under that indictment.—People v. Terrill, 132 Cal. 497, 64 Pac. 894.

§ 52. Conviction, Reversal or New Trial.

[a] A defendant convicted of a void verdict held in jeopardy, under Penal Code, section 1023, and entitled to a discharge on motion after verdict received and recorded.—People v. Small, 1 Cal. App. 320, 82 Pac. 87.

[b] New trial of same offense for error does not place defendant twice in jeopardy.—People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376.

[c] Where indictment upon which defendant was tried and convicted is set aside on ground of defects in the panel, and a new indictment is found upon which defendant is tried, trial upon the second indictment did not put the defendant twice in jeopardy.—People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

[d] A verdict of guilty in a criminal case, set aside at the instance of accused, is no bar to a second prosecution for the same offense, since the constitutional provision prohibiting the putting of persons twice in jeopardy for the same offense is a privilege secured to accused which he may waive.—People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467.

[e] The trial of accused under a sufficient indictment, and by a jury duly impaneled, sworn and charged, nothing having been done on his part amounting to a voluntary waiver of his rights, is a complete defense as against any future indictment for the same offense, though the judgment was arrested by the court.—Hartman, Ex parte, 44 Cal. 32.

[f] If a defendant, in a criminal case, appeals from a judgment of conviction, but does not move for a new trial, and the judgment is reversed, and a new trial ordered, the former conviction is not a bar to a new trial.—People v. Barric, 49 Cal. 342.

[g] Defendant was convicted of grand larceny, and a new trial was refused him, but granted on his appeal, and the judgment of conviction reversed. Held, that defendant could not base a plea of "once in jeopardy" on the former conviction.—People v. Hardison, 61 Cal. 378.

[h] Conviction can be by plea of guilty and in other modes mentioned in section 689, Penal Code.—Brown, Ex parte, 68 Cal. 181, 8 Pac. 829.

[i] Word "conviction" has reference to verdict of jury and not sentence of court.—Brown, Ex parte, 68 Cal. 181, 8 Pac. 829.

[j] Verdict of guilty is a conviction.—Brown, Ex parte, 68 Cal. 181, 8 Pac. 829.

[k] Conviction is verdict of guilty pronounced by jury.—Brown, Ex parte, 68 Cal. 181, 8 Pac. 829.

[m] Where, on prosecution for a crime of which there are several degrees, a verdict of "guilty" fails to specify the degree, defendant is not entitled to a discharge, but merely to a new trial.—People v. Bannister, 34 Pac. 710, following People v. Travers (1887) 73 Cal. 580, 15 Pac. 293; People v. Lee Yune Chong (1892), 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

[n] Where a judgment in a criminal case is reversed on the ground that the verdict failed to find the degree of the crime of which the defendant was guilty the defendant is not entitled to be discharged under section 13 of article 1 of the constitution, declaring that "no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense." Upon such a reversal, the case should be remanded for a new trial.—People v. Travers, 73 Cal. 580, 15 Pac. 293.

[o] Where appellant demands reversal but instead new trial is ordered, he cannot plead former jeopardy at second trial.—People v. Travers, 77 Cal. 178, 19 Pac. 268.

[p] An arrest of judgment operates as an acquittal only when no evidence has been shown sufficient to charge the defendant with any offense; but it is not necessary that the evidence should be sufficient to convict him.—People v. Eppinger, 109 Cal. 294, 41 Pac. 1037.

[q] A plea of former jeopardy is not supported by proof that a former conviction of defendant for the same offense was reversed, and the prosecution dismissed, on the ground that the information was not filed within the time prescribed by statute after defendant's commitment.—People v. Wickham, 116 Cal. 384, 48 Pac. 329.

[r] Judgment reversed upon appeal does not constitute former jeopardy or acquittal.—People v. Tucker, 117 Cal. 231, 49 Pac. 234.

[s] Defendant was convicted of arson, and appealed, and the cause was reversed and remanded for the insufficiency of the information. On a return of the remittitur the information was dismissed, and a new prosecution instituted. Held, that the defendant could not plead a former conviction, based on the theory that, as the appeal was partially from a motion in arrest, on remand the judgment should have been arrested, and that the dismissal was in effect a judgment of acquittal, under Penal Code, section 1237, providing that an arrest of judgment will operate as an acquittal, since no appeal can be taken from such a motion, and the reversal and remand leave the cause as if no trial had ever been had.—People v. Mooney, 132 Cal. 13, 63 Pac. 1070.

[t] Though a judgment of conviction of manslaughter upon an information for murder operates as an acquittal of the murder, yet where such judgment is reversed upon appeal, and a new trial is ordered, the defendant must plead the former acquittal; and whether the prosecution then proceeds for manslaughter under the original information, without objection of the defendant, or should proceed under a new information for manslaughter, evidence of murder is admissible to sustain a conviction for manslaughter, which is necessarily included in the crime of murder.—People v. McFarlane, 138 Cal. 481, 71 Pac. 568, 72 Pac. 48.

[u] A defendant is not entitled to interpose pleas of former jeopardy and former acquittal merely because a prior conviction has been reversed on appeal, and the trial court directed to sustain a demurrer to the information.—People v. Lee Look, 143 Cal. 216, 76 Pac. 1028.

§ 53. Identity of Offense.

[a] Where defendant was charged with burglary and several convictions, if he admitted the convictions, such admissions should be shown in the minutes of the plea and inserted in the judgment-roll under Penal Code, section 1207.—People v. Noon, 1 Cal. App. 44, 81 Pac. 746.

[b] Conviction of manslaughter is an acquittal of murder.—People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376, 60 Am. Dec. 620.

[c] The defendant was convicted of manslaughter, upon an indictment charging the crime of murder. The verdict was, on his motion, set aside. Held, that to a second trial for murder, upon the same or a different indictment, defendant can plead the former conviction of manslaughter as an acquittal of the crime of murder. Held, also, that under the same indictment the defendant may be again tried, and convicted for manslaughter. People v. Gilmore, 4 Cal. 376, 60 Am. Dec. 620.

[d] Conviction of manslaughter is acquittal for murder, and the prisoner cannot be again tried for murder.—People v. Backus, 5 Cal. 275, 278.

[e] A defendant indicted for a higher, but only convicted of a lower, offense, is acquitted of the higher, and cannot be again indicted therefor.—People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389.

[f] Conviction of an offense not included in that charged, is no bar to a second trial for the offense charged.—People v. Helbing, 61 Cal. 620.

[g] Murder of two persons by one act is two offenses, and conviction or acquittal in one case does not bar prosecution in the other.—People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 52 Am. Rep. 295, 2 Pac. 744, 3 Pac. 597.

[h] Defendant indicted for murder and found guilty of murder of second degree, who, on his own motion, secures a new trial, may on a retrial be convicted of murder of the first degree.—People v. Keefer, 65 Cal. 232.

[i] Preliminary examination, resulting in holding to answer for manslaughter, is no bar to another examination or information on charge of murder.—People v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594, 56 Am. Rep. 119, 6 Pac. 698.

[j] On indictment for burglary, a verdict of guilty of an attempt to commit petit larceny is a nullity, as larceny is not included in burglary, and the jury should not be discharged, but be sent back for further deliberation; but, if discharged with defendant's consent, he is not thereby put in jeopardy.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 57, 17 Pac. 941.

[k] Conviction for one crime is no bar to prosecution for another merely because they are so closely related in point of time that it is impossible to separate evidence relating to them.—People v. Bentley, 77 Cal. 8, 11 Am. St. Rep. 225, 18 Pac. 799.

[l] Conviction for manslaughter under indictment for murder reversed on appeal will not sustain plea of former jeopardy and former acquittal upon new trial for murder under same indictment.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 216, 19 Pac. 490.

[m] Under Penal Code, section 687, providing that "no person can be subjected to a second prosecution for a public offense for which he has been prosecuted and convicted, or acquitted," an acquittal on an indictment for libel contained in a certain article, published at a certain time, in a certain paper, is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for libel contained in the same article, published at the same time, in the same paper, though the defamatory words alleged are not the same.—People v. Stephens, 79 Cal. 428, 21 Pac. 856, 4 L. R. A. 845.

[n] One tried for assault to murder and found guilty of assault with deadly weapon is acquitted of former charge.—People v. Gordon, 88 Cal. 425, 26 Pac. 502.

[o] If goods stolen from different persons are received at same time the offense is single, and a plea of former acquittal of a charge of receiving goods stolen from one of such persons is a good plea to a charge of receiving any other stolen goods at the same time.—People v. Willard, 92 Cal. 482, 28 Pac. 585.

[p] When indictment is sufficient, and proceedings thereon regular, before tribunal having jurisdiction, down to time when jeopardy attaches, there can be no second jeopardy allowed in favor of the prosecution on account of any lapse or error at a later stage; and a former conviction or acquittal of a minor offense is a bar to a prosecution for the same act charged as a higher crime, whenever the defendant on the latter might be legally convicted on the former had there been no other prosecution.—People v. Ny Sam Chung, 94 Cal. 304, 28 Am. St. Rep. 129, 29 Pac. 642.

[q] Where the same act violates a state law and a city ordinance, the person charged therewith may be tried for both offenses, without any violation of the constitutional provision that no one shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.—Hong Shen, Ex parte, 98 Cal. 681, 33 Pac. 799.

[r] Where, on a trial for an assault with intent to commit murder, defendant is convicted of an assault with a deadly weapon, such conviction is an acquittal of the higher offense, and the fact that the judgment of conviction of the lower offense was set aside, and a new trial granted, at the instance of defendant, does not entitle the state to place him on trial the second time for the higher offense.—People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

[s] Where one offense is a necessary element in, and constitutes an essential part of, another defense, and both are in fact but one transaction, a conviction or acquittal of one is a bar to the prosecution for the other.—People v. Defoor, 100 Cal. 150, 34 Pac. 642.

[t] The pendency of an indictment for obtaining a note executed by S. under false pretenses is no obstacle to the finding and trial of another indictment, charging defendant with obtaining a joint note executed by S. and another under false pretenses.—People v. Cummings, 123 Cal. 269, 55 Pac. 898.

[u] Conviction of a battery is a bar to prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder.—People v. McDaniels, 137 Cal. 192, 69 Pac. 1006.

[v] Burglary being the entering of a building with intent to commit larceny or any felony (Penal Code, section 459), and larceny being the felonious stealing or carrying away of the personal property of another (section 484), a conviction of larceny committed during the same transaction, and immediately after entering the building, is not a bar to a prosecution for burglary in entering the building with intent to commit larceny.—People v. Devlin, 143 Cal. 128, 76 Pac. 900.

§ 54. Jurisdiction of Preliminary Proceedings.

[a] Judges of first instance have jurisdiction to act as examining and committing magistrates.—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[b] Justices of supreme court and district judges, being made by the constitution of the state conservators of the peace, are, ex vi termini, empowered to act in the apprehension and commitment of offenders. (Per Bennett, J.)—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[c] Police judge of Santa Barbara is authorized to conduct examination of one charged with manslaughter.—People v. More, 68 Cal. 503, 9 Pac. 461, 463.

[d] Defendant was arrested on a warrant issued by a justice of the peace of a certain township, on a complaint filed before him. Thereafter, and while this proceeding was pending, he was again arrested on a warrant issued by a justice of the peace of another township, and was by him committed. On this commitment the information was filed under which he was convicted. Held, that the proceeding before the first magistrate did not affect the validity of the information, nor deprive the superior court of jurisdiction.—People v. Johnson, 71 Cal. 384, 12 Pac. 261.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 105, providing that a justice of the peace may hold the court of any other justice of the peace in the same county, where a complaint for burglary is filed with a justice of the peace, any other justice of the peace in the same county has jurisdiction to hear the preliminary examination thereon if requested so to do by the justice before whom the complaint was filed.—People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202.

[f] The police court of the city and county of San Francisco, and police judges sitting as magistrates, have jurisdiction to hold a preliminary examination of a defendant charged with the offense of criminal libel, although the police court has no jurisdiction to try that offense.—People v. Crespi, 115 Cal. 50, 46 Pac. 863.

[g] A justice of the peace, the boundaries of whose township were so changed after his appointment as to make him a nonresident thereof, but who has not been ousted and continues to act, is a justice de facto, and his right to hold a preliminary examination cannot be questioned on appeal from conviction. People v. Schorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

[h] Justice of the peace may call in another justice for the purpose of making preliminary examination.—People v. Schorn, 116 Cal. 506, 48 Pac. 495.

[i] An order by a justice of the peace requesting another justice to act for him need not state the reason therefor, no statute requiring it to do so.—People v. Schorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

§ 55. Preliminary Complaint or Affidavit.

[a] The addition "Jr." is no part of a name proper. Its insertion in a criminal complaint is immaterial if no party is misled thereby.—City and County of San Francisco v. Randall, 54 Cal. 408.

[b] A justice of the peace is authorized to administer and certify to the oath of a complainant in a criminal prosecution.—People v. Le Roy, 65 Cal. 613, 4 Pac. 649.

[c] A complaint made before a justice of the peace charging a defendant with the crime alleged in the information under which an examination is held, and witnesses examined before such magistrate, and the defendant thereupon held to answer, is a sufficient ground to warrant the district attorney in filing an information.—People v. Beam, 66 Cal. 394, 5 Pac. 677.

[d] A defendant charged with crime may be held by the examining magistrate to answer, although in the complaint he was given a fictitious name.—People v. Wheeler, 73 Cal. 252, 14 Pac. 796.

[e] Stenographer appointed to take testimony given on preliminary examination need not be sworn.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 101, 16 Pac. 544.

[f] Complaint charging violation of city ordinance need not set out ordinance, it is sufficient to refer to it and describe offense prohibited.—Lane, Ex parte, 76 Cal. 558, 18 Pac. 677.

[g] Information required to be filed within one year in misdemeanor case is a paper required to be filed by district attorney and not a complaint.—People v. Ayhens, 85 Cal. 88, 24 Pac. 635.

[h] Failure of complaint to state time of commission of misdemeanor does not deprive police court of jurisdiction.—Ah Sing, Ex parte, 87 Cal. 423, 25 Pac. 552.

[i] The validity of a conviction on an information filed against one charged with an offense is not dependent on the regularity of the complaint on which he was arrested and brought before the committing magistrate.—People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[j] Courts disregard fractions of days when necessary; and one may be accused of an offense on the very day of its commission. People v. Squires, 99 Cal. 327.

[k] Complaint must show that defendant has been builty of some designated offense; though it need not necessarily charge the offense with all the technical nicety of an indictment or information; but it must state the essential elements of the crime to a common certainty.—People v. Howard, 111 Cal. 655, 44 Pac. 342.

[l] Where complaint does not state complete offense justice has no jurisdiction.—Peterson, Ex parte, 119 Cal. 579, 51 Pac. 859.

[m] Under section 2093, Code of Civil Procedure, clerk of police court of Los Angeles is authorized to administer oath to person verifying criminal complaint.—People v. Vasalo, 120 Cal. 169, 52 Pac. 305.

[n] The misstatement of the name of an affiant in a complaint charging an offense will not invalidate subsequent proceedings based on such complaint, which was subscribed by affiant.—People v. George, 121 Cal. 492, 53 Pac. 1098.

[o] Under Penal Code, section 811, providing that, where an information of the commission of a public offense is laid before a magistrate, he must examine the informant and any witness he may produce, etc., the omission of a magistrate to indorse on a complaint for arson the fact that such complaint was filed did not deprive the magistrate of jurisdiction of the case.—People v. Hiltel, 131 Cal. 577, 63 Pac. 919.

[p] Signature to complaint by mark of complainant accompanied by signature of justice to jurat is sufficient.—People v. McDaniels, 141 Cal. 115, 74 Pac. 773.

[q] Penal Code, section 956, provides that when an offense involves the commission of a private injury, and is described with sufficient certainty in other respects to identify the act, an erroneous allegation as to the person injured or intended to be injured is not material; and section 960 provides that no information is insufficient by reason of any defect which does not tend to prejudice a substantial right of the defendant on the merits. Held, that it was not necessary that the complaint on a prosecution for burglary should allege the ownership of the building entered, where the street number of the premises was given.—People v. Price, 143 Cal. 351, 77 Pac. 73.

[r] Where a charge has been examined by a magistrate, and the examination warrants holding accused to answer, imperfections in the complaint are cured and the commitment is legal.—People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

[s] Where the deposition of the informer was not taken by the justice before issuing the warrant for defendant's arrest on the charge of threatening to commit an offense against the person of another, and the written information did not show the facts necessary to justify the issue of the warrant, defendant was entitled to be discharged.—Connor, Ex parte (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 999.

§ 56. Preliminary Warrant.

[a] Where a justice of the peace issues a warrant to arrest and bring before him for examination a party charged with crime, the officer making the arrest may take the party before another justice of the peace of the same county, who may make the examination and commit, in case of the absence or inability to act of the justice issuing the warrant. Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[b] When a person charged with murder is arrested and taken before a justice of the peace, and by him held for examination, and he subsequently is examined before another justice of the peace and held to answer, it is not necessary, to confer jurisdiction on such second magistrate, that another complaint be made and a second warrant issued.—Moan, Ex parte, 65 Cal. 216, 3 Pac. 644.

[c] Magistrate has no power to issue warrant without some evidence tending to show guilt of accused. Mere expression of opinion of guilt under oath is insufficient.—Dimmig, Ex parte, 74 Cal. 166, 15 Pac. 619.

[d] Where complaint is positive and direct in its allegation of every fact necessary to support the charge laid it is a sufficient deposition, within the meaning of sections 811, 812, and 813 of the Penal Code, to sustain a warrant of arrest issued thereon. People v. Staples, 91 Cal. 23, 27 Pac. 523.

[e] Where one charged with committing a felony is examined, and evidence adduced sufficient to justify the magistrate in holding the accused to answer the charge, an irregularity in the warrant of arrest is immaterial, since thereafter the accused is held under the commitment, which authorizes the filing of an information.—People v. Staples, 91 Cal. 23, 27 Pac. 523.

[f] A warrant can have no support in a complaint not having the date of the complaint referred to in the warrant.—Lewis, Ex parte (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 996.

§ 57. Necessity for Examination and Right to Waive It.

[a] Chapter 7 of Criminal Practice Act in effect requires that witnesses for people shall be examined, but does not contemplate a total waiver by defendant of any examination into charge made against him.—Walsh, Ex parte, 39 Cal. 705.

[b] The act of 1866, authorizing accused persons to become witnesses in their own behalf, is not applicable to preliminary examinations before committing magistrates. People v. Gibbons, 43 Cal. 557.

[c] Provisions of Penal Code in cases of felony contemplate an examination of the case by the committing magistrate, and do not authorize a waiver of examination by the defendant.—Kalloch v. Superior Court, 56 Cal. 229.

[d] The provision of Penal Code, section 995, that an information may be set aside when defendant has not been legally committed by a magistrate before its filing, does not apply in cases of indictment.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[e] When information is set aside because defendant has not been legally committed, he must be re-examined before another information can be filed.—Baker, Ex parte, 88 Cal. 85, 25 Pac. 966.

[f] Under Constitution, article 1, section 8, permitting prosecution by information "after examination and commitment by a magistrate," and Penal Code, section 1165, imposing on the court the duty of ordering the detention of the defendant, that a new information may be preferred, where he is acquitted on the ground of a variance between the charge as alleged and the proof, one who has been examined and committed on a charge of grand larceny may, after a trial and disagreement, by direction of the court, be charged by a new information with embezzlement without any new examination and commitment, if the evidence taken on the first examination justifies an information for embezzlement.—Nicholas, Ex parte, 91 Cal. 640, 28 Pac. 47.

[g] The defendant has a right to a public examination before the committing magistrate, but under the provisions of section 868 of the Penal Code, he may waive such right by requesting the exclusion of all persons except those specified in that section. People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57, 46 Pac. 896.

[h] Defendant accused of felony cannot waive preliminary examination.—People v. Cokahnour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[i] An examination before information filed is sufficient, though no witnesses are examined, where accused makes a written confession.—People v. Cokahnour, 120 Cal. 253, 52 Pac. 505.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 308-311; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1118-1124, §§ 478-493.

§ 58. Conduct of Examination.

[a] The act of 1851, to regulate proceedings before committing magistrates, contains no provision authorizing or permitting an oath to be administered to the person accused. He is not to be examined generally, nor cross-examined at all. Only the five questions specified are to be put to him, and his answers thereto must be committed to writing.—People v. Gibbons, 43 Cal. 557.

[b] Examination held sufficient to authorize filing of information under section 809, Penal Code.—People v. More, 68 Cal. 503, 9 Pac. 461, 463.

[c] Failure of magistrate to allow accused time to employ counsel or to furnish one is not ground for setting aside information. People v. Elliott, 80 Cal. 300, 22 Pac. 207.

[d] The refusal of a committing magistrate to continue the hearing long enough to enable accused to employ counsel, on the ground that accused is a lawyer himself, is ground of setting aside the information. People v. Napthaly, 105 Cal. 641, 39 Pac. 29.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 808, making justices of the supreme court, judges of the superior courts, justices of the peace, and police magistrates in cities and towns, magistrates on a preliminary examination of one charged with crime before a judge of the superior court, such judge has no other or greater powers than a justice of the peace or other officer when exercising the functions of a magistrate, and the county clerk cannot legally administer oaths to witnesses; and this though there is nothing in the statute which requires the magistrate to personally swear the witnesses, or negatives his right to have the service of the clerk for such purposes.—People v. Cohen, 118 Cal. 74, 50 Pac. 20.

[f] Preliminary examination is complete without swearing witnesses when defendant confesses guilt.—People v. Cokhanour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[g] Defendant accused of felony may waive time to prepare for preliminary examination.—People v. Cokahnour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[h] Statute does not confer on one jointly charged with another the right to a separate examination before the magistrate.—People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096.

[i] Even though the statute conferred on one jointly charged with another the right to a separate examination, error in refusing it would not be jurisdictional.—People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096.

[j] An information cannot be set aside on the ground that defendant has not been "legally committed," in that there was not evidence before the magistrate to show an offence, where evidence was heard by the magistrate.—People v. Beach, 122 Cal. 37, 54 Pac. 369.

[k] Penal Code, section 1008, providing for resubmission to the grand jury where a previous indictment has been held defective, and reciting that defendant "may be examined before a magistrate," does not compel a previous preliminary examination.—People v. Sexton, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

[l] Under Penal Code, section 869, providing that the magistrate before whom an examining trial is held may appoint a shorthand reporter to take down the evidence, it is not necessary that there should be a preliminary showing as to the qualification of the person appointed, especially where the magistrate knows the person appointed to be competent, and there is no objection on the ground of incompetency.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

[m] A person is not rendered incompetent as such stenographer by being an employee of the district attorney.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

[n] It is not necessary that the stenographer be sworn; Code of Civil Procedure, section 270, relative to the oath to be taken by the reporter of the superior court, having no application.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

[o] It is not necessary that the person appointed be the official reporter of any court. People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

[p] Where there is evidence before the committing magistrate that a watch was taken from one B. when he was asleep, and when defendant and one F. were present, and it was afterward found concealed on the person of F., so as indicate that it must have been taken feloniously, a finding by the trial court that defendant had been legally committed by the magistrate will not be disturbed on appeal.—People v. Sherman, 32 Pac. 879.

[q] Evidence sufficient for a conviction held not necessary for a committing magistrate to hold one for trial.—Mitchell, In re (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 347.

§ 58½ Postponement of Examination.

[a] Postponement of preliminary examination beyond six days does not affect jurisdiction of magistrate.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 326, 51 Pac. 538.

[b] Where a week elapsed between the first arraignment and the preliminary examination of one accused of rape, it was not error for the magistrate to refuse a further postponement, that accused might procure an attorney.—People v. Figueroa, 134 Cal. 159, 66 Pac. 202.

[c] An information will not be set aside on the ground that the examining magistrate postponed the preliminary examination for more than two days at a time witnout the consent of defendant, though Penal Code, section 861, provides that a preliminary examination cannot be so postponed.—People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210, 72 Pac. 899.

§ 59. Discharge or Holding to Answer.

[a] If it appear on the examination of a person before a committing magistrate that the prisoner is guilty of felony, although different from that specified in the warrant of arrest, it is the duty of the officer to commit the prisoner for trial, for the offense of which he appears to be guilty.—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[b] On finding a commitment illegal, if it appear that the party is guilty of an offense, the court will not discharge him without allowing time for his arrest by proper authority.—Crandall, Ex parte, 2 Cal. 144.

[c] On preliminary examination committing magistrate may hold defendant to answer for any offense which evidence shows him to have committed; and his power in this respect is not limited to such offenses as are embraced within crime charged in complaint.—People v. Wheeler, 73 Cal. 252, 14 Pac. 796.

[d] Committing magistrate must hold defendant to answer for offense proved regardless of offense charged.—People v. Lee Look, 143 Cal. 216, 76 Pac. 1028.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 312, 313; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1125-1128, §§ 494-500.

§ 60. Order or Warrant of Commitment and Custody of Accused.

[a] If an order of commitment be sufficient in substance, it will be held good on habeas corpus, although it contain more than is necessary to be stated therein. The unnecessary matter will be regarded as surplusage.—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[b] Commitment for larceny must state of what property the larceny alleged was committed, to whom it belonged, its value, and the time when, and the place where the offense was committed.—Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[c] A justice may issue a second commitment in place of a defective one previously issued, provided he have any record or entry to which he can refer for guidance; but he cannot resort merely to his own recollection for the facts of the case.—Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[d] Where commitment, issued by a justice of the peace of the city and county of Sacramento, is directed to the sheriff of said city or county, the warden of the county jail thereof has authority to receive and retain in his custody the party charged.—Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[e] When a party is convicted of a criminal offense and appeals to the county court, and, pending the appeal, is released on bail, and the judgment is affirmed, a second commitment need only recite the judgment of conviction, and state that defendant appealed and the judgment was affirmed. It need not recite the judgment of the county court or that a remittitur had been issued.—Jones, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 209.

[f] Commitment by a justice of the peace holding a party to appear before a grand jury to answer upon a charge of murder must state the name of the person alleged to have been murdered. But the omission of such name is not such a defect as will entitle the accused to be discharged on habeas corpus.—Bull, Ex parte, 42 Cal. 196.

[g] Upon the examination of the defendant before the justice the order for his confinement, provided for by section 872, Penal Code, was indorsed upon the depositions taken at the examination and not upon the depositions accompanying the original information. Held, the order complied with the section referred to.—People v. Hardisson, 61 Cal. 378.

[h] Penal Code, section 872, provides that an examining magistrate shall indorse his commitment of defendant "on the deposition" taken at the examination. Held, where the deposition was taken in shorthand and written out afterward, that an indorsement of commitment on the complaint was sufficient, under section 1404, providing that departures from modes prescribed in the code shall be immaterial, unless they prejudice defendant's substantial rights.—People v. Young, 64 Cal. 212, 30 Pac. 628.

[i] Commitment by justice of the peace for manslaughter held sufficient.—Moan, Ex parte, 65 Cal. 216, 3 Pac. 644.

[j] In the order of commitment the police judge found that "the offense, as charged in the complaint, felony, to wit, attempt to commit robbery, has been committed." The complaint charged an assault with intent to commit robbery. Held, that the order should be construed as a finding that the offense charged in the complaint had been committed.—People v. Lee Ah Chuck, 66 Cal. 662.

[k] Failure of magistrate to add to commitment that defendant is admitted to bail in certain sum is not jurisdictional defect.—People v. Thompson, 84 Cal. 601, 24 Pac. 384.

[m] Warrant of commitment may be amended at any time to fully and formally describe offense proved by depositions.—Keil, Ex parte, 85 Cal. 310, 24 Pac. 742.

[n] An order of commitment to answer the charge of murder is not invalid by reason of its failure to give the name of deceased, this not being required by Penal Code, section 872.—Walpole, Ex parte, 85 Cal. 362, 24 Pac. 657.

[o] A defect in the commitment in describing the offense is immaterial if it is sufficiently described in the order indorsed on the deposition.—Estrado, Ex parte, 88 Cal. 316, 26 Pac. 209.

[p] The requirement that the order holding defendant to answer on preliminary examination must be indorsed on the depositions is sufficiently complied with by an indorsement thereof on the complaint.—People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

[q] The fact that defendant was committed on preliminary examination on the order holding him to answer, without a formal commitment running to the sheriff, as required by Penal Code, sections 876, 877, is material only while he is in custody thereunder, and is not ground for reversal of a conviction.—People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

[r] Commitment will support information where magistrate has jurisdiction, though irregular, if irregularity does not affect substantial rights of accused.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 326, 51 Pac. 538.

[s] Commitment for violation of a municipal ordinance to city jail, which is also used as a branch county jail, should properly be to custody of the city marshal, rather than to that of the sheriff; but where the defendant was committed to the custody of the sheriff he will be remanded upon habeas corpus to the custody of the sheriff, unless he insists upon the custody of the marshal.—Murphy, In re, 128 Cal. 29, 60 Pac. 930.

[t] Penal Code, section 872, relative to the preliminary examination of an accused, provides that, if there is sufficient cause to believe defendant guilty, the magistrate must indorse on the deposition an order to the effect that it appears to him that the offense mentioned in the deposition has been committed, and that there is cause to believe defendant guilty, and ordering that he be held to answer and committed. Held, that it was proper for the magistrate to indorse the commitment on the original complaint, treating it as a deposition within the statute.—People v. Price, 143 Cal. 351, 77 Pac. 73.

§ 61. Record or Certificate and Return to Preliminary Examination.

[a] Statute contemplates that order of discharge or commitment made by the magistrate upon the completion of the examination of a party charged with crime shall be reduced to writing, and, if the magistrate has indorsed his order on the depositions and statement (Crim. Prac. Act, secs. 163, 164), or entered it in his docket (where there have been neither depositions nor statement), commitments may be issued until the object of the order has been accomplished.—Branigan, Ex parte, 19 Cal. 133.

[b] Reporter's notes of preliminary examination need not be transcribed and filed to give jurisdiction for information.—People v. Riley, 65 Cal. 107.

[c] A justice's commitment indorsed upon the depositions, and signed by him, and in the language of the statute as follows: "It appearing to me that the offense in the written depositions mentioned has been committed, and that there is sufficient cause to believe the within named [giving name] guilty thereof, I order that he be held to answer to the same," etc., is sufficient.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 576, 10 Pac. 207.

[d] Stenographer's certificate to transcript of evidence given at preliminary examination held to sufficiently comply with Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 101, 16 Pac. 544.

[e] Absence of correct certificate to transcript of evidence given at preliminary examination cannot be supplied by parol evidence.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 214, 215, 19 Pac. 490.

[f] Certificate of reporter to notes taken at preliminary examination must state that transcript is correct statement of testimony and proceedings.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 215, 19 Pac. 490.

[g] Where commitment is defective, papers sent up by magistrate may be returned to him, and he may correct them without reexamination of facts.—People v. Thompson, 84 Cal. 600, 601, 24 Pac. 384.

[h] Provision of section 872, Penal Code, requires indorsement on deposition; yet it is essential that the order be reduced to writing, and signed by the magistrate, and entered either upon the official docket of the magistrate or upon the complaint or depositions.—People v. Wilson, 93 Cal. 377, 28 Pac. 1061.

[i] Order in writing, holding a defendant to answer upon the charge for which an information is filed, is in fact and in law made when it is entered upon the docket of the justice, and authorizes the filing of an information by the district attorney; and the failure to indorse the order upon the complaint, or the depositions taken at the preliminary examination, in no manner deprives the order of its validity, or affects any substantial right of the defendant, and neither such failure, nor the failure to reduce the testimony of the witnesses to writing, or to file a written commitment in the superior court, is sufficient ground for a motion to set aside the information for want of a legal commitment before its filing.—People v. Wallace, 94 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 950.

[j] Penal Code, section 872, provides that if, on a preliminary examination, it appears that a public offense has been committed, and there is sufficient cause to believe defendant guilty thereof, the magistrate must make or indorse on the depositions taken on such examination an order to that effect, and that defendant be held to answer to the same. Held, that the section is sufficiently complied with where an order of commitment in due form was filed with the other papers in the case, and referred to the complaint as "the within deposition."—People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[k] Code of Civil Procedure, section 105, requiring a justice acting for another to make in the docket "proper entry of the proceedings . . . . subscribed by him," requires only such entries as the original justice would have been required to make; and hence, since no statute requires any particular proceedings on preliminary examination to be entered, failure of an attending justice holding a preliminary examination to subscribe his name to the docket affects no substantial right of defendant.—People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

[l] Duty imposed upon magistrate to indorse the order of discharge upon the "depositions" does not indicate that reporter's notes must be transcribed; but term "depositions" applies to testimony taken when complaint was first presented to magistrate before issuing the warrant, as well as to the testimony of witnesses taken upon examination of accused. Where accused is discharged, magistrate may properly indorse order upon former "depositions," without necessity of any transcription of the reporter's notes taken at the examination.—Mattingly v. Nichols, 133 Cal. 332, 65 Pac. 748.

§ 62. Objections and Exceptions.

[a] It is too late to raise an objection to an affidavit or warrant of arrest on a criminal charge, after the examination of the prisoner has been had and it appears that there is probable cause to suppose that he is guilty of felony, and an order of commitment has been made by the committing magistrate. So held upon an application to discharge a prisoner on habeas corpus.—People v. Smith, 1 Cal. 9.

[b] Where accused was represented by counsel at his preliminary hearing, he cannot object for the first time on the trial that the reporter appointed to take testimony before the magistrate did not possess the necessary qualifications.—People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

§ 63. Summary Trial.

[a] A judgment on a summary conviction imposing a cumulative sentence need not set out the previous judgments, but is sufficient if it directs each term "to commence at the expiration of previous sentences"; the form being the same as in courts of general jurisdiction, and the sentence being definite and certain by reference to the record.—People v. Forbes, 22 Cal. 135.

[b] A judgment of a justice that the defendant be fined three hundred dollars, and,

Digitized by Google

"in default of the payment of said fine," be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding three hundred days, held to comply with Penal Code, section 1205: "A judgment that the defendant pay a fine may also direct that he be imprisoned until the fine be satisfied, specifying the extent of the imprisonment, which must not exceed one day for every dollar of the fine."—Ellis, Ex parte, 54 Cal. 204.

[c] Where, upon a sentence being imposed by a police court upon a conviction for an offense within the jurisdiction of the court, an entry is made in the clerk's minute-book which shows the offense and sentence, it is immaterial that the formal judgment is not entered on the judgment docket for more than twenty days afterward.—Raye, Ex parte, 63 Cal. 491.

[d] Judgment of conviction failing to recite date of offense and that it was feloniously committed, is not void.—Turner, Ex parte, 75 Cal. 228, 16 Pac. 898.

[e] Code authorizes imprisonment for enforcement of fine in misdemeanor cases.—Miller, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 455, 22 Pac. 1113.

[f] Penal Code, section 1426, provides that proceedings before a justice court for a public offense must be commenced by complaint setting forth the offense with such particularity that the defendant will understand the nature of the charge; and section 960 declares that no indictment or information shall be insufficient by reason of a defect in form not prejudicial to a substantial right of the defendant on the merits. Held, that a complaint which clearly informs defendant of the nature of the charge is not defective for failure to conclude with the words, "against the form of the statute in such case made and provided," or their equivalent.—Mansfield, In re, 106 Cal. 400, 39 Pac. 775.

[g] Constitution, article II, section 8½, authorizes freeholders' charters to provide for the regulation and jurisdiction of police courts, and Santa Barbara freeholders' charter (article 6) declares that the police court of such city shall have exclusive jurisdiction of proceedings for breach of the peace in certain cases. Held, that since the constitution did not authorize the city to confer exclusive jurisdiction on its police court, and the charter would not be construed to repeal a general law by implication, vesting the same jurisdiction in justices' courts, an application for habeas corpus on the ground that a commitment issued out of a justice's court in such city was void for want of jurisdiction would be denied.—Dolan, Ex parte, 128 Cal. 460, 60 Pac. 1094.

[h] Where the tenth day after an examining trial before a magistrate was Sunday, the filing of the transcript of the shorthand notes of the testimony on the following Monday was within ten days, as required.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

[i] In prosecution for a violation of county ordinance, affidavit of complaint held not required to set out title and date of passage of ordinance, notwithstanding Penal Code, section 963.—Luening, Ex parte (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 445.

[j] Under Statutes of 1905, pages 944, 952, 956, chapter 15, sections 13, 14, 51, 95, a warrant of commitment issued by a judge of the police court of the city of San Bernardino, held sufficient, and not to entitle the prisoner to release on habeas corpus.—Baxter, Ex parte (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 998.

§ 64. Appeal and Review and Trial de Novo.

[a] The county court has the sole appellate jurisdiction of all civil and criminal cases arising in justices' courts, subject to such restriction as the legislature may impose by making the decisions of the justice final.—People v. Fowler, 9 Cal. 85.

[b] A bill of exceptions or a statement of the case is not required on appeal from the police judge's court of the city of San Francisco to the county court, but such appeal can only be heard by and through a trial de novo in the appellate court.—People v. Maguire, 26 Cal. 635.

[c] On affirmance on appeal of a judgment, a second commitment need only recite the judgment, that defendant appealed, and that the judgment was affirmed.—Jones, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 209.

[d] Where an appeal is taken from a judgment of a justice, and defendant is released from custody pending appeal, he must be recommitted to prison, upon a dismissal of the appeal, notwithstanding no certificate of probable cause was filed.—Whitty, Ex parte, 65 Cal. 168.

[e] There can be no trial of criminal case in superior court before there has been a trial in justice court, where latter court has original jurisdiction.—Brown v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 15, 16, 13 Pac. 70.

[f] Proper course, where superior court has failed to acquire jurisdiction because no judgment was had on issues of fact, is to remand case, as prescribed in Penal Code, article 9, section 2.—Brown v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 14, 13 Pac. 70.

§ 65. Bench-warrant for Defendant After Indictment.

[a] Under Criminal Practice Act, sections 234, 261, permitting the court to issue a bench-warrant for the arrest of a defendant who was out on bail, the custody of the defendant under such bench-warrant is lawful. Cook, Ex parte, 35 Cal. 107.

§ 66. Necessity, Requisites and Sufficiency of Arraignment and Plea.

[a] Under provisions of statute, that "all the forms of pleading in criminal actions, and the rules by which the sufficiency of pleadings is determined, shall be those prescribed by this act" (Criminal Practice Act, section 235), the bench and bar must search in the provisions of the statute for the form of an indictment, and for the rules by which its sufficiency shall be determined, rather than in the common law.—People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191.

[b] In a criminal case every plea must, under the Penal Code, be oral.—People v. Johnson, 47 Cal. 122.

[c] Until defendant has pleaded to indictment there is no issue to be submitted to the jury, and omission to plead is fatal to judgment, even after verdict.—People v. Gaines, 52 Cal. 479.

[d] Since the repeal of Penal Code, section 1025, prescribing the mode of arraignment where a previous conviction is charged on an information for assault with intent to commit robbery, together with a charge of prior conviction of grand larceny, an arraignment of defendant, in the mode required by Penal Code, section 988, is proper.—People v. Brooks, 65 Cal. 295, 300, 4 Pac. 7, 11.

[e] Defendant pleading without counsel may demur after counsel has been assigned.—People v. Villarino, 66 Cal. 228, 5 Pac. 154.

[f] When information charging no offense is amended to charge offense, defendant must be arraigned and plead before trial can be had.—People v. Moody, 69 Cal. 185, 10 Pac. 392.

[g] Where, upon an appeal from a judgment of conviction in a trial for manslaughter, the record shows that the defendant was regularly arraigned, that he was asked if he pleaded guilty or not guilty, and that he personally made no answer, but, in his presence, his attorney, answering, said: "We plead not guilty," whereupon the clerk of the court made an entry in the minutes of the court that the "defendant pleads not guilty of the offense charged in the information, and, by consent of all parties, the cause is set for trial on the twentieth of October, 1885," the substantial rights of the defendant were not prejudiced in that he did not personally plead to the information.—People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272.

[h] It is not necessary to validity of proceedings that accused personally plead to information.—People v. Samario, 84 Cal. 486, 24 Pac. 283.

[i] Arraignment for judgment fully complying with section 1200, Penal Code, is sufficient.—People v. Perez, 87 Cal. 123, 25 Pac. 262.

[j] On the arraignment of one informed against for burglary, it is not error for the court to ask him whether he had suffered the prior convictions charged against him in the information.—People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 140, 26 Pac. 97.

[k] Provision of section 1011, Penal Code, for judgment where defendant declines to plead, after his demurrer is disallowed, cannot support the legality of a trial and judgment entered upon a verdict without a plea. People v. Monaghan, 102 Cal. 229, 36 Pac. 511.

[l] The granting of time to plead after the demurrer was overruled must be presumed to have been upon the application of the defendant, and raises a presumption that he was not then prepared to plead not guilty, and rebuts a presumption that it was understood that the original plea of not guilty was then to stand as his plea.—People v. Monaghan, 102 Cal. 229, 36 Pac. 511.

[m] Judgment cannot be pronounced against defendant under section 1011 of Penal Code, unless he in fact declines to plead after his demurrer is overruled, and cannot be rendered upon mere omission to plead.—People v. Monaghan, 102 Cal. 229, 36 Pac. 511.

[n] When arraigned, defendant is not entitled to have read to him a list of the witnesses examined.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[o] Under a minute entry showing that "the defendant was then asked by the court if he had secured the aid of counsel, and of his right to be represented by counsel," to which defendant replied that he did not desire the aid of counsel, it is implied that the court informed him of his right, and it is obvious that the minute entry was not intended to omit the word "informed" therefrom.—People v. Miller, 137 Cal. 642, 70 Pac. 705.

[p] Where the record of arraignment shows that the defendant pleaded guilty "in response to the court," it justifies the presumption that the plea was in response to the question whether he was guilty or not guilty. People v. Miller, 137 Cal. 642, 70 Pac. 735.

[q] Any irregularity in an arraignment, in delivering the copy of the information to the attorney for the accused, instead of the accused himself, was waived by failure to object thereto in the trial court.—People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

[r] The clerk's failure to make the entry of a plea as fully as he ought to have done cannot prejudice defendant.—People v. O'Leary, 16 Pac. 884.

§ 67. Waiver of Arraignment and Refusal to Plead.

[a] When a defendant in a criminal action, whose demurrer has been disallowed, refuses to plead, it is error for the court to order the entry of a plea of not guilty. Section 296 of the Criminal Practice Act should be followed, which requires that judgment should be pronounced in such case.—People v. King, 28 Cal. 265.

[b] The defendant in a criminal case does not waive an arraignment and plea by submitting to a trial, introducing witnesses on his behalf, and allowing the case to be argued on his behalf to the jury.—People v. Corbett, 28 Cal. 328.

[c] If defendant refuses to plead after his demurrer to the indictment has been overruled, the court may direct a plea of not guilty to be entered for him.—People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[d] If the defendant, when arraigned, asks for and obtains time to plead, he waives any defect in the statutory detail of the proceedings which constitute an arraignment, such as a failure to deliver to him a copy of the indictment.—People v. Lightner, 49 Cal. 226.

[e] Where defendant refuses to plead, the court may direct a plea of not guilty to be entered for him.—People v. Bowman, 81 Cal. 566, 22 Pac. 917.

[f] Motion for new trial, made by counsel for defendant when called for sentence, does not constitute a waiver of arraignment required by statute, where he is sentenced upon denying the motion for new trial.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 67½. Pleas of Guilty and Nollo Contendere.

[a] In a proceeding to determine the degree of crime after a plea of guilty, the examination of witnesses need not be had at the time of, or immediately after, the plea; neither is the proceeding a plea or verdict of guilty, and so within the statutory provisions requiring the lapse of a certain time between the plea and judgment.—People v. Noll, 20 Cal. 164.

[b] Plea of defendant confessing himself to be guilty of a crime should not be entered except with his express consent, given by him personally in direct terms in open court. People v. McCrory, 41 Cal. 458.

[c] By a plea of guilty on a trial for murder the defendant waives his right of trial by jury.—People v. Lennox, 67 Cal. 113, 7 Pac. 260.

[d] Under proper advice, defendant pleaded guilty of murder. The court heard evidence, determined the crime to be murder in the first degree, and fixed the punishment at death. Immediately, and before the entry of judgment, defendant sought to withdraw his plea. Held, that this could not be done.—People v. Lennox, 67 Cal. 113, 7 Pac. 260.

[e] Accused must plead guilty personally, and could not do so through his counsel.—People v. Bowman, 81 Cal. 568, 22 Pac. 917.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 L. R. A. 358, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 352, 353; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1230-1238, §§ 631-634.

§ 68. Withdrawal or Change of Plea.

[a] When there is reason to believe that a plea of guilty has been entered through inadvertence and without due deliberation, or ignorantly, and mainly from the hope that the punishment to which the accused would otherwise be exposed may thereby be mitigated, the court should be indulgent in permitting the plea to be withdrawn.—People v. McCrory, 41 Cal. 458.

[b] Party should not be permitted to trifle with the court by deliberately entering a plea of guilty on one day and capriciously withdrawing it the next.—People v. McCrory, 41 Cal. 458.

[c] After plea of guilty has been withdrawn by permission of court and substituted by plea of not guilty, it becomes functus officio.—People v. Ryan, 82 Cal. 619, 23 Pac. 121.

[d] After pleading not guilty to information charging offense and previous conviction defendant may, in discretion of court, plead guilty of prior conviction.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 118, 26 Pac. 95.

[e] Defendant may withdraw plea of not guilty to charge of prior conviction and confess it at any time.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 174, 25 Pac. 1116.

[f] Where a plea of not guilty in a criminal case is withdrawn, and a demurrer interposed to the indictment which was overruled, and time granted to the defendant to plead, a trial and conviction of the defendant without a new plea cannot be sustained.—People v. Monaghan, 102 Cal. 229, 36 Pac. 511.

[g] The defendant cannot be permitted to speculate upon the clemency of a judge by substituting a plea of guilty for a plea of not guilty with a right to retract if, before sentence, he finds that his expectation will not be realized.—People v. Miller, 114 Cal. 10, 45 Pac. 986.

[h] A motion to set aside a plea of not guilty and for leave to attack the indictment is within the discretion of the trial court.—People v. Staples (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 886.

[i] A second motion for leave to withdraw a plea of not guilty to move to set aside an indictment held properly denied in the absence of a showing of ignorance of the facts on which the second motion was based when the first motion was made.—People v. Staples (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 886.

[j] Accused held not entitled as of right to renew a motion for leave to withdraw a plea of not guilty to attack the indictment.—People v. Staples (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 886.

[k] Accused having pleaded not guilty a motion for leave to withdraw the plea to move to set aside the indictment not disclosing any ground on which such motion might be based held properly denied.—People v. Staples (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 886.

[l] A defendant is entitled notwithstanding a plea of not guilty to move at any time before trial for leave to withdraw it, to demur, or move to set aside the indictment.—People v. Staples (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 886.

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1235-1238, § 633.

§ 69. Plea to Charge of Prior Conviction.

[a] When information charges offense and prior conviction, defendant need not plead to both charges.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 118, 26 Pac. 95.

[b] One charged with offense and prior conviction may plead not guilty to offense charged, and confess prior conviction.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 117, 26 Pac. 95.

[c] Plea of not guilty admitting prior conviction admits each and all prior convictions charged.—People v. Kelly, 120 Cal. 272, 52 Pac. 587.

§ 70. Special Pleas in Bar in General.

[a] Under a plea of not guilty in a trial for murder, the defendant may show that he was insane at the time of the alleged commission of the offense charged, although the statute provides that the question of insanity must be tried upon a special issue.—People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456.

[b] No plea of present insanity is required. If, at any time during the proceedings in a criminal trial, a doubt arises as to the sanity of the defendant, it is the duty of the court, of its own motion, to suspend further proceedings in the case until the question of sanity has been determined.—People v. Ah Ying, 42 Cal. 18.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 361-363; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1261-1265, §§ 657-665.

§ 71. Pleas of Former Jeopardy or Former Acquittal or Conviction.

[a] Evidence of a former conviction or acquittal, or former jeopardy, is admissible under the general issue.—(Cal. 1874) People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323, 17 Am. Rep. 436.

[b] Where a juror on a murder trial becomes sick after the jury is sworn and some evidence introduced, and is discharged, and another is called in his place, defendants' request before beginning the trial de novo to have pleas of former acquittal and former jeopardy entered, should be granted.—People v. Stewart, 64 Cal. 60, 28 Pac. 112.

[c] Penal Code, section 1017, provides that pleas must be oral, and entered on the minutes in substantially the following form, if defendant plead a former conviction or acquittal: "The defendant pleads that he has already been convicted [or acquitted] of the offense charged by the judgment of the court of," specifying the time, place, and court. If he plead once in jeopardy: "The defendant pleads that he has been once in jeopardy for the offense charged," specifying the time, place, and court. Defendant's pleas, as entered on the minutes (though his counsel offered written pleas which were much fuller) were: "First, defendant pleads not guilty of the offense charged; second, a former acquittal; third, once in jeopardy." Held, that the two latter pleas were insufficient.—People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 30, 18 Pac. 856, 22 Pac. 24,

[d] Pleas of former acquittal and once in jeopardy must be made and entered substantially as prescribed by section 1017, Penal Code.—People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 33, 18 Pac. 856.

[e] The jury need not find on pleas of acquittal and former jeopardy not entered on the minutes in the form required by Penal Code, section 1017.—People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 30, 18 Pac. 856.

[f] Question of jeopardy can only arise after issue has been made by a plea of once in jeopardy, and it cannot be urged upon appeal from a judgment where the verdict has not fixed the degree of the crime.—People v. Lee Yune Chong, 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

[g] On the second trial of a criminal case, the record of the first trial, showing that the jury had been discharged on their statement that they could not agree, after deliberating only six hours, will not support a plea of former jeopardy, as Penal Code, section 1140, providing that the jury may be discharged "at the expiration of such time as the court may deem proper," if "it satisfactorily appears that there is no probability that the jury can agree," does not require the record to show that it satisfactorily appeared to the judge that there was no such probability.—People v. Greene, 100 Cal. 140, 34 Pac. 630.

[h] Under Deering's Penal Code, section 1017, relating to pleas in criminal cases, a plea that defendant "has been once in jeopardy, he having on the —— day of January, 1887, been placed on trial for the offense now alleged in the information before the justice court of Cache Creek township and a jury, which court was a competent court, and which jury was a competent jury; and witnesses against defendant were sworn before said jury, and, before the final submission of said matter to said jury, the jury was discharged, against the objection of the defendant''—is a good plea of once in jeopardy.—People v. O'Leary, 16 Pac. 884.

[i] Under Deering's Penal Code, section 1017, relating to pleas in criminal cases, a plea that defendant ''has already been acquitted of the offense charged by the judgment of this court, rendered at this courtroom on the fourteenth day of February, 1887, when defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's information was sustained by the court, and said court then and there or at any time failed to render its opinion that the objection to said demurrer could ever be cured by filing a new information,'' is a sufficient plea of former acquittal.—People v. O'Leary, 16 Pac. 884.

[j] Penal Code, section 1017, provides that pleas must be oral, and entered on the minutes in substantially the following form, if defendant plead a former conviction or acquittal: ''The defendant pleads that he has already been convicted [or acquitted] of the offense charged by the judgment of the court of,'' specifying the time, place and court. If he plead once in jeopardy: ''The defendant pleads that he has been once in jeopardy for the offense charged,'' specifying the time, place and court. Defendant's pleas, as entered on the minutes (though his counsel offered written pleas which were much fuller), were: ''First, defendant pleads not guilty of the offense charged; second, a former acquittal; third, once in jeopardy.'' Held, that the two latter pleas were insufficient.—People v. O'Leary, 22 Pac. 24.

§ 72. Pleas of not Guilty.

[a] Statute allows plea of ''not guilty'' to be entered on the minutes of the court in the absence of the prisoner.—People v. Thompson, 4 Cal. 238.

[b] A plea of not guilty imposes on the prosecution the necessity of proving the locus delicti.—People v. Bevans, 52 Cal. 470.

[c] A defendant should be allowed to retract a plea of not guilty, if his sanity at the time he pleaded is in doubt.—People v. Scott, 59 Cal. 341.

[d] Court should not charge that plea of not guilty rests defense upon the sole ground of noncommission of killing.—People v. Ah Lee, 60 Cal. 85.

[e] Plea of not guilty puts in issue all the material averments of the indictment.—People v. Ah Lee, 60 Cal. 85.

[f] The plea of not guilty puts in issue the place of the crime as well as all other material averments.—People v. Aleck, 61 Cal. 137.

[g] It is in the court's discretion whether to allow defendant to withdraw a plea of not guilty, and interpose a demurrer and motion to set aside the information.—People v. Shem Ah Fook, 64 Cal. 380, 1 Pac. 347.

[h] When defendant has been arraigned, and pleaded not guilty, it is within the court's discretion at the trial to refuse to allow him to withdraw his plea, and plead guilty to the charge of previous conviction. People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[i] When prisoner is properly arraigned, plea of not guilty made through his counsel is sufficient.—People v. Bowman, 81 Cal. 568, 569, 22 Pac. 917,

[j] A plea of defense entered on the minutes, reciting that ''defendant thereupon interposes a plea of not guilty as stated in the information,'' is sufficient, under Penal Code, section 1017, which provides that such entry shall recite that ''the defendant pleads that he is not guilty of the offense charged.''—People v. Wallace, 101 Cal. 281, 35 Pac. 862.

[k] Where the record showed that defendant pleaded not guilty on arraignment, and it appeared that he was actually present, evidence that the plea was actually made by defendant's counsel, and not by defendant himself, should not be heard to impeach the record, since the same plea would have been made had he stood mute.—People v. Emerson, 130 Cal. 562, 62 Pac. 1069.

§ 73. Nolle Prosequi.

Power of prosecuting attorney to dismiss criminal case. See District and Prosecuting Attorneys, § 12.

[a] The court has no power to discharge a defendant from indictment under the statute of 1851, or common law, unless these facts concur, viz., a joint indictment, a joint trial, and an application on the part of the district attorney that the defendant be discharged, to be used as a witness for the people, before he has gone into his defense.—People v. Bruzzo, 24 Cal. 41.

[b] The discharge of a prisoner that he may be a witness against others is regulated by Penal Code, sections 1099, 1101. It must be made at the trial, before the defendant has gone into his defense, by the court, either of its own motion or upon the application of the district attorney.—People v. Peter, 48 Cal. 250.

[c] Discharge of prisoner that he may be witness against others must be made at the trial, before the defendant has gone into his defense, by the court, either of its own motion or upon the application of the district attorney.—People v. Indian Peter, 48 Cal. 250.

[d] Court alone, and not prosecuting attorney, has power to dismiss criminal case.—People v. Ward, 85 Cal. 590, 24 Pac. 785.

[e] Justice of the peace has power to determine whether or not criminal case shall be dismissed and is not bound to obey order of district attorney.—People v. Ward, 85 Cal. 590, 24 Pac. 785.

[f] Defendant and others, as county supervisors, were indicted separately for having, corruptly and in violation of official duty, voted for the payment of a claim against the county. Other indictments were also returned charging illegal voting for the appointment and payment of certain officials. Defendant was acquitted on the latter charge, and, when the case of another supervisor on this charge was called, the district attorney moved to dismiss all such cases. No list of the cases included in the motion was made, and after the order was granted, the clerk, at the suggestion of the attorney for the defendant, entered in his rough minutes a memorandum of dismissal as to the cases in the first class as well as those in the second class. Held, that, on the discovery of the mistake before entry of the order in the regular minutes, it was within the power of the court to correct the order to make it conform to the intent of the motion, and to vacate so much thereof as applied to the cases not intended to be included.—People v. Curtis, 113 Cal. 68, 45 Pac. 180.

[g] A court has power to cause its records to correctly set forth the orders which it has actually made, as well as to set aside an order which it has made through inadvertence or mistake; and if the question of mistake or inadvertence is disputed, the decision of the judge upon any controverted fact is not open to review.—People v. Curtis, 113 Cal. 68, 45 Pac. 180.

[h] Where preliminary minutes of dismissal of a prosecution were entered by mistake, they acquired no force by the subsequent filing of a formal order, attested by the clerk, as filed on the date the prosecution was dismissed; it appearing that the docket was prepared by the procurement of the attorney for defendant after the order of dismissal had been vacated, with full knowledge of the vacation.—People v. Curtis, 113 Cal. 68, 45 Pac. 180.

[i] It is sufficient for defendant, in order to make out his case for a dismissal, to show that he has been detained without a trial for more than sixty days; and the court must dismiss it upon such showing, unless good cause for detaining the defendant is shown by the prosecution. There is no presumption, in trial court, that court has acted regularly, or that good cause in fact exists.—Begerow, In re, 133 Cal. 349, 85 Am. St. Rep. 178, 65 Pac. 828.

[j] A delay of one day beyond the thirty days allowed after the defendant has been held to answer, which was owing to a natural mistake of the district attorney caused by an error of the official reporter in stating the date of the preliminary examination, is sufficiently excused to justify the discretion of the court in denying a motion to dismiss the prosecution for the delay, where it appears that the trial of the defendant took place within sixty days from the time when the crime was alleged to have been committed.—People v. Farrington, 140 Cal. 656, 74 Pac. 288.

[b] It seems that court takes judicial notice of duration of daylight or darkness at different seasons.—People v. Stevens, 68 Cal. 116, 8 Pac. 712.

[c] Judicial notice will be taken of the population of cities as shown by the United States census.—People v. Wong Wang, 92 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 270.

[d] The courts will take judicial notice of "whatever is established by law," and hence that Los Angeles is the county seat of Los Angeles county, and in said county.—People v. Etting, 99 Cal. 577, 34 Pac. 237.

[e] Whether or not a new county had been created and existed at the time of trial is matter of judicial notice, where act for organization of county declares that it shall be and become an organized county from and after day upon which returns of election in favor of creating it shall be ascertained and declared by the board of commissioners.—People v. [f] Federal jurisdiction involves question of fact as to the acquisition of property by the United States by purchase, or under proceedings to condemn it, of which the courts will not take judicial notice.—People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16.

[g] Where the evidence shows that the offense was committed in the town where the trial was held, the court will take judicial notice that it is the county seat, and is situated within the county, and the venue of the offense is sufficiently proved.—People v. Faust, 113 Cal. 172, 45 Pac. 261.

[h] Court will take judicial notice of time when moon arose on particular night, and it may inform itself from any source of information.—People v. Mayes, 113 Cal. 618, 45 Pac. 860.

[i] Court will take judicial notice that there can be no employment by state without authorization by the law-making power; and as it is further chargeable with knowledge of all the public and private acts of the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state, a complaint alleging employment by the state must be regarded as presenting to the court whatever of authority there may exist in the law for his employment to the same extent as if such authority were expressly alleged.—Mullan v. State, 114 Cal. 578, 46 Pac. 670.

[j] Court takes judicial notice of existence and legal effect of its own judgments.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 207, 51 Pac. 185.

[k] Court judicially knows value of American coin.—People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 491, 75 Pac. 62.

§ 78. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.

In prosecutions for homicide. See Homicide, VI, A.

[a] In the absence of testimony taken in case every legal intendment is in favor of the action of a court of record.—People v. Quincy, 8 Cal. 89.

[b] Defendant is as much bound to produce testimony to rebut testimony for prosecution which merely tends to prove his guilt as any other testimony introduced by the prosecution.—People v. Kelly, 28 Cal. 423.

[c] In criminal cases prosecution is required to prove two things: (1) That a crime has been committed; and (2) that it was committed by the person charged, and by none other.—People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565.

[d] When the county judge of one county, at request of county judge of another, holds court of latter for trial of an action, and the record does not show for what cause the request was made, the existence of some one of the causes mentioned in the statute will be presumed.—People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

[e] Where record shows no objection by either party during trial to exercise of jurisdiction by judge of another county it will be presumed that parties consented to request by proper judge of county, that he should hold court.—People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

[f] Where independent facts and circumstances are relied upon to identify accused as person committing the offense charged, each essential independent fact in the chain or series of facts relied upon to create a presumption of guilt must be established to a moral certainty or beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 326; People v. Ah Chung, 54 Cal. 398.

[g] Right of the accused to be examined in his own behalf is one which he may exercise or not, and no presumption can be properly indulged against him for his not doing so.—People v. Anderson, 39 Cal. 703.

[h] A conviction cannot be sustained without proof that the offense was committed within the county where the venue is laid.—People v. Roach, 48 Cal. 382; People v. Tarpey, 59 Cal. 371.

[i] When indictment charges defendant by several aliases, it is sufficient if proof shows that one of them is the true name.—People v. De Cleer, 60 Cal. 382.

[j] It is a cardinal rule in criminal cases that burden of proof rests on the prosecution. It would manifestly be shifting this burden from prosecution to defendant to require latter to establish his defense by a preponderance of evidence, and would deprive him of doctrine of reasonable doubt, to the benefit of which he is justly and everywhere held entitled.—People v. Cheong Foon Ark, 61 Cal. 527.

[k] It is not presumed that a boy of 16 has a business or profession.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 304, 17 Pac. 214.

[l] Prosecution must establish every element of crime beyond reasonable doubt.—People v. Cohn, 76 Cal. 386, 18 Pac. 410.

[m] Where party has proof in his power which, if produced, would render material but doubtful facts certain, law presumes against him.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 325, 20 Pac. 719.

[n] Rule that burden of proving justification or mitigation is on defendant is confined to murder trials.—People v. Mize, 80 Cal. 45, 22 Pac. 80.

[o] An ordinance making it "unlawful for any person to have in his possession, unless it be shown that such possession is innocent, any lottery ticket," is unconstitutional, in that it places on one accused of its violation the burden of showing the innocence of his possession.—Wong Hane, In re, 108 Cal. 680, 49 Am. St. Rep. 138, 41 Pac. 693.

[p] Defendant must be presumed to know his rights and privileges as a witness.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 392, 48 Pac. 326.

[q] It is not necessary or incumbent on a defendant to explain suspicious or incriminating circumstances, and no presumption can be indulged against him for failure to do so. People v. Streuber, 121 Cal. 431, 53 Pac. 918.

[r] It will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that proceedings leading up to a commitment by a magistrate were regularly conducted.—People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

[s] The presumptions which under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, are declared to be disputable are in effect only inferences, which in the absence of any controverting evidence the jury is required to make.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

[t] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1961, held that, if evidence controverting a presumption is introduced, its effect as a presumption ceases to be conclusive, and the fact in question is to be determined by the jury.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

[u] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1959, is not to be interpreted as requiring presumptions to be made, except in cases named in section 1962, where the presumption is declared to be conclusive.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

§ 79. —— Alibi.

Relevancy of evidence of. See post, § 98.
Degree of proof requisite to establish. See post, § 283.

[a] An alibi need be proven only so as to raise a reasonable doubt whether defendant was present when the crime was committed.—People v. Roberts, 122 Cal. 377, 55 Pac. 137.

§ 80. —— Cause for Delay in Prosecution.

[a] Burden is on prosecution to show good cause for delay in prosecution and court cannot presume it.—People v. Morino, 85 Cal. 517, 24 Pac. 892.

§ 81. —— Competency of Juror.

[a] Burden of establishing the incompetency of a juror is cast upon the party asserting it. The juror is presumed to be competent until his incompetence is affirmatively established.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

§ 82. —— Corpus Delicti.

[a] Without some evidence tending to show that crime has been committed, the question as to the person by whom committed cannot arise.—People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565.

§ 83. —— Flight.

[a] Flight of the accused raises no legal presumption, but is merely evidence for the jury.—People v. Wong Ah Ngow, 54 Cal. 151.

[b] Fact that defendant is in another state when arrested does not raise presumption that he is a fugitive from justice.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 396, 48 Pac. 326.

§ 84. —— Identity of Persons from Identity of Names.

[a] No presumption of identity arises from mere identity of Christian name.—People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 586.

[b] Identity of person is presumed from identity of name.—People v. Rolfe, 61 Cal. 540; Finch v. Riverside etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 597, 25 Pac. 765.

[c] Identity of person is presumed from identity of name.—People v. Riley, 16 Pac. 544, 75 Cal. 100.

[d] The presumption of identity of person from identity of name cannot be invoked where it is shown that there is more than one person in the vicinity to whom the name may be applied.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

§ 85. —— Innocence.

[a] Everyone accused of crime is presumed innocent until proved guilty.—People v. Sansome, 84 Cal. 451, 24 Pac. 143.

[b] The presumption of innocence does not cease upon the submission of the cause to the jury; and it is error for the court to instruct the jury that the presumption of innocence goes with the defendant until the case is finally submitted to them.—People v. O'Brien, 106 Cal. 104, 39 Pac. 325.

[c] All disputable presumptions must give way before the presumption of the innocence of defendant, which remains until the prosecution, by convincing proof, has established his guilt; and presumption of continuance of title in person in whom it was last shown to be of record, cannot overcome presumption that a defendant accused of swearing falsely that property belonged to him is innocent of crime of perjury.—People v. Strassman, 112 Cal. 683, 45 Pac. 3.

[d] Where the prosecution claimed that certain instruments executed before the defendant as a notary were forged and fictitious, while defendant testified to their genuineness, the refusal of the court to instruct as to the presumption of genuineness arising from the defendant's certificate as notary was not erroneous, as such presumption added nothing to the positive testimony of defendant, or to the presumption of his innocence, which cast the burden of proof on the prosecution.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[e] Presumption of innocence rests with defendant until jury have arrived at a verdict. People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 92, 50 Pac. 390.

§ 86. —— Intent.

[a] Intent with which unlawful act was done must be proved; but when an unlawful act is proved to have been done by the accused, the law in the first instance presumes it to have been intended, and the proof of justification or excuse lies on the defendant.—People v. Harris, 29 Cal. 678.

[b] Every person is presumed to intend what his acts indicate his intent to have been.—People v. Bushton, 80 Cal. 162, 22 Pac. 127, 549.

[c] Presumption of unlawful intent from unlawful act may be rebutted by evidence raising reasonable doubt as to its existence.—People v. Boling, 83 Cal. 382, 23 Pac. 421.

[d] Presumption of unlawful intent from unlawful act is rebutted by evidence creating reasonable doubt of guilt.—People v. Ah Gee Yung, 86 Cal. 147, 24 Pac. 851.

[e] When specific intent is element of offense, no presumption of law can ever arise that will decide the question of intent.—People v. Johnson, 106 Cal. 289, 39 Pac. 622.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 643, 644, §§ 26-28.

§ 87. —— Legality of Official Acts.

[a] It is presumed that officer acted lawfully.—Allen v. Napa County, 82 Cal. 190, 23 Pac. 43.

§ 88. —— Sanity or Insanity.

[a] Presumption is that all men are of sufficient capacity to be responsible for crime; therefore the prisoner must establish his insanity.—People v. Myers, 20 Cal. 518; People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485; People v. Hamilton, 62 Cal. 377; People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 233, 26 Pac. 88; People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263; People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[b] In a criminal case, if the defendant relies upon insanity as a defense, proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not required, but the burden of proof is cast upon him, and his insanity must be established by such a preponderance of evidence that, if the single issue of the sanity or insanity of the defendant was submitted to the jury in a civil case, they would find that he was insane.—People v. Coffman, 24 Cal. 230.

[c] It is only of habitual insanity, when proved once to have existed, that the law entertains the presumption that it continues until the contrary is shown; otherwise of spasmodic or temporary mania.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183.

[d] Where insanity is relied upon as a defense burden of proof is on the defendant, and insanity must be clearly established by satisfactory proof.—People v. M'Donell, 47 Cal. 134.

[e] If the question arises as to whether the supposed insanity was the result of intoxication, immediately indulged, or insanity caused by the habitual and long-continued use of ardent spirits, the burden is cast upon the prisoner of establishing it to be of the latter character.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485.

[f] Where a defendant in a criminal prosecution interposes the defense of insanity, the burden is on him to establish it by preponderating proof, and where there is a question as to whether the alleged insanity was the result of intoxication immediately, or insanity caused by an habitual and long-continued intemperate use of intoxicants, the burden is on defendant to establish insanity arising from the latter cause.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485.

[g] Whether insanity once proven is presumed to continue is determined by the nature of the disease. If it is occasional or intermittent insanity no such presumption arises; but the rule is otherwise in cases of confirmed insanity of whatever nature.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[h] To establish the basis of a presumption that insanity once shown to have existed continues to exist it must appear to have been of such duration and character as to indicate the probability of its continuance, and not simply the possibility, or even probability, of its recurrence, as in case of temporary insanity.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[i] The burden of proof as to the defense of insanity is on the defendant; and his insanity must be established by a preponderance of evidence.—People v. Hettick, 126 Cal. 425, 58 Pac. 918.

[j] An instruction that, when temporary or spasmodic insanity was proved to have existed prior to the commission of a criminal act, there was no presumption of its continuance to the specific time of such act, was proper.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[k] In a criminal case the burden is on defendant to prove by a preponderance of the evidence the defense of insanity.—People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

§ 90. —— Shifting of Burden.

[a] Burden of proof never shifts when defendant confines defense to original transaction on which charge is founded.—People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 603, 604, 11 Pac. 481.

§ 91. Relevancy in General.

[a] All the facts explaining the conduct of a party charged with crime should, as a general rule be admitted in evidence.—People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[b] Evidence of collateral facts, not affording an inference as to facts in issue, is inadmissible.—People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 526.

[c] In a prosecution for burglary, evidence that, before the offense, defendant had gone under an alias name, is admissible.—People v. Hope, 62 Cal. 291.

[d] If a witness has testified to having been on the witness-stand before, she cannot be compelled to state for what she was called to testify, if such former testimony refers to matter entirely immaterial to the cause.—People v. De Witte, 68 Cal. 584, 10 Pac. 212.

[e] Evidence tending to prejudice jury against accused is inadmissible.—People v. Hamblin, 68 Cal. 104, 8 Pac. 687.

[f] The prosecuting witness testified that he received the money of which he was afterward robbed from a relative. On cross-examination he was asked whether his relative got the money from a safe or a trunk. Held, that the answer to the question would have had no bearing on the question whether witness did in fact receive the money from his relative.—People v. Ching Hing Chang, 74 Cal. 389, 16 Pac. 201.

[g] Introduction of evidence tending to show that accused attempted to profit from his wife's shame is reversible error.—People v. Dye, 75 Cal. 112, 16 Pac. 537.

[h] Remoteness of evidence goes to its weight not its admissibility.—People v. Brown, 76 Cal. 574, 18 Pac. 678.

[i] Evidence must correspond with allegations and be confined to point in issue.—People v. Bishop, 81 Cal. 117, 22 Pac. 477.

[j] On a murder trial, where a witness for the defense has testified that a certain person, who had been tried for the same offense and acquitted, had admitted the shooting of the deceased, and that he got the pistol from a third person, it is not competent for the latter to testify in rebuttal that the pistol was not procured from him, as this does not tend to show whether the one party or the other did the killing, or to contradict the witness in testifying merely as to what was told him. People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

[k] It is proper to allow one witness to robbery to explain absence of another witness who was present at time of robbery, and not present at the trial, by showing where he was at time of the trial, and why he was absent.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

[l] Evidence is admissible as to the pursuit and capture of the defendant immediately after the commission of the homicide; and the prosecution has the right to prove the facts pertaining thereto, rather than take an admission as to them from the defendant.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[m] Evidence which tends in material degree to strengthen defendant's case is competent, relevant and material.—People v. Von Tiedeman, 120 Cal. 131, 52 Pac. 155.

[n] False reasons given by the accused for being in the town where the offense was committed on the day of the offense are admissible.—People v. Cuff, 122 Cal. 589, 55 Pac. 407.

[o] In a prosecution of a witness to a will for perjury in swearing that it was duly witnessed, evidence of declarations by deceased that he intended to remember the principal beneficiary named in the will offered was properly excluded, since such declarations are not admissible on questions pertaining solely to the formal execution of the will.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[p] In a prosecution for wife murder, sustaining an objection to a question asked defendant by his attorney as to who supported the family is proper.—People v. Ochoa, 142 Cal. 268, 75 Pac. 847.

[q] In a criminal prosecution, evidence tending to show a change of theory by the prosecution from that advanced on the former trial held irrelevant.—People v. Darr (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 457.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 390, 391; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1343-1347, §§ 752-758.

§ 92. Identity of Accused.

[a] Although witnesses may not positively, and beyond a doubt, identify the person of one on trial for a crime, yet, if they express the belief that he was the person they saw, their evidence is properly submitted to the jury for what it is worth.—People v. Rolfe, 61 Cal. 540.

[b] A witness in a criminal case need not be absolutely certain in his testimony as to the identification of defendant, to render such testimony competent.—People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[c] It was incompetent to show that witness was equally as confident of identity of defendant when talking with defendant's wife, as when testifying to such identity at trial.—People v. Altmeyer, 135 Cal. 80, 66 Pac. 974.

[d] In a prosecution for homicide, evidence concerning the attire worn by defendant prior to the homicide held admissible in corroboration of a pawnbroker's identification of defendant as the person who purchased the pistol with which the crime was committed.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 42 L. R. A. 432, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 392-394; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1364-1370, §§ 767-772.

§ 93. —— Footprints.

[a] Evidence of measurements of footprints about the body of the deceased, though made two weeks after the homicide, is competent. People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 576, 10 Pac. 207.

§ 94. Motive.

[a] Evidence not going to the direct guilt of defendant upon the charge of larceny, may be introduced for the purpose of showing knowledge on his part in other and similar transactions, with the view of determining his motive in the transaction in issue.—People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[b] On a trial for assault with a deadly weapon, where the prosecuting witness, on direct examination, testified that the only reason he could give for the shooting was that he had once notified the authorities that defendant was one of a number who had assaulted a person, it was error to exclude, on cross-examination, a question as to what part defendant took in such assault.—People v. Un Dong, 106 Cal. 83, 39 Pac. 12.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Motive or intent, accused, when may testify to: 21 Am. St. Rep. 318, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 394; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1370-1372, §§ 773-777.

§ 95. Preparation.

[a] Where, on a prosecution for murder, the theory of the prosecution was that it had been committed in pursuance of a conspiracy on the part of defendant and other convicts to escape from the penitentiary, held proper to admit evidence that one of the convicts had dynamite.—People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

§ 96. Time of Commission of Offense.

[a] Even where time is essence of crime facts may be proved by one witness and date or time by another.—People v. Sheldon, 68 Cal. 437, 9 Pac. 457.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1383, 1384, § 786.

§ 97. Degree of Crime, Under Plea of Guilty.

[a] Authority to determine degree of crime under plea of guilty includes power to take testimony for that purpose.—People v. Chew Lan Ong, 141 Cal. 552, 553, 99 Am. St. Rep. 88, 75 Pac. 186.

§ 98. Alibi.

Burden of proving. See ante, § 79.
Degree of proof requisite to establish. See post, § 283.

[a] Evidence that defendant was found several hours after the crime, and after a warrant had been issued for him, apparently in a place of hiding, was not admissible to disprove an alibi.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 317, 20 Pac. 719.

[b] Where two witnesses, claiming to be particeps criminis with defendant in the larceny of certain cattle, testified to having taken possession of the cattle with defendant on the 20th of a certain month, and other parties testified to having seen defendant in possession of the cattle a day or two later in an adjoining county, an instruction that the essence of the crime, which was charged as having been committed on or about the 20th, was the felonious stealing, and that, if this was done by defendant, although not perhaps on the day mentioned, but within a few days of that time it was sufficient to justify conviction, is not objectionable in depriving defendant of evidence introduced for the purpose of an alibi, and tending to show that on the 20th, at least, he was in a town several miles from the scene of the larceny; but the evidence as to the alibi is still entitled to consideration.—People v. French, 95 Cal. 371, 30 Pac. 567.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 99. Evidence Tending to Incriminate or Clear Others.

[a] On the trial of an information for robbery, evidence having been introduced tending to show that a peculiar boot track had been traced from the scene of the robbery to the house of one of the defendants, it is error to exclude evidence offered by the defense to show that two men, other than the defendants, had been seen on the third day after the robbery within three days' foot travel of the place of the occurrence, one of whom wore a boot which left precisely similar marks to those traced to the defendant's house.—People v. Myers, 70 Cal. 582, 12 Pac. 719.

[b] The question asked a witness whether a third person lived in the same town with defendant at the time of the alleged crime is immaterial where no attempt is made to show that such person could by any possibility have been the culprit, instead of defendant.—People v. Bentley, 77 Cal. 7, 11 Am. St. Rep. 225, 18 Pac. 799.

[c] Evidence is admissible on the part of a defendant tending to show that another person committed the crime, and the fact that such other person had been tried and acquitted for the same offense does not alter the case. The judgment of acquittal of such third person is not admissible in evidence upon the prosecution of the defendant.—People v. Mitchell, 100 Cal. 328, 34 Pac. 698.

[d] In a trial for murder it appeared that deceased lived in the same house with defendant and another man, whose body, with the top of the head shot away, was found in the river along with that of deceased. Deceased was killed by a blow from an ax. Held, that evidence of the finding of blood stains, and portions of a human skull and brains, in front of the house, some distance from the river, was admissible to show that the person whose body was found with that of deceased could not have killed him.—People v. Smith, 106 Cal. 73, 39 Pac. 40.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 399, 400; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1384-1387, §§ 789-791.

§ 100. —— To Establish Guilt of Accused.

[a] In a prosecution for larceny, evidence as to acts of another person, committed in the presence of the defendant, and showing a connection between them, is admissible, although no conspiracy between them to steal has been shown.—People v. Wilson, 66 Cal. 370, 5 Pac. 624.

[b] Evidence of absence or flight of alleged accomplice is inadmissible.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 322-326, 30 Pac. 719.

[c] Where a murder was committed either by accused or another, and accused claimed on the trial that it was committed by such other, the prosecution may prove by the latter that he did not kill the deceased.—People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

§ 101. Evidence Explanatory of Facts in Evidence.

[a] Malice proved by preconcert, going armed, usually enters into the inquiry. To rebut this or any inference arising from the acts done defendant may show why he was armed, upon what errand he went, and the like facts.—People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

§ 102. Explaining Facts not in Evidence.

[a] Accused cannot account for his flight unless prosecution prove flight as tending to show his guilt.—People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 580, 24 Pac. 313; People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

§ 103. Circumstances Tending to Show Guilt.

[a] Evidence of circumstances tending to connect defendant with offense is admissible. People v. Lowrey, 70 Cal. 194, 11 Pac. 605.

[b] Where M., C., and K. were charged with robbery, evidence of the keeper of a boarding-house, at which they stopped prior to the commission of the offense, that C. and K. registered under assumed names, was admissible.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

[c] In a prosecution for robbery, evidence that defendant was booked at the police station by an assumed name was inadmissible.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

§ 104. Subsequent Conduct of Accused.

[a] The testimony of the officer making arrest, as to the manner and conduct of defendant when arrested, is admissible in connection with defendant's declarations.—People v. Shem Ah Fook, 64 Cal. 380, 1 Pac. 347.

[b] Evidence that defendants, charged with burglary, on being allowed to go by the officer arresting them, did not return the next morning, as they promised to do, and never made claim to the goods seized by the officer, is admissible as showing that they did not obtain the goods innocently.—People v. Ashmead, 118 Cal. 508, 50 Pac. 681.

[c] Evidence of the circumstances of defendant's arrest, including his declarations at the time, and articles taken from his person, showing that he was in hiding, disguising himself, denying his identity, and preparing to escape, is admissible.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[d] Where it is clear that the defendant knew that an officer, called in for the purpose of arrest, shortly after the assault, intended to arrest him, although the officer did not in words inform him of such intention, evidence that the defendant, with force and arms, resisted the arrest is admissible for the prosecution.—People v. Hawkins, 127 Cal. 372, 59 Pac. 697.

[e] Evidence of the appearance of defendant, accused of burglary, when his shoes were compared and found to correspond with certain tracks, and when brought before the prosecuting witness for identification, is admissible against him.—People v. Rowell, 133 Cal. 39, 65 Pac. 127.

[f] On a prosecution for larceny, evidence as to a conversation between the prosecuting witness, defendant, and another in regard to having a prosecution against an alleged accomplice of defendant, growing out of the robbery, dismissed, was properly received to show the defendant's solicitude in settling the matter.—People v. Ardell, 135 Cal. xix, 66 Pac. 970.

[g] Conduct of suspected party when charged with crime—e. g., flight, concealment, falsehood, breaking jail, etc.—may be proved to show consciousness of guilt and criminal intent.—People v. Cole, 141 Cal. 90, 74 Pac. 547.

[h] Deception, falsehood and fabrication as to facts of case are admissible on same theory as flight and concealment to show consciousness of guilt and criminal intent.—People v. Cole, 141 Cal. 90, 74 Pac. 547.

[i] The conduct, acts, and expressions of a person accused of crime, at the time of his arrest, are admissible against him.—People v. Abbott, 4 Pac. 769.

[j] In a prosecution for homicide, it was proper to show what defendant did or did not do on the day immediately after the tragedy as indicating that his acts were not those of an innocent person.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 394-398; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1371-1383, §§ 776, 778-785.

§ 105. Flight or Attempt to Escape.

[a] Attempt of prisoner to escape, or flight, with knowledge of accusation, is an admissible circumstance, but does not legally prove guilt.—People v. Strong, 46 Cal. 303.

[b] The flight or concealment of a person charged with crime is a circumstance which the jury may take into consideration in determining his guilt.—People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401; People v. Wong Ah Ngow, 54 Cal. 151; People v. Welsh, 63 Cal. 167.

[c] On a trial for assault, a witness was permitted to testify that the wounded man pointed at defendant, who was about twenty feet off, and told the witness to arrest him, and that thereupon defendant immediately ran away. Held, that the evidence was admissible.—People v. Lock Wing, 61 Cal. 380.

[d] Evidence of flight of defendant is admissible as circumstance jury may consider.—People v. Fine, 77 Cal. 149, 19 Pac. 269.

[e] While actual flight of a defendant accused of murder is evidence of guilt, the advice or suggestion of third persons to the defendant that he should flee is not admissible against him.—People v. Lee Dick Lung, 129 Cal. 491, 62 Pac. 71.

§ 106. Intoxication.

[a] Evidence of drunkenness of defendant at time of alleged crime "can only be considered by the jury for the purpose of determining the degree of the crime."—People v. Soto, 63 Cal. 165.

[b] In a prosecution for forgery, evidence that defendant's intemperate habits had so far impaired his mind as to render him incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong is admissible.—People v. Blake, 65 Cal. 275, 4 Pac. 1.

[c] Drunkenness on the part of the defendant cannot be inquired into where the only inquiry is as to whether the crime is murder in the second degree or manslaughter. People v. Langton, 67 Cal. 427, 7 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 404; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1354-1356, § 761.

§ 107. Insanity.

[a] Insanity of prisoner at instant of commission of offense can only be established by evidence tending to prove that he was insane at some period before or afterward.—People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

[b] Under an indictment for murder, the defendant is permitted to introduce evidence of insanity of his parents if there is evidence in the case tending to prove personal insanity by reason of want of apparent motive at the time of the murder.—People v. Smith, 31 Cal. 466.

[c] In proof of insanity under a plea of not guilty evidence of the insanity of the defendant, both before and after the commission of the offense, is admissible.—People v. Farrell, 31 Cal. 576.

[d] In the absence of a plea of insanity, evidence that defendant had long ago been hit on the head, and mentally and physically injured, is immaterial.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

[e] Evidence of treatment by family as imbecile or insane is inadmissible.—People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50.

[f] Evidence of defendant's sanity before and after commission of crime is admissible to enable jury to determine his condition at time of commission of offense.—People v. Lee Fook, 85 Cal. 301, 24 Pac. 654.

[g] Proof that a defendant, upon trial for murder, had committed the crime of incest with his daughter is admissible in rebuttal, where the claim of the defense is that the defendant had become insane through fear that the deceased was trying to debauch defendant's daughter.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[h] The record in an examination on a plea of insanity in a trial for murder, being evidence of defendant's mental condition at the time of examination, is not admissible to prove his mental condition on the date of the killing.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[i] In a case where one accused of murder defended on the ground of partial insanity and insane delusions, testimony from his neighbors and acquaintances that they did not know of his insanity and delusions is admissible, as the fact that they did not know of his delusions was some proof that no such delusions existed, or, if it is admitted that partial insanity was shown, then such evidence was admissible to show that as to all other subjects the defendant was sane.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 216, 63 Am. St. Rep. 72-n., 51 Pac. 329.

[j] Proof that some months prior to the commission of the murder defendant was in such fear of his life that he insisted on the witness accompanying him home, and stated that "he was fearful they would take his life," is incompetent and immaterial on the issue of defendant's insanity, in the absence of evidence that defendant's fears partook of the character of a delusion.—People v. Ellsworth, 127 Cal. 595, 60 Pac. 161.

[jj] Evidence of the declarations of defendant, made to a witness some months prior to the commission of the murder for which defendant was on trial, and indicating that "he was in great peril of his life" at that time, is inadmissible as proof of the defense of insanity.—People v. Ellsworth, 127 Cal. 595, 60 Pac. 161.

[k] Evidence of acts and conduct of accused are admissible on issue of insanity.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 594, 75 Pac. 177.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 403; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1347-1354, § 760.

§ 108. Hypnosis.

[a] Evidence showing that defendant was told by her husband to kill deceased, and that she did so, does not tend to prove that defendant was hypnotized, and render admissible evidence of the effect of hypnotism on people subject to its influence.—People v. Worthington, 105 Cal. 166, 38 Pac. 689.

§ 109. Evidence in Mitigation of Punishment.

[a] Court has discretion to determine whether it will hear evidence in mitigation of punishment, and it is proper for it to refuse to hear incompetent evidence offered for that purpose.—People v. McKay, 122 Cal. 628, 55 Pac. 594.

§ 110. Corroborating Evidence.

[a] The prosecution in an action for embezzlement cannot introduce evidence in chief that the prosecuting witness has money on deposit, in order to strengthen her testimony. People v. O'Brien, 106 Cal. 104, 39 Pac. 325.

§ 111. Res Gestae—What Constitutes.

[a] In homicide certain testimony of defendant held res gestae and subject to contradiction.—People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[b] Defendant was accused of murder of one who was injuring a mining claim. Held, that evidence offered by defendant of his ownership of the claim at the time was admissible to show the condition of his mind and the character of the offense, and as part of the res gestae.—People v. Costello, 15 Cal. 350.

[c] The rule, as sometimes held, that the declarations of a party at the time of doing an act which is legal evidence are admissible as parts of the res gestae, cannot be so applied as to admit, as against third persons, declarations of a past act having the effect of criminating such third persons.—People v. Simonds, 19 Cal. 275.

[d] Narratives of past occurrence are not part of res gestae, and are inadmissible.—People v. Ehring, 65 Cal. 135, 3 Pac. 606.

[e] On a trial for robbery, the prosecution will not be allowed to give in evidence admissions by the prosecuting witness, made shortly after the commission of the crime, not under oath, and not in the presence of defendant, in contradiction to the testimony of the prosecuting witness himself, under oath. Such admissions are no part of the res gestae. People v. Ehring, 65 Cal. 135, 3 Pac. 606.

[f] In a prosecution for murder, the condition in which the body and clothing were found is admissible in evidence, being part of the res gestae.—People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 3 Pac. 597.

[g] In a criminal prosecution evidence of incidents occurring subsequent to the day on which the offense is alleged to have been committed is admissible when such facts relate to a transaction which partly occurred on the day of the commission of the offense.—People v. Lee Ah Chuck, 66 Cal. 662.

[h] It was proper, as part of the res gestae, to admit in evidence the articles found in defendant's possession which were claimed to have belonged to deceased.—People v. Smith, 106 Cal. 73, 39 Pac. 40.

[i] On a trial of an indictment for robbery, articles produced from the house where the robbery was committed, and shown to have been used by defendant in connection with the offense, are admissible as part of the transaction.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[j] On a trial for robbery, evidence of solicitations by defendant to the person robbed to visit with him the house where the robbery was committed, and of statements by defendant to a third person as to his purpose, is admissible.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[k] One of the stolen purses dropped by a codefendant, containing thirty dollars, which there was evidence tending to show had been passed by the defendant to the codefendant, was admissible in evidence, as part of the res restae.—People v. Piggott, 126 Cal. 509, 59 Pac. 31.

[l] Evidence of witnesses that they were in defendant's saloon at a certain time on the night of the shooting, and saw a party who was arrested with defendant playing cards with decedent, and that an hour thereafter they were awakened by cries of murder, is admissible as a part of the res gestae.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[m] Evidence, in a prosecution for murder, of a conversation between defendant and deceased shortly before the homicide, is not inadmissible because there were prior conversations which the witness had not heard.—People v. Daily, 135 Cal. 104, 67 Pac. 16.

[n] In a prosecution for grand larceny of a watch, where a witness testified that, as he passed defendant and prosecutor, he noticed the prosecutor's watch and chain, and that two minutes later he saw defendant leave the prosecutor, his further testimony that he then noticed prosecutor's vest was unbuttoned, and the watch and chain gone, was admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Taylor, 136 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 292.

[o] Where, in a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, alleged to have occurred November 27, 1900, there was no proof that alleged preparations for prosecutrix's marriage to defendant, made in the spring of 1901, had been brought to defendant's knowledge, such preparations constituted no part of the res gestae, and were inadmissible to corroborate prosecutrix.—People v. Tibbs, 143 Cal. 100, 76 Pac. 904.

[p] On a prosecution for murder, certain evidence held properly admitted as res gestae. People v. Woods, 147 Cal. 265, 81 Pac. 652.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Res gestae, declarations, when constitute a part of: 58 Am. Rep. 184, note. See, also, 16 Cyc. 1148-1159; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1401-1453, §§ 804-821.

§ 112. —— Acts and Declarations at or Near Time of Offense.

[a] Where, on trial for assault with intent to commit murder, evidence had been offered tending to show that defendant was first assaulted by the party injured and several other persons, held, that what these persons said at the time they made the assault, illustrative of its object and the motive prompting it, was part of the res gestae, and admissible for defendant.—People v. Roach, 17 Cal. 297.

[b] Under an indictment for an assault with intent to commit murder, what occurred between the defendant and the party assaulted, immediately after the assault, in a shop to which such party had retreated, is admissible in evidence as part of the res gestae, at least on the question of intent.—People v. Yslas, 27 Cal. 630.

[c] Declarations, to be part of the res gestae, are not required to be precisely concurrent in point of time with the principal transaction. If they spring from it, tend to explain it, are voluntary and spontaneous, and made at a time so near it as to preclude the idea of deliberate design, they are to be regarded as contemporaneous, and are admissible.—People v. Vernon, 35 Cal. 49, 95 Am. Dec. 49.

[d] On a trial for an assault with intent to commit murder, evidence of a conversation between the parties immediately after the assault, which is perhaps a portion of the res gestae, is admissible, but it is important, and should influence the jury, only in case the evidence with respect to the assault itself is conflicting; and if such conversation is erroneously ruled out by the court, the judgment will not be disturbed, if the bill of exceptions fails to show such conflict.—People v. Swenson, 49 Cal. 388.

[e] Evidence that a person accused of an assault with intent to commit murder had a knife and pistol on his person nearly a month after the commission of the alleged assault is inadmissible; and the cross-examination of a defendant thereon, against his objection, is inexcusable, and prejudicial error.—People v. Yee Fook Din, 106 Cal. 163, 39 Pac. 530.

[f] Facts and circumstances immediately attending homicide are part of res gestae.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 245, 74 Pac. 745.

[g] In a prosecution for robbery, evidence of occurrences transpiring within a very few hours before the robbery, and so intimately connected with it that a substantial statement of the facts constituting the robbery could not have been made without reference to such preceding circumstances was admissible.—People v. Linares, 142 Cal. 17, 75 Pac. 308.

§ 113. —— Acts and Declarations Before Commission of Offense.

[a] The defendant was shown to have borrowed a chisel on the day of the murder. Held, that his declarations as to what he intended to do with the chisel, not being shown to have any apparent connection with the commission of the offense charged, were not admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Wyman, 15 Cal. 70.

[b] In the trial of an indictment for murder, evidence of a fight which took place between the deceased and the defendant, six hours before the homicide, is not admissible in evidence, in favor of the defendant, either as a part of the res gestae, or to show a provocation for the murder.—People v. Smith, 26 Cal. 665.

[c] It seems that, in a trial for murder, evidence of declarations of the defendant, made an hour or so before the homicide, is inadmissible.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[d] In a prosecution for robbery, testimony of defendant and two witnesses as to conversations between him and them, on the night of the robbery, on his way from his shop to the place where the crime was committed, is not admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 212, 13 Pac. 500.

§ 114. —— Other Offenses Forming Part of Transaction.

[a] The test of the admissibility of evidence of other offenses than the one charged is the connection between the offenses in the mind of the criminal. When such a connection is shown, evidence of the others is admissible, for the purpose of establishing identity in developing the res gestae, or in making out the guilt of the defendant by a chain of circumstances connected with the crime for which he is on trial. If, however, the evidence of another offense serves in no way to identify the thing stolen, or connect the defendant with the offense for which he is on trial, it forms no part of the res gestae, and as evidence of a distinct offense, unconnected in character and purpose with the offense charged, is inadmissible.—People v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 668, 4 Pac. 1144, 6 Pac. 700, 846.

[b] When two persons were robbed on prosecution for robbery of one, evidence of robbery of other is part of res gestae and admissible.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 425, 24 Pac. 1006.

[c] During a struggle between defendant and deceased in a house to which defendant had come to arrest deceased and another person, the fatal wound was given. Held, on prosecution for the homicide, that the shooting of defendant at the other person outside the house, where such person followed defendant a few minutes after the homicide, was not part of the res gestae.—People v. Lane, 100 Cal. 379, 34 Pac. 856.

[d] In a prosecution against an agent for embezzlement of money collected by him from a debtor of his principal, after his discharge, the indictment alleging ownership in the debtor, evidence of embezzlement from the principal about the same time is admissible.—People v. Van Ewan, 111 Cal. 144, 43 Pac. 520..

[e] Upon a charge of an assault upon a person named, with intent to commit murder, evidence of an assault upon and pursuit of a third person, which was part of the same affray and of the res gestae, is admissible; and it is immaterial that such assault and pursuit was immediately subsequent to the assault charged and not prior thereto, or at the same moment therewith.—People v. Teixeria, 123 Cal. 297, 55 Pac. 988.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1407-1414, § 807.

§ 115. —— Declarations of Injured Person.

Admissibility in general. See post, § 179.

[a] Defendant was tried for killing A by stabbing him. After A was stabbed, he ran, and while running, cried murder and said defendant had stabbed him. A witness who saw him run and heard him cry was asked by the prosecuting attorney whether, "immediately after" running, A said that defendant had stabbed him. Held, inadmissible, as not referring to a declaration that was part of the res gestae.—People v. Ah Lee, 60 Cal. 85.

[b] Declarations of a person who has been shot, made a half an hour after the shooting, as to what he intends to do to the man who shot him, are not part of the res gestae of the shooting.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 303.

[c] Statements of deceased, made some days after the shooting, are not admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Wasson, 65 Cal. 538, 4 Pac. 555.

[d] In a murder case, a statement by deceased that defendant shot him, made almost eo instanti of the firing of the fatal shot, and before defendant had gone farther than across the street from the place of the homicide, is admissible, though not made in the immediate presence of the defendant.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 180, 10 Pac. 375.

[e] On a trial for murder, evidence that a few minutes after the shooting, deceased said that defendant shot her, is not admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Wong Ark, 96 Cal. 125, 30 Pac. 1115, disapproving People v. Vernon (1868), 35 Cal. 49.

[f] Where defendants were charged with murdering L. while he was their prisoner on the charge of shooting V., and it was claimed that defendants conspired with V. to murder L., and that L. did not in fact shoot V., declarations of V., shortly after he was shot (the state claimed, accidentally), that he did not know who shot him, were admissible.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 323, 51 Pac. 538.

[g] Where prosecuting witness in a trial for larceny testified that, when defendant pulled his hand out of witness' pocket, he grabbed him, and, on seeing him pass something to a codefendant, grabbed him also, and shouted to a friend, "They are robbing me," such statement was a part of the res gestae, and hence admissible.—People v. Piggott, 126 Cal. 509, 59 Pac. 31.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1441-1450, §§ 819, 820.

§ 116. —— Acts and Declarations of Third Persons.

Admissibility in general. See post, § 182.

[a] On the trial of an indictment for murder, evidence of the acts and exclamations of the wife of the prisoner, made and performed at the time of the killing, and in his presence or hearing, is admissible on behalf of the prosecution.—People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137.

[b] Where, in a prosecution of a witness to a will, which was in the beneficiary's handwriting, for perjury in swearing at the probate thereof that it was duly witnessed, it was claimed that there was conspiracy between the beneficiary and the witnesses to defraud the estate by a false will, testimony by a witness of a conversation in which the beneficiary tried to get him to not testify before the grand jury that she had offered him five thousand dollars to sign the will as a witness, was properly admitted.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[c] On a prosecution for the larceny of cattle branded M D, evidence of what the mother of the accused, claiming cattle of the same brand, told him, in explanation of the trip he made at his mother's request to the county where the alleged theft was committed, two years later, was not a part of the res gestae, but hearsay, and too remote on the question of the accused's intention at the time of the alleged theft.—People v. Green, 143 Cal. 8, 76 Pac. 649.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 441; 16 Cyc. 1155; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1420-1423, § 812; col. 1430, § 815; cols. 1450-1453, § 821.

§ 117. —— Self-serving Declarations.

Admissibility of self-serving declarations. See post, § 176.

[a] Declaration of defendant in his own interest made after he was in custody of officer is no part of res gestae.—People v. Dice, 120 Cal. 201, 52 Pac. 477.

C. OTHER OFFENSES AND CHARACTER OF ACCUSED.

OTHER OFFENSE AS EVIDENCE OF CRIME CHARGED, § 118.
RELEVANT EVIDENCE ALSO TENDING TO PROVE OTHER OFFENSE, § 119.
TO SHOW GUILTY KNOWLEDGE, § 120.
TO SHOW INTENT OR MOTIVE, § 121.
TO SHOW SYSTEM OR HABIT, § 122.
CHARACTER OR REPUTATION—IN GENERAL, § 123.
—— AS EVIDENCE OF OFFENSE, § 124.
—— GOOD CHARACTER, § 125.
—— EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE TO PROVE, § 126.
—— EVIDENCE BASED ON INFORMATION OBTAINED AFTER ARREST, § 127.
—— REBUTTAL OF EVIDENCE OF GOOD CHARACTER, § 128.
—— EFFECT OF PROOF OF GOOD CHARACTER, § 129.

§ 118. Other Offense as Evidence of Crime Charged.

[a] The prosecution in a criminal case cannot give evidence to show that the prisoner committed or attempted to commit another offense for the purpose of raising the inference that he is guilty of the crime with which he stands charged.—People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565.

[b] On trial of a defendant charged with one crime, testimony is not admissible to show that he had been engaged in plans for the commission of other crimes.—People v. Jones, 32 Cal. 80.

[c] If a defendant, who is on trial for a larceny, becomes a witness in his own behalf, a question put to him on cross-examination, as to whether he has not been previously arrested for another larceny, is not objectionable on the ground that the defendant cannot be shown to be guilty of the offense charged by showing that he had been accused of another crime.—People v. McCauley, 45 Cal. 146.

[d] On trial for one offense evidence of other crimes is inadmissible.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 112, 16 Pac. 544.

[e] Evidence of facts tending to prove another distinct offense is inadmissible to raise inference that defendant committed crime in question.—People v. Bishop, 81 Cal. 117, 22 Pac. 477.

[f] Evidence of immoral acts of accused not connected with crime charged is inadmissible. People v. Tiley, 84 Cal. 653, 24 Pac. 290.

[g] Admission of evidence of other offenses to show likelihood of defendant's guilt is reversible error.—People v. Stewart, 85 Cal. 175, 176, 24 Pac. 722.

[h] Evidence of other offenses is inadmissible for purpose of increasing likelihood that accused committed offense charged.—People v. Stewart, 85 Cal. 175, 24 Pac. 722.

[i] Defendant was prosecuted for murder, committed while attempting to arrest deceased for an assault on a third person, with whom he had quarreled. The court permitted evidence to be introduced showing that deceased and the third person had made up their quarrel before the arrest was attempted. Held, that this was error, since it was none the less defendant's duty to make the arrest. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629.

[j] Evidence of prior acts of embezzlement similar to one charged in information is admissible.—People v. Neyce, 86 Cal. 395, 24 Pac. 1091.

[k] As a general rule evidence of a distinct and substantive offense cannot be admitted to show the commission of another offense, and this rule excludes all evidence of collateral facts, or those which are incapable of affording a reasonable presumption or logical inference as to the principal fact or matter in dispute; and evidence of another offense cannot be given unless there is some clear connection between the two offenses by which it may be logically inferred that if guilty of the one the defendant is also guilty of the other.—People v. Lane, 100 Cal. 379, 34 Pac. 856.

[l] Guilt cannot be shown, nor can the weight of evidence be increased by showing that the defendant has committed other offenses; and mere proximity of time and place do not render evidence of another offense admissible.—People v. Tucker, 104 Cal. 440, 38 Pac. 195; People v. Baird, 104 Cal. 462, 38 Pac. 310.

[m] Where a defendant accused of larceny upon a certain day denies that he committed the larceny, and does not claim that he took the money from a sleeping friend to preserve it for him, evidence that on the previous day a distinct offense was committed by the defendant in taking other money from under the pillow of the same person is not admissible.—People v. Tucker, 104 Cal. 440, 38 Pac. 195.

[n] It is not competent to show that defendant has been guilty of other offenses for purpose of raising presumption, either of law or fact, of his guilt in case under consideration.—People v. Sears, 119 Cal. 271, 51 Pac. 325.

[o] Evidence of other offenses is inadmissible, e. g., that defendant tried to entice other girls to house of prostitution.—People v. Elliott, 119 Cal. 594, 51 Pac. 955.

[p] Under certain conditions prosecution is entitled to prove against a defendant an offense other than the one on which he is being tried.—People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 4, 53 Pac. 359.

[q] A city marshal called by the state to prove the flight of accused was permitted to testify that he had been looking for accused for about two weeks before the crime in question was committed, and from other parts of his testimony it appeared that he wanted to and did arrest him for a different crime than that charged, and wholly disconnected from it. Held, that the admission of such testimony was error.—People v. Vidal, 121 Cal. 221, 53 Pac. 558.

[r] Evidence of declarations of defendant as to intention of himself and another person to commit other and distinct offenses of robbery is inadmissible.—People v. Lynch, 122 Cal. 501, 55 Pac. 248.

[s] Evidence that on a prior occasion defendant, charged with making and uttering a fictitious order for the payment of money, wrote a check under an assumed name, is not admissible.—People v. Arlington, 123 Cal. 356, 55 Pac. 1003.

[t] In a prosecution for murder, the record evidence that the deceased had been previously convicted of an assault on a third person is inadmissible.—People v. Griner, 124 Cal. 19, 56 Pac. 625.

[u] On a trial for forging a check, evidence that other checks are forgeries is not admissible to prove the corpus delicti, but only—after that has been established—to show guilty intent.—People v. Bird, 124 Cal. 32, 56 Pac. 639.

[v] Upon the trial of person accused of murder, evidence is admissible to show the condition of the body of the deceased immediately after the homicide, and that the pocket of the deceased, containing a purse with change in it, was partly turned inside out. The fact that the evidence might tend to show that the motive of the homicide was robbery does not render it inadmissible as tending to show a distinct crime.—People v. Gleason, 127 Cal. 323, 59 Pac. 592.

[w] In a prosecution for extortion, it was error to allow evidence of a conversation, held prior to the extortion charged, in which one of the defendants stated that he and the other defendant were making arrangements to blackmail persons other than the prosecuting witness, since such evidence was not connected with the crime charged, and was prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Williams, 127 Cal. 212, 59 Pac. 581.

[x] Upon a charge of crime involving sexual intercourse by consent, other incidents may be proved, not primarily to prove habitual or continuous criminality, or other offenses, but merely as tending to prove the one specific offense for the alleged commission of which the defendant is on trial.—People v. Williams, 133 Cal. 165, 65 Pac. 323.

[y] On a prosecution for subornation of perjury, it was error to permit the state to introduce evidence that the accused had advised the same witness to conceal himself to avoid the service of a subpoena, and thus persuaded him from attending the trial, since this act, in itself, was a misdemeanor, under Penal Code, section 136, and an indictment for one crime cannot be supported by proof of another.—People v. Carpenter, 136 Cal. 391, 68 Pac. 1027.

[z] On the trial of a convict for murder in resisting arrest after his escape, where the evidence showed that defendant, with twelve others, conspired to effect their escape, and a part of the case of the prosecution consisted of proof that the thirteen convicts had been convicted and sentenced to the state prison, and were at the time of the escape serving their sentences, it was proper for the jury to consider the evidence of such trials and convictions, including that of defendant.—People v. Wood, 145 Cal. 659, 79 Pac. 367.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 62 L. R. A. 194, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 405, 406; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1454-1464, §§ 822-824.

§ 119. Relevant Evidence Also Tending to Prove Other Offense.

[a] On a prosecution for burglary, evidence that, at the time defendants were arrested they were attempting another burglary, and that there was found on their persons, at such time, part of the stolen property, is admissible to identify defendant as one of the persons who committed the burglary charged.—People v. McGilver, 67 Cal. 55, 7 Pac. 49.

[b] Evidence tending directly to prove defendant's guilt of offense charged is admissible, though it also tends to prove a distinct felony.—People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679.

[c] In the trial of a constable for murder in making an arrest, evidence of deceased's quarrel and fight with another party was properly admitted, as bearing on the question of whether deceased had committed a felony, and whether defendant had a right to arrest him without a warrant, and to kill him if necessary to effect the arrest.—People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629.

[d] Upon the trial of a person charged with one offense, proof of another and distinct offense is ordinarily inadmissible when it has no tendency to establish the offense charged; yet whenever the case is such that proof of one crime tends to prove any fact material in the trial of another, and in any case where two persons are murdered or assaulted at the same time, and as part of the same transaction, such proof is admissible, and the fact that it may tend to prejudice the defendant in the minds of the jurors is no ground for its exclusion.—People v. Walters, 98 Cal. 138, 32 Pac. 864.

[e] Testimony by a committing magistrate that a person who had been charged with an assault to murder one of the defendants was found not guilty of the charge upon the same day that the deceased, who was surety on his bond, was killed, does not necessarily tend to show the commission of another crime by such defendant.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[f] Although ordinarily evidence of another offense cannot be given, yet, whenever the case is such that proof of one crime tends to prove any fact material in the trial of another, such proof is admissible, and the fact that it may tend to prejudice the defendant in the minds of the jurors is no ground for its exclusion; and where the evidence tends to establish the offense charged, the fact that it tends also to show an attempt of the defendant to commit another offense does not render it inadmissible.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1040.

§ 120. To Show Guilty Knowledge.

[a] Evidence of other offenses is admissible to show guilty knowledge and intent, if tending to connect defendant with offense charged. People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 573.

[b] In a prosecution for forgery, the state sought to introduce evidence that defendant had been prosecuted before for forging notes, and acquitted. It was objected that, since defendant had been acquitted, the state was estopped from introducing evidence of his prosecution. Held, that the estoppel extended only to the fact of the forgery itself, which was a fact necessarily found by the jury, and not to the question whether defendant was endeavoring to pass bills knowing them to be forged.—People v. Frank, 28 Cal. 507.

[c] The admissibility in evidence, on trials for forgery, of other instruments claimed to have been forged and uttered by the defendant, is to be left in a great measure to the discretion of the presiding judge.—People v. Frank, 28 Cal. 507.

[d] In a prosecution for embezzlement, previous acts of embezzlement similar to the one charged may be shown as evidence of guilty knowledge.—People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240; People v. Neyce, 86 Cal. 393, 24 Pac. 1091.

[e] In a trial of a defendant charged with having forged and uttered a draft, evidence that the person whose name purported to be signed to such draft had, prior to its date, been murdered by defendant, is pertinent and material, both as tending to prove that the instrument was forged, and also the knowledge of its false character by defendant when he uttered it; and it is not rendered inadmissible by the fact that it tends to prove the commission by defendant of a separate crime. People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[f] In a prosecution for forgery, evidence of other forgeries of similar instruments about the same time was admissible to show guilty knowledge and intent.—People v. McGlade, 139 Cal. 66, 72 Pac. 600.

[a] In a prosecution for the murder of an officer, committed while he was in fresh pursuit of defendant, who, with others, had committed a felony, evidence of the commission of the felony and defendant's connection therewith was admissible to show that his motive for the killing was to escape arrest. People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 572.

[b] In a prosecution for embezzlement of public money, evidence of similar acts is admissible to prove criminal intent.—People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240.

[c] Prosecution may prove commission of other offenses in exceptional cases to prove intent with which act charged was done.—People v. Stewart, 85 Cal. 175, 24 Pac. 722.

[d] In a murder case, where the evidence shows that a feud existed between the families of defendant and deceased, evidence that immediately after defendant shot deceased, he fired the other barrel of his gun, and wounded deceased's mother, who was present, is admissible to show motive.—People v. Walters, 98 Cal. 138, 32 Pac. 864.

[e] Evidence tending to show a material fact or motive, although it also tends to prove the commission of another offense by the defendant, is relevant and admissible.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[f] On a trial for embezzlement, evidence that money belonging to defendant's employer, received by defendant, other than that specified in the information, was not entered on the books or accounted for, is admissible to show an intent to conceal the appropriation of the money mentioned in the information.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[g] On trial of a deputy county assessor for embezzlement, evidence that he collected other taxes than those alleged to have been embezzled, and failed to pay them over, is admissible to show guilty intent in appropriating the money alleged to have been embezzled.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[h] Where a defendant is accused of an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to murder a police officer who was endeavoring to arrest him for shooting at another person, evidence is admissible to show the circumstances of the previous shooting for the purpose of showing the motive of the defendant in the commission of the offense charged, and to prove his intent in resisting arrest and assaulting the policeman, and the fact that such evidence of motive and intent includes the proof of a distinct offense for which the arrest was sought does not render such evidence inadmissible.—People v. Wilson, 117 Cal. 688, 49 Pac. 1054.

[i] Evidence in chief that a defendant charged with making and uttering a fictitious order for the payment of money had on prior occasions gone under assumed names, and had been arrested for drunkenness, is not admissible, as tending to show intent, system, and guilty knowledge.—People v. Arlington, 123 Cal. 356, 55 Pac. 1003.

[j] Evidence that defendant, two months after the embezzlement charged in the information, embezzled another sum of money from the prosecuting witness is not admissible to show his intention in taking the first sum. People v. Hill, 34 Pac. 854.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 62 L. R. A. 199, 214, 277, notes. See, also, 1 Cyc. 158, 186; 12 Cyc. 408-410; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1471-1481, §§ 830-832.

§ 122. To Show System or Habit.

[a] On a trial for embezzlement, evidence that money belonging to defendant's employer, received by defendant, other than that specified in the information, was not entered on the books or accounted for, is admissible to show the system adopted by defendant to conceal the conversion of money.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[b] On a prosecution for procuring a certain person to falsely register as a voter in a precinct, others may testify that defendant also procured them to falsely register.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

[c] In a prosecution for incest, after the state has proved and elected to rely on a particular act of incestuous intercourse on a day certain, testimony of either prior or subsequent acts of incestuous intercourse or improper familiarity is admissible, not as evidence of independent offenses on which a conviction may be had, but as corroborative evidence showing the incestuous inclination of the parties.—People v. Koller, 142 Cal. 621, 76 Pac. 500.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 62 L. R. A. 199, 218, 291, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 411; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1481-1485, §§ 833, 834.

§ 123. Character or Reputation—In General.

[a] Fact that defense made by woman charged with the murder of a man is rendered more formidable when considered in connection with the good character which the law presumes her to possess does not of itself open the door for the prosecution to prove that her general character for chastity is bad.—People v. Fair, 43 Cal. 137.

[b] General character for chastity of a female charged with the murder of a man is no more necessarily involved in the question of her guilt or innocence than her general character in any other respect; and on the trial of such a person the prosecution will not be allowed to introduce testimony upon the point, unless defendant initiate the inquiry.—People v. Fair, 43 Cal. 137.

[c] The presumption of a character of ordinary fairness, with which the law, for the purposes of trial, clothes a person accused of crime, is one to which he is entitled, and which cannot be put in peril unless he, by introducing testimony in reference thereto, elects to put it distinctly in issue.—People v. Fair, 43 Cal. 137.

[d] Where the defendant's good reputation has been fully established, and the prosecution has offered no evidence to impeach it, an objection to questions as to defendant's reputation is properly sustained.—People v. Moan, 65 Cal. 532, 4 Pac. 545.

[e] Since, in a criminal prosecution, the defendant cannot prove particular acts of his good conduct, neither can the state in rebuttal prove particular acts of his bad conduct, but proof of general character is alone admissible.—People v. Bezy, 67 Cal. 223, 7 Pac. 643; People v. Bishop, 81 Cal. 113, 22 Pac. 477.

[f] It is not error to exclude evidence of the good disposition of defendant, other than his general good reputation.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

[g] Evidence as to the character of defendant must be confined to his general reputation. People v. Gordon, 103 Cal. 568, 37 Pac. 534.

[h] On a trial for larceny it was not error to exclude testimony of defendant's habits as to steadiness, drinking, or anything of that sort.—People v. Chrisman, 135 Cal. 282, 67 Pac. 136.

[i] Where, on a prosecution for murder, the theory of the state was that defendant and other convicts had conspired to escape from the state prison, and that the crime was committed in pursuance thereof, held not error to sustain an objection to the question whether defendant was a good prisoner.—People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Good character of the accused or defendant, when admissible: 41 Am. Rep. 120, note.

Reputation of an accused, or of a witness, whether admissible: 50 Am. Rep. 98, note.

Good character of the accused, admissibility and effect of evidence of in criminal prosecutions; 103 Am. St. Rep. 889, note; 20 L. R. A. 609, note. See, also, 3 Cyc. 1056; 12 Cyc. 412-418; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1487-1504, §§ 836-846.

§ 124. —— As Evidence of Offense.

[a] It is not the policy of the law to allow proof of bad character of defendant accused of crime, as a step in proof of guilt.—People v. Whiteman, 114 Cal. 338, 46 Pac. 99.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 413-415; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1488-1490, § 839.

§ 125. —— Good Character.

[a] Evidence of character can only be considered in relation to particular crime charged in cases where the guilt of the accused is doubtful.—People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 214.

[b] Evidence of good character as defense in criminal cases should be restricted to the trait of character which is in issue.—People v. Josephs, 7 Cal. 129; People v. Fair, 43 Cal. 137.

[c] Evidence of the character of a defendant on trial for murder must be confined to testimony of his character for peace and quietude.—People v. Stewart, 28 Cal. 395; People v. Bezy, 67 Cal. 223, 7 Pac. 643.

[d] The defendant has the right to support the presumption of innocence by evidence that his personal character in respect to the trait involved in the charge has previously been good.—People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288.

[e] In trials for criminal offenses, the defendant may introduce evidence of his previous good character and conduct for the purpose of repelling the charge made against him.—(Cal. 1875) People v. Shepardson, 49 Cal. 629.

[f] Court instructed jury, with reference to the evidence of good character, that "such evidence is to be considered and applied by the jury in the case in this way: as a circumstance tending to throw some light upon the principal question involved: Did or did not the defendant fire this shot? Did or did not he commit the offense? Held, not error. People v. Soto, 63 Cal. 165.

[g] On a trial for murder it is proper to exclude testimony as to the reputation for "truth, honesty, and integrity" of defendant, who was a witness in his own behalf, where those traits of character were not questioned by the prosecution.—People v. Cowgill, 93 Cal. 596, 29 Pac. 228.

[h] Evidence of good character is not admissible in mitigation of the penalty, where defendant pleads guilty.—People v. Miller, 114 Cal. 10, 45 Pac. 986.

§ 126. —— Evidence Admissible to Prove.

[a] Witness should be asked if he lived in county and knew defendant's reputation therein before he is asked what it is.—People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 603, 11 Pac. 481.

[b] Before witness can be asked as to defendant's reputation, it must be shown that he knows it.—People v. Marseiler, 70 Cal. 100, 11 Pac. 503.

[c] In prosecution for burglary a certificate of the discharge of defendant from the United States army, certifying to his good character, is not admissible as evidence of his good character.—People v. Eckman, 72 Cal. 582, 14 Pac. 359.

[d] Testimony that a letter found in the possession of defendant at the time of his arrest, and advising his change of residence to evade the officers of the law, was written by a highbinder society, or "tong," which could be "hired for murder, or blackmail, or anything you want, for money," is inadmissible, on a trial for homicide, for the purpose of showing the character of defendant, when it is not shown that defendant is a member of such society.—People v. Lee Dick Lung, 129 Cal. 491, 62 Pac. 71.

[e] Testimony of a witness that he knows the general reputation of defendant, and that it is good, as far as he knows, is evidence of good character.—People v. Hoagland, 137 Cal. 218, 69 Pac. 1063.

[f] Where a defendant is permitted to prove his character for peace and quiet, it must be done by proving general reputation in the community or communities where he has lived.—People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

§ 127. —— Evidence Based on Information Obtained After Arrest.

[a] Testimony of witness that he had learned since arrest of defendant that his reputation before arrest was bad is inadmissible. People v. Fong Ching, 78 Cal. 175, 20 Pac. 396; People v. McSweeney, 38 Pac. 743.

§ 128. —— Rebuttal of Evidence of Good Character.

[a] Where defendant in a criminal case showed that his general reputation for truth and veracity was good in the place where he resided, rebuttal evidence that his reputation in that respect was bad in a town twelve miles distant, where he had lived two and one-half years before, was properly admitted. People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1493, 1494, § 842.

§ 129. —— Effect of Proof of Good Character.

[a] Evidence of character can only be considered in reference to whole case; not to any isolated fact.—People v. Milgate, 5 Cal. 127.

[b] Evidence of good character is to be considered with other evidence on the question of guilt or innocence.—People v. Raina, 45 Cal. 292.

[c] Good character must be considered with all other evidence in the case, and if the jury have reasonable doubt of guilt they must acquit.—People v. Bowman, 81 Cal. 570, 22 Pac. 917.

[d] Good character of a defendant is of itself a sufficient fact from which a reasonable doubt of guilt may arise, which will entitle him to an acquittal.—People v. Lee, 8 Pac. 685.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 417; 16 Cyc. 1283; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1501-1504, § 846.

EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE BECAUSE OF PRIOR ADMISSION OF SIMILAR EVIDENCE, § 148.

§ 130. Materiality and Competency Distinguished.

[a] There is a wide distinction between immaterial and incompetent evidence. Evidence may be material and tend to prove an issue, but incompetent under the rules of law for that purpose.—People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

§ 131. Materiality in General.

[a] Testimony proffered by the defendants in reference to the disappearance and whereabouts of the daughter of the prosecuting witness, on the day of the robbery, is properly excluded as not pertinent to any issue in the case.—People v. Chuey Ying Git, 100 Cal. 437, 34 Pac. 1080.

[b] Where one accused of arson testified positively that he had nothing to do with the burning, and knew nothing about it, he was not prejudiced by a refusal to permit him to testify that on his preliminary examination he had so stated.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 390; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1505-1522, §§ 847-864.

§ 132. Competency in General.

[a] It is competent for prosecution to prove that property was stolen in another county before it was brought into that in which venue is laid.—People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

[b] When explanation of reason of an act is material, what was said by another to induce such action is competent.—People v. Hodgden, 55 Cal. 78, 36 Am. Rep. 30.

[c] Where, on the trial of an indictment containing two counts, one of which is defective, evidence pertinent to both is received under a ruling that both are good, a verdict will not be sustained because the evidence is sufficient to sustain a conviction on the count which is good.—People v. Smith, 103 Cal. 563, 37 Pac. 516.

[d] On the trial of one charged with forgery, the testimony of an accomplice, to whom was submitted a writing of defendant for the purpose of proving his handwriting, that the writing was a memorandum of extracts from the Bankers' Almanac, containing a list of towns, and that witness and accused were picking out the towns, was incompetent, in so far as it authorized an inference that accused was thus engaged in an attempt to commit a similar offense to the one charged. People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 133. Positiveness and Certainty of Evidence.

[a] A witness, in stating facts within his knowledge or personal observation, is not required to testify with that certainty which excludes all doubt, and the use of the word "presume" by the witness is not ground for striking out his evidence, when, as used by him, it evidently meant nothing more than a statement of his best recollection as to particulars of a fact observed.—People v. Soap, 127 Cal. 408, 59 Pac. 771.

[b] Where an officer, in testifying to stains on defendant's coat when arrested, said that they were "moss stains" made by green moss such as grows on the bark of trees, an objection that the witness, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1845, could testify "of those facts only which he knows of his own knowledge; that is, which are derived from his own perception," was untenable.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 441, 75 Pac. 676.

§ 134. Remoteness of Evidence.

[a] Where defendant is accused of robbing several Chinamen, who were partners and cotenants in the cultivation of land, evidence that other parties than the defendant had learned prior to the robbery that a payment of rent was about to become due, and was to be made by the Chinamen, is not admissible, such knowledge not being proved to have been brought home to the defendant prior to the robbery.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

12 Cyc. 390; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1505, 1506, § 848.

§ 135. Evidence Designed to Appeal to Compassion.

[a] Evidence of tender age of children of accused designed only to move jury to compassion is properly excluded.—People v. Dice, 120 Cal. 201, 52 Pac. 477.

§ 136. Negative Testimony.

[a] Where a defendant charged with homicide introduced evidence that deceased had been seen on several occasions with a pistol, it was proper to allow the state to show in rebuttal that an intimate acquaintance, who had lived in the same house with deceased for a considerable time, had never seen deceased with a pistol.—People v. Grimes, 132 Cal. 30, 64 Pac. 101.

[b] In a prosecution under Penal Code, section 476, for uttering a fictitious instrument, evidence that a person's name did not appear in the directory is competent as tending to show that there was no such person in the county.—People v. Terrill, 133 Cal. 120, 65 Pac. 303.

[c] It is not error to admit negative testimony of witnesses who state that they had never heard the reputation of the deceased for peace and quiet discussed, and to refuse to strike out such testimony.—People v. Adams, 137 Cal. 580, 70 Pac. 662.

[d] Where, in a prosecution for robbery, a witness had testified that he was city electrician, and that he knew of the electric lights at the intersection of certain streets in the city, and that no report came in from there on January 14, 1902, he was entitled to testify that reports were not made unless a light went out, to show the ordinary course of business of the city with regard to its lights and their general or usual condition.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

§ 137. Evidence Procured by Dissemblance or Plot to Entrap.

[a] On a trial for bribery, certain evidence held admissible under the rule justifying dissemblance in order to procure evidence of guilt.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

[b] On a trial of a state senator for receiving a bribe in violation of Penal Code, section 86, the testimony of witnesses, plotting to entrap accused, is not inadmissible as contrary to public policy.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 401, 402; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1529, 1530, § 876.

§ 138. Evidence Procured by Eavesdropping.

[a] Where a witness in a criminal prosecution is called by the state to prove a confession made by accused, it is not a valid objection to the testimony that the witness was eavesdropping when he heard the defendant make the statements.—People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166.

§ 139. Proof of Motive.

[a] In every criminal case proof of motive is competent.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 208, 48 Pac. 75.

§ 140. Intoxication.

[a] Where intent is not an element of offense, evidence as to whether defendant was drunk or sober at time of its commission is immaterial.—People v. Marseiler, 70 Cal. 100, 11 Pac. 503.

§ 141. Evidence of Part of Conversation.

See, also, post, § 164.

[a] On a trial for murder it was not error to permit a witness to testify to a part of a material conversation, though he did not profess to be able to testify to the entire conversation.—People v. Rader, 136 Cal. 253, 68 Pac. 707.

§ 142. Accounting for Absence of Witness.

[a] The state may show why a person who was present at a robbery had gone away, as otherwise he should have been called as a witness.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., col. 1508, § 852.

§ 143. Articles Taken from Prisoner.

[a] Various articles taken from defendant's person at time of his arrest are admissible when tending to establish guilt.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 91, 50 Pac. 390.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 59 L. R. A. 466, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 402; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1530, 1531, § 877.

§ 144. Articles Taken from Place Where Crime was Committed.

[a] Exhibits of articles taken from house where crime was committed, identified by victim and shown to have been used by accused in connection with crime, are admissible as part of transaction and as tending to corroborate prosecuting witness.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 91, 50 Pac. 390.

§ 145. Compelling Accused to Stand for Identification.

[a] To order defendant to stand up for identification by a witness is not compelling him to become a witness against himself, within the meaning of the constitutional provision that "no person shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself."—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

§ 146. Experiments.

[a] Expert evidence is admissible to show farthest distance at which clothing would be powder-marked with rifle where it is material to determine distance between parties where shooting occurred.—People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 578, 24 Pac. 313.

[b] Evidence of result of experiments in chemistry, toxology, use of firearms, etc., is admissible.—People v. Levine, 85 Cal. 43, 22 Pac. 969, 24 Pac. 631.

[c] If one experiment is permitted, others made by opposite party and relating to same subject must also be permitted.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 297, 52 Pac. 833.

[d] Admission of proof of experiments rests in sound discretion of trial court.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 296, 52 Pac. 833.

[e] Rule that evidence of experiments may be used in proper cases is sustained by weight of authority.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 297, 52 Pac. 833.

[f] Evidence of experiments is only admissible when proved to have been made under conditions essentially the same as those that existed in the case on trial.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 297, 52 Pac. 833.

[g] Evidence of experiments which would tend to confuse and mislead, rather than enlighten, jury, is properly excluded.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 297, 52 Pac. 833.

[h] Experiments for the prosecution made for the purpose of contradicting defendant's witnesses as to the hearing of certain sounds in the night-time in the vicinity of defendant's cabin, are admissible, though made in the daytime, if the principal conditions were the same. The jury can weigh the evidence, and make allowances for any difference in atmospheric conditions between the daytime and the night-time.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[i] In a prosecution for murder, where defendant and deceased were alone at the time of the killing, and the defendant, as a witness, had testified in detail as to the occurrences connected therewith, stating that deceased was shot as he was trying to pull a rifle away from defendant, with which defendant was protecting himself while trying to escape after a personal encounter, diagrams, shown to be correct, showing the angle defined by the course of the bullet which killed deceased, and testimony as to the result of experiments in firing bullets into woolen cloth, such as worn by deceased, at about the distance which accused testified deceased was from the gun when shot, were properly admitted in rebuttal.—People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014.

[j] In a prosecution for homicide, certain bullets fired by an expert from the pistol alleged to have been used by accused held not objectionable on the ground that they were not fired under the same conditions as those existing at the time of the homicide.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

§ 147 —— By Hypnotist.

§ 148. Evidence Admissible Because of Prior Admission of Similar Evidence.

[a] Introduction of irrelevant evidence by one side does not justify similar evidence by the other.—People v. Dye, 75 Cal. 110, 16 Pac. 537.

[b] In a criminal case, where defendants introduced a part of the written testimony of a certain witness, taken at the preliminary examination, it was proper for the prosecution to explain such testimony by introducing the preceding part thereof, which related to substantially the same subject.—People v. Arthur, 93 Cal. 536, 29 Pac. 126.

[c] Where, in a prosecution for murder, the defense has shown threats by decedent against accused, it is proper to allow the state, in rebuttal, to give evidence of threats and ill-feeling by accused against decedent; it not having touched that matter in its opening.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1514-1522, §§ 861, 862.

E. BEST AND SECONDARY AND DEMONSTRATIVE EVIDENCE.

NECESSITY FOR BEST EVIDENCE, § 149.
RECORD AS BEST EVIDENCE, § 150.
ADMISSIBILITY OF SECONDARY EVIDENCE, § 151.
—— LAYING FOUNDATION, § 152.
DEMONSTRATIVE EVIDENCE, § 153.
—— EXPERIMENTS IN COURT, § 154.
—— HANDWRITING FOR COMPARISON, § 155.
—— DRESSMAKER'S FRAME OR MODEL, § 156.
CLOTHING OF VICTIM OF MURDER, § 157.
—— IDENTIFICATION, § 158.

§ 149. Necessity for Best Evidence.

[a] Rule that the best evidence must always be offered does not entitle the prosecution to insist that accused shall testify as to matters peculiarly within his knowledge. The fact that his evidence is entitled to less weight than the testimony of a disinterested person is sufficient reason for desiring to establish his defense, so far as possible, by other testimony.—People v. Anderson, 39 Cal. 703.

[b] Facts must be shown by best evidence of which the case admits.—People v. Urquidas, 96 Cal. 239, 31 Pac. 52.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1353-1538, §§ 879-881.

§ 150. Record as Best Evidence.

[a] Record is best evidence of previous conviction.—People v. Reinhart, 39 Cal. 449; People v. Melvane, 39 Cal. 614; People v. McDonald, 39 Cal. 697.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1538-1548, §§ 882 886.

§ 151. Admissibility of Secondary Evidence.

[a] Witness may be asked if he was not arrested for a given offense, and objection that record is the best evidence does not lie. People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

[b] Parol evidence as to the aggregate of insurance policies on a building which accused was charged with firing to obtain the insurance is admissible over objection of not being the best evidence, where it was shown the policies had been canceled, and were without the court's jurisdiction.—People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

[c] Where, on a trial for burglary, based on accused's entering a building with intent to commit arson, the motive assigned was a purpose to secure insurance on the loss of the goods by the fire, the fact that the property was insured was provable by parol.—People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

§ 152. —— Laying Foundation.

[a] Where a contract is stated in an indictment, and it appears by the evidence on the trial to have been in writing, secondary proof of its contents cannot be made, unless it is shown that it could not be produced.—People v. Hust, 49 Cal. 653.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1548-1552, §§ 887, 888.

§ 153. Demonstrative Evidence.

[a] In a prosecution for forgery by altering a check, where a certain chemical is found in defendant's possession, similar checks to that forged in which this chemical has been used as an experiment are admissible in evidence.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[b] Box of sand containing impression of defendant's shoe, proved to be similar to tracks found in vicinity of homicide, is admissible.—People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 5, 6, 53 Pac. 359.

[c] In a trial for murder alleged to have been committed with a rifle which defendant borrowed, it is not error to admit the rifle in evidence, when properly identified.—People v. Sullivan, 129 Cal. 557, 62 Pac. 101.

[d] Where a witness arrived at the place a few minutes after a homicide, and while the body of deceased was still lying where it fell, it was not error to permit such witness to illustrate to the jury, by a diagram, the location of the surrounding objects when he arrived.—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 395.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1552-1561, §§ 891-893.

§ 154. —— Experiments in Court.

[a] Witness having testified to his former experiment may be made to repeat it before the jury on cross-examination or in rebuttal. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 218, 48 Pac. 75.

[b] In a prosecution for homicide, it was not error for the court to permit the attorney general to arrange certain bullets in a particular order and after having placed them in juxtaposition submit them to the jury.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

§ 155. —— Handwriting for Comparison.

[a] In a prosecution for forging a money order other instruments of the same general character, proven in defendant's handwriting, are admissible before the jury for the purpose of comparison, and also, it would seem, for the purpose of showing his guilty knowledge in passing the said order.—People v. Bibby, 91 Cal. 470, 27 Pac. 781.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1944, requiring the judge to be satisfied that a writing, shown a witness for the purpose of establishing proof of handwriting, was genuine, before he could admit it for that purpose, it was improper to show the circumstances under which it was written.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

§ 156. —— Dressmaker's Frame or Model.

[a] The use of a dressmaker's frame in court for convenience in exhibiting the clothing of a murdered woman, which was introduced in evidence, and in regard to which much testimony was taken, was not prejudicial to the defendant, no claim being made that the frame represented the height, size or figure of the deceased.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 1102, a model held admissible in evidence on the trial of a criminal case.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 157. Clothing of Victim of Murder.

[a] Clothing worn by deceased is admissible to show violence of blow and direction of incision.—People v. Knapp, 71 Cal. 3, 11 Pac. 793.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1954, there was no abuse of discretion in admitting in evidence in a murder trial shirts and cuffs with the deceased's laundry mark thereon, found in the possession of the accused, together with other articles admitted to belong to the deceased.—People v. Westlake, 134 Cal. 505, 66 Pac. 731.

§ 158. —— Identification.

[a] Where a witness testified that he saw deceased's vest when it was removed from the body, after it had lain in the grave over five months, and that it was then in the same condition as when he examined and brushed it just after deceased's death, held, that it was not error to admit the vest in evidence.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[b] On a prosecution for murder, two shirts and two pairs of cuffs found in the possession of the accused, and alleged to belong to the deceased, were admitted in evidence. The articles bore a certain laundry mark, and the proprietor, bookkeeper and driver of the delivery wagon of a laundry all testified that deceased had once sent laundry to their office, and that it bore the same mark as on the articles received in evidence; that it was the only mark of the kind received in the laundry, and was recorded in the laundry books. One of the cuffs had on it the initials of the deceased. Held, that the articles were sufficiently identified as the property of the deceased to be admissible in evidence.—People v. Westlake, 134 Cal. 505, 66 Pac. 731.

LAYING FOUNDATION, § 175.

§ 159. Admissibility in General.

[a] Extrajudicial statements of a prisoner, unaccompanied with other facts or circumstances, are not sufficient proof of the corpus delicti, and will not justify a conviction.—People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565.

[b] Where declarations offered in evidence are merely narrative of a past occurrence, they cannot be received as proof of the existence of such occurrence. (Sharpstein and Thornton, JJ.)—People v. Ah Lee, 60 Cal. 85.

[c] In criminal prosecution evidence of a declaration made by the defendant after his arrest to the sheriff, to the effect that he would plead guilty voluntarily, is admissible when no attempt was made by the sheriff to coerce the defendant, and the only inducement held out to him was the probability that if he was guilty, and so pleaded, he would get a shorter sentence.—People v. Eckman, 72 Cal. 582, 14 Pac. 359.

[d] Upon prosecution for grand larceny, evidence of a witness tending to show that the defendant persuaded and induced him to leave the country is admissible in so far as it shows the acts and declarations of the defendant.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[e] Declarations of the defendant, so far as referring to his connection with a distinct offense of horse-stealing, are incompetent, but his declarations, so far as referring to a general scheme or plan of horse-stealing, or horse-stealing as a business, are competent, and admissible against him.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[f] It is not error to admit evidence as to what defendant said as to the shooting immediately after it occurred, where the statement was entirely voluntary.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[g] Testimony of policeman as to conversation occurring between a Chinese witness and one of the Chinese defendants and himself is admissible, where it appears that defendant was sufficiently acquainted with the English language to understand all that was said, and did understand it.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[h] Conversations between accused and another, wherein accused urged him to go in with him in a scheme to kidnap a wealthy man, are relevant and material in prosecution for enticing victim to lonely house, robbing him and endeavoring to extort money from him by keeping him bound and confined there.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 90, 50 Pac. 390.

[i] Evidence of circumstances attending defendant's arrest including his declarations at the time is admissible.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 91, 50 Pac. 390.

[j] In a prosecution for burglary evidence is admissible that on account of statements made to the arresting officer by defendants, which if true tended to show their innocence, he released them upon their promise to return the next morning, the goods being left in his custody, but that they did not return then or at all, and that they were rearrested, after considerable search, several days later.—People v. Ashmead, 118 Cal. 508, 50 Pac. 681.

[k] Written confession is not best evidence of anything but its own contents, and does not preclude admission of evidence of other declarations and statements.—People v. Cokahnour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[l] Upon the trial of a charge of criminal libel, the oral admissions of the defendant as to his ownership of the paper which published the libel, and also a lease to him and another person jointly, designated as publishers thereof, and signed by the defendant, are admissible, as tending to prove his ownership in whole or in part.—People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[m] In a prosecution for the larceny of a gray horse, defendant asked a witness if, at a certain time and place, "defendant and another person did not have some conversation in regard to a gray horse, and where this defendant could find that gray horse." Held, that it was not error to reject the question as too general, though it would have been admissible if it had been explicitly directed to a conversation, which defendant afterward testified to as having been had at said time and place, wherein he was told by the other person that he had a gray horse, which he would turn into defendant's pasture, and which defendant might sell, and on his return to his home that night he found the gray horse in his pasture.—People v. Schell, 123 Cal. 358, 55 Pac. 1006.

[n] Subsequent declarations of the defendant, made on evening of offense, which clearly identify transaction spoken of by him as crime with which he is charged, were admissible against him, upon a sufficient showing of time, place and circumstances of declaration.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[o] Declarations of defendant, on trial for rape, which clearly referred to the crime in question, and which were properly described as to time, place and circumstances, were admissible in evidence against him.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[p] Where defendant was on trial for murder, it was not error to permit a witness to testify that some hours after the killing defendant said, "I am sorry I got into this trouble, but, as for killing W., I don't care any more for that than I do for killing a jack rabbit."—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 296.

[q] On the day of and prior to commission of the alleged rape defendant had said to a stable-keeper that he was procuring a conveyance to have carnal knowledge of a "little girl," without giving any idea as to who the girl was. Other evidence showed that he enticed prosecutrix into the conveyance, and drove to the place where the crime was committed. Held, no error in admitting defendant's declaration to the stable-keeper.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[r] Where on trial for larceny the taking and ownership are undisputed, but defendant claims he bought the bees of a person who cannot be found, all his statements concerning such person are admissible, as substantive evidence of his guilt.—People v. Chrisman, 135 Cal. 282, 67 Pac. 136.

[s] Where, on a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, the theory of the state was that defendant had enticed prosecutrix into his barber-shop, and there committed the assault, it was proper to admit the testimony of the father of the prosecutrix that when he reached the shop, shortly after the alleged assault, he asked defendant if prosecutrix had been there, and that defendant said that she had, such evidence being competent proof, as an admission by defendant of a material fact in the case.—People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

[t] In prosecution for larceny of horse, testimony as to statements by accused, in response to accusatory statements in his presence, held admissible.—People v. Melandrez (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 372.

§ 160. Admissibility Dependent on Mode of Making.

[a] Where an attending physician took notes of the declarant's statements as he made them, and then retired to another room and wrote them out, after which he read the writing, sentence by sentence, to declarant, who affirmed it as being what he wished to say, the writing is shown to be the declarant's declaration, although the words used are not in all cases the same as those employed in the oral relation.—People v. Bemmerly, 87 Cal. 117, 25 Pac. 266.

§ 161. Declarations While Drunk.

[a] A prejudicial statement of accused while drunk is admissible, it appearing that he himself claimed to be "straight," and the statement indicating that he was not so much intoxicated as to be unconscious of the meaning and effect thereof.—People v. Farrington, 140 Cal. 656, 74 Pac. 288.

§ 162. Declarations Made Under Duress.

[a] Declarations of accused which are not confessions of guilt cannot be objected to as obtained under duress.—People v. Knowlton, 122 Cal. 357, 55 Pac. 141.

§ 163. Statements Made Under Expectation of Immunity from Prosecution.

[a] A statement made by defendant after his arrest to the prosecuting attorney, which contains no confession of guilt, is admissible, though it was induced by the expectation that he would be discharged without trial, and he denies its truthfulness as a witness.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15.

§ 164. Scrap of Conversation.

See, also, ante, § 141.

[a] Evidence of scrap of conversation is inadmissible.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 506, 20 Pac. 56.

§ 165. Admission of Part of Conversation as Making Whole Admissible.

[a] Where, on a criminal trial, a portion of a conversation has been offered in evidence, tending to establish material admissions on the part of the accused, he is entitled to have the exact words constituting the admission stated, if possible, and also to give in evidence the whole conversation relating to the same subject matter.—People v. Murphy, 39 Cal. 52.

[b] A witness testifying to threats made by deceased against defendant should be allowed to state what was said by himself during the conversation, if necessary to show the significance of what was said by deceased.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

§ 166. Somniloquy.

§ 167. Conflicting Statements.

[a] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, where the state claimed that the crime was committed by defendant in his barber-shop on a certain evening, a witness, who accompanied the mother of prosecutrix to defendant's shop shortly after the alleged assault, testified that defendant stated to the mother of prosecutrix that prosecutrix had not been in his shop that evening; and the father of prosecutrix testified that when he reached the shop, very shortly afterward, defendant admitted that prosecutrix had been there. Held, that the testimony of the father was properly received, as tending to show that defendant, at two different interviews held about the same time, had made conflicting statements as to the presence of prosecutrix at the shop. People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

§ 168. Refusal to Answer Questions or Refute Accusation.

[a] Admissions and confessions of guilt may be implied from the acquiescence of the party in the statements of others made in his presence.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[b] An accusation of crime, not replied to, to be admissible, must be made under such circumstances as to afford the accused person an opportunity to act or speak with freedom, and the statement must be one naturally calling for some action or a reply. In this state, an accusation of crime calls for a reply, even from a person under arrest, where the circumstances surrounding him indicate that he was entirely free to reply, if he had chosen to do so.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[c] An arrested defendant is not called upon to make any reply to any question or statement directly from the arresting officer; but the fact that he was under arrest, and that an incriminating statement was made by the deceased in presence of the arresting officer, does not make the failure to reply thereto inadmissible evidence, though the importance thereof is to be determined by the jury, in view of all the surrounding conditions. (Per McFarland, J., concurring specially.)—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[d] Defendant and another were arrested within an hour or two after decedent was shot, and brought to the latter's bedside, where he, in the presence of several other persons, in response to questions by the officers, pointed at and identified defendant as the man who shot him. Defendant fully understood the accusation, but made no reply or denial. Held that, though defendant was under arrest, evidence of such failure was admissible.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[e] The fact that a prisoner refused to answer questions as to his possession of stolen goods is not admissible in evidence to prove that he stole them.—People v. Elster, 3 Pac. 884.

[f] That accused was under arrest, and had been refused permission to secretly confer with his companion who was charged with the same offense, held no excuse for defendant's failure to reply to deceased's accusatory statements made in defendant's presence.—People v. Sullivan (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 834.

[g] Statements of deceased in defendant's presence, accusing him of inflicting the wounds from which deceased subsequently died, held admissible to show that defendant's silence indicated an acquiescence in their truth.—People v. Sullivan (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 834.

§ 169. Facts Provable by Admissions.

[a] Statements acquiesced in by party to whom they are made are admitted in evidence, not as themselves evidence of the truth of the facts stated, but to show the conduct of the defendant under the circumstances.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[b] Statements made to the accused are admissible to show his conduct when they were made, but not to prove their truth.—People v. Ah Yute, 53 Cal. 613.

§ 170. Admissions by Counsel.

[a] The record of an admission of a fact, made for the purpose of a trial on an indictment, by the prisoner's counsel in open court, in his presence, may be read in evidence to the jury.—People v. Garcia, 25 Cal. 531.

§ 171. Statements Before Grand Jury.

[a] Statements made by defendant before grand jury, not amounting to a confession, may be proved against him, and no question of duress or menace is involved in proof thereof.—People v. Sexton, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

§ 172. Plea of Guilty.

[a] Plea of guilty withdrawn by permission of court, cannot be introduced in evidence.—People v. Ryan, 82 Cal. 619, 23 Pac. 121.

§ 173. Statements Made in Criminal Prosecutions.

[a] Testimony of witness in criminal proceeding is considered voluntary, unless the questions are objected to, and the witness forced, nevertheless, to testify. The mere fact that he was duly sworn to answer questions, and was compelled to answer or admit that his answers might criminate himself, does not render his testimony involuntary.—People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

[b] In a criminal prosecution voluntary statements or admissions of the defendant, made while testifying as a witness upon the trial of another person charged with the same offense as defendant upon a different information, are competent evidence against him.—People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

§ 174. Statements Made in Civil Proceedings.

[a] The fact that defendant testified in an insolvency proceeding in obedience to a citation did not deprive him of his right to refuse to answer questions tending to criminate him; and an admission made by him in such proceeding is voluntary, and competent evidence in a criminal prosecution subsequently inaugurated, where he was not in custody, or charged with a criminal offense, when he made such admission.—People v. Weiger, 100 Cal. 352, 34 Pac. 826.

§ 175. Laying Foundation.

[a] Proof of the corpus delicti, to authorize proof of admissions by defendant, need not connect him with the commission of the offense.—People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57, 46 Pac. 896.

[b] Admissions which, when connected with other facts, tend to establish guilt, are competent without preliminary proof.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 32, 50 Pac. 15.

[c] On a trial for burglary, after evidence has been offered showing that, on the night of the burglary, the defendants were arrested with the property stolen in their possession, statements then made by them to the arresting officer, relating to their movements on the night in question, and to the goods in their possession, which, if true, tended to show their innocence, are admissible without preliminary proof that such statements were freely and voluntarily made.—People v. Ashmead, 118 Cal. 508, 50 Pac. 681.

[d] An officer accosted defendant at night with stolen malt in his possession, and asked him what he was doing with that; whereupon defendant replied that he was no chicken, and was not going to tell. Held, that such statement was a mere declaration of the defendant against interest, and not a confession, and was therefore admissible without a foundation showing that the statements were voluntary.—People v. Joy, 135 Cal. xix, 68 Pac. 964.

[e] In a prosecution for homicide, evidence of the corpus delicti held sufficient to warrant the admission of defendant's statements made immediately after the shooting that he had shot his wife.—People v. Fallon (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 689.

[f] A statement made by accused to the sheriff and district attorney held admissible without preliminary proof that it was voluntary, where the statement contained no admission or confession of guilt.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 96 Cal. 671.

2. Self-serving Declarations and Acts.

Self-serving declarations as part of res gestae. See ante, § 117.

§ 176. Admissibility in General.

[a] Declarations of party in his own favor are inadmissible.—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 215, 13 Pac. 500; People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697; People v. Prather, 120 Cal. 660, 53 Pac. 259.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, authorizing the admission of the "opinion of an intimate acquaintance respecting the mental sanity of a person, the reason for the opinion being given," refers to cases where opinion evidence may be given, and in no way curtails the right of a defendant in a criminal case to show his acts, declarations, etc., in proof of the defense of insanity.—People v. Ellsworth, 127 Cal. 595, 60 Pac. 161.

[c] In a prosecution of a witness to a will for perjury in swearing that it was duly witnessed, it was proper to sustain an objection to defendant's answering a question as to whether he stated, after testator's death, that there was such a will, and when and where he made such statements, since they were self-serving declarations.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 426-429; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1593-1607, §§ 928-936.

§ 177. To Explain Matters Proved by Prosecution.

[a] When evidence has been introduced by the government, in a criminal case, to prove declarations of the defendant, he may prove by cross-examination, or by his own witnesses, what he said at the time referred to.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[b] It is error to refuse to permit defendant to testify as to what he said in a conversation testified to by a witness for the prosecution, and to explain its meaning, the rule that the intent must be inferred from the acts and words of the party having been modified by the abrogation of the common-law rule excluding parties from testifying in their own behalf.—People v. Farrell, 31 Cal. 576.

[c] When statements made after the commission of a crime, in the presence of one charged with it, as to the circumstances attending its commission, are called for by the attorney for the prosecution, the statement made by the defendant on trial, at the same time, is also admissible in evidence, in order that the jury may compare the two.—People v. Estrado, 49 Cal. 171.

§ 178. Refusal to Escape.

[a] Evidence that the accused, while confined in jail, had an opportunity to escape and declined to do so, is not admissible.—People v. Montgomery, 53 Cal. 576.

3. Acts and Declarations of Persons Injured.

ADMISSIBILITY IN GENERAL, § 179.
DESCRIPTION OF ACCUSED, § 180.
STATEMENTS EXCULPATING ACCUSED, § 181.
STATEMENTS IN PRESENCE OF ACCUSED, § 181½.

As part of res gestae. See ante, § 115.
Dying declaration of victim of murder as evidence. See Homicide, §§ 116-131.

§ 179. Admissibility in General.

[a] Declarations of deceased not part of res gestae and not in extremis are inadmissible. People v. Bealoba, 17 Cal. 389.

[b] Declarations of deceased against the character of defendant's sister not communicated to defendant are inadmissible.—People v. Travis, 56 Cal. 254.

[c] Declarations of injured person contemporaneous with, and illustrative of, main facts are admissible.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 182, 10 Pac. 375.

[d] Declarations of deceased that he was going to leave the country, as he was afraid P. would kill him; that P. and others were engaged in a conspiracy to take his life; and that he had nothing against defendant, but that the latter would be induced by P. to kill him—are not admissible, even to show the existence of a conspiracy.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 494, 20 Pac. 56.

[e] Witness for prosecution cannot testify to a conversation had with a chief of police. People v. McNamara, 94 Cal. 509, 29 Pac. 953.

[f] Upon a trial for murder, declarations of the deceased are made in extremis, as dying declarations having reference to the circumstances of the death, and not constituting any part of the res gestae, are hearsay and admissible in evidence.—People v. Gress, 107 Cal. 461, 40 Pac. 752.

[g] Upon the trial of a defendant accused of murder, a conversation between the mother of the deceased and the deceased, more than three days before the homicide, after he had received a letter from the defendant, which conversation did not occur at the time of the receipt of the letter, and had no reference to it, is not part of the res gestae, and is purely hearsay and inadmissible.—People v. Shattuck, 109 Cal. 673, 42 Pac. 315.

[h] Evidence in a murder trial as to an accusation made by deceased prior to his death, which accusation was at the time denied by defendant, was hearsay and superfluous when substantially repeated in a dying declaration given in evidence, and should have been stricken out on defendant's motion.—People v. Teshara, 134 Cal. 542, 66 Pac. 798.

§ 180. Description of Accused.

[a] Statements of a person who has been robbed, made to a third party, as to the description of the parties committing the crime, are hearsay, and are not admissible on the part of the defendant to show that he was not the person thus described.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[b] It was error to allow an officer to testify as to a description of defendant furnished by the prosecuting witness before arrest.—People v. Johnson, 91 Cal. 265, 27 Pac. 663; People v. McNamara, 94 Cal. 509, 29 Pac. 953.

§ 181. Statements Exculpating Accused.

[a] An accused indicted for murder cannot introduce in his own behalf statements of deceased, concerning the circumstances attending the difficulty in which he is wounded, made three days thereafter, but when he was in his right mind and did not expect to die.—People v. McLaughlin, 44 Cal. 435.

[b] Statements by deceased that she considered defendant insane, being merely hearsay, are inadmissible.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

§ 181½. Statements in Presence of Accused.

[a] When statements made after the commission of a crime, in the presence of one charged with it, as to the circumstances attending its commission, are called for by the attorney for the prosecution, their admission in evidence is not objectionable as irrelevant or incompetent, but counsel may ask for instructions to the jury limiting their effect.—People v. Estrado, 49 Cal. 171.

[b] Declarations of the prosecuting witness in reference to the fact of robbery by the defendant and a codefendant, made at the time of the taking of purses of money from him, and while he had hold of both of them, in their presence and hearing, are admissible against the defendant.—People v. Piggott, 126 Cal. 509, 59 Pac. 31.

[c] The general rule that the statements of persons not witnesses are not admissible, merely because they were made in the presence of the accused, does not preclude the admission of such declarations solely for the purpose of explaining the conduct of the defendant and statements made by him in reply thereto.—People v. Philbon, 138 Cal. 530, 71 Pac. 650.

[d] Declaration made in defendant's presence that he was the robber held not admissible, he having at once flatly denied the charge.—People v. Turner (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 397.

4. Declarations of Third Persons.

ADMISSIBILITY IN GENERAL, § 182.
WIFE'S DECLARATIONS, § 183.
LETTERS WRITTEN TO ACCUSED, § 184.
NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTS OF CRIME, § 185.
DECLARATIONS IN PRESENCE OF ACCUSED, § 186.

As part of res gestae. See ante, § 116.

§ 182. Admissibility in General.

[a] In the absence of evidence of a conspiracy, statements or conversations by third persons out of the defendant's presence, and not part of the res gestae, are inadmissible against him.—People v. Griffin, 52 Cal. 616; People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 348, 25 Pac. 481, 11 L. R. A. 75.

[b] Where an accomplice, in testifying to an admission by defendant, cannot remember the date, the evidence of an officer whom he had told what defendant said is admissible for the purpose of fixing the date.—People v. Zimmerman, 65 Cal. 307, 4 Pac. 20.

[c] Conversations between witness and third persons not brought home to accused are inadmissible.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 363, 25 Pac. 481.

[d] A witness cannot testify to the acts and declarations of third parties, in the absence of defendant, and unauthorized by him, in attempting to influence the witness to leave the country so as to avoid testifying in the case.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[e] When a witness has testified that before the homicide he considered defendant insane, it is not error to refuse to permit him to testify that he had told deceased that defendant was insane.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[f] Where, on trial of a mother for the murder of her daughter's seducer, the defense is insanity, caused by discovery of the fact of the seduction, and the prosecution claim that defendant knew from the beginning that the relation was immoral, correspondence between deceased and the daughter, of which defendant had no knowledge, is inadmissible.—People v. Shattuck, 109 Cal. 673, 42 Pac. 315.

[g] In a criminal prosecution, conversations and statements of third parties, not made in defendant's presence or hearing, are incompetent.—People v. Warren, 134 Cal. 202, 66 Pac. 212.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 432; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1620-1624, § 950.

§ 183. Wife's Declarations.

[a] At a trial for murder, defendant's wife was shown to have had an interview with him alone for half an hour, at which he gave her some money, at the house of one L., from which she came directly to the house of H. Held, that testimony by H. of the wife's declarations that her husband gave her the money, etc., was not admissible.—People v. Simonds, 19 Cal. 275.

§ 184. Letters Written to Accused.

Letters as evidence in general. See post, § 212.

[a] A letter found on the person of defendant when arrested for robbery, containing damaging statements and warnings to keep out of reach of the officers, and identified by a witness as having been written by him to defendant, is inadmissible in the absence of evidence that defendant answered it or acted on the information contained therein.—People v. Colburn, 105 Cal. 648, 38 Pac. 1105.

§ 185. Newspaper Accounts of Crime.

[a] Newspaper accounts of crime are not competent evidence of any material fact.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 331, 24 Pac. 1021.

§ 186. Declarations in Presence of Accused.

[a] Declarations in the presence of accused are not inadmissible because made by persons incompetent to testify.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[b] Statements made after the commission of a crime, in the presence of one charged with it, as to the circumstances attending its commission, do not of themselves prove the circumstances narrated, but are evidence only to the extent that they are admitted by the person charged, either by his express assent or by his silence.—People v. Estrado, 49 Cal. 171.

[c] Statements made to accused in respect to his connection with the alleged offense are admissible to show his conduct when the statements were made, but not as evidence of the truth of the statements.—People v. Ah Yute, 53 Cal. 613.

[d] In a criminal case, statements of third persons, made in presence of the defendant, are admissible against him only to the extent they are admitted by him to be correct, either by his words or conduct; and the conduct of the defendant is the gist of the inquiry, and the only matter to be considered by the jury. Such statements are therefore inadmissible, unless accompanied with proof of defendant's statements or conduct in response thereto.—People v. Ah Yute, 54 Cal. 89.

[e] On a trial for assault with intent to commit murder, evidence of a conversation between defendant's brother and another, on the day before the alleged assault, was properly admitted, where the evidence showed that the subject of the conversation was again brought up by defendant's brother just before the fight in which the assault was made, and that the other party to the conversation participated in the fight.—People v. Madden, 76 Cal. 521, 18 Pac. 402.

[f] The declarations made by the boss Chinaman at the washhouse where the defendant was arrested are not admissible in favor of the defendant, though made in the presence of the defendant.—People v. Louie Foo, 112 Cal. 17, 44 Pac. 453.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

5. Hearsay.

WHAT CONSTITUTES, § 187.
MATTERS PROVABLE BY HEARSAY—NAME OF ACCUSED, § 188.
—— PLACE OF COMMISSION OF CRIME, § 189.
—— INSANITY, § 190.
—— MOTIVE OF ACCUSED, § 191.
—— CORPORATE EXISTENCE, § 192.

§ 187. What Constitutes.

[a] Declarations of another, not in presence of defendant, are hearsay.—People v. Griffin, 52 Cal. 616.

[b] Evidence of declarations descriptive of homicide made in the absence of the defendant, by a person who was present at the killing, is hearsay.—People v. Gonzales, 71 Cal. 569, 12 Pac. 679.

[c] In a prosecution for crime the declaration of another person that he committed the crime is not admissible. Proof of such declaration is mere hearsay evidence, and is always excluded, whether the party making it be dead or not.—People v. Hall, 94 Cal. 595, 30 Pac. 7.

[d] Statements made by a third person in presence of defendant, and to which defendant replied, are not hearsay, and are admissible against him.—People v. Mayes, 113 Cal. 618, 45 Pac. 860.

[e] Deceased's wife testified that she saw defendant and deceased in conversation, and soon after was attracted by the loud voice of her husband, and saw him lying on the ground, and defendant standing over him with an uplifted club, but was unable to designate the point where she saw her husband lying, nor to point it out on a diagram. Some days after the homicide, she pointed out the place to a witness, who was permitted, after defendant's objection, to testify to that fact, and to point out the place on the diagram. Held, that the evidence was hearsay, and its admission prejudicial error, since it permitted the jury to determine the place of the conflict from evidence based on the unsworn information of another.—People v. Hill, 123 Cal. 571, 56 Pac. 443.

[f] Declarations of defendant's confederate, made subsequent to the killing with which defendant is charged, and not in the presence of defendant, are hearsay and inadmissible.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[g] In a criminal case, a question of one witness as to declarations of another, who was not himself questioned in relation thereto, was properly stricken out.—People v. Machado, 130 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 66.

[h] On a prosecution for the forgery of a note, evidence of the declarations of the alleged maker concerning defendant and his character, made without the presence or hearing of defendant, and not forming a part of the transaction which was itself in dispute, or evidence of the fact within Code of Civil Procedure, section 1850, is mere hearsay and inadmissible.—People v. Landis, 139 Cal. 426, 73 Pac. 153.

[i] Testimony that witness had learned from conversation with another that defendant was one of the robbers held hearsay.—People v. Turner (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 397.

[j] Certain evidence held inadmissible as hearsay.—People v. Smith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 449.

[k] In a prosecution for homicide, the admission of a declaration made by deceased to witness in defendant's presence that defendant was mean to deceased, and that she was afraid to ask him to do anything for her, etc., held error.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1634-1650, §§ 973-983.

§ 188. Matters Provable by Hearsay—Name of Accused.

[a] Where the prosecuting witness positively identified defendant as one of the active participants in the robbery, the fact that the witness was allowed to state defendant's name, as given him subsequently by another person, is not ground for reversal.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

§ 189. —— Place of Commission of Crime.

[a] In order to show the locus delicti was in the county where the indictment was brought, evidence is admissible to show that it was generally reputed to be within that county.—People v. McLane, 19 Cal. 131.

[b] To prove that an offense was committed within a certain county, hearsay evidence of the boundary line is admissible, it being matter of common interest.—People v. Velarde, 59 Cal. 457.

§ 190. —— Insanity.

[a] Insanity cannot be proven by general reputation or hearsay.—People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50.

§ 191. —— Motive of Accused.

[a] Prosecuting witness may testify to information received as to what defendant had said, to explain his motive in being armed. People v. Shea, 8 Cal. 538.

§ 192. —— Corporate Existence.

[a] In a prosecution for injuring the property of a corporation, it is sufficient proof of the incorporation to show that it was known and recognized as such.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

G. ACTS AND DECLARATIONS OF CONSPIRATORS AND CODEFENDANTS.

ADMISSIBILITY IN GENERAL, § 193.
FURTHERANCE OF COMMON PURPOSE, § 194.
BEFORE CONSPIRACY, § 195.
BEFORE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF OBJECT, § 196.
AFTER ACCOMPLISHMENT OF OBJECT, § 197.

FLIGHT OF CODEFENDANT, § 202.
CONVICTION OF CODEFENDANT, § 203.
REFUSAL OF CONSPIRATOR TO TESTIFY, § 204.
LAYING FOUNDATION, § 204½.

§ 193. Admissibility in General.

[a] If evidence tends to show a conspiracy, declaration or act of one co-conspirator before the offense is admissible as the declaration or act of all.—People v. Murphy, 39 Cal. 52.

[b] When testimony has established the complicity of a third person, not on trial, in the perpetration of the criminal act, evidence of the conduct of that person is admissible against the accused.—People v. Murphy, 39 Cal. 52.

[c] The conspiracy to commit a crime being proved on the separate trial of one of the conspirators, the jury are to give the same weight to the declarations of the co-conspirator not on trial as they would give to them if made by the one on trial.—People v. Geiger, 49 Cal. 643.

[d] Statements made by accomplice to arresting officer, respecting the knife with which the murder was committed, are admissible, notwithstanding the defendant on trial was not immediately connected therewith.—People v. Garcia, 63 Cal. 19.

[e] Admissions made by one defendant in conversation with third person are competent evidence against him on the trial of two defendants jointly for murder.—People v. Shem Ah Fook, 64 Cal. 380, 1 Pac. 347.

[f] Declarations and acts of conspirator before commission of crime are admissible to prove conspiracy.—People v. Bentley, 75 Cal. 409, 410, 17 Pac. 436.

[g] Where there is evidence of joint preparations by defendant and another to kill deceased, evidence of the acts and declarations of such other person is competent.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[h] The declarations of a co-conspirator not prosecuted are equally admissible with those of one under indictment and prosecution.—People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[i] Conspiracy being established, all statements, acts and declarations of parties pending commission of crime, looking toward its consummation, are competent evidence against each and every conspirator.—People v. Lovren, 119 Cal. 91, 51 Pac. 22.

[j] Declaration of co-conspirator, made in absence of defendant, showing every inception of conspiracy is admissible.—People v. Gregory, 120 Cal. 20, 52 Pac. 41.

[k] District attorney has the right to call to the witness-stand another accused person, over whom was pending an information for same offense, as being a competent witness.

notwithstanding such person may avail himself of the privilege to decline to answer questions put to him, on the ground that his answers would tend to criminate him; and the calling of such accused person as a witness is not error, whatever may have been the resulting consequences in tending to prejudice defendant's case before the jury.—People v. Plyler, 121 Cal. 160, 53 Pac. 553.

[l] The declaration of codefendant as to other proposed offenses, entirely distinct from offense in controversy, is inadmissible.—People v. Williams, 127 Cal. 212, 59 Pac. 581.

[m] Where two defendants were tried jointly, evidence by third parties of a statement made by one defendant tending to inculpate both, but inadmissible as to the maker because not voluntary, is hearsay as to the other.—People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

See 12 Cyc. 435-438; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1651-1654, §§ 984-988.

§ 194. Furtherance of Common Purpose.

[a] If several persons conspire together to commit a robbery, and to resist arrest even to the taking of life, and, after the robbery is committed, take the life of an officer in resisting an arrest, whatever is said or done by any one of them in furtherance of the common design is a part of the res gestae and the act of all.—People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 572.

[b] Where evidence of a conspiracy to burn an insured building with intent to defraud the insurer has been submitted, the demand made by one conspirator upon the insurer for a settlement is competent evidence against the other in a trial of him alone on an indictment for the offense.—People v. Trim, 39 Cal. 75.

[c] The acts of an accomplice are not evidence against the accused, unless they constitute a portion of the res gestae, and occur during the pendency of the criminal enterprise, and are in furtherance of its objects.—People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401.

[d] Only declarations of conspirator made during pendency of conspiracy and in furtherance of its objects can be used against co-conspirator.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 504, 20 Pac. 56.

[e] When a conspiracy is proved, all acts and declarations in furtherance thereof, by any of the conspirators, to advance the common cause, are evidence against all, though not done or made in the presence of each other.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[f] The declarations of a co-conspirator in furtherance of the conspiracy are not inadmissible because he was not indicted.—People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[g] Upon the trial of a defendant charged with grand larceny, which appears to have been committed by aiding and abetting another person in taking the stolen property from the person of the prosecuting witness, it is necessary for the prosecution to show that the two were co-conspirators in the commission of the crime; and evidence that they were seen frequently together is not irrelevant to that issue.—People v. Childs, 127 Cal. 363, 59 Pac. 768.

[h] Where a will had not been signed by witnesses until after testator's death, in a prosecution of defendant for perjury in swearing that the will was duly witnessed by him it was proper to admit in evidence the testimony of the beneficiary of the will and the other subscribing witness as to its being duly witnessed, given at the hearing of the probate matter, since such acts and declarations, in connection with defendant's acts and declarations, tended to show that the three were each working to accomplish one criminal purpose which tended to establish a conspiracy to rob testator's estate.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[i] A statement made by one of six men, who were standing together before a house, and who almost immediately afterward shot and killed another man, who came out of the house, to the effect that, if such person came out, "we will shoot at him," is admissible against one charged with the murder, and who was one of the six in whose hearing the statement was made.—People v. Sing Yow, 145 Cal. 1, 78 Pac. 235.

§ 195. Before Conspiracy.

[a] On a trial for murder committed in a highway robbery perpetrated in pursuance of a conspiracy, the declarations of one of the conspirators, who procured the gun with which the murder was committed by defendant, made before the robbery, and showing the objects of the conspiracy, namely, the business of robbing stages, are admissible.—People v. Collins, 64 Cal. 293, 30 Pac. 847.

[b] A conspiracy not having been formed until after the burning of one of the conspirators' buildings, his declarations before the burning, that if his buildings were burned he should know whom to go after, coupled with threats against deceased, are not admissible against defendant.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 494, 20 Pac. 56.

[c] Declarations by deceased as to the disposition of his farm on leaving the country, and as to a conspirator's motive for commencing a lawsuit against him, having been made before the conspiracy existed, are not admissible against defendant.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 494, 20 Pac. 56.

§ 196. Before Accomplishment of Object.

[a] If two jointly indicted for murder are tried separately, and on trial of one there is testimony tending to show a conspiracy between them, the declarations of the one not on trial, made before the killing, may be received in evidence.—People v. Geiger, 49 Cal. 643.

§ 197. After Accomplishment of Object.

[a] Evidence of acts, declarations, or confessions of one conspirator or codefendant, after object of conspiracy has been accomplished, is not admissible against his co-conspirators or codefendants.—People v. English, 52 Cal. 212; People v. Aleck, 61 Cal. 137.

[b] No falsehood, evasion, or silence of conspirator after offense is committed is admissible.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 506, 20 Pac. 56.

[c] Confession by a conspirator made after the deed is not competent against co-conspirator.—People v. Collum, 122 Cal. 186, 54 Pac. 589.

[d] Evidence as to appearance, conduct, and declarations of a co-conspirator after the conspiracy is accomplished is inadmissible as against a conspirator.—People v. Opie, 123 Cal. 294, 55 Pac. 989.

[e] In a prosecution for attempting to obtain a bounty on squirrels by having certain parties present the squirrel tails to the board of supervisors, and fraudulently pretend that the squirrels were killed in the county, the admission of testimony as to conversations between defendant and his accomplices, after the claim for bounty had been filed, relating to filing more tails at a future time, and also of a sack containing squirrel tails, found on the premises of an accomplice after the commission of the offense, was not erroneous.—People v. Howard, 135 Cal. 266, 67 Pac. 148.

§ 198. —— In Presence of Codefendant.

[a] If two are jointly indicted for murder, and, on the separate trial of one, there is evidence tending to show a conspiracy between them, evidence of declarations of the other, made in the presence of the defendant, are admissible on behalf of the prosecution.—People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166; People v. Estrado, 49 Cal. 171.

[b] It is not error to admit evidence of statements made by a person indicted with the defendant on trial, and who has pleaded guilty, in the presence of defendant, where it shows that the conduct of defendant was at the time, and that he did not deny the statements.—People v. Mallon, 103 Cal. 513, 37 Pac. 512, distinguishing People v. Ah Yute (1880), 54 Cal. 89.

§ 199. —— In Absence of Codefendant.

[a] Statements of an accomplice not made in presence of defendant, or in furtherance of the enterprise are inadmissible.—People v. Moore, 45 Cal. 19.

[b] In a prosecution for murder, where it appeared that the deceased suspected defendant of being his mother's paramour, and that he was killed by defendant in an affray resulting from an attempt by deceased to eject defendant from the mother's house, held, that the mother conspired with defendant to kill her son, yet her declarations regarding the homicide, made subsequent thereto, in the absence of defendant, were not admissible against defendant.—People v. Gonzales, 71 Cal. 569, 12 Pac. 783.

[c] Declarations and confessions of an alleged co-conspirator or accomplice, made in the absence of defendant, and after the consummation of the conspiracy of commission of the crime, are not admissible against defendant.—People v. Dilwood, 94 Cal. 89, 29 Pac. 420; People v. Oldham, 111 Cal. 648, 44 Pac. 312.

[d] Where defendant, in the presence of witness, by arrangement with his partner in crime, agreed that the witness should accompany his partner, who should tell witness where the stolen property was, and that witness should get it, and turn it over to defendant's partner, statements made to witness by such partner, in defendant's absence, as to where the property may be found, are admissible against defendant.—People v. Brady, 36 Pac. 949.

§ 200. —— Dying Confessions.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 4, which provides that "the act or declaration of a dying person, made under a sense of impending death, respecting the cause of his death," may be given in evidence in a criminal action, applies only where the death of deceased is the subject of the trial, and does not make the dying confession of an accomplice in a burglary admissible on a trial for that offense.—People v. Hall, 94 Cal. 595, 30 Pac. 7.

§ 201. Statements as to Past Acts.

[a] Declarations of co-conspirator showing past acts or expressing merely opinion or desire are only binding on conspirator and co-conspirators in whose presence they are made.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 504, 20 Pac. 56.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1668-1682, §§ 1002-1011.

§ 202. Flight of Codefendant.

[a] The flight of a person suspected of crime is a circumstance to be weighed by the jury as tending in some degree to prove a consciousness of guilt, and is entitled to more or less weight, according to the circumstances of the particular case. Such evidence is received, not as a part of the res gestae of the criminal act itself, but as indicative of a guilty mind. The rule extends only to the person fleeing, and cannot be extended to a case where a conspiracy to commit a crime has been entered into between two or more, and the flight of a co-conspirator is sought to be proved against another on his separate trial.—People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401.

[b] Evidence of flight of accomplice is admissible to show that he might have disposed of goods robbed.—People v. Collins, 48 Cal. 277.

§ 203. Conviction of Codefendant.

[a] The record of the conviction of one who struck the fatal blow is not admissible on the trial of another charged with standing by and abetting.—People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68.

§ 204. Refusal of Conspirator to Testify.

[a] Refusal of conspirator to testify should not be considered by jury against accused.—People v. Irwin, 77 Cal. 507, 20 Pac. 56.

§ 204½. Laying Foundation.

[a] Combination or conspiracy must be established before acts, declarations, or confessions of one alleged conspirator can be given in evidence against another.—People v. Trim, 39 Cal. 75; People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166; People v. Geiger, 49 Cal. 643; People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504; People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[b] When two are jointly indicted, the prosecution may, on the trial, prove the declarations and acts of one made and done in the absence of the other before proving the conspiracy between the defendants, provided proof of such conspiracy is afterward made. People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[c] The fact that, when A entered a store to sell goods similar to stolen goods, B stood outside, looking in the window, and, when the storekeeper saw him, ran away, does not tend to prove a conspiracy, and is insufficient as a foundation for other evidence on the subject.—People v. Stevens, 68 Cal. 113, 8 Pac. 712.

[d] The acts and declarations of a third person, tending to show a conspiracy between him and defendant to commit the crime, are admissible as part of the res gestae.—People v. Bentley, 75 Cal. 407, 17 Pac. 436; People v. Bentley, 77 Cal. 7, 11 Am. St. Rep. 225, 18 Pac. 799.

[e] On a trial for larceny it appeared that defendant conducted an employment agency, and C., in response to his advertisement for a collector, was taken by him to the office of another, jointly indicted with him, by whom he was employed for three months, and required to deposit one hundred dollars as security for his good conduct. A few days thereafter defendant informed C. that his employer did not need his services any longer, and tried to get possession of the note given for the deposit, while at the same time he attempted to get another person to take C.'s place, and deposit one hundred and fifty dollars. A part of these negotiations between such person and C. were made in defendant's presence. Held sufficient evidence of a conspiracy between defendant and the person employing C. to render the declarations of the latter admissible against defendant.—People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[f] On trial for conspiring to falsely move and maintain a suit, a conversation with one of the defendants in regard to what was done as to the suit after its commencement may be admitted before the conspiracy is established, if the conspiracy is subsequently proved.—People v. Daniels, 105 Cal. 262, 38 Pac. 720.

[g] Order of evidence prescribed by subdivision 6 of section 1870, Code of Civil Procedure, that acts or declarations of a co-conspirator may be received after proof of the conspiracy, is not mandatory; but that section presents the proper order of proof, and it is only in exceptional cases that the court should exercise its discretion to allow a departure therefrom, when the facts from which the conspiracy is to be inferred are so intimately blended with other facts going to constitute the crime that it is difficult to present the evidence in intelligible form without first admitting the testimony of the accomplice.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[h] On trial for perjury, it having been shown that the will had been written by the beneficiary, and that defendant had been endeavoring by improper means to secure a certain party as a witness to the will after the death of testator, the conversation of the beneficiary with the party wherein she attempted to persuade him to subscribe the will of the already deceased testator for five thousand dollars, was properly admitted in evidence, since there was sufficient proof of conspiracy between defendant and the beneficiary to make her acts in carrying out the common criminal purpose competent against him.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[i] Where there is no evidence that defendant entered into a conspiracy with others relative to the crime with which he is charged, conversations of such other persons, in the absence of defendant, are inadmissible.—People v. Kelly, 133 Cal. 1, 64 Pac. 1091.

[j] In order to lay foundation for admission of the declarations of the defendant, it was proper to ask the prosecuting witness whether prior to the statement he made any threats or promise of reward, or advised or offered any inducements, in regard to the defendant's statement. Such questions called for facts, and not for conclusions of the witness; and when such questions were answered in the negative, the testimony was a clear statement of the absence of any threat or inducement.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[k] Though as general rule no testimony of the acts of alleged conspirators can be shown until the conspiracy has been first established, it is not error to admit evidence of the acts of the alleged conspirators before the conspiracy is established.—People v. Donnolly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177.

[l] The commission of acts as a part of a common plan or design to rob certain bank messengers, for which defendant was being tried, held not objectionable, though the evidence tended to show the commission of other offenses.—People v. Zimmerman (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 446.

[m] Evidence of a conspirator as to the forming of a conspiracy to rob certain bank messengers, and of acts done in furtherance of the conspiracy, held not objectionable as hearsay.—People v. Zimmerman (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 446.

[n] The admission of evidence of conversations between accused and a witness held not error in the view of the subsequent evidence, showing a conspiracy between them. People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

§ 205. In General.

[a] Where a verdict of coroner's jury is presented to a witness, and he is asked if he signed that verdict, it is not proving the contents of a written record by parol.—People v. Donovan, 43 Cal. 162.

§ 205½. Refusal to Produce Document.

[a] Where attorney for defendant having possession of contract of insurance and ordered to produce it at certain time refused to do so on sole ground that he had statutory right to more time, secondary evidence of its contents is admissible.—People v. Vasalo, 120 Cal. 169, 170, 52 Pac. 305.

§ 206. Affidavit of Publication.

[a] In a prosecution for perjury in proving a will, the affidavit of the publication of notice of hearing the petition for probate and letters were properly admitted in evidence as part of the record of the matter in which the perjury was charged to have been committed, and was competent evidence of the matter therein stated, under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 2010, 2011, providing that evidence of publishing of a notice required by law may be given by the printer's affidavit, which shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

§ 207. Assessor's Memorandum-book.

[a] Defendant was sued for perjury for having sworn to a false list of property, under the revenue act of 1857, The assessor's memorandum-book, having been identified, and in which were pencil notes, by the assessor, of the property handed in by the defendant, was offered in evidence. Held, that it was not competent evidence to prove that the property therein was that given in by defendant, that it was all that was given in by him, or that he swore to it as a correct list.—People v. Quinn, 18 Cal. 122.

§ 208. City Directory and Great Register.

[a] On trial for making a fictitious instrument in writing, under Penal Code, section 476, a city directory may be admitted to show that there was no person in the city of the name signed to the instrument.—People v. Eppinger, 105 Cal. 36, 38 Pac. 538.

[b] City directory and great register of county are competent to show existence of person and his residence.—People v. Laird, 118 Cal. 294, 50 Pac. 431.

§ 209. Engrossed Copy of Legislative Act.

[a] An engrossed copy of legislative acts, passed prior to 1862, is not a public record, within section 87 of the act relating to crimes and punishments.—Corryell, In re, 22 Cal. 178.

§ 210. Family Bible.

[a] Family Bible is competent evidence of age of child shown from entry of birth therein.—People v. Slater, 119 Cal. 623, 51 Pac. 957.

§ 211. Judgment-roll and Records.

[a] Whole record and not simply judgment is admissible to sustain plea of former conviction.—Turner, Ex parte, 75 Cal. 228, 16 Pac. 898.

[b] Judgment-roll in prior civil action is admissible to show guilty knowledge of accused.—People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 473, 24 Pac. 298.

[c] The parties being Chinese, and the prosecuting witness having testified that the crime took place on a certain Chinese date, and that she knew nothing of the American dates, but that it was the day before she made complaint, the district attorney, in order to fix the date, may put in evidence the complaint.—People v. Chuey Ying Git, 100 Cal. 437, 34 Pac. 1080.

fendant that the friends of one whom he had killed and the officers of the law were upon his track, in order that he might change his residence, and which were found in the possession of defendant at the time of his arrest, are not admissible on the trial of defendant for homicide, where it does not appear that defendant was in any way connected with the sender of the letters, nor that he acted upon their contents.—People v. Lee Dick Lung, 129 Cal. 491, 62 Pac. 71.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1699-1701, § 1022.

§ 213. Memorandum Made by Witness.

[a] Proof of statements made by defendant must be by witness himself, and not by a written memorandum made by him at the time, which he says is correct.—People v. Elyea, 14 Cal. 144.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1701-1703, § 1023.

§ 214. Photographs and Maps.

[a] Photographs of persons, things or places shown to be faithful presentation of what they purport to reproduce, are admissible in evidence.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 213, 48 Pac. 75.

[b] Where the prosecution claims that defendant lay in wait for deceased, evidence, consisting of maps and photographs, showing the topography of the place of the homicide, is admissible.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[c] Like any other diagrams, the value of the photographs must be determined by the jury from all the evidence; and they are not inadmissible hearsay merely because the places marked were pointed out by witnesses if they testify that they were correctly pointed out, and the correctness of the marking is proved.—People v. Crandall, 125 Cal. 129, 57 Pac. 785.

[d] Photographs of handwriting are admissible in a criminal case in which the identification of handwriting is in issue.—People v. Mooney, 132 Cal. 13, 63 Pac. 1070.

[f] On a trial for homicide, the admission in evidence of a photograph held error.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1703-1705, § 1024.

§ 215. Subpoena and Return Thereon.

[a] The issuance of a subpoena, and return by the sheriff thereon as not found after diligent search, is not competent evidence in a criminal proceeding of the nonexistence of the person subpoenaed in the county to which the subpoena issued since the question whether such person had an existence in the county is not one which the officer was required to officially ascertain or declare.—People v. Lee, 128 Cal. 330, 60 Pac. 854.

§ 216. Train Register.

[a] A train register is not competent, on a criminal prosecution, to prove the time of the arrival and departure of a train at a certain station on the night of the crime, where the conductor who made the register is not called as a witness, and the agents of the railroad who are called have no actual knowledge of the time, but are only able to testify that the rules of the company required the conductor to register.—People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

§ 217. Laying Foundation.

[a] If an indictment for embezzlement contains what purports to be a copy of an agreement made between the defendant and the prosecutor, a copy of the same is not admissible in evidence on the trial without proof of the execution of the instrument by the defendant.—People v. Hurst, 49 Cal. 653.

[b] Refusal to admit in evidence paper claimed by counsel for defendant to be testimony taken at the coroner's inquest is not error, when there is nothing to show that the paper was such testimony, except the statement of the counsel offering it, and the record fails to show what it contained.—People v. Lee Sare Bo, 72 Cal. 623, 14 Pac. 310.

[c] Books of the collectors for the corporation, and of a bank in which deposits were made, not proven to be correct by those who kept them, are inadmissible against the secretary of the corporation, who is charged with embezzlement; and, if offered to show that the defendant did not keep correct books, the presumption of correctness is destroyed, and they cannot be received as admissions without proof of his knowledge and complicity in falsifying the books.—People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 248, 59 Pac. 573.

§ 218. Nonexpert Evidence in General.

[a] In a prosecution for forgery by altering a check, a witness who is not an expert may testify as to the chemical effect which a powder found in the possession of defendant had on writing in a check similar to that forged.—People v. Bretherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[b] On trial for murder, it appeared that deceased was about to drive his cattle onto a range claimed by accused, and to thus mix the herds, which accused attempted to prevent. A quarrel ensued, during which accused shot and killed deceased. Held, that a witness could not testify whether the mingling of herds in such a way was likely to induce trouble.—People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 573, 24 Pac. 313.

[c] Opinion evidence is inadmissible; witness must state facts within his knowledge.—People v. Ah Own, 85 Cal. 584, 24 Pac. 780.

[d] Witness for the defendants, who testified that he saw the prosecuting witness on the day of the alleged robbery about the place of the alleged assault, without fixing any time of day, and that he did not see the defendants there, or see anyone doing any thing to the prosecuting witness, cannot be asked whether anybody could have done anything to the prosecuting witness without his seeing it.—People v. Carroll, 92 Cal. 568, 28 Pac. 600.

[e] On a trial for mayhem, it appeared that the prosecuting witness, who was friendly to defendant, was injured by the latter while interfering in a fight between him and a third party. Held, that the court properly disallowed a question to a witness by defendant, asking his opinion as to whether the interference of the prosecuting witness was such as to induce the defendant to think it was friendly, or likely to mislead defendant as to its object, such matter being within the peculiar province of the jury to determine.—People v. Wright, 93 Cal. 564, 29 Pac. 240.

[f] On a trial for embezzlement, a witness for the people cannot, on cross-examination, state his conclusion, from the manner in which defendant conducted his employer's business, as to whether defendant was the manager thereof.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[g] Whether third person would have seen an object in a particular situation, assumed in a question asked a witness, is not a matter that can be determined by the opinion of the witness.—People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 55 Pac. 844.

§ 219. What Constitutes Opinion Evidence.

[a] Evidence by a police officer, witness for the prosecution, in a trial for murder, that he telephoned "to have the harbor police arrest any of the race-track boys that tried to cross the ferry, particularly Richard Ward" (defendant), not being an expression of opinion by witness that defendant is guilty, is competent.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[b] In a prosecution for libel, evidence that a witness knew that the defendant was innocent, and that she did not write the letter complained of, is incompetent, as mere opinion.—People v. Storke, 60 Pac. 420, order reversed (1900), 128 Cal. 486, 60 Pac. 1090.

[c] Testimony of a person that he did not make any threat and did not offer any inducement before one accused of crime made a statement is not mere opinion evidence.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[d] In a prosecution for homicide, a physician who performed the autopsy on deceased's body held entitled to testify from a diagram as to the point of entrance and exit of the bullet as a physical fact, independent of expert knowledge.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

§ 220. Inference from Facts.

[a] On an issue as to whether certain shots were fired from inside or outside of a building, the testimony of a witness, who was near the scene, that the shots sounded as though fired from inside, and that they sounded like a drum, is not objectionable as the expression of his opinion.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[b] Testimony of witness as to what he judged from what he saw is inadmissible.—People v. Elliott, 119 Cal. 594, 51 Pac. 955.

[c] Where a witness states that he could distinguish by the sound the difference between shots fired with a shotgun and those fired with a rifle, and that he heard the shots which killed deceased, on a trial for the murder he may state that the shots sounded like those from a shotgun.—People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

[d] On a trial for murder alleged to have been committed in a house, a witness who heard the shots may be asked if he could tell from the sound of the shots whether they were in the house or out of it.—People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

the witnesses, which statement was not matter for expert testimony, was inadmissible.—People v. Moan, 65 Cal. 532, 4 Pac. 545.

[b] Witness cannot testify to his understanding of words used by another, or inferences drawn by him as to feeling existing between persons.—People v. French, 69 Cal. 173, 10 Pac. 378.

[c] A witness cannot testify as to his understanding of words used by another or inferences drawn by him from circumstances, as to the question of feeling between the parties.—People v. French, 7 Pac. 822.

§ 222. Bodily Appearance or Condition.

[a] Evidence of a witness, though not an expert, is admissible to describe a wound inflicted by a knife on the hand of the deceased, and which he saw.—People v. Hong Ah Duck, 61 Cal. 387.

[b] One who is shown to have had experience in the observation and treatment of gunshot and other wounds on the frontier, against the Indians, and in the territories, although not a medical witness, may be permitted to testify as to the character of a wound found upon the body of the deceased, and the description of the wound by such witness is admissible as the statement of a fact.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[c] On a prosecution for an assault on a boy with intent to commit the infamous crime against nature, the boy's mother was competent to testify as to what the substance found on his clothing was, though she was not shown to be an expert.—People v. Swist, 136 Cal. 520, 69 Pac. 223.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1730, 1731, § 1044.

§ 223. Size of Bullet Inflicting Wound.

[a] A surgeon experienced in examining gunshot wounds and extracting bullets therefrom may testify to his opinion of the size of the bullet that made the wound in question.—People v. Wong Chuey, 117 Cal. 624, 49 Pac. 833.

§ 224. Sanity or Insanity.

[a] The opinion of a witness not an expert is competent upon the question of the prisoner's sanity, where such opinion is formed upon facts within the personal knowledge of the witness, and sworn to by him before the jury.—(Cal. 1872) People v. Sandford, 43 Cal. 29.

[b] One not an expert, when detailing a conversation between himself and another, may state his opinion as to the sanity of such person at the time.—People v. Wreden, 59 Cal. 392.

[c] Whether witnesses are sufficiently acquainted with defendant to give opinions as to sanity is matter in discretion of court to determine.—People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50.

[d] In a prosecution for an assault with intent to murder, a witness who was present at the time of the alleged assault may testify as to whether the defendant appeared rational or irrational at that time, notwithstanding he has not first shown himself to be an intimate acquaintance of the defendant.—People v. Lavelle, 71 Cal. 351, 12 Pac. 226.

[e] The admission of evidence as to the sanity of the accused objected to on the ground that the witnesses were not his "intimate acquaintances," as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, which authorizes as evidence the "opinion of intimate acquaintances as to the sanity of the accused, the reason for the opinion being given," will not be disturbed on appeal, unless it appear that the court abused the discretion vested in it as to such a matter. People v. Fine, 77 Cal. 147, 19 Pac. 269.

[f] Action of trial court in permitting witnesses to give their opinion as to the mental condition of a defendant on trial on a criminal charge cannot be said to have been erroneous where it was shown that the witnesses were acquainted with the defendant, and had more or less opportunity for acquiring knowledge on which to base an opinion. In such matters a very large discretion must be conceded to the trial court.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[g] The question of the mere manner or appearance of a person at a particular time does not fall within the requirement that the witness must be an "intimate acquaintance" in order to be a competent witness on the issue of the person's sanity.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[h] A jailer who had an excellent opportunity to study defendant's manner and mental condition for several months, during which he had charge of him, may testify, on the question of insanity, to his manner or appearance when he was committed.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[i] A jailer may testify to the conduct of defendant while in jail, and to the apparent condition of his mind during that time, in rebuttal of a showing of a general and permanent state of dementia and diseased condition of mind in defendant.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[j] The competency of a nonexpert witness under the statute, as an "intimate acquaintance," to express an opinion of defendant's sanity, is in the discretion of the trial judge. People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 562, 48 Pac. 711.

[k] Nonexpert witnesses who are intimate acquaintances of accused may testify as to his sanity.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 14, 52 Pac. 112.

[l] Opinion as to sanity of accused can only be given by an "intimate acquaintance" or an expert.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 597, 75 Pac. 177.

[m] Witness may testify as to acts or conduct of accused in respect to his sanity, though not an "intimate acquaintance" or an expert.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 595-598, 75 Pac. 177.

§ 225. Sobriety.

[a] Nonexpert witness may testify as to apparent condition of defendant as to sobriety.—People v. Monteith, 73 Cal. 9, 14 Pac. 373.

§ 226. Handwriting.

[a] The testimony of a witness in relation to certain receipts purporting to have been signed by the defendant, to the effect that he was familiar with his handwriting, and that he thought it was his handwriting, but that he did not see him sign them, and would not swear that it was his handwriting, is sufficient to permit the receipts to be put in evidence.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., col. 1735, § 1047.

§ 227. Distance.

[a] It is not necessary that a witness, testifying that the spot where a murder was committed was within five hundred yards of the boundary line of the county in which the defendant was indicted, should have measured the distance.—People v. Alviso, 55 Cal. 230.

§ 228. Blood Stains.

[a] If, on trial for murder, the prosecution introduces testimony showing that colored spots were found on the prisoner's clothes and person, which it claims were blood, it is not obliged to show by scientific analysis that such spots were blood, but may rely on the opinions of witnesses who saw the spots.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485.

[b] Where, on a trial for robbery, it is conceded that there was blood upon defendant's coat, a witness who saw him shortly after the alleged robbery is competent to testify that such blood was fresh, although he is not an expert.—People v. Loui Tung, 90 Cal. 377, 27 Pac. 295.

§ 229. Texture and Quality of Cloth.

[a] Whether two pieces of cloth are same texture and quality is proper subject for expert testimony of persons with special knowledge.—People v. Lovren, 119 Cal. 91, 51 Pac. 22.

§ 230. Cause and Effect.

[a] A physician, as such, and without showing experience with gunshot wounds, is not competent to give expert testimony as to what caused a bullet to deflect from its course after passing into the body of a person.—People v. Yokum, 118 Cal. 437, 50 Pac. 686.

[b] A witness who testifies that he has had experience with wounds and is able to tell from seeing them what they were made with, though not a professional expert, may testify as to whether, in his opinion, a wound was inflicted with a dull or sharp instrument.—People v. Sullivan, 8 Pac. 520.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1739, 1740, § 1052.

§ 231. Examination of Witness Giving Opinion.

[a] Where a witness has testified to matters of opinion, it is proper to ask him if he expressed a different opinion on another occasion, as tending to test the value of such opinion.—People v. Donovan, 43 Cal. 162.

[b] In a prosecution for larceny of a cow a witness had testified to finding on the premises of accused a "slunk" calf—that is, one that had been taken from its mother—and that it had been taken from the stolen cow, to which no objection nor motion to strike out was made. Held, that a question asking for the appearance of the calf as to when it had been taken from its mother, and the answer giving the facts on which his conclusion was based, were not objectionable as assuming that the calf had been taken from "a" cow; not "the" cow—that is, from the stolen cow.—People v. Machado, 130 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 66.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 232. Rebuttal of Opinion Evidence.

[a] Where, to establish an accused's mental unsoundness, it is shown that he consulted a boilermaker as to the feasibility of constructing a boiler so light by using aluminum that he could carry it on his back, the prosecution may show by an expert that the accused's idea was not so chimerical as to indicate mental unsoundness.—People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

§ 233. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

[a] The testimony of medical experts in a trial for rape, as to the effect of indecent liberties upon the mind of the female, is inadmissible.—People v. Royal, 53 Cal. 62.

[b] Expert testimony is not admissible, on a murder trial, as to whether a certain cartridge had marks upon it which would indicate that it had once been in the chamber of a pistol, or whether a ball taken from a certain pistol was similar to one which had been fired at the deceased, as such matters are matters of common knowledge.—People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

[c] The expressed "thought" of an expert, e. g., "I think," is clearly his "judgment."—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 210, 48 Pac. 75.

[d] On trial for forgery of a check, where it was claimed that certain writing thereon had been removed and other writing substituted, testimony of an expert was admissible to prove that writing may be removed from paper by means of a certain fluid, without first showing that the writing in question had been so removed, or that defendant was conversant with the use of such fluid. Judgment (1898) 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[e] On a prosecution for rape, it was proper to sustain an objection to a question put to a physician as to whether, having knowledge of the physical development of a man and woman, he thought it possible for a man to forcibly have intercourse with a well-developed girl weighing one hundred and thirty-eight pounds without her consent, since the inquiry was not one for expert opinion.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[f] Where, on a trial of a prosecution for rape, a physician testified that, in his opinion, a man, however strong, could not ravish a vigorous, well-developed woman, struggling against him, it was proper to strike such answer as not proper opinion evidence.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

§ 234. —— Matters Involving Professional, Scientific or Technical Skill.

[a] Expert can only testify where there is question of professional, scientific or technical skill or knowledge.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 217, 48 Pac. 75.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1863, providing that, when the characters in which an instrument is written are difficult to decipher, expert evidence is admissible to declare them, on a trial for forging a check on which, under the forged name, was an irregular character, expert testimony was inadmissible to show that it was a certain letter, when it did not appear that the characters in which the check was written were difficult to decipher, or that it had been executed by defendant as agent, or that the letter was an initial of his name.—People v. King, 125 Cal. 369, 58 Pac. 19.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 235. —— Mental Condition or Capacity.

[a] An expert in insanity may testify that certain symptoms could not all be present in the same individual at the same time.—People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

[b] Upon trial of an indictment for preparing a false affidavit, it was proper to ask medical experts whether the person making the affidavit, who was ill at the date thereof, was at the time able to make such a statement as appeared in the affidavit.—People v. Brown, 13 Pac. 222.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 38 L. R. A. 733, 39 L. R. A. 305, notes. See, also, 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1750, 1751, § 1061.

§ 236. —— Relative Position of Parties When Wound was Inflicted.

[a] Opinion of physician as to relative position of parties to a shooting is inadmissible.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 303.

[b] Upon the trial of a defendant charged with murder, where the defendant contended that he acted in self-defense, and did not shoot until after he himself was wounded, and the position of his wound was shown and also the course taken by the bullet, the question as to his position at the time he was shot is not one in relation to which the opinion of an expert can be properly received, but is for the jury to determine.—People v. Smith, 93 Cal. 445, 29 Pac. 64.

[c] Where the only proof as to the competency of a witness as an expert was his statement that he was a physician, and had some experience during the last two years in gunshot wounds, it was error, on a trial for murder, to allow him to testify, from examination of deceased, that he thought "the pistol [at the time of the discharge that caused deceased's death] was about four feet . . . . from the wounded man; . . . " a physician not being, as such, an expert in such matters.—People v. Lemperle, 94 Cal. 45, 29 Pac. 709.

[d] The relative positions of defendant and deceased at the time of the shooting, as indicated by the location of the wound, is not a subject for expert testimony.—People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 562, 48 Pac. 711.

[e] The opinion of a physician who examined the wounds of the deceased is inadmissible to show that the person shooting deceased was either above or below him when he fired, since such a matter is not the subject of expert evidence, and no one could tell merely from the course of a bullet the position of the one who was shot and the one who did the shooting. People v. Milner, 122 Cal. 171, 54 Pac. 833.

[f] Where the defense to a prosecution for homicide was that it was committed in self-defense while deceased was attacking accused with a knife, and it appears that the shot causing the death passed through deceased's upper arm and body near the shoulder, it is error to admit expert medical testimony on the part of the people that the arm through which the bullet passed must have been hanging down at the time; the matter not being a subject for expert evidence.—People v. Farley, 124 Cal. 159, 57 Pac. 571.

[g] Expert medical evidence that when deceased was shot he could not have been standing erect is inadmissible on the part of the people, that fact not being the subject of expert testimony.—People v. Farley, 124 Cal. 594, 57 Pac. 571.

§ 237. Competency of Experts—Medical Experts.

[a] In a murder case, a physician of seventeen years' practice testified that he had had such experience as would enable him to say at what distance powder marks would be noticeable on the flesh from the firing of an S. & W. pistol of a certain caliber; that he had seen a great many gunshot wounds and powder marks and powder burns in connection therewith, and knew, of his own knowledge, the distance between the discharged weapons and the bodies fired on. Held, that it was not error to permit such witness to testify, as an expert, as to the distance at which the pistol carried by defendant at the time of the homicide would produce powder marks.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[b] Proof that a witness is a practicing physician and surgeon, and that he performed an autopsy on the body of a dead person, qualifies him to give an opinion as to the means used to produce death, it being conceded that the question is a proper one for expert testimony.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75.

[c] A physician who has taken a course of lectures on medical jurisprudence, studied the standard authorities on gunshot wounds, read army surgeons' reports, and concluded the autopsy in the case at bar, is competent to testify as to the entrance and exit of the bullet, though in his fifteen years' practice he has had but one case of gunshot wound, and that was only one of entrance.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 238. —— To Testify to Comparative Powers of Eyesight.

[a] Physician cannot testify as to comparative power of eyesight of two persons without first examining their eyes.—People v. Marseiler, 70 Cal. 101, 11 Pac. 503.

§ 239. Examination of Experts—In General.

[a] Upon the trial of a woman accused of murder, her family physician, called by the defendant to prove insanity, may be asked whether, from his treatment of her for her ailments and all he knew of her, she was of ordinary good mind, or was what he would ordinarily call a weak-minded woman.—People v. Worthington, 105 Cal. 166, 38 Pac. 689.

[b] Where, on a trial for murder, insanity is relied on as a defense, an expert may testify to statements made to him by the defendant of previous sufferings, which formed the basis of, and are declared by him to be necessary to, his diagnosis of the case.—People v. Shattuck, 109 Cal. 673, 42 Pac. 315.

[c] On a criminal prosecution, questions put to an expert witness held not improper, as calling for the opinion of the witness as to whether defendant was insane at the time of the crime.—People v. Griffith, 146 Cal. 339, 30 Pac. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1764-1776, §§ 1071-1079.

§ 240. —— Hypothetical Questions.

[a] Entire testimony given cannot be read to expert as hypothetical question. Counsel should assume certain facts and put usual hypothetical question.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 356, 18 Pac. 161.

[b] Hypothetical question must be based on facts proved.—People v. Dunne, 80 Cal. 37, 21 Pac. 1130.

[c] Hypothetical question need not embrace all facts in evidence, or even be limited to facts proved. It must be based upon facts in evidence, but may be addressed to any theory which may be taken of them.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 216, 48 Pac. 75.

[d] A hypothetical question need not embrace all the evidence on the subject involved, but may be based on any facts within the range of the evidence.—People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 562, 48 Pac. 711.

[e] If theory upon which hypothetical question proceeds does not accord with that of opposing counsel, he may on cross-examination ask question formulated on his theory, leaving to jury to decide which theory is warranted by evidence.—People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 567, 48 Pac. 711.

[f] Where the state's theory is that the death was caused by poisoning, it is admissible to ask expert witnesses the cause of the death when there is some evidence to support the facts hypothetically stated in the questions.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Hypothetical questions which may be put to expert: 53 Am. Rep. 307, note. See, also, 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1768-1771, §§ 1073, 1074.

§ 241. —— Use of Medical Works.

[a] A medical expert, testifying in a criminal trial, was asked whether "Maudsley's Responsibility in Mental Diseases" was a standard work. The question was asked for the purpose of showing the familiarity of witness with authors upon that subject. Held, that the question was properly excluded, on the ground that the opinion of the witness as to the merits and standing of the work would not tend to prove such familiarity.—People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86.

[b] Medical treatises, whether proved to be standard or not, are only admissible to discredit witness basing testimony on them.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 348, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] That part of a question asked of a medical expert in a prosecution for homicide was read from a medical book by the district attorney did not constitute error.—People v. Bowers (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 553.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1773, 1774, § 1077.

§ 242. —— Right of Witness to State Grounds of Opinion.

[a] A witness may be permitted to state the grounds of an opinion to which he has testified; and such statement is not objectionable as being necessarily argumentative.—People v. Bird, 124 Cal. 32, 56 Pac. 639.

[b] A handwriting expert examined as a witness in a criminal case may testify as to the reasons for his opinion.—People v. Mooney, 132 Cal. 13, 63 Pac. 1070.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1772, 1773, § 1076.

§ 243. —— Cross-Examination.

[a] On a prosecution for rape, a physician who testified for the prosecution that a penetration would produce the conditions of the parts discovered by his examination, could be cross-examined as to whether all such conditions could not have been caused by other things, though he had stated that a certain instrument would cause certain of the conditions.—People v. Knight, 43 Pac. 6.

[b] A medical expert, on cross-examination, may be asked hypothetical questions bearing upon the sanity of defendant, and based on a portion of the evidence, for the purpose of testing his competency as an expert.—People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1774, 1775, § 1078.

§ 244. Effect of Evidence.

[a] On a prosecution for an assault on a boy with intent to commit the infamous crime against nature, the testimony of a physician, who examined the clothing after it was dry, that he was unable to determine positively what the substance was, might have tended to weaken the mother's testimony as to what the substance found on the boy's clothing was, but did not render it incompetent.—People v. Swist, 136 Cal. 520, 69 Pac. 223.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1745, 1746, § 1058; cols. 1777-1779, § 1081.

J. TESTIMONY OF ACCOMPLICES AND CODEFENDANTS.

WHO ARE ACCOMPLICES WITHIN RULE REQUIRING CORROBORATION, § 245.
—— VICTIM OF ABORTION, § 246.
—— PERSONS COERCED TO ASSIST IN CRIME, § 247.
—— DETECTIVE OR FEIGNED ACCOMPLICE, § 248.
COMPETENCY AND EFFECT OF TESTIMONY, § 249.
CORROBORATION—NECESSITY, § 250.
—— SUFFICIENCY, § 251.

§ 245. Who are Accomplices Within Rule Requiring Corroboration.

[a] The testimony of a feigned accomplice does not require corroboration in order to convict a defendant of a criminal offense.—(1866) People v. Farrell, 30 Cal. 316; (1886) People v. Bolanger, 71 Cal. 17, 11 Pac. 799.

[b] One who did not know of the larceny until after it was committed, but who purchased the stolen property under directions of an officer, with money furnished by the officer, with a view of detecting the thief, is not an accomplice whose testimony requires corroboration in order to convict the defendant, under section 4 of the Penal Code.—People v. Barric, 49 Cal. 342.

[c] Where the evidence was that deceased had been murdered in accordance with a conspiracy; that prior to the murder the witness B. had conversed freely with accused about the details of the proposed murder, learning all about it; that they asked and expected him to participate, but he did not, though he accepted buckshot from them to be used on the occasion, and did not discourage the killing, nor give warning to deceased—it was error to charge that there was no evidence tending to show that B. was an accomplice.—People v. Curlee, 53 Cal. 604.

[d] One paying to procure another's influence on court to sway its decision is accomplice, whose testimony must be corroborated, under Penal Code, section 1111.—Buckley, In re, 69 Cal. 12, 13, 10 Pac. 69.

[e] Testimony of an accomplice that he did not consider another witness guilty of the crime for which accused was being tried is not competent, as showing that such witness was not also an accomplice.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

[f] Testimony, in a trial for forgery, of a witness claimed to be an accomplice, that he was acquitted of the same offense, is not competent, as showing that he was not an accomplice.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

[g] Uncorroborated evidence of an accessory after the fact is sufficient to sustain a conviction. Such an accessory is not an accomplice who aids, abets and assists in the commission of the crime, or who had advised and encouraged its commission.—People v. Collum, 122 Cal. 186, 54 Pac. 589.

[h] An intimate friend of a pregnant woman, who accompanies her to the house where an abortion is performed, but attempts to dissuade her from undergoing the operation, and does not in any way assist therein, is not an accomplice, within the rule requiring corroboration of an accomplice's testimony.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 76 Pac. 1017.

[i] Witnesses on a trial for bribery in violation of Penal Code, section 86, held, not accomplices as a matter of law under section 20.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

[j] Witnesses on a trial for bribery in violation of Penal Code, section 86, held guilty, if at all, of violating section 85, as principals under section 31 and not principals of the crime punished by section 86.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

§ 246. —— Victim of Abortion.

[a] Where the only evidence is the testimony of the woman on whom the attempt to produce an abortion was made it must be corroborated in respect to some of the material facts which constitute a necessary element of the crime.—People v. Josselyn, 39 Cal. 393.

§ 247. —— Persons Coerced to Assist in Crime.

[a] A thirteen-year-old boy, who, under threats and coercion of another, takes part in the commission of a felony, is not an accomplice, and his testimony is sufficient to sustain a conviction without corroboration.—People v. Miller, 66 Cal. 468, 6 Pac. 99.

§ 248. —— Detective or Feigned Accomplice.

[a] Discredit of accomplice does not attach to a feigned accomplice or detective.—People v. Bolanger, 71 Cal. 20, 11 Pac. 799.

§ 249. Competency and Effect of Testimony.

[a] When accomplice or codefendant elects to be tried separately he is a competent witness for the other defendants charged with the same offense, the credibility of his testimony being left to the jury.—People v. Labra, 5 Cal. 183; People v. Newberry, 20 Cal. 439.

[b] Objection that witness is accomplice goes to effect of evidence, not to its admissibility.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 305, 17 Pac. 214.

[c] The testimony of an accomplice should be received with caution.—People v. Bonney, 98 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 98.

[d] Where the finding by the jury that a codefendant was an accomplice must be vacated by reason of the admission of incompetent evidence, the admissions of the alleged accomplice, made, as to accused, out of the latter's hearing, ceased to be competent against him.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

[e] On trial for robbery, testimony as to a certain conversation between defendant and his accomplices, on the night before such robbery, was erroneously admitted, where such conversation related to collateral transactions, which were incapable of affording any reasonable inference as to the matter in issue.—People v. Lynch, 122 Cal. 501, 55 Pac. 248.

§ 250. Corroboration—Necessity.

Corroboration of prosecutrix in prosecution for incest. See Incest, § 9.

[a] Under Criminal Practice Act, section 375, the testimony of an accomplice must, in order to secure conviction, be corroborated by other evidence, which of itself in some degree tends to connect the accused with the commission of the offense.—People v. Ames, 39 Cal. 403; People v. Melvane, 39 Cal. 614.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 1111, providing that a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice unless he is corroborated by other evidence, which of itself tends to connect defendant with the offense, and that the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offense or the circumstances thereof, a conviction of murder cannot be sustained, where there is no evidence aside from that of the accomplice on which even a well-grounded suspicion of defendant's guilt can be founded.—People v. Smith, 98 Cal. 218, 33 Pac. 58.

[c] Defendant accused of robbery cannot be convicted upon uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.—People v. Main, 114 Cal. 632, 46 Pac. 612.

[d] An instruction, in a trial for robbery, that, if the jury believe, beyond a reasonable doubt, from the testimony of an accomplice who testified for the people, that defendant is guilty of the offense charged, and if they believe, from the evidence, "outside of that which tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense, other than shown in the commission of the offense itself and the circumstances thereof," they should find defendant guilty, failed to state with sufficient clearness the rule that testimony of an accomplice is insufficient of itself to justify conviction, and the degree of proof sufficient to corroborate such testimony.—People v. Lynch, 122 Cal. 501, 55 Pac. 248.

[e] One could not maintain that he was convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice where, though the only direct evidence of his connection with the crime charged was such testimony, there was other evidence which, without the aid of such testimony, tended to connect him with the commission of such offense.—People v. Lynch, 122 Cal. 501, 55 Pac. 248.

[f] Before a defendant accused of forgery can be convicted upon the testimony of an accomplice, showing a conspiracy between himself and the defendant and several other persons, by means of the alleged forgery, to defraud the corporation named, the testimony of the accomplice must be corroborated by evidence independent of that of the accomplice, showing the existence of the conspiracy to defraud, and the fact that the defendant was a member of that conspiracy.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[g] Penal Code, section 1111, enacts that a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice unless he is corroborated by other evidence which in itself tends to connect defendant with the crime, and that the corroboration is not sufficient if it merely shows the commission of the offense, or the circumstances thereof. Held, that testimony apart from that of the accomplice which is merely sufficient to raise a suspicion of guilt is not the corroboration requisite to justify conviction.—People v. Hoagland, 138 Cal. 338, 71 Pac. 359.

[h] On a prosecution for larceny, held, that the evidence, apart from the testimony of one who was an accomplice, if any crime had been committed, was not even sufficient to arouse a well-founded suspicion of guilt.—People v. Hoagland, 138 Cal. 338, 71 Pac. 359.

§ 251. —— Sufficiency.

[a] It is necessary that evidence corroborating an accomplice, in order to convict, should tend to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense, and not merely to show its commission or the circumstances of it.—People v. Eckert, 16 Cal. 110; People v. Ames, 39 Cal. 403; (1870) People v. Melvane, 39 Cal. 614.

[b] It is not error to refuse to discharge the defendant, in a criminal case, at the close of the testimony for the prosecution, which is principally the evidence of an accomplice, when it is corroborated by other evidence which at least tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense charged.—People v. Garnett, 29 Cal. 622.

[c] Fact that one robber was addressed by same Christian name as defendant will not sustain testimony of accomplice.—People v. Ames, 39 Cal. 403.

[d] Proof that part of stolen property was found on next day after theft on person accused is such corroborating evidence as may warrant a conviction upon the further testimony of an accomplice.—People v. Melvane, 39 Cal. 614.

[e] Admissions made by a prisoner, which tend strongly to connect him with the larceny for which he is on trial, are a sufficient corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice, introduced by the prosecution, to sustain a conviction.—People v. Cleveland, 49 Cal. 577.

[f] On a trial for stealing a horse, if the prosecution prove the larceny by an accomplice, further proof that the next morning after the horse was stolen the prisoner received him from the person who took the horse from the owner, and immediately removed him to another place for pasturage, and gave an assumed name to the person with whom he left the horse for pasturage, is a sufficient corroboration of the testimony of the accomplice to sustain a conviction.—People v. Cleveland, 49 Cal. 577.

[g] Evidence corroborating testimony of an accomplice need not tend to establish precise facts testified to by accomplice. It is sufficient if it tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime.—People v. Cloonan, 50 Cal. 449; People v. Clough, 73 Cal. 348, 15 Pac. 5.

[h] Corroborating evidence required to convict a defendant, in addition to that of an accomplice, is not sufficient if it merely tends to raise a suspicion of the guilt of the accused.—People v. Thompson, 50 Cal. 480.

[i] Testimony of accomplice is corroborated by evidence of admission made by defendant connecting himself with the crime.—People v. Zimmerman, 65 Cal. 307, 4 Pac. 20.

[j] The rule prohibiting a conviction upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice does not require that every fact testified to by the accomplice shall be specifically corroborated in order to warrant a conviction.—People v. Kunz, 73 Cal. 313, 14 Pac. 836.

[k] Evidence held to sufficiently corroborate testimony of accomplice.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 305, 17 Pac. 214.

[l] Evidence of condition in which accomplice was found is admissible.—People v. Ward, 77 Cal. 114, 19 Pac. 373.

[m] Corroboration of accomplice is sufficient if it, of itself, connects accused with crime though it be slight.—People v. McLean, 84 Cal. 482, 24 Pac. 32.

[n] Testimony of witness is corroborated when it corresponds with representations of other witnesses or comports with facts otherwise known or established.—People v. Hong Tong, 85 Cal. 173, 24 Pac. 738.

[o] Under section 1111, Penal Code, corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice must be by other evidence, which in itself, and without the aid of the testimony of the accomplice, tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the act, and testimony, which at most only raises a bare suspicion of the defendant's guilt, falls short of such corroboration as can be relied upon to support a conviction.—People v. Koenig, 99 Cal. 574, 34 Pac. 238.

[p] Testimony of one that defendant procured him to falsely register as a voter in a precinct is corroborated by evidence that defendant was present when such person made his false affidavit, afterward stated that he anticipated trouble because of his connection with such registration, and tried to suppress such person's testimony, paying him money to go away.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

[q] The evidence reviewed and shown to be sufficiently corroborative of the testimony of an accomplice to the guilt of the defendant, to warrant a verdict of conviction.—People v. Armstrong, 114 Cal. 570, 46 Pac. 611.

[r] The testimony of an accomplice to a robbery committed by the defendant is sufficiently corroborated by other proof tending to identify defendant as one of the assailants, and that he was seen in the company of the accomplice, in the near vicinity of the scene of the robbery a very few minutes prior to the commission of the offense.—People v. Barker, 114 Cal. 617, 46 Pac. 601.

[s] Evidence tending, independently of that of accomplice, to connect defendant with commission of the offense is all that is required, even though if it stood alone it would be entitled to but little weight; nor need it extend to every fact and detail covered by the statements of the accomplice.—People v. Barker, 114 Cal. 617, 46 Pac. 601.

[t] Testimony of accomplice whose testimony was sought to be corroborated that he did not consider that corroborating witness was guilty of forgery charges, is incompetent, and should be stricken out.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

[u] A corroboration of an accomplice which tends to connect accused with the crime only by being considered in connection with the accomplice's testimony is insufficient, under Penal Code, section 1111, requiring the corroboration to be by evidence which, without the aid of the accomplice's testimony, tends to connect accused with the commission of the offense.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[v] Under Penal Code, section 1111, requiring corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice, evidence in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods that defendant placed the goods in the back room of a saloon, saying that he had loaned money on them, and offering no explanation why they were put there, is sufficient to corroborate the testimony of the accomplice.—People v. Solomon, 125 Cal. xix, 58 Pac. 55.

[w] Under Penal Code, section 1111, requiring corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice, it is not necessary that corroborative evidence should go so far as to establish by itself, and without the aid of the testimony of the accomplice, that defendant in a prosecution for receiving stolen goods possessed the requisite guilty knowledge.—People v. Solomon, 125 Cal. xix, 58 Pac. 55.

[x] On a prosecution for arson the defense claimed that a witness for the state was an accomplice. Defendant admitted that he and the witness were present when the fire started, though he testified that they tried to extinguish it. When he heard of the arrest of the witness he said, "That means trouble for me; I will skip out"; and in his conversation with another witness defendant said, "How did you know I burnt the barn?" Held that, even if the witness was an accomplice, he was sufficiently corroborated.—People v. Davis, 135 Cal. 162, 67 Pac. 59.

[y] On a prosecution for the larceny of two hundred and eighty dollars it appeared that the defendant knew of the money being in the pocket of the prosecuting witness, and that he, with others, drank with the defendant, and then went with him to a dance hall, where the money was taken by a woman. On the prosecuting witness making complaint, defendant told him he would try to get back the money, and he got the witness out of town that night. When the prosecuting witness returned, and had the woman arrested, defendant gave him forty dollars, and induced the witness to attempt to have the prosecution dismissed, which the witness did not succeed in doing, and defendant again sent witness out of town. Defendant then fled from the state, and when found was living under an assumed name. Held, that the circumstances were sufficient to corroboate the testimony of an accomplice as to defendant's guilt.—People v. Ardell, 135 Cal. xix, 66 Pac. 970.

[z] Mere proof of opportunity of defendant to participate in robbery charged is not sufficient corroboration of the testimony of the accomplice, especially where others had the like opportunity.—People v. Morton, 139 Cal. 719, 73 Pac. 609.

[aa] Where the only evidence to convict defendant of a robbery is that of an accomplice, who testifies that defendant planned the robbery, and received part of the proceeds, and that of two witnesses, that they had seen defendant and the accomplice together on two occasions before the robbery, there is no such corroboration of the evidence of the accomplice, as required by Penal Code, section 1111, as to justify conviction.—People v. Larsen, 34 Pac. 514.

[bb] Where the only direct evidence against defendant was that of an alleged accomplice, and the only corroborative evidence that of his wife, it was error to refuse to charge that, if the jury found the direct witness to be an accomplice, and did not believe the evidence of his wife, then there was no corroborating evidence of the accomplice, and it was their duty to acquit.—People v. Strybe, 36 Pac. 3.

[dd] Evidence sufficient to corroborate an accomplice held sufficient when connecting defendant with the crime charged.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

[ee] On a trial for bribery, evidence held to sufficiently corroborate the testimony of an accomplice so as to warrant a conviction.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

§ 252. What Constitutes Confession.

[a] Confession, in criminal law, is voluntary declaration made by person who has committed a crime to another of the agency or participation he had in the same. Word

"confession" is not mere equivalent of word "statement" or "declaration."—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[b] "Confession" receivable in evidence only after proof that it was made voluntarily, is restricted to an acknowledgment of the defendant's guilt; and the word does not apply to a statement made by a defendant of facts which tend to establish his guilt.—People v. Parton, 49 Cal. 632.

[c] Statements by defendant not in themselves involving guilt, but connected with other facts tending to prove it, are not a confession, and hence are admissible, though extorted by threats or promises.—People v. Le Roy, 65 Cal. 613, 4 Pac. 649.

[d] Statement made by defendant to coroner concerning cause of death of his wife, whom he is accused of murdering, is admissible in evidence, and, not being a confession, is not subject to rule that a confession must first be shown to have been made freely and voluntarily, and the evidence is not objectionable where it appears that statement was made to several other persons, and it seems to have been made freely and voluntarily.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[e] A statement by defendant, in reply to the remark of a constable that he wished he had stopped a wagon which passed him the night of the theft, driving rapidly, that it was best for him that he did not, or otherwise he might not have stopped any more, is not a confession, so as to render it inadmissible without proof that it was voluntarily made.—People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80, 45 Pac. 175.

[f] A statement by defendant, in answer to the remark of the constable who arrested him that his possession of the stolen article looked suspicious, "Well, damned if it don't," is not a confession, so as to render it inadmissible without proof that it was voluntarily made.—People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80, 45 Pac. 175.

[g] Statement made to prosecuting attorney denying robbery and accounting for its possession by claiming to have found it is not a confession.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 32, 50 Pac. 15.

[h] Confession is person's declaration of his agency or participation in crime. Term is restricted to acknowledgments of guilt.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 32, 50 Pac. 15.

[i] On trial for burglary, evidence that defendants, being found in possession of the stolen goods, stated that they had bought them, and asked not be taken to jail, is admissible, without preliminary proof that the statements were voluntarily made, since they are not a confession of guilt.—People v. Ashmead, 118 Cal. 508, 50 Pac. 681.

[j] Acts and admissions of one charged with criminal libel tending to show his proprietorship of the paper in which the libel was published are not confessions, in legal contemplation.—People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[k] In a prosecution for robbery, evidence of a conversation had between witness and defendant, in which the latter stated that on the night of the offense he slept in a boxcar down by the bridge, was not a confession of guilt, and therefore did not require proof that it was voluntary, in order to justify its admission.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 253. Admissibility and Effect.

[a] In a trial for murder, where the admission or confession of the party was resorted to as evidence, it was held to be error to exclude any portion of it made at the same time with that portion of it which was admitted.—People v. Navis, 3 Cal. 106.

[b] Question as to admissibility of confessions is one for exercise of sound judicial discretion, to be guided by the circumstances of each particular case.—People v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 60.

[c] Confessions which are entirely voluntary when made are admissible in evidence, even if, on a prior occasion, some promise of favor not acted upon, and which had ceased to be operative, had been made to induce the accused to confess.—People v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 60.

[d] Confessions are to be received with great caution.—People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 664.

[e] If any part of a confession is given in evidence, the whole must be given.—People v. Gelabert, 39 Cal. 663.

[f] Confession cannot be proved on cross-examination without preliminary proof that it was voluntary.—People v. Yeaton, 75 Cal. 417, 418, 17 Pac. 544.

[g] Conference with accused which brought about letter confessing guilt is one transaction and where letter is admitted conference should also be admitted.—People v. Yeaton, 75 Cal. 418, 17 Pac. 544.

[h] Declaration or confession voluntarily made without inducement or threat is admissible.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 349, 350, 19 Pac. 161.

[i] A voluntary confession of murder is not inadmissible because made to free defendant's sister, then under arrest for the crime, from suspicion, especially where defendant testifies in self-defense to every fact contained in the confession, and the sister testifies that he acknowledged to her substantially the same facts immediately after the killing.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

[j] Admissions and confessions of defendant, which it appears were freely and voluntarily made are properly received in evidence. People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[k] All verbal admissions should be received with great caution, and the whole of what the prisoner said on the subject at the time of making the admission or confession should be taken together.—People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57, 46 Pac. 986.

[l] Guilt of a defendant cannot be proved by his confession or admissions only; but admissions of the defendant, not amounting to a confession of guilt, are not to be rejected because they may, when connected with other facts proved, tend to establish his guilt.—People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[m] Proper foundation being laid, questions put to elicit evidence of confessions by accused are proper.—People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596.

[n] Confessions of defendant are admissible, if proved to have been freely and voluntarily given, and made without duress, or inducement, or promise.—People v. Eslabe, 127 Cal. 243, 59 Pac. 577.

[o] Before a confession of the defendant can be admitted, the prosecution must show that it was voluntary, and made without any previous inducement, intimidation, or threat, and it is error not to permit the defendant to cross-examine the witness upon the preliminary inquiry, before the confession is received; but such error is without prejudice where a subsequent cross-examination failed to show that the confession was not voluntary, or to impeach the previous statement of the witness that it was voluntary.—People v. Miller, 135 Cal. 69, 67 Pac. 12.

[p] Testimony of witnesses to a confession made by one defendant, implicating a codefendant jointly tried with him for the same offense, is inadmissible hearsay as to the codefendant; and notwithstanding the absence of a specific objection that the evidence was such hearsay, yet where the defendants were represented by the same counsel, and the evidence was objected to as incompetent, the codefendant is entitled to the benefit of the exception taken to its admission.—People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

§ 254. —— To Prove Corpus Delicti.

[a] Although extrajudicial confessions cannot warrant a conviction unless corroborated by proof aliunde of the corpus delicti, yet full proof of the body of the crime, independently of the confession, is not required, it being sufficient that there are corroborating facts which, with the confession, show the existence of an offense of which the defendant is guilty.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[b] The corpus delicti, involving all the elements of the crime, must be established independently of evidence which merely tends to connect the defendant with the crime charged; and the admissions or confessions of the defendant cannot be considered as evidence of the corpus delicti, nor used to establish any necessary element in the commission of the crime.—People v. Tapia, 131 Cal. 647, 63 Pac. 1001.

[c] The corpus delicti necessary to establish the crime of obtaining money under false pretenses must be proved by evidence independent of the extrajudicial confessions or admissions of defendant.—People v. Ward, 145 Cal. 736, 79 Pac. 448.

§ 255. Voluntary Character.

[a] Where a person charged with larceny was told, previous to his arrest, that if he would tell where the money was he would be let off, which he declined to do, but afterward when in jail, and the property had been found, confessed that he had taken it, held, that such confession was voluntary, and was not induced by hope, and was admissible evidence against him.—People v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 60.

[b] If confession be in substance repeated before examining magistrate a few days after the arrest, and reduced to the form of a written statement, the statement is inadmissible as evidence, if confession was originally made under such inducements as to exclude the first confession.—People v. Johnson, 41 Cal. 452.

[c] A confession made to an officer who has the prisoner in custody, whether it appear to have been made voluntarily or not, is admissible if it was not induced by improper means.—People v. Long, 43 Cal. 444.

[d] When person charged with crime is arrested and held in custody more than twenty-four hours without being taken before a magistrate, voluntary confessions made by him to the officer are not to be excluded as evidence, on the ground that he was illegally in custody after the twenty-four hours expired.—People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 46.

[e] District attorneys should never offer evidence of confessions not voluntarily made.—People v. Thompson, 84 Cal. 606, 24 Pac. 384.

[f] Fact that statement was made while under arrest does not take away the voluntary character of the confession or render it inadmissible.—People v. Miller, 135 Cal. 69, 67 Pac. 12.

[g] Confession is free and voluntary though made to officers while under arrest, in absence of inducement or threat.—People v. Walker, 140 Cal. 156, 73 Pac. 831.

[h] Evidence of confessions made by a defendant while under arrest are admissible if voluntarily made, the fact that defendant was under arrest not necessarily proving that the declarations were involuntary.—People v. Abbott, 4 Pac. 769.

§ 256. Promises, Inducements or Advice of Officer.

[a] Confessions or disclosures made under any promise or encouragement of any hope or favor are inadmissible.—People v. Smith, 15 Cal. 409.

[b] Confessions made to prosecutor and owner of property stolen, upon inducements held out by him that if defendant would disclose his confederates he would use his influence to get defendant acquitted, are not admissible in evidence against him.—People v. Smith, 15 Cal. 408.

[c] Defendants were accused of larceny, and were told by the sheriff who arrested them that it was no use for them to deny the offense, and that it would be lighter for them if they confessed. Two days later they signed a written confession before the committing magistrate, acknowledging the larceny. Held, that their confession was not admissible on the trial, on the ground that it was obtained through inducements held out to them.—People v. Johnson, 41 Cal. 452.

[d] A confession of a crime made to one in authority, upon a promise to the accused that it will be better for him to make a full disclosure, is not admissible in evidence upon the trial of the accused.—People v. Barrie, 49 Cal. 342.

[e] Confession induced by advice of sheriff that it would be better for accused is not voluntary and is inadmissible.—People v. Thompson, 84 Cal. 604, 24 Pac. 384.

[f] A confession obtained from a prisoner charged with a crime, which he had previously denied, by means of a statement by the sheriff that they had a sure case against him, and a promise by the sheriff to use his influence in the prisoner's behalf if he would admit his guilt, is not admissible in evidence against him, nor are repetitions of such confession, made to other officers, though without further inducement.—People v. Castro, 125 Cal. 521, 58 Pac. 133.

[g] Upon the trial of a charge of rape, committed by sexual intercourse with a girl under age of consent, testimony as to the conduct of the defendant at the office of the city marshal, where he was induced to go by the brothers of the prosecutrix, and where he was under the restraint of threats and promises, is not admissible to show an implied admission by him of a statement then made by the prosecutrix; nor is evidence of her statement, based upon such conduct, admissible.—People v. Williams, 133 Cal. 165, 65 Pac. 323.

[h] Defendant, accused of murder, was kept in jail for a month without being permitted advice of counsel and without preliminary examination; being visited once or twice a day by the sheriff, who told him he had better tell the truth, that a former statement denying guilt was untrue, that there was evidence tending to implicate him in the crime, and that he (the sheriff) believed accused was implicated, but would do what he could for him if he would tell the truth. Held, that defendant's statement made under these circumstances was not free and voluntary, and should have been excluded.—People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

§ 257. Threats, Hope and Fear.

[a] A confession extorted by or obtained through the influence of threats is inadmissible.—People v. Smith, 15 Cal. 409.

[b] Confessions made under the influence of hope or fear are inadmissible.—People v. Smith, 15 Cal. 409.

[c] The ground of the rule excluding confessions obtained by threats from one charged with a crime is the possibility that the confession may be false, and it does not apply to a confession of the place where stolen property is concealed, when the finding of the property at the place indicated precludes the possibility of the confession being untrue. People v. Ah Ki, 20 Cal. 177.

[d] A confession made under the influence of threats is inadmissible, where there are no facts or circumstances establishing its truth.—People v. Ah How, 34 Cal. 218.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 475, 476; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1887-1894, §§ 1189-1195.

§ 258. Mental Incapacity—Excitement or Pain.

[a] That written confession was made when defendant was under state of great excitement does not affect its admissibility.—People v. Cokhanour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[b] The fact that defendant, on trial for murder, had a bullet wound in his head, and was not in the full possession of his faculties at the time he made a confession, does not affect its admissibility, but may be considered in determining its weight.—People v. Miller, 135 Cal. 69, 67 Pac. 12.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 477; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1896, 1897, §§ 1198, 1199.

§ 259. —— Intoxication.

[a] A confession made under the influence of liquor furnished the prisoner with the consent of the officer having him in charge, and to whom the confession was made, but not influenced by anything said by the officer, is admissible.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 477; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 1896, 1897, § 1199.

§ 260. Involuntary Confessions Resulting in Discovery of Physical Facts.

[a] An involuntary confession may be admitted in evidence when it points to the discovery of physical facts, tending to establish guilt, which are proven in connection therewith.—People v. Ah Ki, 20 Cal. 177.

Digitized by Google

[b] Where an involuntary confession states inculpatory facts or circumstances found to be true, such parts of the confession as disclose the inculpatory circumstances are admissible.—People v. Hoy Yen, 34 Cal. 176.

[c] Where prisoner, accused of robbery of certain money, promised to point out place where the money was buried, and afterward pointed out a place at which, it was proved by other witnesses, the stolen money was found, held, that such statement, when taken in connection with said fact and proof, was admissible in evidence against him, although not voluntarily made.—People v. Hoy Yen, 34 Cal. 176.

§ 261. Corroboration.

[a] If prosecution proved defendant's confessions of the crime with which he stands charged circumstances may be shown corroborative of those confessions.—People v. Jones, 32 Cal. 80.

[b] A confession not corroborated by independent evidence of the corpus delicti is not sufficient to support a conviction of felony.—People v. Thrall, 50 Cal. 415.

[c] One who, with intent to forge the check of R. & M., signs the name of "A. E. R. & Co." thereto, believing it to be the true name of the firm, cannot be convicted of forgery upon his confession alone that he had signed the name "A. E. R. & Co."—People v. Elliot, 90 Cal. 586, 27 Pac. 433.

[d] Under an information charging accused with burning a dwelling-house, evidence that other buildings were also burned was admissible in proof of the corpus delicti, and also to corroborate accused's confession that the other buildings were burned.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 262. Laying Foundation—Proving Corpus Delicti.

[a] Term "corpus delicti" involves elements of crime; and, in order to prove it, all of the elements of crime must be made to appear before defendant's confessions are admissible for any purpose, and they cannot be used to establish any necessary element of the commission of a crime.—People v. Simonsen, 107 Cal. 35, 40 Pac. 440.

[b] Upon a charge of obtaining property under false pretenses, through misrepresentations made by the defendant as to his ownership of land, evidence of the extrajudicial statements and admissions of the defendant are insufficient to prove the fact that he owned no land as represented, that fact being an essential element and part of the corpus delicti, which must be established before the admissions of the defendant are admissible in evidence.—People v. Simonsen, 107 Cal. 345, 40 Pac. 440.

[c] Upon the trial of a defendant charged with burglary with intent to commit larceny, evidence that the prosecuting witness had articles of personal property belonging to him in the house where he lived, at 6 o'clock P. M. of a certain day, and that about 9 o'clock P. M. of the same day, police officers came to his house with the defendant, and with said articles belonging to the witness, together with the testimony of the police officers that the defendant had the articles in his possession, and surrendered them to them, and went with them to the room of the prosecuting witness, and showed them the place in the room where he got them, is sufficient proof of the corpus delicti to justify evidence of the admissions of the defendant made to the officers, that he took the stuff because he was hard up, and expected to get a good price for it.—People v. Harris, 114 Cal. 575, 46 Pac. 602.

[d] In order to justify a conviction, a jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute the offense, and to identify the defendant as its perpetrator; but it is not necessary that the evidence of the corpus delicti should be of such conclusive character, nor that it should itself connect the defendant with the perpetration of the offense, in order to justify the admission of the defendant's confessions. People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[e] Evidence in a homicide case held sufficient to prove the corpus delicti so as to allow of admission of defendant's statement. People v. Grill (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 613.

[f] In a prosecution for infanticide the admission or confession of defendant held insufficient to sustain a conviction without independent proof that the death of the infant was caused by a criminal act.—People v. Eldridge (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 832.

§ 263. —— Voluntary Character.

[a] If the prosecution, in a criminal case, offers in evidence a confession made by the defendant in a deposition made by him before a committing magistrate, the foundation must be laid for its introduction by preliminary proof showing, prima facie, that it was freely and voluntarily made.—People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 67.

[b] If a confession is offered in evidence, defendant is entitled, before it is received, to prove that it was not voluntarily made.—People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 67.

[c] Where witness testifies that confession was voluntary, without inducement or threat, and there is opportunity for cross-examination, his testimony cannot be stricken as conclusion of law.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 350, 19 Pac. 161.

§ 265. Judicial Confessions.

[a] Under the code a person accused of crime may voluntarily become a witness for or against himself at a preliminary examination; and, if it appears that his testimony was voluntary and free from undue influence, it may be used in evidence against him on his subsequent trial for the offense.—People v. Kelley, 47 Cal. 125.

[b] A voluntary confession made by defendant at the coroner's inquest is admissible.—People v. Taylor, 59 Cal. 640.

[c] Since accused is not compelled to testify at the coroner's inquest, his confession made at such inquest is voluntary and admissible.—People v. Martinez, 66 Cal. 278, 5 Pac. 261.

[d] Statements made by defendant, while testifying as a witness on the trial of one charged with the same offense as that for which he is being tried, are admissible against him, where it does not appear that he objected to being sworn or to testifying on that occasion.—People v. Mitchell, 94 Cal. 550, 29 Pac. 1106.

Statements made by accused in criminal prosecutions as evidence. See ante, § 173.
Judicial confessions. See ante, § 265.
Admissibility of evidence given at inquest or preliminary examination. See Homicide, §§ 132-134.

§ 266. Admissibility in General.

[a] A deposition taken before an examining magistrate, on the preliminary examination of a person charged with the commission of a felony, is not admissible on his trial; (1) Because the magistrate is not authorized or required to take it; and (2) because taken before the defendant was held to answer.—People v. Garrett, 6 Cal. 203.

[b] To prove what witness swore to on former trial is producing testimony anew, and is not using or referring to the former verdict, and does not conflict with section 439 of the Criminal Practice Act.—People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 46.

[c] The testimony of a witness, taken down by the justice of the peace on defendant's preliminary examination, is not admissible on the ground that the witness, though within reach of the subpoena of the courts, was too unwell to appear, under Penal Code, section 686, permitting such testimony to be read only in certain specified cases.—People v. Bojorquez, 55 Cal. 463.

[d] Statements made by defendant before the coroner's jury are admissible in evidence. People v. Herbert, 61 Cal. 544; People v. Martinez, 66 Cal. 278, 5 Pac. 261.

[e] Written statement of evidence given by defendant before grand jury, which he admits to be correct, is admissible against him. People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 632, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[f] The deposition of an absent witness, taken at the preliminary examination, may be used at the trial in a case of homicide, and its admission is not in violation of section 13 of article 1 of the constitution of the state.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[g] Testimony of witness given at preliminary examination conducted in English language is not inadmissible because court asked interpreter to ask witness if he understood.—People v. Sierp, 116 Cal. 250, 48 Pac. 88.

[h] Constitution, article 1, section 13, providing for the taking, in the presence of defendant and his counsel, of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, other than cases of homicide, "when there is reason to believe that the witness, from inability or other cause, will not attend at the trial," does not prohibit the admission, on a murder trial, of testimony given by an absent witness on the preliminary examination.—People v. Sierp, 116 Cal. 249, 48 Pac. 88.

[i] The introduction of the testimony given at the preliminary examination by an absent witness for the prosecution in a homicide case is not inhibited by Constitution, article 1, section 13, providing for the taking in defendant's presence of depositions in criminal cases other than homicide, where there is reason to believe that the witness will not attend at the trial.—People v. Cady, 117 Cal. 10, 48 Pac. 908.

[j] Deposition taken upon the preliminary examination of the defendant upon other charges of crime against him, so far as not made applicable by stipulation to preliminary examination for offense on trial, is not admissible in evidence against defendant, by reason of death of witness.—People v. Brennan, 121 Cal. 495, 53 Pac. 1098.

[k] The statute allowing the admission in evidence at trial of reporter's notes of testimony taken at the preliminary examination of defendant is constitutional.—People v. Plyer, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[l] Testimony of witness before committing magistrate, if properly offered, is admissible, though official stenographer dictated notes to typewriter whom he employed, but whose work he compared with his notes.—People v. Donnelly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 267. Grounds for Admission.

[a] Common-law rule that testimony of a witness given upon a former trial of a cause between the same parties is admissible for or against either party, upon showing that the witness is dead or without the jurisdiction of the court, though modified by the Penal Code so as to forbid the prosecution in a criminal case from introducing the testimony of a deceased or absent witness unless taken before the committing magistrate, or by deposition taken conditionally in the presence of the defendant, remains unchanged as to the rights of the defendant.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Stenographers' notes as evidence, and the right to read them to the jury: 81 Am. St. Rep. 358, note. See, also, 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1930-1936, §§ 1231-1235.

§ 268. —— Absence of Witness.

[a] Proof may be introduced of what witness testified to on former trial if witness has left state.—People v. Devine, 46 Cal. 46.

[b] Deposition taken at preliminary examination may be used at trial when witness is absent from state.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 426, 427, 24 Pac. 1006.

[c] In criminal case testimony of witness taken at former trial, who is absent from the state at the time of a second trial, is admissible, and, being absolutely incompetent, is subject to the general objection that the evidence was incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.—People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

[d] Where a witness could not be found in the county where the trial was to be had, after inquiries had been made by an officer who knew him "at every place and from everyone" he thought would know anything of him, and subpoenas had been sent by the district attorney to the sheriff of every county in the state, and returns had been received from forty-six of such sheriffs, certifying that after diligent search the witness could not be found in their respective counties, the court was justified in permitting the introduction of the witness' deposition taken at the preliminary examination under Penal Code, section 686, authorizing the deposition of such a witness to be read on its being satisfactorily shown to the court that he cannot, with due diligence, be found within the state.—People v. Witty, 138 Cal. 576, 72 Pac. 177.

[e] Where case was continued on account of absence of owner from state, and such absence was prolonged so that no subpoena could be served upon him, and there was a sufficient showing of diligence, his deposition taken at the preliminary examination, properly certified by the shorthand reporter, and without any harmful variance from the reporter's notes, was properly admitted in evidence.—People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[f] Under Penal Code, section 686, subdivision 3, providing that the deposition of a witness may be used in criminal actions on its being satisfactorily shown to the court that the witness cannot with due diligence be found in the state, the question as to whether a witness can with due diligence be found in the state is one of fact, to be determined by the court.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Absent witnesses, evidence of, when admissible in criminal trials: 61 Am. St. Rep. 886, note. See, also, 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1933-1935, § 1233.

§ 269. —— Death of Witness.

[a] On a second trial for an alleged crime the prosecution may prove what a witness, who has died since the former trial, testified to on that trial.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388; People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137.

[b] Where it is admitted, upon the trial of a defendant charged with the commission of a crime, that one of the witnesses, whose testimony was taken upon preliminary examination, is dead, it is proper to read in evidence his testimony taken before the committing magistrate, which had been taken down in shorthand, transcribed, certified, and filed, as required by section 869 of the Penal Code; and an objection thereto upon the ground "that due diligence has not been shown to bring this witness before the court to obtain his evidence in the regular way" is properly overruled.—People v. Douglass, 100 Cal. 1, 34 Pac. 490.

[c] Evidence taken on a preliminary examination on one charge cannot, on subsequent stipulation that it be considered the evidence on another charge, be given in evidence on trial of the latter case; Penal Code, section 686, providing merely that in a criminal action, where the charge has been preliminarily examined before a committing magistrate and the testimony taken down by question and answer in the presence of defendant, who has had an opportunity to cross-examine the witness, the deposition may be read, on its being shown that the witness is dead.—People v. Brennan, 121 Cal. 495, 53 Pac. 1098.

[d] An accused may waive the right of confronting his witnesses secured by Penal Code, section 686, and hence may introduce in evidence the testimony of a deceased witness, whether the testimony was given at the preliminary examination or on a former trial.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 686, providing that a defendant shall have the right to confront the witnesses against him, except where the charge has been preliminarily examined by a committing magistrate, and the testimony taken down in the presence of defendant, the prosecution cannot introduce the testimony of a deceased witness, which was taken on a former trial of the case.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1931-1933, § 1232.

§ 270. Laying Foundation—Showing Diligence to Procure Witness.

[a] Evidence held insufficient to sustain a finding of diligence to obtain witness within the state, so as to authorize the use of his deposition taken at a preliminary examination, as authorized by Penal Code, section 686. People v. Ballard, 1 Cal. App. 222, 81 Pac. 1040.

[b] Where a subpoena for the prosecuting witness, with a return that he cannot be found in San Francisco, is offered, and after a delay of seven days, for additional search, subpoenas issued to eight other counties, with returns that the witness cannot be found, are offered, sufficient foundation is laid for the introduction of the witness' deposition taken before the committing magistrate.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 213, 19 Pac. 490.

[c] Depositions taken at preliminary examination may be used at trial when witness is absent from state and with due diligence cannot be found.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 426, 24 Pac. 1006.

[d] Where an officer serving a subpoena went to the hotel occupied by a witness, and was there told that he had left the state, and he then went to one of witness' haunts, and received the same reply, and to another, where he was informed that witness was liable to return at any time, and he made further efforts to locate him, without success, such showing was sufficient to authorize introduction of the witness' testimony on a former preliminary examination.—People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

[e] It cannot be said that the court erred in rejecting the testimony of a former witness, where sufficient diligence was not shown to ascertain his whereabouts, and to serve him with a subpoena.—People v. McFarlane, 138 Cal. 481, 71 Pac. 568, 72 Pac. 48.

[f] Diligence herein held sufficient to show that there was no abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in permitting the deposition of the witness to be read, pursuant to Penal Code, section 686, subdivision 3, providing that the deposition of a witness may be used in criminal actions, on it being satisfactorily shown that the witness cannot with due diligence be found in the state.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

[g] In a prosecution for robbery, subpoenas for an absent witness that had been issued and returned unserved are admissible for the purpose of showing what had been done toward making the service on the missing witness.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

[h] The uncontradicted evidence that a witness, who testified at the preliminary examination of accused on the charge of murder, was at the time of the trial, and for two months preceding it had been, in a foreign country, is sufficient to show that he could not be found in the state, within Penal Code, section 686, providing for the introduction in evidence of the deposition of a witness on preliminary examination, on it being shown that the witness cannot be found within the state.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[i] Where a witness telegraphed and wrote to the district attorney from another state that he could not be present at the trial, which began about twelve days thereafter, and the return to a subpoena for such witness was that he could not be found within the county, there was a showing of such "due diligence" as justified the reading at the trial of his evidence taken at the preliminary examination before a committing magistrate, under Penal Code, section 686.—People v. Munroe, 33 Pac. 776.

[j] A subpoena for the prosecuting witness, a farm laborer, issued more than two weeks before the trial, and like writs sent and specially commended to the sheriffs of four adjoining counties, were all returned unserved. The county officer testified that inquiry had been made of the farmers in the chief towns of the county, and all over the county. Held a predicate for a sworn stenographer's report of his evidence in the preliminary examination.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

[k] Under Penal Code, section 686, people held entitled to read the deposition of a witness whose attendance could not be procured, without having moved the committing magistrate to put the witness under bonds in accordance with Penal Code, section 879.—People v. Flannery (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 461.

§ 271. Method of Proof.

[a] Evidence of committing magistrate, as to the statement made by the prisoner on his preliminary examination, is not admissible on the trial.—People v. Gibbons, 43 Cal. 557.

[b] The testimony given by a witness on a former trial, but since deceased, may be proved on a subsequent trial, by permitting a person who kept notes of such testimony, and who swears they contain the substance thereof, to read his notes to the jury.—People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137.

[c] The provision of Statutes of 1872, page 551, section 2, making the phonographic reporter's notes of the testimony upon a preliminary examination for a felony prima facie evidence, does not render the notes admissible where the testimony was taken through an interpreter.—People v. Lee Fat, 54 Cal. 527.

[d] Testimony of reporter, based upon his notes, is incompetent to prove the testimony of a witness given in a foreign language at a former trial, and taken down by the reporter from the interpreter. The interpreter, or some other person who heard and understood the language in which the testimony was given should have been called.—People v. Ah Yute, 56 Cal. 119.

[e] The shorthand notes of a reporter, taken upon a former trial, cannot be used as evidence upon a new trial, the reporter being dead.—People v. Qurise, 59 Cal. 343.

[f] Grand juror may testify as to admissions made by accused when testifying before jury.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 633, 634, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[g] Evidence given at preliminary examination may be shown by reporter using notes taken by him to refresh his memory.—People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 216, 19 Pac. 490.

[h] A stenographer, who took down the evidence at a trial, may, subject to cross-examination from the adverse party, testify from his notes as to the evidence. Code of Civil Procedure, section 2047, providing that a witness may refresh his memory respecting a fact, by anything written by himself at the time such fact occurred, but that the writing must be shown to the adverse party, who may cross-examine the witness upon it if he desires.—People v. Lem You, 97 Cal. 224, 32 Pac. 11.

[i] Death of a witness whose testimony was taken at the preliminary examination must be proved at the trial in the same manner that any other fact is proved by relevant and competent evidence, with the right of cross-examination, and cannot be established by the ex parte affidavit of a relative of the witness. People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[j] A stenographer may testify as to evidence given by accused before the grand jury, where the evidence in no sense amounts to confession.—People v. Sexton, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

[k] Offer by defendant to prove admissible testimony of witnesses given upon a former trial, which was not alone to prove their testimony by the recollection of the official reporter, reinforced by his stenographic notes, but included, as well, an offer to prove it by the official transcript of those notes on file in the court, is sufficient to show prejudicial error in refusing to admit the testimony.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

[l] The stenographer's notes of the testimony of an interpreter who interpreted the testimony of the defendant, who testified in Chinese at the preliminary examination, are inadmissible hearsay as against the defendant, and cannot be used for the purpose of impeaching his testimony. The fact that the interpreter testified that he accurately stated in English all that the defendant said in Chinese cannot render the stenographer's notes admissible.—People v. John, 137 Cal. 220, 69 Pac. 1063.

[m] That a deposition of a witness at a preliminary examination contained interpolated words in parentheses by the reporter, which, on defendant's objection, were ordered omitted in reading the deposition to the jury, did not render the deposition inadmissible.—People v. Witty, 138 Cal. 576, 72 Pac. 177.

§ 272. Authentication and Sufficiency of Notes and Transcripts.

[a] The stenographic notes of a witness' testimony, taken on the preliminary examination, which are not written out, certified, and filed by the reporter, as provided by Penal Code, section 869, are not admissible in evidence at the trial after the death of the witness.—People v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 668, 4 Pac. 1144.

[b] Stenographer's transcript of testimony at preliminary examination, duly filed, is placed on same footing as deposition and admissible as such.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 303, 17 Pac. 214.

[c] Requirement as to time of filing transcript of evidence taken at preliminary examination is directory and filing within reasonable time is sufficient.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 304, 17 Pac. 214.

[e] Where the transcript of testimony taken at a preliminary examination does not have the title of any court or cause in which the testimony was taken, and it is certified to be a true copy of the testimony instead of a correct statement of the testimony, the authentication and certificate are not sufficient to be admissible in evidence upon the trial of the accused.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 652, 39 Pac. 33.

[f] Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, provides that the reporter's stenographic notes of depositions taken in cases of homicide must be filed with the county clerk. Held, in a prosecution for murder, not error to overrule an objection to the admission in evidence of the deposition of a witness, since deceased, taken at the preliminary examination, where it was not affirmatively shown that the reporter's notes had been filed with the county clerk.—People v. Eslabe, 127 Cal. 243, 59 Pac. 577.

[g] Authentication of the deposition of a witness given on the preliminary examination of the defendant accused of a felony, by a certificate of the stenographer who took the testimony, stating that it is "a true and correct transcript from the shorthand notes taken by me, and a full and complete record of the proceedings had and testimony given in the above-entitled case," though careless in not following the language of the statute, is in substantial compliance therewith, and includes in the meaning of the certificate "a

Lem You, 97 Cal. 224, 32 Pac. 11.

[i] Death of a witness whose testimony was taken at the preliminary examination must be proved at the trial in the same manner that any other fact is proved by relevant and competent evidence, with the right of cross-examination, and cannot be established by the ex parte affidavit of a relative of the witness. People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[j] A stenographer may testify as to evidence given by accused before the grand jury, where the evidence in no sense amounts to confession.—People v. Sexton, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

[k] Offer by defendant to prove admissible testimony of witnesses given upon a former trial, which was not alone to prove their testimony by the recollection of the official reporter, reinforced by his stenographic notes, but included, as well, an offer to prove it by the official transcript of those notes on file in the court, is sufficient to show prejudicial error in refusing to admit the testimony.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

[l] The stenographer's notes of the testimony of an interpreter who interpreted the testimony of the defendant, who testified in Chinese at the preliminary examination, are inadmissible hearsay as against the defendant, and cannot be used for the purpose of impeaching his testimony. The fact that the interpreter testified that he accurately stated in English all that the defendant said in Chinese cannot render the stenographer's notes admissible.—People v. John, 137 Cal. 220, 69 Pac. 1063.

[m] That a deposition of a witness at a preliminary examination contained interpolated words in parentheses by the reporter, which, on defendant's objection, were ordered omitted in reading the deposition to the jury, did not render the deposition inadmissible.—People v. Witty, 138 Cal. 576, 72 Pac. 177.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1936-1948, §§ 1236-1246.

§ 272. Authentication and Sufficiency of Notes and Transcripts.

[a] The stenographic notes of a witness' testimony, taken on the preliminary examination, which are not written out, certified, and filed by the reporter, as provided by Penal Code, section 869, are not admissible in evidence at the trial after the death of the witness.—People v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 668, 4 Pac. 1144.

[b] Stenographer's transcript of testimony at preliminary examination, duly filed, is placed on same footing as deposition and admissible as such.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 303, 17 Pac. 214.

[e] Where the transcript of testimony taken at a preliminary examination does not have the title of any court or cause in which the testimony was taken, and it is certified to be a true copy of the testimony instead of a correct statement of the testimony, the authentication and certificate are not sufficient to be admissible in evidence upon the trial of the accused.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 652, 39 Pac. 33.

[f] Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, provides that the reporter's stenographic notes of depositions taken in cases of homicide must be filed with the county clerk. Held, in a prosecution for murder, not error to overrule an objection to the admission in evidence of the deposition of a witness, since deceased, taken at the preliminary examination, where it was not affirmatively shown that the reporter's notes had been filed with the county clerk.—People v. Eslabe, 127 Cal. 243, 59 Pac. 577.

[g] Authentication of the deposition of a witness given on the preliminary examination of the defendant accused of a felony, by a certificate of the stenographer who took the testimony, stating that it is "a true and correct transcript from the shorthand notes taken by me, and a full and complete record of the proceedings had and testimony given in the above-entitled case," though careless in not following the language of the statute, is in substantial compliance therewith, and includes in the meaning of the certificate "a correct statement of such testimony and proceedings in the case," as required by section 869 of the Penal Code.—People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

[h] A reporter personally dictating from his shorthand notes of the testimony on a preliminary examination to an assistant, who, under his direction and in his presence, makes the longhand transcript, transcribes his shorthand notes within Penal Code, section 869, requiring the reporter to transcribe into longhand his shorthand notes.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[i] Where a reporter personally dictated from his shorthand notes of the testimony at a preliminary examination to an assistant, who made the longhand transcript, the evidence of the reporter that he accurately dictated to his typewriter, and the evidence of his typewriter that he literally put into longhand the dictation, was competent to show that the transcript was a correct statement of the testimony.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[j] A defendant on trial for crime, who desires to show that the transcript of the testimony at the preliminary examination is incorrect, may avail himself of the reporter's shorthand notes filed with the county clerk, as required by statute.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[k] Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, requiring the reporter, within ten days after the close of the preliminary examination, if defendant is held for trial, to transcribe his shorthand notes, and certify and file the same with the county clerk, is directory merely, and the filing of the same within a reasonable time is sufficient to warrant its use as the deposition of a witness at the examination not found within the state at the time of the trial.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[l] Where it was shown that a person was an official stenographer of the police court, that he was specially appointed and sworn by the committing magistrate to take down the testimony on the preliminary examination of defendant, that he took down the testimony, that he filed a transcript thereof with the clerk, and that he made the signature at the end of the transcript, it was sufficiently shown that the person who signed the certificate at the close of such testimony was an official stenographer.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[m] The failure of the reporter to make a comparison with his notes of the longhand transcript done at his dictation by an assistant does not show that the statement of the testimony contained in the transcript is incorrect.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[n] Penal Code, section 686, subdivision 3, provides for the admission in a criminal case of testimony taken by question and answer in the presence of defendant at a preliminary hearing. Under section 869 the transcript in longhand of the shorthand notes of the testimony and proceedings, made and certified by the shorthand reporter appointed by the magistrate at the preliminary hearing to take the testimony, and who did take it, when it is filed with the county clerk, is put on the same footing as a deposition. Held, that the fact that the testimony was taken through an interpreter does not affect the admissibility of the deposition.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

§ 273. Effect.

[a] Penal Code, section 686, provides that the deposition of a witness, taken, as therein provided, at a preliminary examination, may be read at the trial upon its being satisfactorily shown to the court that the witness is dead, or cannot, with due diligence, be found within the state. Section 1345 provides that such depositions are to be taken subject to like objections to the questions and answers contained therein as if the witnesses had been examined orally in court. Held, that defendant is not entitled to have such deposition admitted on the trial as absolutely true.—People v. Leyshon, 108 Cal. 440, 41 Pac. 480.

[a] Document proved to have been executed by secondary evidence without objection is as much in evidence as though instrument had been produced.—People v. Mauritzen, 84 Cal. 89, 24 Pac. 33.

[b] Possession of stolen goods, unexplained, is not, of itself, sufficient to justify conviction.—People v. Hannon, 85 Cal. 375, 24 Pac. 706.

[c] Evidence derived from comparison of handwritings is very unsatisfactory, and entitled to little weight when conclusion is contrary to positive evidence.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 149, 47 Pac. 1009.

§ 275. Circumstantial Evidence.

[a] Where evidence is entirely circumstantial, yet is not only consistent with the guilt of the defendant, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, the law makes it the duty of the jury to convict, notwithstanding such evidence may not be as satisfactory to their minds as the direct testimony of credible eye-witness.—People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191.

[b] The law does not require, in order to justify the inference of legal guilt in cases of circumstantial evidence, that the existence of the inculpatory facts must be absolutely incompatible with the innocence of the accused, and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of guilt. The true rule is that the facts shall not only be consistent with the guilt of the accused, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion.—People v. Murray, 41 Cal. 66.

[c] In order to convict on circumstantial evidence, the evidence should be such as to produce nearly the same degree of certainty as that which arises from direct testimony.—People v. Padillia, 42 Cal. 535; People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191; People v. Eckman, 72 Cal. 582, 14 Pac. 359.

[d] Where independent facts and circumstances are relied upon to identify the accused as the person who committed the crime charged, each material independent fact or circumstance necessary to complete the chain or series of independent facts tending to establish a presumption of guilt should be established to the same degree of certainty as the main fact.—People v. Ah Chung, 54 Cal. 398.

[e] Although the fact that defendant was seen near the place where and about the time when the crime was committed is a material circumstance, a conviction based upon circumstantial evidence may be supported without it.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511, 15 Pac. 102.

[f] A conviction may be had on circumstantial evidence alone, where all the circumstances distinctly point to the guilt of accused, and are inexplicable on any other reasonable hypothesis.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006.

[g] When circumstantial evidence is relied upon to establish guilt it should be sufficient to exclude every other rational hypothesis than guilt, but not to exclude every other hypothesis, and an instruction that it must include every other hypothesis than the guilt of the defendant is properly rejected. People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[h] Where defendant is accused of murder, and independent facts and circumstances are relied upon to identify the accused as person committing offense charged, each material fact or circumstance necessary to complete the chain or series of independent facts tending to establish the guilt must be established to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt; and if the jury have a reasonable doubt upon any single essential fact relied upon to complete the chain of circumstances, they cannot convict the defendant as long as they entertain such doubt.—People v. Smith, 106 Cal. 73, 39 Pac. 40.

[i] To warrant inference of legal guilt from circumstantial evidence, a conviction in the minds of the jurors to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt, arising from the evidence of the defendant's guilt, is sufficient, and an absolute or mathematical demonstration of guilt is not required.—People v. Bellamy, 109 Cal. 610, 42 Pac. 236.

[j] Circumstances relied upon to establish guilt must be consistent with that hypothesis and inconsistent with any other rational conclusion.—People v. Eagan, 116 Cal. 291, 48 Pac. 120.

[k] Decisions made by courts of other states in relation to the relative weight of direct and circumstantial evidence, where trial judges were free from any constitutional or statutory restrictions upon their power to sum up the evidence, are inapplicable under our constitution.—People v. Vereneseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 499, 58 Pac. 156, 62 Pac. 111.

[l] People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191, and cases affirming the doctrine of that case as to the relative weight of direct and circumstantial evidence, overruled. (McFarland, J., Garoutte, J., and Van Dyke, J., dissenting.)—People v. Vereneseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 499, 58 Pac. 156, 62 Pac. 111.

§ 276. Number of Witnesses.

[a] Direct evidence of one witness who is entitled to full credit is sufficient for proof of any fact except perjury and treason.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 303.

§ 277. Credibility of Witnesses.

[a] Evidence of witness is not to be rejected because he swears to opposite statements. Jury must receive and weigh it, but they may reject it or accept one side of it as true.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 200, 48 Pac. 75.

Disregard by jury of uncontradicted or unimpeached witness: 81 Am. Dec. 268, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 486; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1951, 1952, § 1252.

§ 278. Degree of Proof Requisite and Reasonable Doubt.

[a] Proof beyond reasonable doubt is necessary to establish a fact against a prisoner; but preponderating proof, proof necessary to satisfy a jury of a fact, is sufficient to establish a fact in his favor.—People v. Milgate, 5 Cal. 127.

[b] A reasonable doubt is not a mere possible or imaginary doubt. Demonstration is not required beyond possibility of contrary.—People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 267.

[c] Reasonable doubt to warrant acquittal is not a mere possible doubt, but is such doubt as after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence leaves the minds of the jurors in such a condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[d] No conviction should be had unless the jury is "entirely satisfied," from evidence, that the defendant is guilty. (Per Crockett, J.)—People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 326.

[e] A verdict of guilty under a charge that the jury must acquit unless they find deceased was killed by "Paul Tibeaux, while the defendant aided and abetted the killing," is erroneous where the evidence was that the fatal shot was fired by a Frenchman named "Paul," without showing that he was the same person known as "Paul Tibeaux."—People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 586.

[f] Evidence must satisfy jury, to moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt—that is, it must entirely satisfy jury—of guilt of defendant before they can convict. If jury are not entirely satisfied they should acquit.—People v. Padillia, 42 Cal. 535.

[g] A reasonable doubt of guilt is that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say that they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge—a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding, and satisfies the reason and judgment.—People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288.

[h] Although it may be positively proved that one of two or more persons committed a crime, yet, if it is uncertain which is the guilty party, all must be acquitted.—People v. Woody, 45 Cal. 289.

[i] In the decision of a criminal case involving life or liberty, something more than a mere preponderance of evidence is required to convict the defendant. There must be in the minds of the jury an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge, derived from a comparison and consideration of the evidence.—People v. Brannon, 47 Cal. 96.

[j] It is not necessary that the evidence for the prosecution in a criminal case should show that the innocence of the defendant is impossible in order to justify the jury in finding him guilty, but it is enough if such evidence demonstrate the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[k] The jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, before they can convict, that the defendant and no other person committed the offense.—People v. Kerrick, 52 Cal. 446.

[l] The truth of testimony on which depends, in part, defendant's guilt, is to be determined by the jury, and a fact tending to prove it need not be established beyond a reasonable doubt. A preponderance of evidence is sufficient.—People v. Mitchell, 63 Cal. 480.

[m] Guilt must be established by clear and satisfactory proof, and generally, beyond reasonable doubt.—Buckley, In re, 69 Cal. 3, 10 Pac. 69.

[n] There must be conviction of guilt in minds of jury to justify verdict affirming guilt, but it need not be an absolute conviction beyond possibility of doubt.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 34, 24 Pac. 33.

[o] Evidence need not establish guilt to "absolute" moral certainty.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 430, 24 Pac. 1006.

[p] Reasonable doubt is not such doubt as would induce a man of reasonable firmness and judgment to act upon it in matters of importance to himself.—People v. Bemmerly, 87 Cal. 120, 121, 35 Pac. 266.

[q] To justify the conviction of a defendant on a criminal charge he must not only be proven to have committed an offense, but the very offense charged in the indictment.—People v. Fagan, 98 Cal. 230, 33 Pac. 60.

[r] Evidence merely showing a possible opportunity for the commission of the offense, but not excluding reasonable opportunity for its commission by another, is insufficient to sustain a conviction.—People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57, 46 Pac. 896.

§ 279. —— Corporate Existence.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 280. —— Venue of Offense.

[a] In a trial for murder, the only proof offered that it was committed in the county laid was the statement of the coroner who held the inquest that the body was found in such county. Semble, that defendant's point that the venue was not proved was not well taken.—People v. Williams, 18 Cal. 187.

[b] There is no necessity that any witness testify, in so many words, to the place of the offense; but it is sufficient if the evidence as a whole leaves no reasonable doubt that the acts charged were committed within the place laid.—People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

[c] If whole testimony leaves no room for reasonable doubt as to venue, it is sufficiently proven, though no witness testifies to it in so many words.—People v. Tonielli, 81 Cal. 279, 22 Pac. 658.

[d] The superintendent of a ranch in Yolo county kept books there of his receipts and expenditures, making monthly reports to his principal in San Francisco. He shipped horses to Sacramento, and there received the proceeds of their sale, but made no book entry or report thereof. Held, sufficient evidence that the embezzlement was committed in Sacramento county to justify the magistrate in holding him for trial there.—Palmer, Ex parte, 86 Cal. 631, 25 Pac. 130.

[e] Proof that crime was committed on well-known streets of city where court is sitting sufficiently establishes venue.—People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 143, 144, 26 Pac. 97.

[f] Where it is testified that the deceased resided in the county, and it is plainly implied that she resided at the house in front of which her body was found and into which it was carried, the venue is sufficiently proved. People v. Kamaunu, 110 Cal. 609, 42 Pac. 1090.

[g] Where the witnesses in a prosecution for manslaughter committed in K. county state that the deceased was killed at a certain store, and it incidentally appears from the testimony of several witnesses that the store named is in K. county, the venue is sufficiently established.—People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

[h] Evidence that witness' residence was A.; that he gave defendant four hundred dollars to be loaned, which defendant afterward claimed to have done, and that defendant read the papers to witness, the note alleged to have been fictitiously uttered being among them; and that all these facts took place in a certain county is sufficient in a prosecution under Penal Code, section 476, for uttering a fictitious instrument, to prove the venue to be in that county.—People v. Terrill, 133 Cal. 120, 65 Pac. 303.

[i] It was sufficient proof of the venue to prove the locality of the defendant's saloon, where the liquor was sold, and that this took place in the county of the venue and state of California.—People v. Monroe, 138 Cal. 97, 70 Pac. 1072.

[j] Where the launch was intrusted to the defendant in the county of the venue, and was carried out of the county in violation of the trust, and the jury were sufficiently warranted by the circumstances in finding that the intent to embezzle the launch was formed in said county, and not after it had been taken from the county, the venue is sufficiently established, and the superior court of that county has jurisdiction of the offense. People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[k] Under Penal Code, section 1102, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061 (5), evidence to support a conviction must establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

§ 281. —— Former Conviction.

[a] On the trial of one accused of burglary, and who was also charged with a previous conviction of larceny, the state introduced the records of the superior court of another county, showing the conviction of a person bearing the same name as defendant, for stealing a mare from one J. P. A witness testified that he knew defendant, and that he knew him at the time of the former conviction; that defendant at that time was working for J. P.; and that he had admitted to witness that he was sent to state's prison for stealing a horse from J. P. Held, sufficient to support a verdict of former conviction.—People v. Hettick, 126 Cal. 425, 58 Pac. 918.

§ 282. —— Intent.

[a] "Slight evidence" of guilty intent is insufficient to sustain conviction.—People v. Stewart, 80 Cal. 131, 132, 22 Pac. 124.

[b] A requested instruction, in a prosecution for arson, that intent was a material ingredient in every crime, and must be proved by positive evidence, was properly refused.—People v. Hiltel, 131 Cal. 577, 63 Pac. 919.

§ 283. —— Alibi.

[a] A defendant charged with an assault with intent to rob, in establishing an alibi, may adduce circumstances tending to fix the time at which he was at the other place.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[b] An alibi must be established by preponderance of the testimony.—People v. Lee Sare Bo, 72 Cal. 623, 14 Pac. 310.

[c] Evidence of defendant's absence from the place where the crime was committed is not a defense, but it is admissible to establish a defense; and if a reasonable doubt is created by the evidence, defendant should be acquitted.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006.

[d] Evidence of alibi should not be scrutinized differently than that given in support of any other issue.—People v. Levine, 85 Cal. 42, 22 Pac. 969, 24 Pac. 631; People v. Lattimore, 86 Cal. 404, 24 Pac. 1091.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1998-2001, §§ 1289-1291.

§ 284. —— Insanity.

[a] When insanity is set up as a defense in a criminal case, it must be established to the satisfaction of the jury by a preponderance of the evidence; and a reasonable doubt of the defendant's sanity, raised by all the evidence, does not justify an acquittal.—People v. Myers, 20 Cal. 518; People v. Bawden, 90 Cal. 195, 27 Pac. 204.

Digitized by Google

[b] Uneasiness at an avowed neglect of sworn duty is no evidence of insanity.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 191.

[c] Where insanity is relied upon as a defense, the defendant must clearly establish that, at the time of committing the offense, he was not conscious that he was doing wrong.—People v. McDonell, 47 Cal. 134.

[d] The defense of insanity must be shown by a preponderance of evidence.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485; People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 233, 26 Pac. 88; People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263; People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[e] When, in a criminal case, the insanity of the defendant at the time of the commission of the offense is relied on as a defense, it is not necessary that it should be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, but may be proved by a preponderance of evidence.—People v. Wilson, 49 Cal. 13.

[f] When a person accused of crime relies on the defense of insanity, he is bound to establish it by such a preponderance of evidence that, if the question were submitted to a jury in a civil case, they would find him insane.—People v. Messersmith, 61 Cal. 246.

[g] Insanity, when relied upon as a defense in a criminal case, is a fact which must be established by the same clearness and certainty as any other fact alleged by defendant in his defense.—People v. Hamilton, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 115, 62 Cal. 377.

[h] The fact that the jailer having charge of defendant testifies that he has observed defendant during his imprisonment, and believes him to be insane, is not sufficient to create such a doubt as to require the court to order the question of defendant's sanity to be submitted to the jury.—People v. Lee Fook, 85 Cal. 300, 24 Pac. 654.

[i] The doctrine of reasonable doubt does not apply to the question of the insanity of the defendant; but the burden is on the defendant to show by a preponderance of evidence that he was insane at the time of the alleged homicide.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[j] Insanity as a defense to crime must be proved by a preponderance of evidence.—People v. Allender, 117 Cal. 81, 48 Pac. 1014.

[k] Reasonable doubt as to insanity is not sufficient to make out that defense.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 11, 52 Pac. 112.

§ 286. Time of Trial.

[a] Where the day set for the trial of a murder case was a holiday, and the court, in the absence of defendant, reset it for the following day, at which time defendant went to trial without objection, and it does not appear that he was prejudiced, the conviction will not be set aside on that ground, especially as it was not necessary to reset the case, under Civil Code, section 11, providing that, whenever the day on which an act is to be performed is a holiday, the act may be performed on the next business day.—People v. Rader, 136 Cal. 253, 68 Pac. 707.

§ 287. Time to Prepare Defense.

[a] Three days is not ample time in which to prepare for trial in murder case.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 557, 39 Pac. 944.

[b] Defendant herein held to have been given reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 87, 50 Pac. 390.

See 12 Cyc. 503, 504; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2022, 2023, § 1305.

§ 288. Right to Speedy Trial.

[a] Accused has constitutional right to speedy trial and court has no discretionary power to deny it or prolong imprisonment beyond time provided by law. Statute is imperative.—People v. Morino, 85 Cal. 517, 24 Pac. 892.

[b] Judge Temple thinks that constitutional guaranty of speedy trial imposes on state duty to provide courts which, under ordinary conditions, can furnish speedy trial.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 152, 47 Pac. 1009.

[c] It is duty of prosecution diligently to prosecute case against defendant; and officers of state are not authorized to hold accused in imprisonment unnecessarily even for sixty days without speedy trial guaranteed by constitution.—Begerow, In re, 133 Cal. 349, 85 Am. St. Rep. 178, 65 Pac. 828.

[d] Declaration or rights, in constitution, is a command and limitation of power upon state officials by people, who created formal government. State cannot rightfully hold in prison ever an accused person longer than is necessary that he may be tried, before trial had and judgment rendered.—Begerow, In re, 133 Cal. 349, 85 Am. St. Rep. 178, 65 Pac. 828.

§ 289. Constitutional Provision Construed.

[a] Penal Code, section 1382, declares that if an accused, whose trial has been postponed on his own application, is not brought to trial within sixty days after filing the indictment, he is entitled to be discharged, and section 1387 provides that, if the offense is a felony, such discharge is not a bar to a further prosecution. Held, that such sections are not violative of Constitution, article 1, subdivision 13, guaranteeing the right to a public and speedy trial.—Begerow, In re, 136 Cal. 293, 68 Pac. 773, 56 L. R. A. 528.

§ 290. Discharge of Accused for Delay.

[a] The indictment in this case was demurred to and the demurrer sustained. This ruling was reversed on appeal. The trial court then fixed a day for the trial, against defendant's objections, more than sixty days after the remittitur was filed. The defendant demanded his discharge under section 1382 of the Penal Code, and the court so ordered, and dismissed the action. Held, that this section has no application to such a case, and that the court erred in its ruling.—People v. Giesea, 63 Cal. 345.

[b] Delay in prosecution of criminal case for more than sixty days for sufficient cause will not warrant dismissal.—People v. Camilo, 69 Cal. 541, 11 Pac. 128.

[bc] Case should not be dismissed for want of prosecution when delay was due to engagement of court in trial of other cases.—People v. Henry, 77 Cal. 447, 19 Pac. 830.

[c] Accused is not entitled to dismissal for nontrial under section 1382, Penal Code, when there has been mistrial and case has been continued on account of illness of juror.—Ross, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 109, 110, 22 Pac. 1086.

[d] It is enough to authorize dismissal for want of prosecution for defendant to show that statutory time to try him has expired and that case was not postponed on his application.—People v. Morino, 85 Cal. 517, 24 Pac. 892.

[e] What constitutes "good cause" for delay of trial beyond period of sixty days prescribed in section 1382, Penal Code, discussed but not decided.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 152-155, 47 Pac. 1009.

[f] The mere statement of the judge, on denying the motion to dismiss, that during the time of delay the court had been wholly occupied with other cases, does not show good cause for the delay.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 146, 47 Pac. 1009.

[g] Nor was it good cause that a material witness for the state was absent during the period of delay, where no diligence was shown to procure his attendance.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 146, 47 Pac. 1009.

[h] Information was filed December 27th, and defendant was arraigned January 4th, and demurred on the 11th. Demurrer was argued the 18th, and overruled the 25th, and defendant then pleaded not guilty. Case was called for trial February 12th, and defendant obtained a continuance of one day, but the trial did not occur until March 18th. Held, that defendant was entitled to a dismissal under Penal Code, section 1382, enacted pursuant to the constitution, providing that the prosecution shall be dimissed, unless good cause to the contrary be shown, if a defendant whose trial has not been postponed at his own instance is not brought to trial within sixty days from filing of information.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 146, 47 Pac. 1009.

[i] Continuance of trial beyond sixty days caused by trial of other cases having precedence is not ground for dismissal.—People v. Vasalo, 120 Cal. 169, 52 Pac. 305.

[j] Provision that defendant must be tried within sixty days does not apply where defendant has appealed and had his case sent back for second trial.—People v. Lundin, 120 Cal. 311, 52 Pac. 807.

[k] Under Penal Code, section 1382, providing that the court, unless good cause to the contrary is shown, must order the prosecution to be dismissed, if a defendant, whose trial has not been postponed upon his application, is not brought to trial within sixty days after the finding of the indictment or filing of the information, a defendant waives such right by allowing a jury to be impaneled and sworn without first raising objection.—People v. Hawkins, 127 Cal. 372, 59 Pac. 697.

[l] Penal Code, section 1382, declares that the court, unless good cause to the contrary is shown, must order a prosecution dismissed if a defendant whose trial has not been postponed on his application is not brought to trial within sixty days after the filing of the information. Held, that where an information was filed March 10th, and the cause continued from March 17th to May 19th, and trial had June 6th, it was proper to deny a motion to dismiss the prosecution when both continuances were with defendant's consent, and from April 15th until June 1st the court was engaged in the trial of another cause.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[m] Under Constitution, article 1, section 13, guaranteeing to every person charged with crime a speedy trial, and Penal Code, section 1382, providing that the court, unless for good cause shown, must dismiss the prosecution when an accused, if the trial has not been postponed on his application, has not been brought to trial within sixty days after indictment, an accused showing a delay, not caused by him, of more than sixty days after a mistrial, without good reason, is entitled to discharge on habeas corpus.—Begerow, In re, 133 Cal. 349, 85 Am. St. Rep. 178-n, 65 Pac. 828.

[n] Under Penal Code, section 1382, requiring a dismissal when the information is not filed within thirty days after defendant is held to answer, "unless good cause to the contrary is shown," the fact that the district attorney is misled one day by an error in the stenographer's notes of the preliminary examination, the trial being had within sixty days from the offense, will warrant a refusal to dismiss.—People v. Farrington, 140 Cal. 656, 74 Pac. 288.

[o] Where the delay beyond sixty days in bringing to trial a defendant in a prosecution for crime is caused by a mistrial and a continuance by consent, he is not entitled to a dismissal therefor.—People v. Chadwick, 143 Cal. 116, 76 Pac. 884.

[p] Where the record fails to show that defendant objected to numerous continuances, a denial of motion to dismiss, made on the ground that he had not been brought to trial within the time required by the Penal Code, will be affirmed.—People v. Bell, 36 Pac. 94, 95.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 56 L. R. A. 513, 531, notes. See, also, 12 Cyc. 499-502; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2007-2021, §§ 1297-1304.

§ 291. —— Delay Granted at Request of Accused.

[a] A defendant in a criminal prosecution is not entitled to be discharged, under section 1382 of the Penal Code, on the ground that he had not been brought to trial within sixty days after the filing of the information, when the delay of the trial was granted at his own request, and for his benefit.—People v. Cline, 74 Cal. 575, 16 Pac. 391.

[b] Postponement of trial for one day on application of defendant does not deprive him of right to speedy trial guaranteed by Constitution, and section 1382, Penal Code.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 152, 47 Pac. 1009.

§ 292. —— Delay in Finding Indictment.

[a] The facts constituting good cause for the detention of a party not indicted at the next term of court after his commitment must in great measure be left to the discretion of the court, to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case.—Bull, Ex parte, 42 Cal. 196.

[b] Where a party who has been held to answer a criminal charge is not indicted by the grand jury, he is entitled to be discharged, unless there is a good cause shown for his further detention; nor is the mere recommendation of the grand jury that such party be detained to answer before another grand jury, of itself, good cause for his detention.—Bull, Ex parte, 42 Cal. 196.

§ 293. Continuance—Discretion of Court.

Postponement of preliminary examination. See ante, § 58½.

[a] Where there is sufficient showing as to materiality of absent witnesses, and no apparent lack of diligence in the effort to procure their attendance, a motion to continue a cause for the term, particularly if it be the first application, should be granted.—People v. McCrory, 41 Cal. 458.

[b] Application for continuance is addressed to discretion of court.—People v. Collins, 75 Cal. 412, 17 Pac. 430.

[c] Court may refuse to adjourn a trial from the middle of an afternoon until the next day, at the request of defendant's counsel, where the circumstances show no abuse of discretion.—People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2027-2032, § 1311.

§ 294. —— Successive Applications.

[a] Where defendant was granted one continuance of sixty days on the ground of absence of a witness, it was not error to refuse to grant him a second continuance because of the same witness.—People v. Leyshon, 108 Cal. 440, 41 Pac. 480.

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2032-2034, §§ 1312-1314.

§ 295. —— Good Faith.

[a] If facts shown on application for continuance cast suspicion on good faith of application, and induce belief that it was intended only for delay, court will not abuse its discretion in refusing it.—People v. Mortimer, 46 Cal. 114.

§ 296. Grounds for Continuance—Want of Preparation.

[a] Where defendant moved for a continuance on the ground of want of an opportunity to prepare for trial the district court is justified in denying the motion, where the affidavit of the district attorney shows he had a full opportunity to prepare for trial.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[b] Where there was an insufficient showing of diligence, and no showing that the granting of further time would probably have a favorable result, the refusal of the magistrate to grant further time in which to secure attorneys is not an abuse of discretion; and the denial of a motion to set aside the information because of such refusal will not be disturbed upon appeal.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[c] Upon the preliminary examination of a defendant charged with murder, a continuance of six days after the reading of the complaint, and informing the defendant of his right to counsel and witnesses, allows the defendant a reasonable time in which to secure counsel.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

§ 297. —— Absence of Attorney.

[a] The absence of counsel for the defense, on account of sickness, is a sufficient ground of continuance in a criminal case.—People v. Logan, 4 Cal. 188.

[b] Fact that one of defendant's counsel is engaged in trial of another case is not ground for continuance.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 341, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] Whether provision allowing continuance when attorney is member of legislature, etc., applies to criminal cases doubted.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 342, 19 Pac. 161.

[d] Defendant in a criminal case is not entitled to a continuance because his junior counsel is a member of the legislature, when it does not appear from the record that he was engaged in the defense when the session began.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[e] Absence of one of counsel is not ground for continuance of hearing appointed for fixing of date of execution of death sentence.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 206, 51 Pac. 185.

[f] After the jury had been impaneled, and the trial had proceeded to the afternoon of the second day, the court was compelled to commit defendant's counsel for contempt incurred on the court's adjournment of the case by reason of the counsel's intoxication. Held, that an adjournment a reasonable time thereafter to allow other counsel to become familiar with the facts of the case was all that defendant could claim, and that a continuance was properly denied.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 678, 63 Pac. 87.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 9 Cyc. 171, 172; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2042-2046, § 1320.

§ 298. —— Absence of Witness for Prosecution.

[a] Continuance to enable prosecution to procure attendance of witnesses is not abuse of discretion.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 239, 10 Pac. 502.

§ 299. —— Absence of Witness for Defendant.

[a] Where, in a criminal case, a witness who has been subpoenaed for the defendant, is absent from temporary sickness, and it appears that his personal attendance may be procured without unreasonable delay, a resort to the statutory mode of taking his testimony should not be forced upon the defendant against his will, under penalty of going to trial without it, but a continuance, at least to the next term, should be granted. People v. Dodge, 28 Cal. 445.

[b] If the person indicted for murder, at the time and just before he killed the deceased, stated that he was about to kill him, and asked others to witness the killing, the absence of a witness who saw the defendant and the deceased have a friendly conversation the day before is no ground for a continuance, for the fact, if sworn to, would be no defense.—People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344.

[c] In criminal case, if defendant has relied on promise of material witness to attend the trial the first time the case is called after the indictment is found, and for that reason has omitted to take his deposition, and the witness resides beyond the jurisdiction of the court, a continuance should be granted.—People v. Brown, 46 Cal. 102.

[d] An application for a continuance by a defendant in a criminal case is properly denied, if affidavits on behalf of the people are introduced which show that the absent witness is a fugitive from justice, and cannot probably be produced at the next term of the court, and particularly if the deposition of the absent witness was taken before the examining court, and the prosecution offers to allow it to be introduced in evidence on the trial.—People v. Cleveland, 49 Cal. 577.

[e] Where defendant, who was indicted for murder, moves for a continuance, on the ground of the absence of a material witness, who would testify that he was at home on the night of the murder, the motion is properly denied where the affidavit of the prosecution shows that the defendant had testified before the grand jury that no one but his family was at home that night.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[f] A continuance should not be granted if it does not appear that the attendance of the absent witness could be procured in a reasonable time.—People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[g] An application for the continuance of the trial of a defendant accused of felony, upon the ground of the absence of material witnesses, is properly refused where nearly one year had elapsed between the date of the indictment and the date of the trial, and their importance was known during all this period to the defendant and to his counsel, and the prosecuting officers were, during the same period, making diligent search for them, and there was no reasonable cause to believe that further postponement would secure their attendance.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[h] Where the defendant pleads guilty of the murder, and the nature of the case shows that it was deliberate and premeditated, evidence that defendant was intoxicated is valueless, as also evidence of defendant's previous good character, and it is not improper to refuse to continue the cause for the giving of such evidence for the defendant.—People v. Miller, 114 Cal. 10, 45 Pac. 986.

[i] It is not an abuse of discretion to deny a continuance on account of absent witnesses, where it is not shown that any one of them would or could be procured within any reasonable time.—People v. Wade, 118 Cal. 672, 50 Pac. 841.

[j] Continuance for absence of witness rests in discretion of trial court.—People v. Chutnacut, 141 Cal. 683, 75 Pac. 340.

[k] It is error to refuse defendant a continuance for absence of witnesses from the county, where, from the uncontradicted affidavit of defendant, it appears that such witnesses were regularly subpoenaed; that the facts which defendant expected to prove by them, and which are stated in the affidavit, are material; that he could not prove the same facts by any other witnesses; and that he expected to be able to procure their attendance, if the trial was postponed.—People v. Lee, 8 Pac. 685.

§ 300. —— —— Diligence in Procuring Witness.

[a] A continuance will not be granted, in a criminal case, on the ground of the absence of a witness where it does not appear that any particular effort has been made to find him, or that any service has been made on him which he was bound to obey.—People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[b] Defendant, on trial for murder, moved for a continuance on the ground that his chief witness, a Chinaman, was absent in China, and alleged that such witness was the only one who saw the assault on defendant by deceased, in consequence of which defendant afterwards shot deceased, and that such witness' testimony on the trial would be substantially the same as defendant's. It appeared that defendant was informed of the intended departure of the witness, and made no effort to induce him to remain, or to secure his testimony by deposition. Defendant claimed in his affidavit that the witness intended to return, and that he was provided with return papers, but of this he offered no proof. Held, that a refusal to grant a continuance on account of the absence of such witness was not an abuse of discretion.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

§ 301. —— —— Absence of Immaterial or Cumulative Evidence.

[a] It is not error to deny an application for continuance on the ground of absence of witnesses, where it appears that the facts sought to be proved by them could be proved by other witnesses present.—People v. Ah Fat, 48 Cal. 61.

[b] A motion for continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness upon a point not combated is properly denied.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] Defendant sought to establish bias on the part of the grand jury by showing that some of its members were in the courtroom when his associate in the crime was tried, and heard defendant plead his constitutional privilege. Defendant moved for a continuance in order to procure testimony of a member of the grand jury who would testify to this fact. Held, that the court properly refused a continuance, since the fact of proof would not establish prejudice or bias.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 618, 19 Pac. 865.

[d] The rule that a trial will not be postponed in order to obtain cumulative evidence does not apply on a trial for murder, where the only evidence at hand is that of defendant.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

have deposed as averred in defendant's affidavit, is not sufficient to warrant the overruling of the motion.—People v. Diaz, 6 Cal. 248.

[b] The district attorney should have admitted the truth of the facts to which the witness would testify absolutely in such case. People v. Diaz, 6 Cal. 248.

[c] In a prosecution for larceny, defendant moved for a continuance on the ground of absence of a witness by whom he expected to prove that, on the night of the alleged offense, prosecuting witness had no money in his possession, and so told the witness. The district attorney admitted that the prosecuting witness told the witness as stated. Held, that the admission was insufficient, since the witness would testify not only that the prosecuting witness told him that he had no money, but that as a matter of fact he had none.—People v. Brown, 54 Cal. 243.

§ 303. Application for Continuance—Time to Make.

[a] It is not error to refuse an application for a continuance made after the jury has been selected and sworn, where no reason is given for the delay in making the application.—People v. Beam, 66 Cal. 394, 5 Pac. 677.

[b] Where a defendant neglected to apply for a continuance of a criminal case, on the ground of the illness of a material witness, until after the jury was impaneled, and then requested a continuance for two months, it was properly refused.—People v. Logan, 123 Cal. 414, 56 Pac. 56.

§ 305. Necessity and Sufficiency of Affidavit.

[a] Affidavit for continuance must show that the application is not made for purposes of delay.—People v. Thompson, 4 Cal. 238.

[b] An affidavit for continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness should show to the court in what the applicant's diligence consisted, whether by exhausting the process of the court, or otherwise.—People v. Thompson, 4 Cal. 238.

[c] An affidavit for continuance on the ground of absence of witnesses must show that there are no other persons by whom defendant could prove the same facts.—People v. Thompson, 4 Cal. 238; People v. Quincy, 8 Cal. 89; People v. Gaunt, 23 Cal. 156; People v. Ashnauer, 47 Cal. 98.

[d] An application by a defendant to postpone a trial on the ground of surprise, at the introduction of a witness whose name is not indorsed upon the indictment, must, when made, be supported by an affidavit or other evidence or suggestion showing the surprise, in the absence of which it should be denied. People v. Symonds, 22 Cal. 348.

[e] An affidavit for a continuance in a criminal action is not sufficient, which simply states that a subpoena for witnesses resident in a certain county had been put in the hands of the sheriff of that county, and he had "returned said subpoena not served." Due diligence is not shown.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[f] An affidavit for a continuance in a criminal case should show not only that efforts have been made to find the absent witness, but also, if service of a subpoena has been made on him, should show that it was such kind of service as he was bound to obey.—People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[g] On an application for a continuance in a criminal case, an affidavit stating that the affiant believes that he can procure the attendance of witnesses residing out of the state, or their depositions, by the next term of court, is defective, as being in the alternative.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183.

[h] Where, in an affidavit for a continuance in a criminal case, defendant states, on opinion and belief, that he can procure the personal attendance of witnesses from a foreign state at the next term, he must also state his reasons for his belief, and the nature of his opinion, that the court may decide whether or not there is reasonable ground to believe that the witnesses will attend, or the showing will be insufficient.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183.

[i] To entitle party to continuance on ground of absence of evidence the affidavit must show the materiality of the facts which he expects to prove by the absent witness.—People v. Mellon, 40 Cal. 648.

[j] An affidavit for a continuance because of the absence of a material witness, who has been subpoenaed, must show that the witness cannot be readily reached by an attachment.—People v. Weaver, 47 Cal. 106.

[c] Reasonable doubt to warrant acquittal is not a mere possible doubt, but is such doubt as after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence leaves the minds of the jurors in such a condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[d] No conviction should be had unless the jury is "entirely satisfied," from evidence, that the defendant is guilty. (Per Crockett, J.)—People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 326.

[e] A verdict of guilty under a charge that the jury must acquit unless they find deceased was killed by "Paul Tibeaux, while the defendant aided and abetted the killing," is erroneous where the evidence was that the fatal shot was fired by a Frenchman named "Paul," without showing that he was the same person known as "Paul Tibeaux."—People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 586.

[f] Evidence must satisfy jury, to moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt—that is, it must entirely satisfy jury—of guilt of defendant before they can convict. If jury are not entirely satisfied they should acquit.—People v. Padillia, 42 Cal. 535.

[g] A reasonable doubt of guilt is that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say that they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge—a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding, and satisfies the reason and judgment.—People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288.

[h] Although it may be positively proved that one of two or more persons committed a crime, yet, if it is uncertain which is the guilty party, all must be acquitted.—People v. Woody, 45 Cal. 289.

[i] In the decision of a criminal case involving life or liberty, something more than a mere preponderance of evidence is required to convict the defendant. There must be in the minds of the jury an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge, derived from a comparison and consideration of the evidence.—People v. Brannon, 47 Cal. 96.

[j] It is not necessary that the evidence for the prosecution in a criminal case should show that the innocence of the defendant is impossible in order to justify the jury in finding him guilty, but it is enough if such evidence demonstrate the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[k] The jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, before they can convict, that the defendant and no other person committed the offense.—People v. Kerrick, 52 Cal. 446.

[l] The truth of testimony on which depends, in part, defendant's guilt, is to be determined by the jury, and a fact tending to prove it need not be established beyond a reasonable doubt. A preponderance of evidence is sufficient.—People v. Mitchell, 63 Cal. 480.

[m] Guilt must be established by clear and satisfactory proof, and generally, beyond reasonable doubt.—Buckley, In re, 69 Cal. 3, 10 Pac. 69.

[n] There must be conviction of guilt in minds of jury to justify verdict affirming guilt, but it need not be an absolute conviction beyond possibility of doubt.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 34, 24 Pac. 33.

[o] Evidence need not establish guilt to "absolute" moral certainty.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 430, 24 Pac. 1006.

[p] Reasonable doubt is not such doubt as would induce a man of reasonable firmness and judgment to act upon it in matters of importance to himself.—People v. Bemmerly, 87 Cal. 120, 121, 35 Pac. 266.

[q] To justify the conviction of a defendant on a criminal charge he must not only be proven to have committed an offense, but the very offense charged in the indictment.—People v. Fagan, 98 Cal. 230, 33 Pac. 60.

[r] Evidence merely showing a possible opportunity for the commission of the offense, but not excluding reasonable opportunity for its commission by another, is insufficient to sustain a conviction.—People v. Tarbox, 115 Cal. 57, 46 Pac. 896.

§ 279. —— Corporate Existence.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 280. —— Venue of Offense.

[a] In a trial for murder, the only proof offered that it was committed in the county laid was the statement of the coroner who held the inquest that the body was found in such county. Semble, that defendant's point that the venue was not proved was not well taken.—People v. Williams, 18 Cal. 187.

[b] There is no necessity that any witness testify, in so many words, to the place of the offense; but it is sufficient if the evidence as a whole leaves no reasonable doubt that the acts charged were committed within the place laid.—People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

[c] If whole testimony leaves no room for reasonable doubt as to venue, it is sufficiently proven, though no witness testifies to it in so many words.—People v. Tonielli, 81 Cal. 279, 22 Pac. 658.

[d] The superintendent of a ranch in Yolo county kept books there of his receipts and expenditures, making monthly reports to his principal in San Francisco. He shipped horses to Sacramento, and there received the proceeds of their sale, but made no book entry or report thereof. Held, sufficient evidence that the embezzlement was committed in Sacramento county to justify the magistrate in holding him for trial there.—Palmer, Ex parte, 86 Cal. 631, 25 Pac. 130.

[e] Proof that crime was committed on well-known streets of city where court is sitting sufficiently establishes venue.—People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 143, 144, 26 Pac. 97.

[f] Where it is testified that the deceased resided in the county, and it is plainly implied that she resided at the house in front of which her body was found and into which it was carried, the venue is sufficiently proved. People v. Kamaunu, 110 Cal. 609, 42 Pac. 1090.

[g] Where the witnesses in a prosecution for manslaughter committed in K. county state that the deceased was killed at a certain store, and it incidentally appears from the testimony of several witnesses that the store named is in K. county, the venue is sufficiently established.—People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

[h] Evidence that witness' residence was A.; that he gave defendant four hundred dollars to be loaned, which defendant afterward claimed to have done, and that defendant read the papers to witness, the note alleged to have been fictitiously uttered being among them; and that all these facts took place in a certain county is sufficient in a prosecution under Penal Code, section 476, for uttering a fictitious instrument, to prove the venue to be in that county.—People v. Terrill, 133 Cal. 120, 65 Pac. 303.

[i] It was sufficient proof of the venue to prove the locality of the defendant's saloon, where the liquor was sold, and that this took place in the county of the venue and state of California.—People v. Monroe, 138 Cal. 97, 70 Pac. 1072.

[j] Where the launch was intrusted to the defendant in the county of the venue, and was carried out of the county in violation of the trust, and the jury were sufficiently warranted by the circumstances in finding that the intent to embezzle the launch was formed in said county, and not after it had been taken from the county, the venue is sufficiently established, and the superior court of that county has jurisdiction of the offense. People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

[k] Under Penal Code, section 1102, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061 (5), evidence to support a conviction must establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 494-496; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1975-1984, §§ 1277-1284.

§ 281. —— Former Conviction.

[a] On the trial of one accused of burglary, and who was also charged with a previous conviction of larceny, the state introduced the records of the superior court of another county, showing the conviction of a person bearing the same name as defendant, for stealing a mare from one J. P. A witness testified that he knew defendant, and that he knew him at the time of the former conviction; that defendant at that time was working for J. P.; and that he had admitted to witness that he was sent to state's prison for stealing a horse from J. P. Held, sufficient to support a verdict of former conviction.—People v. Hettick, 126 Cal. 425, 58 Pac. 918.

§ 282. —— Intent.

[b] A requested instruction, in a prosecution for arson, that intent was a material ingredient in every crime, and must be proved by positive evidence, was properly refused.—People v. Hiltel, 131 Cal. 577, 63 Pac. 919.

§ 283. —— Alibi.

[a] A defendant charged with an assault with intent to rob, in establishing an alibi, may adduce circumstances tending to fix the time at which he was at the other place.—People v. McCrea, 32 Cal. 98.

[c] Evidence of defendant's absence from the place where the crime was committed is not a defense, but it is admissible to establish a defense; and if a reasonable doubt is created by the evidence, defendant should be acquitted.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006.

[d] Evidence of alibi should not be scrutinized differently than that given in support of any other issue.—People v. Levine, 85 Cal. 42, 22 Pac. 969, 24 Pac. 631; People v. Lattimore, 86 Cal. 404, 24 Pac. 1091.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 1998-2001, §§ 1289-1291.

§ 284. —— Insanity.

[a] When insanity is set up as a defense in a criminal case, it must be established to the satisfaction of the jury by a preponderance of the evidence; and a reasonable doubt of the defendant's sanity, raised by all the evidence, does not justify an acquittal.—People v. Myers, 20 Cal. 518; People v. Bawden, 90 Cal. 195, 27 Pac. 204.

"Susie"; and a letter from Mrs. E. O. was in evidence, signed "Susie O." Held, that Mrs. Susie O. and Mrs. E. O. were sufficiently identified as the same person to warrant a denial of the motion.—People v. Breen, 130 Cal. 72, 62 Pac. 408.

[e] Names of witnesses examined before committing magistrate need not be inserted at foot of, or indorsed on, the information filed in court against defendant after he had been examined before such magistrate, though Penal Code, section 943, provides that when an indictment is found the names of the witnesses before the grand jury must be so indorsed.—People v. Sherman, 32 Pac. 879.

§ 311. Reading Indictment and Stating Plea to Jury.

[a] Failure to read indictment and state plea to jury will be disregarded, if jury were fully informed of their substance.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[b] Defendant, accused by information of assault with deadly weapon, and of a prior conviction for manslaughter, pleaded not guilty of the former, and guilty of the latter. The minutes of the trial stated that after the jury were sworn "the information is read, and the plea of not guilty stated to the jury by the clerk." Held, that this means that only the charge to which defendant pleaded not guilty was read.—People v. Douglass, 87 Cal. 281, 25 Pac. 417.

[c] If previous conviction is confessed, clerk must omit all reference to it in reading information.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 117, 26 Pac. 95.

§ 312. Power of Legislature to Regulate.

[a] Legislature may prescribe remedy and rules of practice in criminal cases, and limit time for objections to indictment.—People v. Arnold, 15 Cal. 476.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 519-522; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2203-2211, §§ 1450-1460.

§ 313. Compliance with Statute.

[a] Even if not in strict conformity with statute, the court below must of necessity be vested with a reasonable discretion in determining the preliminaries of a criminal trial. People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 405.

[b] It is better for the court below to adhere strictly to the provisions of the statute, in respect to the mode of trial in criminal cases, than risk a reversal of the judgment by a deviation from the specific modes of procedure prescribed, even when the deviation does not seem to it material.—People v. Arnold, 15 Cal. 476.

[c] In trial of criminal cases court should comply strictly with statute.—People v. Coyne, 116 Cal. 297, 48 Pac. 218.

§ 314. Right of Accused to Fair Trial.

[a] Everyone accused of crime is entitled to a fair and impartial trial before an unbiased jury.—People v. Sansome, 84 Cal. 451, 24 Pac. 143.

[b] The purpose of a criminal trial is to discover and determine whether or not the defendant is guilty, and not merely to maintain at all hazards a theory of guilt, entertained beforehand; and it is the duty of the court to give the defendant a fair trial, according to the established rules of evidence, and to avoid error in respect to the rights of the accused.—People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

§ 315. Publicity of Proceedings.

[a] Order excluding from courtroom such of jurors summoned for term as are not impaneled to try the case is not a deprivation of the right of public trial.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[b] The constitutional guaranty of a "public" trial is not infringed by an order of court excluding from the court all persons except the judge, jurors, witnesses and persons connected with the case.—People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223, 3 Pac. 809.

[c] During the progress of a criminal trial, the defendant having become greatly excited so as to disturb the progress of the trial, the court made an order that the lobby outside of the courtroom should be cleared of spectators, and that no persons, except officers of the court, reporters of the public press, friends of the defendant, and persons necessary for her to have on the trial, should be allowed to remain. The order did not require the doors of the courtroom to be closed, and was made on behalf of the defendant, as well as to preserve order, because the attendance of a crowd of spectators in the courtroom tended to excite her. Held, that the order was not in violation of the defendant's right to a public trial.—People v. Kerrigan, 73 Cal. 222, 14 Pac. 849.

[d] A defendant accused of crime has a constitutional right to a public trial, and an order made against the objection of the defendant excluding from the courtroom during the trial of the case, all persons except the officers of the court and the defendant is prejudicial error, which is ground for a new trial.—People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242, 42 Am. St. Rep. 108, 37 Pac. 153.

[e] The requirement of a public trial is for the benefit of the accused, that the public may see that he is fairly dealt with, and not unjustly condemned, and that the presence of interested spectators may keep his triers keenly alive to a sense of their responsibility, and to the importance of their functions; and the requirement is fairly observed if without partiality or favoritism a reasonable proportion of the public is suffered to attend, notwithstanding that those persons whose presence could be of no service to the accused, and who would only be drawn hither by a prurient curiosity, are excluded altogether.—People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242, 42 Am. St. Rep. 108, 37 Pac. 153.

[f] The trial should be public in the ordinary common-sense acceptation of the term, and the doors of the courtroom should be kept open, and the public are entitled to be admitted with due regard to the size of the courtroom, the conveniences of the court, the right to exclude objectionable characters and youth of tender years, and to do other things which may facilitate the proper conduct of the trial.—People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242, 42 Am. St. Rep. 108, 37 Pac. 153.

[g] The fact that officers of court were allowed to be present in no way made trial public.—People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242, 42 Am. St. Rep. 108, 37 Pac. 153.

§ 316. Presence of Judge.

Absence of judge from trial as absence of due process of law. See Constitutional Law, § 243.

[a] It is irregular, on the trial of a criminal case, for one of the judges, who has commenced the trial of the cause, to leave the court, and have another judge substituted in his place.—People v. Eckert, 16 Cal. 110.

[b] The judge is a component part of the court, and there can be no court without him, and what was done in his absence was done in the absence of the court; and a defendant convicted under such circumstances has been deprived of his liberty without due process of law.—People v. Tupper, 122 Cal. 424, 68 Am. St. Rep. 44, 55 Pac. 125.

[c] There can be no court without presence of judge.—People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 238, 59 Pac. 573.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 317. Presence of Accused.

[a] Where, after jury retires, they return and ask that certain depositions be read to them, and this is done during the absence of the prisoner, a judgment of conviction will be reversed.—People v. Kohler, 5 Cal. 72.

[b] Prisoner must be present during whole of trial in cases of felony.—People v. Kohler, 5 Cal. 72.

[c] Persons charged with a misdemeanor may, in the discretion of the court, be allowed to plead by attorney and be tried in their absence.—People v. Ebner, 23 Cal. 158.

[d] Where a defendant, who was indicted for felony, was absent from the court when the jury came in and announced their verdict, but returned before they were discharged, and it did not appear that he was prejudiced by such absence, it was held that the verdict was not thereby rendered invalid.—People v. Miller, 33 Cal. 99.

[e] In a prosecution for a felony, the prisoner must be personally present in court when the verdict is rendered, and, if it is received in his absence, it is invalid.—People v. Beauchamp, 49 Cal. 41.

[f] Absence of accused from courtroom for inappreciable time while counsel is preparing address to jury is not reversible error. People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 628, 40 Pac. 169.

[g] Defendant's affidavit that his trial was continued in his absence, and that he was not present at the trial of his codefendant, shows no ground for a new trial, under Penal Code, section 1181, providing that defendant is entitled to a new trial, "when the trial has been had in his absence, if the indictment is for a felony."—People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[h] Setting a case on March 3d for trial April 12th in absence of defendant, but in presence of counsel, held not prejudicial error.—People v. Erwin (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 871.

§ 318. Presence of Counsel for Accused.

[a] It is reversible error for the court, in a criminal prosecution, to recall the jury and give them oral instructions in the absence of defendant's attorney.—People v. Trim, 37 Cal. 274.

[b] Where, in a criminal prosecution, the jury comes into court with a verdict, and defendant's attorney is notified of the fact, the court, after waiting a sufficient length of time for the attorney to come into court, is justified in receiving the verdict, polling the jury, and discharging it.—People v. Bennett, 65 Cal. 267, 3 Pac. 868.

[c] It is not a cause for reversal that defendant's counsel was absent when the court overruled the demurrer to the information; no reason being assigned for his absence, and it not being shown that defendant was injured thereby.—People v. Rice, 73 Cal. 220, 14 Pac. 851.

§ 319. Custody and Restraint of Accused.

[a] Where the defendant is indicted for a felony, and has been admitted to bail, the court should, at the commencement of the trial, order him into actual custody.—People v. Beauchamp, 49 Cal. 41.

Unnecessary shackling or confining of prisoner during trial: 27 Am. Rep. 116, note; 39 L. R. A. 821, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 529, 530; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2226, 2227, § 1484.

§ 320. —— Removing Manacles.

[a] By common law prisoner is entitled to appear for trial, upon his own plea of not guilty, free from all manner of shackles or bonds, unless there is danger of his escape. People v. Harrington, 42 Cal. 165, 10 Am. Rep. 296.

[b] To require prisoner during progress of his trial to appear and remain with chains and shackles upon his limbs, without evident necessity as a means of securing his presence for judgment, is a violation of the common-law rule and of the thirteenth section of the Criminal Practice Act.—People v. Harrington, 42 Cal. 165, 10 Am. Rep. 296.

§ 321. —— Counsel for Prosecution—Appointment.

[a] It is not error to permit private counsel to assist the district attorney in the prosecution of criminal cases.—People v. Turcott, 65 Cal. 126, 3 Pac. 461.

[b] Penal Code, section 1130, providing for supplying the place of the district attorney by appointment of the court when he cannot prosecute, is not exclusive, and in such case an attorney may be employed to prosecute by the board of supervisors; and there need be no formal order of court, as required by said section.—People v. Walters, 98 Cal. 138, 32 Pac. 864.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 530-532; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2228-2237, §§ 1485-1495.

§ 322. —— Additional Private Counsel.

[a] On a criminal trial, the court may, in its discretion, allow the prosecuting attorney additional counsel.—People v. Blackwell, 27 Cal. 65.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 530-532; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2229-2236, §§ 1487-1494.

§ 323. Counsel for Accused.

[a] On an indictment for murder the court of sessions is not bound to assign counsel for prisoner.—People v. Moice, 15 Cal. 329.

[b] When defendant's counsel are absent from trial and he refuses to choose others, court may appoint attorney.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 344, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] The fact that one accused of crime is a lawyer does not deprive him of the right to be represented by counsel.—People v. Naphaly, 105 Cal. 641, 39 Pac. 29.

[d] Right of accused having two counsel to have additional counsel is largly discretionary with trial court.—People v. Gregory, 120 Cal. 21, 52 Pac. 41.

[e] Application to enroll relative of judge as additional counsel for accused, granting of which would disqualify judge, result in continuance and discharge of jurors selected is properly refused.—People v. Gregory, 120 Cal. 21, 52 Pac. 41.

[f] Upon trial for offense not punishable with death, the court may refuse to permit more than one counsel to argue the case for the defendant.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 533-535; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2237-2241, §§ 1496-1506.

§ 324. Argument to Jury—Right to Open and Close.

[a] In the trial of criminal cases, it is within the discretion of the court to require the defendant to open, and the prosecution to close, the argument to the jury.—People v. Haun, 44 Cal. 96.

[b] Court in discretion may require defendant to open and prosecution to close the argument, without assigning reasons.—People v. Doyell, 44 Cal. 96.

[c] Under Penal Code, district attorney must open and may conclude the argument, though offense was committed prior to code. People v. Mortimer, 46 Cal. 114.

[d] If other counsel are associated with the district attorney, the court may, in its discretion, allow the associate counsel to conclude the argument.—People v. Strong, 46 Cal. 302; People v. Murphy, 47 Cal. 103.

[e] It is discretionary with trial court to allow private counsel employed to assist in prosecution to open and close.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 365, 366, 25 Pac. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 535, 536; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2241-2243, §§ 1507-1509.

§ 325. View and Inspection.

[a] When jury are permitted to view premises, it is error to allow a witness to explain the position of parties.—People v. Green, 53 Cal. 60.

[b] View by jury cannot be taken under section 1119 of the Penal Code, without presence of defendant.—People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 634, 10 Pac. 169; People v. Lowrey, 70 Cal. 194, 11 Pac. 501.

[c] During view person appointed by court to show jury places named in its order may point out and designate such places to jury. People v. Bush, 71 Cal. 602, 12 Pac. 781.

[d] Penal Code, section 1119, giving the court power to order a view, is not unconstitutional as depriving the accused of right to be confronted with witnesses against him, as the statute contemplates his presence at the view.—People v. Bush, 71 Cal. 602, 12 Pac. 781.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 1119, view may be ordered in a county other than that where the trial is had, and a person appointed by the court to show the jury the places named in the order of the court may point out and name such places to them. People v. Bush, 71 Cal. 602, 12 Pac. 781.

[f] It is within the discretion of the court, on a trial for burglary, when informed by the jury that they cannot agree on a verdict without a view of the premises, to allow such view, with consent of defendant.—People v. Hawley, 111 Cal. 78, 43 Pac. 404.

[g] Whether jury should view premises in any case is discretionary with trial judge. People v. White, 116 Cal. 19, 47 Pac. 771.

[h] Penal Code, section 1119, provides that when, in the opinion of the court, it is proper that the jury should view the place of the crime, it may order the jury to be taken by the sheriff to the place, which must be shown to them by a person appointed by the court for that purpose. Held, that where the court in a prosecution for murder appointed a witness, who had heard and seen the defendant declare and point out the scene and objects relating to the crime before the coroner's jury, to show the jury the place described by the defendant and the witness points out the different places to them, stating what the defendant had said before the coroner's jury in regard to each, an objection that the jury received evidence out of court, other than that which came from an inspection of the premises, is not available, since the witness by necessity was compelled to orally designate the place, to comply with the statute.—People v. Milner, 122 Cal. 171, 54 Pac. 833.

[i] Where prosecutrix in a rape case on cross-examination fully described the position into which she had been forced by defendant, and the jury was allowed to inspect the buggy wherein the crime was committed, there was no error in refusing to compel prosecutrix on cross-examination to again assume the position in view of the jury.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[j] Upon the trial of a defendant charged with arson, where the court ordered an inspection by the jury of the burned premises without objection by the defendant, and the counsel agreed in court that the jury might inspect the entire premises, and each party pointed out all the scenes and objects desired, and it was agreed after the return of the jury that the purposes of the motion had been accomplished to the satisfaction of both sides, objections to irregularities in the proceedings are waived; and it cannot be objected on appeal for the first time that there was irregularity in the mode of pointing out objects by the officer in charge of the jury, to which no objection was urged in the court below.—People v. Fitzgerald, 137 Cal. 546, 70 Pac. 554.

[k] On a prosecution for the larceny of cattle, it is error for the court, jury, counsel, and officers of the court to go to a neighboring corral to examine the brands on certain cattle, when such examination is not conducted as a part of the regular trial,—neither the cattle nor the brands being offered in evidence, nor defendant given an opportunity to object,—since Penal Code, section 1119, authorizing the court to order the jury to be conducted to the place in which the offense was committed, or other material fact occurred, does not apply to such case.—People v. Fagan, 33 Pac. 846.

§ 326. Experiments in Court.

[a] Admission of evidence of experiment is in discretion of court, and it is not bound to suspend trial and try experiment in presence of jury.—People v. Levine, 85 Cal. 43, 47, 22 Pac. 969, 24 Pac. 631.

[b] It is not error to allow experimental tests in a murder trial to be made by the prosecuting officers, but it is the better practice to have such tests made by other witnesses.—People v. Crandall, 125 Cal. 129, 57 Pac. 785.

§ 327. Identification of Accused.

[a] Upon a charge of robbery, where the prosecuting witness described the size of the party robbing him, it is not error for the court to overrule an objection to a request of the district attorney that the defendant should stand up for comparison. It would not be error for the court to compel the defendant to stand up for comparison.—People v. Oliveria, 127 Cal. 377, 59 Pac. 772.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 28 L. R. A. 699, note.

§ 328. Appointment of Interpreter.

[a] Under section 1884, Code of Civil Procedure, court is vested with discretion in granting or refusing application of the defendant for an interpreter.—People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 520; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 2207, § 1455.

§ 329. Amendment and Correction of Minutes.

[a] Trial court has power to correct its minutes to make them import verity, and any mere irregularity in them must be disregarded.—People v. Eppinger, 109 Cal. 294, 41 Pac. 1037.

§ 330. Presence of Jury During Argument for Nonsuit.

[a] It is within the discretion of the court to allow the jurors to remain in the courtroom during the argument of a motion for a nonsuit.—People v. Tomlinson, 102 Cal. 19, 36 Pac. 506.

§ 331. Excluding Jury Pending Investigation of Attempt to Bribe Juror or Witness.

[a] It is not error to refuse to have jury present while investigating charge of attempt to bribe juror.—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 214, 13 Pac. 500.

[b] If the circumstances pending a criminal trial are such as to impress the court with a suspicion that a witness has been tampered with or bribed by the attorney for the defendant, the investigation of the matter should be conducted in the absence of the jury in order that the jurors might not be influenced in their verdict by any developments arising from such investigation.—People v. Abbott, 101 Cal. 645, 36 Pac. 129.

§ 332. Conduct of Court Officers.

[a] Immediately after adjournment, during a criminal trial, and before the jury had retired, a deputy sheriff put handcuffs on one of defendant's witnesses. This witness was at the time a prisoner in the jail, charged as a party to the same crime as the defendant. There was no showing that the officer was not acting in good faith. Held, not to constitute misconduct on the part of the officer prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Metzger, 143 Cal. 447, 77 Pac. 155.

§ 333. Remarks and Conduct of Court.

[a] Court should be careful in guarding itself and jury from suspicion of prejudice by refraining from remarks which appear adverse to either party.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 353, 19 Pac. 161.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 1093, providing that where one indicted for felony is also charged with a prior conviction, which he confesses, the clerk, in reading the indictment to the jury, shall omit all that relates to such former conviction, it is prejudicial error to direct the clerk, reading an indictment for robbery, to read that part charging a prior conviction for burglary, which was confessed, and permit him to announce that "the defendant confessed the same, and was guilty."—People v. Sansome, 84 Cal. 449, 24 Pac. 143.

[c] By Penal Code, section 1093, subdivision 6, it is made illegal to charge the jury concerning matters of fact; but where the court, during the charge, addressed itself to the attorneys, and, as justifying the charge, stated that in its opinion the evidence tended to prove certain facts, there was no error.—People v. McLean, 84 Cal. 480, 24 Pac. 32.

[d] On an information for receiving stolen goods from W., in ruling against an objection to the admission in evidence of letters from W. to defendant, it was error for the court to state in the presence of the jury that his chief reason for admitting them was that defendant had several times contradicted herself on the record.—People v. Willard, 92 Cal. 482, 28 Pac. 585.

[e] In a criminal prosecution, where the jury return into court some time after the case has been submitted to them, and state that there is no prospect for an agreement, it is prejudicial error for the judge to state that, in view of the evidence, he is at a loss to understand why the jury should disagree, since such remark cannot fail to create the impression that in his opinion the evidence required a conviction.—People v. Kindelberger, 100 Cal. 367, 34 Pac. 852.

[f] Trial judge should be careful not to make unnecessary remarks about the evidence in course of trial.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 295, 52 Pac. 833.

[g] Remarks of court during trial herein held not ground for reversal.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 295, 52 Pac. 833.

[h] Where an objection is made to evidence as irrelevant, it is proper for the court, in overruling the objection, to state the fact to which the evidence is relevant—especially when the court states that it is for the jury to determine whether the fact is proved. People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[i] Where, on a prosecution for rape, a physician testified, without objection, that medical authorities placed the proportion of true to false charges of rape as one true charge to twelve false, and the court remarked that he did not see what that would have to do with any particular case, because the guilt or innocence of accused in each case would depend on its own merits, the remarks were not ground for reversal, since, accused having no right to have the statement of the witness go to jury, he could not have been prejudiced by the remarks. People v. Bene, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[j] A statement by the judge during the progress of a trial for arson bearing on the amount of insurance on the destroyed property, but which is made to the attorneys, and in which he says that he does not wish to be understood as quoting the evidence, is not reversible error, since it is not a statement to the jury.—People v. Mooney, 132 Cal. 13, 63 Pac. 1070.

[k] Where, on a trial for manslaughter, the court, in overruling a motion to strike certain testimony on behalf of the state, said: "I think the testimony is all right," such remark was not error, since the jury could not have understood it as an intimation that in the opinion of the judge the witness was telling the truth.—People v. Smith, 134 Cal. 453, 66 Pac. 669.

[l] In a prosecution for larceny it is not error, in giving instructions requested by defendant, to say to the jury that the defendant had asked them.—People v. Wilder, 134 Cal. 182, 66 Pac. 228.

[m] In a prosecution for murder, allusion to the fact that defendant was admittedly sane was made in the argument by the prosecuting counsel. Defendant's counsel afterward asked leave to reply to such statement. In the ensuing conversation the court stated that the question was whether defendant was insane at the time of the homicide. Counsel said, "And the question whether he is sane now or not is not an issue?" to which the court replied, "It is only a matter of argument as to what his condition of mind was at the time of the commission of the crime." The entire defense was insanity. Held, that the use of the word "crime" in the statement by the judge was not prejudicial to defendant as an opinion as to his guilt.—People v. Daily, 135 Cal. 104, 67 Pac. 16.

[n] Where, on a criminal prosecution the testimony of a witness was read to the jury at their request, it was not error for the judge to have the last question re-read to him.—People v. Eaton, 136 Cal. xix, 68 Pac. 593.

[o] On the retrial of a criminal case after reversal in sustaining defendant's objection to certain questions, the court remarked, "I do not propose to have this case go up there and be reversed again if I can help it." Held not ground for reversal, as indicating to the jury that the court expected or wanted a verdict of guilty.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 686, 75 Pac. 304.

[p] Where a witness for the state in a criminal case is absent when wanted, and is brought in by an officer, it is error for the court, in the presence of the jury, to hold a colloquy with such witness, which tends to discredit defendant and his counsel, and lead the jury to believe that, if they were not guilty of a grave offense in procuring the absence of the witness, they were, in the opinion of the court, capable of committing it, and that such conduct on their part could only be induced by consciousness of defendant's guilt.—People v. Abbott, 34 Pac. 500.

[q] Remark of the trial court in excluding certain evidence held not error.—People v. Smith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 449.

[r] Accused held not prejudiced by an observation of the trial judge that a witness against him had been testifying merely to opinions.—People v. Fernandez (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 899.

EXCLUSION OF IMPROPER OR IMMATERIAL EVIDENCE, § 341.
ORDER OF PROOF AND REOPENING CASE, § 342.
PRELIMINARY PROOF, § 343.
REBUTTAL EVIDENCE, § 344.

§ 334. Right of Accused to Confront Witnesses.

[a] Rule seems to be that any witness may be introduced on the trial by consent of the court, notwithstanding he was not before the grand jury, subject only to the right of the prisoner to a postponement, in case such evidence should operate as a surprise upon him.—People v. Freeland, 6 Cal. 96.

[b] It is right of accused to have his witnesses orally examined in court, and to confront them with those called, to impeach their testimony.—People v. Diaz, 6 Cal. 248.

[c] Penal Code, section 686, declaring that defendant shall have the right to be confronted with the witnesses against him in the presence of the "court," refers to the court in which the action is being tried, so that the reporter's notes of testimony, given on the trial of a former indictment for the same offense, by a witness out of the state, are inadmissible.—People v. Chung Ah Chue, 57 Cal. 567.

[d] Penal Code, section 686, 689, allowing depositions taken on the preliminary examination of an accused to be used in evidence on his trial, do not deprive him of his constitutional right to confront the witnesses against him; he being present at such examination, and having an opportunity to cross-examine.—People v. Oiler, 66 Cal. 101, 4 Pac. 1066.

[e] Legislature has power to restrict accused to having testimony of witness confined in penitentiary procured by deposition.—Willard v. Superior Court, 82 Cal. 461, 462, 22 Pac. 1120.

[f] The testimony of a witness at the preliminary examination, where the witness is out of the state at the time of the trial, cannot be proved by the testimony of the stenographer, who was present at the examination, and heard the testimony, as Penal Code, section 686, gives the accused the right to be confronted with the witnesses against him in the presence of the court, without any other exception than that the deposition of a witness at the preliminary examination may, under certain circumstances, be read. People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880.

[g] Under Penal Code section 686, providing that in a criminal action defendant is entitled "to be confronted with the witnesses against him in the presence of the court," except in specified instances, the transcribed testimony of a witness taken by the shorthand reporter on a previous trial of a criminal action, not within the exceptions of such statute, is not admissible in evidence on the second trial because such witness is absent from the state.—People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

[h] Statute purporting to impair fundamental right of defendant to be confronted with witnesses against him in presence of court is to be liberally construed in his favor, and whenever state in its prosecution for crime would offer against accused testimony of witnesses not given in presence of court, it must point to statute which authorizes such procedure, and bring itself within its provisions.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 652, 39 Pac. 33.

[i] Right of accused to be confronted by witness does not render deposition taken at preliminary examination inadmissible.—People v. Sierp, 116 Cal. 252, 48 Pac. 88.

[j] Accused was not entitled during the taking of testimony and after the jury had been impaneled to interrogate several of the jurors as to whether they had read any reports of the trial in the newspapers.—People v. Fernandez (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 899.

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2269-2278, §§ 1538-1548.

§ 335. Separation and Exclusion of Witnesses.

[a] Trial court may make order excluding from the courtroom all the witnesses but the witness under examination.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[b] Wife and daughters of defendant may be included in an order excluding witnesses. People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[c] Exclusion of witnesses from courtroom is within the discretion of court.—People v. Garnett, 29 Cal. 622; People v. Hong Ah Duck, 61 Cal. 387; People v. Sam Lung, 70 Cal. 515, 11 Pac. 673.

[d] The exclusion of witnesses while the evidence is being taken is largely in the discretion of the trial court.—People v. McCarty, 117 Cal. 65, 48 Pac. 984.

[e] In a criminal trial, it was not an abuse of discretion to allow the sheriff, who was also a witness for the state, to remain in the courtroom during trial.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2278-2287, §§ 1549-1566½.

§ 336. Compelling Calling of Witness.

[a] Where property was stolen while in charge of an employee, and another person was charged with the crime, it was held that it was not necessary for the prosecution at the trial to call such employee as a witness. People v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 60.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2288-2294, §§ 1567-1579.

§ 337. —— After Evidence Closed.

[a] It is not error to deny a defendant's motion, in a prosecution for murder, after the prosecution has rested, to order the prosecution to call and examine as witnesses certain persons said to have been present at the time of the homicide.—People v. Robertson, 67 Cal. 646, 8 Pac. 600.

§ 338. Compelling Witness to Obtain Information.

[a] The court properly refused to direct a witness to ascertain a certain fact during a recess of the court, as a witness cannot be required to obtain information in order to be able to answer a question.—People v. Ching Hing Chang, 74 Cal. 389, 16 Pac. 201.

§ 339. Offer of Proof.

[a] If a witness is called to identify papers in order to lay the foundation for introducing them in evidence, the opposing counsel is entitled to an inspection of the papers before the close of the testimony, in order to enable him to offer testimony in explanation of the papers, or to disprove their authenticity.—People v. Stevens, 52 Cal. 457.

[b] On a trial for murder, a witness was asked, "Did [accused] ever take a meal at your house before?" An objection to the question was sustained. The question was an isolated one, and there was no intimation that the purpose was to show that witness and accused were not intimate acquaintances. Held that, in the absence of such showing, the ruling was not erroneous.—People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

[c] The state has a right to call as a witness a person charged with the same offense as that of defendant, and it is immaterial that he refused to testify on the ground that his evidence might incriminate him.—People v. Plyler, 121 Cal. 160, 53 Pac. 553.

[d] Evidence offered for the purpose of contradicting the prosecutrix on a rape trial was properly rejected, where counsel did not point out to the court wherein such evidence was contradictory.—People v. Totman, 135 Cal. 133, 67 Pac. 51.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2299-2301, §§ 1593-1596.

§ 340. Effect of Admissions.

[a] Where the prosecuting attorney, to avoid delay to obtain the presence of a witness, admits that the witness will testify to certain facts, those facts are as much before the jury as though the witness had appeared and testified to them.—People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 522.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2305, 2306, § 1606.

§ 341. Exclusion of Improper or Immaterial Evidence.

[a] The admissibility of evidence is not question for jury.—People v. Glenn, 10 Cal. 32.

[b] Irrelevant evidence may be excluded by the court, though not objected to by counsel.—People v. Turcott, 65 Cal. 126, 3 Pac. 461.

[c] It is not error for the court on its own motion, and with or without an objection from the prosecution, to exclude portions of depositions, on behalf of the defense, which are hearsay.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[d] It is not error for trial judge to refuse to be sworn on hearing of motion for new trial to show that he had admonished the bailiff not to allow jury to read papers relating to case. Such showing is not material, but the fact, if it existed, was matter within knowledge of court, and might be stated as a fact in a bill of exceptions without proof. People v. Azoff, 105 Cal. 632, 39 Pac. 59.

[e] Where isolated questions are asked by counsel for defendant, which are apparently irrelevant, immaterial and aimless, and no purpose of the evidence is disclosed, it is not error to exclude the questions, although a relevant purpose might have been stated. People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

§ 342. Order of Proof and Reopening Case.

[a] If defendant's counsel, after the prosecution has rested, ask for leave to further cross-examine the prosecutor on new matter, the facts that the people have rested and that defendant may recall the prosecutor as his own witness are not sufficient reasons for the court to deny the request.—People v. Parton, 49 Cal. 632.

[b] The order of testimony is a matter within the discretion and control of the trial court.—People v. Shainwold, 51 Cal. 468.

[c] Reopening a case for the purpose of introducing evidence in support of a plea of once in jeopardy is a matter in discretion of the court.—People v. Ross, 65 Cal. 104, 3 Pac. 491.

[d] It is within the discretion of the court to allow evidence in rebuttal which should have been offered in chief.—People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 573, 24 Pac. 313.

[ef] It is discretionary with trial court to allow defendant in own behalf to testify after evidence is all in and court has commenced charge to jury.—People v. Christensen, 85 Cal. 570, 24 Pac. 888; People v. Mayes, 113 Cal. 618, 45 Pac. 860.

[g] The fact that letters of a defendant, containing admissions, were admitted in evidence before the corpus delicti had been proven, will not authorize the reversal of a judgment of conviction, the order of testimony being largely discretionary with the trial court.—People v. Whiteman, 114 Cal. 338, 46 Pac. 99.

[h] Order in which evidence as to conspiracy shall be received is in discretion of court.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 330, 51 Pac. 538.

[i] It is largely in discretion of court to allow prosecution to introduce some evidence in rebuttal, which should have been introduced in chief; and its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal, where no abuse of discretion is disclosed.—People v. Teixeira, 123 Cal. 297, 55 Pac. 988.

[j] Where the court notified the prosecuting attorney, about to prove confessions of accused, that, if he did not afterward prove the corpus delicti, the confessions would be stricken, it was not an abuse of discretion to admit proof of confessions before that of the corpus.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[l] Permitting the calling of a witness by the state, after the defense has closed its case, to testify to matters not prejudicial to defendant, is harmless error.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470.

[m] Where defendant does not submit case at close of evidence for the prosecution, the court may properly allow the prosecution, on just terms, to supply a fact in its evidence at any time before the final submission of the case.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470; People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

[o] Proof of the corpus delicti does not necessarily involve or require proof that the crime was committed by the defendant. The proper order of evidence is, that there should be, first, independent proof of the body of the offense, but a case should not be reversed, merely because of a departure from such order.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[p] It is not error to allow a witness for the prosecution to testify after defendant has opened his case, when the reasons given by the court for so doing show there has been no abuse of the discretion given by

[a] Where confessions of guilt are offered against the defendant, and objected to by him, on the ground that they were not voluntarily made, the question thus presented is for the court alone, and must be decided before the testimony goes to the jury.—People v. Ah How, 34 Cal. 218.

[b] Evidence of attempted bribery of prosecuting witness by person not connected with defendant is inadmissible.—People v. Choy Ah Sing, 84 Cal. 278, 24 Pac. 379.

[c] An objection that declarations of alleged conspirators were admitted before there was sufficient proof of the conspiracy is of no avail, where the conspiracy is thereafter sufficiently proved.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 323, 51 Pac. 538.

[d] It is proper to allow a witness to be withdrawn in order to lay a foundation for the admissibility of his testimony.—People v. Prather, 120 Cal. 660, 53 Pac. 259.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 6, providing that after proof of a conspiracy the act or declaration of a coconspirator shall be admissible, is not mandatory; and, where it is otherwise difficult to present the evidence, the court may, in its discretion, admit the testimony of the accomplice first.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[f] In a prosecution of a witness to a will for perjury in swearing that he duly witnessed it, there was no error in permitting evidence of a conspiracy between the beneficiary and subscribing witnesses to defraud the estate, after the admission of the declarations of the beneficiary that she had offered to pay another witness the amount she was going to pay defendant, where, taking all the evidence together, it established the conspiracy, since the order of proof rested in the sound discretion of the court.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[g] In a prosecution for selling liquor to an Indian, the admission of evidence of a constable, who stood outside defendant's saloon while the Indian and another were in the saloon buying the liquor, that such constable got a bottle of whisky from the Indian after he came from the saloon, and that the persons present drank whisky from the bottle, before evidence of the Indian that he bought the bottle and contents from defendant was introduced, was not reversible error. § 344. Rebuttal Evidence.

[a] Where the existence of a certain person in regard to whom a defendant has testified is questioned by the prosecution, it may introduce testimony in rebuttal showing that efforts have been made by the officers to learn of the existence or whereabouts of such person, and that they were unsuccessful.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[b] Evidence held inadmissible in rebuttal of contradictory evidence which presented no new matter.—People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 566, 48 Pac. 711.

[c] Where the fact that R. called a third person to the scene of the homicide before its occurrence was material to defendant's case in a prosecution for murder, a witness for the prosecution could testify in rebuttal that the calling was after the homicide, though the calling was not done in defendant's presence.—People v. Emerson, 130 Cal. 562, 62 Pac. 1069.

[d] Where on a prosecution for rape a witness testified that the mother of the outraged child stated in a conversation with her husband on the day of the crime that she had seen the child coming out of the brush, but did not see the accused with her, and that the child was not hurt, it was proper rebuttal to recall the father and mother and permit them to deny the statement, they not having testified to the matter before.—People v. Figueroa, 134 Cal. 159, 66 Pac. 202.

[d] If evidence which is competent only for particular purpose is admitted generally, and the counsel for the defendant fails to ask the court to limit the evidence to the purpose for which it was competent, or to ask a charge to the jury to that effect, the defendant cannot afterward complain that the testimony was inadmissible for some other purpose.—People v. Collins, 48 Cal. 277.

[e] Objection that evidence is immaterial does not raise the point whether it was competent and admissible to impeach the witness, or competent to go to his credibility.—People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

[f] Party objecting to evidence must specify the ground of his objection, and waives all objections not so specified.—People v. Manning, 48 Cal. 335.

[g] Where testimony taken down on defendant's preliminary examination was inadmissible because the absence of the witness was not accounted for in such manner as would render the deposition competent, an objection to the introduction of the "testimony" as incompetent is sufficient, since, the deposition being incompetent, the testimony contained therein is likewise incompetent.—People v. Bojorquez, 55 Cal. 463.

[h] A party objecting to evidence must specify ground of his objection; if he does not there is no error in overruling it, and an exception taken to the ruling is not revisable on appeal.—People v. Chee Kee, 61 Cal. 404; People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006.

[i] If defendant insists that his deposition before the committing magistrate is the best evidence of his statements, he cannot object to it after its admission.—People v. Salorse, 62 Cal. 139.

[j] Where a physician is asked, in a murder trial, whether, from the appearance of a wound, deceased could have shot himself, and an objection is made that the testimony is incompetent, no foundation having been laid, and after evidence by the physician as to his after evidence by the physician as to his experience, the question is again asked, and the same objection is made, the question before the court is whether the witness is competent as an expert, and not whether the opinion, when given is competent evidence. People v. Mahoney, 77 Cal. 529, 20 Pac. 73.

[k] An objection to the admission in evidence of the coat worn by deceased at the time of the homicide, because it was not shown to be in the same condition as when taken from the body of deceased, will not be considered, where such objection was not specifically made, but counsel objected on another ground.—People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 41, 20 Pac. 359.

[m] Where evidence is absolutely incompetent, a general objection to its admission is sufficient.—People v. Gordon, 99 Cal. 227, 33 Pac. 901.

[n] Where objections to evidence go to the weight of the testimony, rather than to its admissibility, the court does not err in admitting it, though it is somewhat remote, and relates to an incident not directly traceable to the accused.—People v. Martin, 102 Cal. 558, 36 Pac. 952.

[o] Premature objection to preliminary question in relation to a receipted bill, amount of which evidence afterward showed was paid to defendant and not accounted for, and was included in amount charged in information to have been embezzled, is properly overruled.—People v. Biddleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[p] Fact that objections to evidence in a criminal case might have been put in better form is not ground for disregarding them. People v. Yee Fook Din, 106 Cal. 163, 39 Pac. 530.

[q] An objection by the defense to the admission of what the deceased did on a certain visit to the defendant will be held to include what he said on that occasion, when it appears that the parties to the prosecution and the court so understood it.—People v. Shattuck, 109 Cal. 673, 42 Pac. 315.

[r] Where the clothing worn by the deceased at the time of the killing was introduced in evidence, a mere general and indefinite objection that the proper predicate had not been laid for its introduction, is insufficient, and does not include the specific objection that the clothes when offered in evidence were not shown to be in the same condition as when taken from the body.—People v. Conklin, 111 Cal. 616, 44 Pac. 314.

[s] An objection to the sufficiency of the identification of the pistol and cartridges is waived, where no specific objection is made upon that ground, but only the general objection that the evidence was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not connected with the defendant.—People v. Louis Foo, 112 Cal. 17, 44 Pac. 453.

[t] Where, to discredit accused's testimony, a witness is asked as to defendant's "reputation" for truth, etc., instead of his "general reputation," a general objection to such question, without calling the attention of the court to the particular vice in the form of the question, is insufficient.—People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80, 45 Pac. 175.

[u] Objection that no proper foundation is laid does not present point that fact sought to be elicited is not subject of expert inquiry. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 210, 48 Pac. 75.

[v] On a trial for murder, objection to a threatening article published by defendant, as "not competent or material," does not raise the question whether the article on its face refers to deceased.—People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495.

[w] Evidence which is introduced without objection may be considered as aiding in establishing any fact which it tends to prove. People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

[x] Where objection to a previous question asked of a witness, as to his understanding of the libelous language used in relation to the persons libeled, had been overruled, and the question was reframed so as to ask as to his understanding of the language used, without reference to particular persons, and was answered without objection, the opposite party cannot afterward object to the answer given. People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[y] Where proper objection is made by defendant to evidence of a confession on the ground that defendant was in custody, and that it is incumbent on the state to show that promises had not previously been made to induce such confession, and the objection is overruled, and exception taken, it is not necessary that same objection should be repeated to evidence of other confessions to entitle defendant to have all such evidence excluded on its subsequently appearing that such inducements were offered.—People v. Castro, 125 Cal. 521, 58 Pac. 133.

[z] In a prosecution of a witness to a will for perjury in swearing at the probate thereof that it was duly witnessed, testimony by a witness of declarations of the beneficiary tending to show a conspiracy to defraud testator's estate by establishing a fraudulent will being properly admitted, it was not error to admit evidence of declarations in the same conversation by her tending to show that defendant was a party to such conspiracy, over an objection to strike out the whole testimony.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[aa] An objection to the reading of the testimony of a police officer given at the preliminary examination, on the trial, to refresh his memory, merely reciting that it is an objection to the testimony of the lower court on the pretense that it is used to refresh the memory of the witness or for any other purpose, without any objection to the evidence as incompetent, secondary, or hearsay, is insufficient.—People v. Joy, 135 Cal. xix, 66 Pac. 964.

[bb] In a prosecution for rape, a witness was asked whether anything was said by prosecutrix as to her relations with defendant, to which she answered in the affirmative, and was then asked whether the prosecutrix stated defendant had had intercourse with her. Objections were interposed, and the court permitted the witness to answer the last question, and defendant excepted. On further cross-examination witness stated that prosecutrix spoke about it about five days later, and that prosecutrix said defendant had had intercourse with her on a certain date. Held, that all the testimony given by the witness was covered by the previous objection and exception of defendant.—People v. Wilmot, 139 Cal. 108, 72 Pac. 838.

[cc] Where a question is put to a witness is not objected to before the answer is given, there is a waiver of any right to complain of the admission of the testimony under the answer.—People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

[dd] An objection to a hypothetical question, asked of a medical expert, held insufficient to raise the question of the witness' qualifications.—People v. Bowers (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 553.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2329-2331, §§ 1628, 1629.

§ 346. Waiver of Objections.

[a] Defendant's counsel offered to question a witness as to her husband having, at her instance, approached the defendant's friends for the purpose of obtaining money from him. The proffer was denied by the court "for the present." No exception was reserved, the proffer was not subsequently renewed, and no effort was made to obtain an ultimate decision on the point. Held, that it must be considered as waived.—People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29.

[b] Where ruling upon an objection to a question is reserved by the court, and the defendant does not afterward ask for or make any effort to obtain a ruling upon the objection, or move to strike out the answer to the question, the ruling upon which has been reserved, the legal presumption is that a ruling has been waived.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 303.

[c] Defendant may waive objection that evidence is incompetent; and failure to object to it on that ground is such waiver. People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

§ 347. Motion to Strike Out.

[a] The practice, whether in civil or criminal cases, of deliberately permitting the evidence to be given without objection in the first instance, and then moving to strike it out on grounds which might readily have been availed of to exclude it when offered, is not to be tolerated.—People v. Long, 43 Cal. 444.

[b] Practice of deliberately permitting evidence to be given without objection in first instance, and then moving to strike it out on grounds which might readily have been availed of to exclude it when offered, is not to be tolerated.—People v. Rolfe, 43 Cal. 444; 61 Cal. 540.

[c] A motion to strike evidence must specify the grounds in like manner as an objection to the question in the first instance. People v. Eckman, 72 Cal. 582, 14 Pac. 359.

[d] Court may temporarily refuse to strike out evidence if counsel promises to subsequently show its relevancy.—People v. McLean, 84 Cal. 482, 24 Pac. 32.

[e] Motion to strike out evidence not objected to at time of its admission is addressed to discretion of court.—People v. Samario, 84 Cal. 485, 24 Pac. 283.

[f] Objection to evidence cannot be taken for first time by motion to strike it out. People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 426, 428, 24 Pac. 1006.

[g] Motion to strike out evidence not previously objected to is addressed to the sound legal discretion of the court, and may be properly denied if made on account of the absence of preliminary proof, or is addressed to evidence of an irrelevant or immaterial fact, but should be granted when the objection is not technical, but substantial, and the justice of the case required the rejection of incompetent hearsay evidence or inherently illegal testimony as to a material fact.—People v. Wallace, 89 Cal. 158, 26 Pac. 650.

[h] The rule that, where no objection is made to an interrogatory, a motion to strike out the answer will not be entertained, does apply where the answer is not responsive to the question put to the witness.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[i] It is error to strike out on motion an answer which is directly responsive to a question not objected to when asked.—People v. Johnson, 106 Cal. 289, 39 Pac. 622.

[j] Failure to move to strike out evidence received subject to motion to strike out if not made relevant is acquiescence that it remain in the case.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 219, 48 Pac. 75.

[k] If an answer is nonresponsive to the question asked, but no motion to strike it out is made, the objection is waived.—People v. Wong Chuey, 117 Cal. 624, 49 Pac. 833.

[l] Where a witness, in response to a question, answered more in detail than was proper, the wrong can be reached only by motion to strike out the objectionable matter. People v. Colvin, 118 Cal. 349, 50 Pac. 539.

[m] It is not error to refuse to strike out testimony of a witness called for the prosecution which had some relevancy to the issues in the case, and was not prejudicial to the defendant, nor to refuse to strike out testimony introduced without objection on cross-examination about matters testified to in chief.—People v. Patterson, 124 Cal. 102, 56 Pac. 882.

[n] When an unexpected answer of a witness, which could not be anticipated by objection to the question, contains inadmissible and prejudicial matter, a motion to strike it out is the proper remedy. When it is apparent from the question that the answer will contain evidence necessarily inadmissible, then a motion to strike out comes too late unless preceded by an objection to the question, but the rule is otherwise when the answer may or may not be admissible.—People v. Williams, 127 Cal. 212, 59 Pac. 581.

[o] Admission of testimony as to statements of a third person to one accused of a crime, though not accompanied with proof of the conduct of accused, was not error, where accused did not move to strike it out.—People v. Machado, 130 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 66.

[p] A motion to strike out the evidence of a witness as to the declarations of a coconspirator which covers competent evidence of such declarations is too broad, and is properly overruled.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[q] Where irrelevant evidence, prejudicial to accused, is admitted on assurance of the prosecutor to connect it with the case, and he fails to do so, it is proper for the court to strike it out, and instruct the jury to disregard it.—People v. Bird, 132 Cal. 261, 64 Pac. 259.

[r] A motion cannot be entertained to strike out evidence which was responsive to a question not objected to.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[s] Evidence deceived without objection will not be struck out on motion.—People v. Ardell, 135 Cal. xix, 66 Pac. 970.

[t] When improper, hearsay and argumentative matter is not asked to be stricken out, objection to it is waived.—People v. Cole, 141 Cal. 192, 74 Pac. 547.

[u] When there is no motion to strike out an irrelevant answer to a relevant question, it remains part of testimony.—People v. Teshara, 141 Cal. 637, 75 Pac. 338.

[v] The question asked a witness, who had testified to a conversation with a codefendant on the night of the homicide, while defendant was close by, what the conversation was, is not improper, so that, if improper evidence was contained in the answer, a motion to strike it out was necessary to authorize complaint thereof.—People v. Lawrence, 143 Cal. 148, 76 Pac. 893.

[w] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, the father of a prosecutrix testified that when he reached defendant's place of business, shortly after the time when it was claimed that the alleged assault was committed there, defendant stated to him that prosecutrix had been there, but that he had done nothing to her. Held, that a motion to strike out the entire testimony of the father was properly denied, even if the declaration of the defendant that he had done nothing to prosecutrix was inadmissible, since that portion of the statement in which defendant admitted that prosecutrix was at his place of business was competent.—People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

[x] Where the nature of a question put to a witness clearly indicates that the evidence sought to be elicited would be inadmissible, a motion to strike out the answer is not available unless a preliminary objection to the question has been made.—People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

[y] Refusal to strike certain testimony impeaching defendant held not error.—People v. Jailles, 146 Cal. 301, 79 Pac. 965.

[z] Where a part of an answer is not responsive to the question, and a part is directly so, but the whole is relevant, material and competent, it is proper to refuse to strike it out as being irrelevant, immaterial, and incompetent, and as being irresponsive to the question.—People v. Munroe, 33 Pac. 776.

[aa] Refusal to strike a witness' affirmative answer to a question as to whether defendant was able to distinguish between right and wrong held not error, the witness having previously given similar testimony without objection.—People v. Easton (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 840.

[b] Allowing one of jury panel to act as trier cannot afterward be objected to unless exception is reserved.—People v. Voll, 43 Cal. 166.

[c] An exception to testimony cannot be taken for the first time by a motion to strike out.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006.

[d] Under terms of section 1170 of Penal Code, no exception is allowed to a defendant from a ruling of the trial court denying a challenge for actual bias.—People v. Wong Ark. 96, Cal. 125, 30 Pac. 1115.

See 12 Cyc. 568; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2353-2358, §§ 1655-1657.

§ 350. Limiting Time of Argument.

[a] A limitation of the arguments of counsel on a trial for felony to one and three-fourths hours on each side is not unreasonable.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[b] A trial for robbery lasted five days, three of which were occupied in hearing twenty-four witnesses. The evidence was circumstantial and conflicting. Held, that an order of the court limiting the time of argument of counsel to one hour exceeded the discretionary power of the court.—People v. Green, 99 Cal. 564, 34 Pac. 231.

[c] An order limiting the time of argument in a criminal case held an abuse of discretion requiring a reversal.—People v. Fernandez (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 1112.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2354-2358, § 1657.

§ 351. Time for Argument.

[a] Counsel for prisoner is not entitled to make his argument on the case made out by the prosecution when prosecution closes. The argument is to be made when the evidence is concluded.—People v. Williams, 43 Cal. 344.

§ 352. Opening Statement.

[a] It is not an abuse of discretion for the court to restrict counsel for defendant in the opening statement to stating what he expects to prove, without any argument on such facts. People v. Bezy, 67 Cal. 223, 7 Pac. 643.

[b] It is within discretion of court to limit opening statement to one counsel.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 348, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] Counsel for defendant in opening statement must confine himself to facts, effect thereof and his conclusions therefrom without argument on evidence introduced by prosecution.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 349, 19 Pac. 161.

[d] Counsel has no right, in opening statement, to refer to other cases or read law in illustration of his argument.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 348, 19 Pac. 161.

[e] Refusal to allow counsel to argue law to jury in opening address is proper.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161; People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 216, 19 Pac. 490.

[f] Where the evidence is sufficient to justify the verdict, it is immaterial whether or not the district attorney fully stated it in his opening to the jury.—People v. Ellsworth, 92 Cal. 594, 28 Pac. 604.

[g] A statement by the district attorney, in his opening statement to the jury, that he would prove certain acts of defendant as evidence of guilt, will not be prejudicial error unless made in bad faith, although he is not permitted to introduce such evidence. People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 1, 53 Pac. 359.

[h] The remark was not prejudicial as it tended to raise in the minds of the jury the belief that proof thereof was essential to the prosecution's case.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470.

[i] A prosecuting attorney, in his opening to the jury, stated that he would prove a certain act contributory to the death of deceased to have been done by defendant. There was no evidence introduced which tended to prove the act. Held, that such statement, if made in good faith, and with intent to attempt its proof, was not an abuse of his position.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470.

[j] It is not error for the district attorney to state in his opening argument, that, in a former prosecution against defendant for an assault to commit murder, he consented to allow him to plead guilty of assault with a deadly weapon, "owing to the fact that it is sometimes very difficult, in these little troubles between that class of people, to have them come up and prosecute," where the fact of such plea of guilty and consent was proved.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[k] The district attorney is not guilty of misconduct for merely including in his opening statement facts expected to be proved, some of which remained unproved, where there is nothing to indicate an intentional disregard of truth, or clear intent to influence the jury by false statements.—People v. Gleason, 127 Cal. 323, 59 Pac. 592.

[l] The prosecution in a criminal case may open the case without any preliminary or opening statement, notwithstanding Penal Code, section 1093, subdivision 2.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 570, 571; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2358-2361, §§ 1659, 1660.

§ 353. Presentation of Evidence.

[a] District attorneys should avoid interposing technical objections to admission of testimony offered by defendant, or to questions put by him in cross-examining a witness called for the people.—People v. Benson, 52 Cal. 380.

[b] Court should not allow prosecuting attorney to comment in such manner, in urging admissibility of evidence, as to prejudice jury.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 329, 20 Pac. 719.

[c] Repetition of improper questions, persistently assuming existence of damaging facts, is ground for reversal.—People v. Mullings, 83 Cal. 145, 146, 17 Am. St. Rep. 223, 23 Pac. 229.

[d] Where the prosecuting attorney, in a criminal action, asks a defendant questions which he knows to be wholly inadmissible and wrong, without the expectation of answers, the clear purpose of which is to prejudice the jury against the defendant in a vital matter by the mere asking of the question, a judgment against the defendant will be reversed, although objections to the questions were sustained, unless it appears that the questions could not have influenced the verdict.—People v. Wells, 100 Cal. 459, 34 Pac. 1078.

[e] Attorney for prosecution should not ask inadmissible questions for the purpose of exciting suspicions in the mind of jurors prejudicial to defendant, nor repeat question to which objection has been sustained, nor, during trial, make remarks unjustly injurious to the defendant.—People v. Ryan, 108 Cal. 581, 41 Pac. 451.

[f] Where a witness as to good moral character of accused was asked on cross-examination a question hinting at a former crime of accused, which, with the answer, was stricken out, and it was not shown to have been asked in bad faith and without grounds for expecting an affirmative answer, it is not ground for a new trial.—People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096.

[g] An offer of the district attorney to prove that defendant had an abandoned and malignant heart, as tending to show that the homicide was the offspring of malice, and not of a sudden heat of passion, though excluded by the court, is not an act of bad faith, since there is good authority sustaining the admissibility of such evidence.—People v. McKay, 122 Cal. 628, 55 Pac. 594.

[h] The repeated asking by the district attorney, on a prosecution for statutory rape, notwithstanding the sustaining of objections thereto, of questions the object of which clearly appears to have been to leave the impression on the minds of the jurors that defendant had committed other crimes, and had repeatedly changed his name, is prejudicial error.—People v. Derbert, 138 Cal. 467, 71 Pac. 564.

[i] It was not misconduct for the prosecuting attorney to ask a witness for the defense if he had not made a certain statement contrary to his evidence which included bad language, nor to ask further questions, to which objections were sustained, in the absence of any showing of bad faith in the cross-examination; nor was it misconduct in argument to denounce the motives of the defendant and to endeavor to show that he was a cold-blooded murderer, where there was evidence tending to show him guilty.—People v. Gage, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[j] On a prosecution for murder, it was proper to sustain an objection to a question put to defendant, at the outset of his examination, as to whether he gave correct testimony at the preliminary examination.—People v. Leung Ock, 141 Cal. 323, 74 Pac. 986.

[k] On cross-examination of a witness for defendant in a criminal case, he said, referring to another witness, "D knows he is perjuring himself against an innocent man." "Just like you are doing now!" said the district attorney. "Just like I am doing now," answered the witness. The witness had testified to many facts going to show the innocence of the defendant, and the witness D was an eyewitness who had identified the defendant as one of the persons who committed the crime. Held, that the district attorney was not guilty of misconduct.—People v. Metzger, 143 Cal. 447, 77 Pac. 155.

[l] The conduct of the prosecuting attorney in offering evidence on a trial for homicide held not reversible error.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

§ 354. Argument—In General.

[a] That district attorney in argument accuses prisoner personally of a cowardly attack is not ground of reversal.—People v. Wheeler, 65 Cal. 77, 2 Pac. 892.

[b] Counsel has no right to comment on action of court in refusing continuance.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 348, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] A prosecuting attorney may challenge counsel for defendant to explain the evidence in the case "upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of guilt," and then comment on the failure to do so.—People v. Hall, 94 Cal. 595, 30 Pac. 7.

[d] Accused is not entitled to benefit of any doubt created by argument of counsel. People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 29, 50 Pac. 15.

[e] Use of well-known historical incidents to illustrate argument is not misconduct.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 15, 16, 52 Pac. 112.

[f] A district attorney's argument, stating that the county had been free from crime for fifteen years subsequent to 1877, and that it was unnecessary for him to say why crime exists in the community, or why arguments are being bandied back and forth in the state as to whether the jury system is a failure, is not so prejudicially erroneous as to justify a reversal of a conviction, where the evidence was sufficient to sustain the verdict, and the jury were instructed to disregard all matters outside the record.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[g] The range of discussion, illustration, and argumentation of counsel before a jury is wide. Matters of common knowledge and historical facts may be referred to, and interwoven in the argument, and allusion may be made to the prevalence of crime, and to the duty of the jury.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[h] Courts are not favorably disposed toward granting new trials for misconduct of the district attorney in his argument of the case. In regulating the arguments of counsel, much is left to the discretion of the trial court, and the judgment will not be reversed by this court for mere fervor of the district attorney in his argument.—People v. Owens, 132 Cal. 469, 64 Pac. 770.

[i] It was not misconduct for the prosecuting attorney to allude, in his closing argument upon the question of insanity, to the "present sanity" of the defendant, which was not disputed.—People v. Daily, 135 Cal. 104, 67 Pac. 16.

[j] Argument of prosecuting attorney on a criminal trial held not erroneous.—People v. Salas (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 295.

§ 355. —— Exhibits and Illustrations.

[a] Use of physical object such as empty box to illustrate an argument is not error where district attorney and court inform jury that it is not an exhibit and is not to be considered as evidence.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 221, 48 Pac. 75.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 572; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2368, 2369, § 1666.

§ 356. —— Reading Statement of Accused not in Evidence.

[a] When accused has made statements to the district attorney and sheriff, which the court reporter has taken down in shorthand, and written out, and has testified that his longhand transcript truly sets out accused's statements, it is not error for the district attorney in his argument to read from said transcript, though not introduced in evidence. People v. Greening, 102 Cal. 384, 36 Pac. 665.

§ 357. —— Reading Transcript of Evidence.

[a] In a prosecution for grand larceny, it was not error, during the district attorney's address to the jury, to refuse defendant's request that the stenographer's notes of a witness' evidence be read to the jury, on account of an alleged misstatement of it by the district attorney.—People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17, 30 Pac. 837.

§ 358. —— Reading Parts of Instructions.

[a] There is no objection to the district attorney's reading to the jury parts of the court's instructions, if the court permits.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

[b] The use of the instructions in the argument to the jury is within the discretion of the court.—People v. Denomme, 56 Pac. 98.

§ 359. —— Reading Extracts from Medical Works.

[a] In the absence of evidence that a medical book is of recognized authority in the profession, the district attorney, in his closing argument to the jury, should not be allowed to read from such book extracts "commenting upon and treating of the subject of insanity."—People v. Wheeler, 60 Cal. 581, 44 Am. Rep. 70.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 573; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 2369, § 1667.

§ 360. —— Matters not Within Issues.

[a] On prosecution for homicide, unwarranted reference in argument of counsel to criminal history of county held not cause for reversal.—People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[b] It is not error to prevent counsel for defendant from commenting on the actions of juries in similar local cases, and to state that the case before the court should be tried on the evidence given in court, and the law applicable thereto.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 361. —— Matters not Sustained by Evidence.

[a] On a prosecution for homicide, argument of district attorney held not in violation of rule rendering it prejudicial error for the district attorney to state facts pertinent to the issue and not in evidence, or assume arguendo such facts to be in the case when they are not.—People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[b] Where prosecuting attorney in his argument to jury asserts a fact not in evidence, which is prejudicial to defendant, it is error. People v. Mitchell, 62 Cal. 411.

[c] The prosecuting attorney cannot be charged with misconduct in urging a theory as to defendant's acts or motives, though such theory has slight, if any, evidence to support it—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[d] Where an officer's testimony that he had searched prisoner's trunk because he was suspected of a theft other than that charged had been ruled out, it was reversible error for the prosecuting attorney, in his closing address, to state that he personally knew that the prisoner's trunk was not searched for the theft stated by the officer, but for a third theft, though such misconduct was rebuked by the court.—People v. Valliere, 127 Cal. 65, 59 Pac. 295.

[e] The evidence showed that a blood-stained club was found in decedent's saloon immediately after the assault, and that the wound on his head was made by such an instrument. Decedent declared in his dying statement that he was hit with a club, and that it was used by defendant. Held that, though the club was not formally offered as an exhibit, such fact did not preclude reference to it by the prosecuting attorney in his argument.—People v. Amava, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[f] On a prosecution for murder, the fact that the theory of the prosecuting attorney, as set forth in his argument, that the motive was robbery, was not supported by the evidence, was not sufficient to make such argument misconduct.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Arguments at trials based on facts not in evidence: 48 Am. Rep. 337, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 574; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2370-2372, § 1669.

§ 362. —— Comments on Evidence or Credibility of Witnesses.

[a] It is within the right of district attorney to urge in argument to jury that the evidence is conclusive of defendant's guilt. People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[b] Where evidence is properly admitted in a criminal trial, though it tends to prove the defendant guilty of another crime than the one charged against him, counsel for the prosecution has the right to discuss such evidence to the jury, and to argue any theory which may legitimately be deduced therefrom. People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[c] Remarks made by district attorney in his argument to the jury, upon a trial for murder, which are in accordance with the evidence and pertinent to the issues, are not harmful.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[d] Where defendant in a murder trial voluntarily took the stand in his own behalf, and went fully into the details of the difficulty between himself and the deceased, claiming that he acted in self-defense, it was not improper for the prosecuting attorney to comment on his failure to deny certain statements which other witnesses claimed he had made.—People v. Wong Bin, 139 Cal. 60, 72 Pac. 505.

[e] In a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, the prosecuting witness testified that during the night on which the alleged assault occurred he and defendant were at a dance, and that during the evening he asked a woman who was sitting beside defendant to dance with him, whereupon defendant objected, and told him she was not going to dance with him. Defendant denied any such occurrence, and that he spoke to the witness, or that the witness spoke to him. The district attorney in his closing argument characterized as incredible the story that the prosecuting witness assaulted the defendant with a knife, as testified to by defendant, and said that the fact of the business was that there was a little feeling caused by the occurrence at the hall, and these men met on the public road, and one word brought on another, until defendant pulled his revolver and fired at the prosecuting witness, and that that was how it happened. Held insufficient to show misconduct on the part of the district attorney; the remarks being legitimate argument under the evidence.—People v. Romero, 148 Cal. 458, 77 Pac. 163.

[f] Where, in a prosecution for robbery, two ex-convicts testified as witnesses for defendant, it was not error for the district attorney to emphasize such convictions in his argument to the jury.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

[g] In a prosecution for burglary, defendant held not entitled to object to argument of the prosecuting attorney as to the credit to be accorded to defendant and state's witnesses, subjecting defendant to severe criticism.—People v. Davis (Cal. App.), 81 Pac. 716; Id. 147 Cal. 346.

[h] Prosecuting officer is entitled to assert to the jury his conviction that the evidence convinces him of accused's guilt.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 573-578; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2372-2377, §§ 1670, 1671.

§ 363. —— Comments on Failure of Accused to Testify.

[a] Fact that accused declines to testify on his own behalf cannot be commented on by public prosecutor in his remarks to jury.—People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 522; People v. Brown, 53 Cal. 66.

[b] It is ground for reversal to permit the prosecuting attorney, over defendant's objection, to comment on defendant's refusal to be questioned, on cross-examination, as to matters not proper on a cross-examination. People v. McGungill, 41 Cal. 429.

[c] The failure of the defendant to testify on any given point should not be commented on in argument by the district attorney.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[d] Penal Code, section 1323, declares that the neglect or refusal of a defendant to be a witness cannot be used against him on the trial. On a prosecution under Statutes of 1891, page 285, chapter 206, making it a felony for one to permit his wife to remain in a house of prostitution, etc., defendant did not testify as to whether he and his alleged wife had been actually married, but he testified that on going ashore from a man-of-war at one time he saw her in a saloon; that she said she had done wrong, and asked him to take her back again; that he saw her again some weeks later; that they met another man, and the three spent several hours drinking; that he promised to take her back; and engaged a room and stayed all night with her, and the next thing he knew she was in a house of prostitution. Held, that as the jury might have inferred that defendant was taking her back to live with him as a paramour, or that he was condoning her offense as a husband, it was not error for the district attorney to comment on the failure of defendant to deny that the woman in question was his wife.—People v. Mead, 145 Cal. 500, 78 Pac. 1047.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 1323, a reference by the assistant counsel for the state to defendant's failure to take the stand and testify held prejudicial error, though promptly rebuked by the court.—People v. Morris (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 463.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 54 C. C. A. 373, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 576; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2377-2383, § 1672.

§ 364. —— Comments on Absence of Witnesses or Failure to Call Them.

[a] Comment by counsel for the state on the absence of a witness for defendant is no ground for reversing a conviction.—People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[b] In a prosecution for manslaughter, the evidence of the state consisted principally of the evidence of two men who testified that defendant killed deceased; but at the inquest and preliminary examination they testified that they did not know who did the killing. Defendant's brother was present when deceased was killed, and defendant testified that his brother told him that deceased killed himself, but his brother did not testify. Held, that comments by the district attorney in his argument to the jury to the effect that the defense had subpœnaed the brother, and then did not put him on the stand, and that the presumption of law was that the brother's testimony would have been adverse to defendant, were unauthorized, and the overruling of defendant's objections thereto material error.—People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

§ 365. —— Comments on Character or Conduct of Accused.

[a] Where counsel for the people, by remarks during a trial for murder, and by statements to the jury not founded on the evidence, imputes to defendants a character for violence, even though the court instruct the jury to disregard any statement of fact not warranted by the evidence, a verdict of guilty will be reversed.—People v. Ah Len, 92 Cal. 282, 27 Am. St. Rep. 103, 28 Pac. 286.

[b] Where defendant claimed that on the day of the homicide he started to town to put deceased under bond to keep the peace, a remark, in interrogatory form, made by the prosecuting attorney on cross-examination, that defendant knew what it was to be put under bonds himself, was harmless error.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[c] In a prosecution for robbery alleged to have been committed by defendant after leaving the saloon of H., it is not error for the district attorney in his closing remarks to refer to H. as "Old Harris, the whisky seller," and to state that "this man [referring to defendant] ought to be in the penitentiary."—People v. McMahon, 124 Cal. 435, 57 Pac. 224.

[d] In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, the district attorney asked defendant, when a witness in his own behalf, whether he had been "offering for sale across the track a roll of silk." The question was ruled out, but, in arguing to the jury, the prosecuting attorney stated that defendant was a "fence keeper," and, after alluding to the "hole in the wall," told the jury, in effect, that defendant was keeping "just that sort of a joint," thereby implying that he was keeping a place for the habitual reception of stolen goods. Held, that the discretion of the court in granting defendant a new trial for misconduct of the district attorney would not be interfered with.—People v. Sing Lee, 145 Cal. 190, 78 Pac. 636.

[e] In a prosecution for burglary in a house of prostitution, defendant held not entitled to object to a statement by prosecuting attorney in argument that defendant had been living off prosecutrix's earnings.—People v. Davis (Cal. App.), 147 Cal. 346, 81 Pac. 716, 718.

[f] In a prosecution for burglary, a reference by the prosecuting attorney to the fact that defendant's relatives were present with him during the trial held not error.—People v. Davis (Cal. App.), 147 Cal. 346, 81 Pac. 716, 718.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 579; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2387-2390, § 1674.

§ 366. —— Reading Law to Jury.

[a] The reading of law to the jury is within the discretion of the court.—People v. Anderson, 44 Cal. 65.

[b] It is not error to permit the district attorney to read, during his argument before jury, portions of an opinion of the supreme court, but such a practice is not commendable. People v. Forsythe, 65 Cal. 101.

[c] Allowing counsel to read law to jury is discretionary.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 238, 10 Pac. 502.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 583, 584; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2402-2407, §§ 1682-1687.

§ 367. —— Abusive Language.

[a] On prosecution for homicide, statement of district attorney in argument that defendant ought to have been lynched held not cause for reversal.—People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[b] Counsel for the prosecution ought not to indulge in extravagant vituperative epithets against the defendant.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[c] In a prosecution for murder, the remark of the district attorney in argument, that, "when this foul fiend from hell sent T. [decedent] to his Maker, the motive came from a heart as black as the crime committed," is not improper; one accused of murder not being entitled as of right to be referred to as if he were innocent in an argument by the officer who was endeavoring to demonstrate his guilt.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 581; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2397, 2398, § 1679.

§ 368. Remarks and Conduct of Counsel Pending Trial.

[a] Mode pursued by district attorney in calling court's attention to attempt to bribe jury criticized.—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 214, 13 Pac. 500.

[b] Prosecution cannot go upon one theory to make out its case, and upon a wholly inconsistent theory to meet a special defense.—People v. Willard, 92 Cal. 482, 28 Pac. 585.

[c] Where it appears that the court carefully guarded the rights of the defendant, and that the district attorney did not act through passion or prejudice, or with intent to injure the defendant, it was not prejudicial misconduct for him to request the bystanders to retire while the prosecutrix was testifying, nor to ask objectionable questions of witnesses, which could not have injured the defendant. People v. Vann, 129 Cal. 118, 61 Pac. 776.

[d] Where, on a prosecution for rape, after defendant's attorney had commenced to state what he assumed he could show as to the previous unchastity of the prosecutrix, the district attorney remarked, "You know very well you couldn't show any such thing," the remark was not ground for reversal, since it could not have influenced the jury.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[e] Where, in a criminal prosecution, after an objection to a question asked by the district attorney had been sustained, the district attorney, in an undertone addressed to defendant's attorney, which was heard by one juryman, stated, "That's getting on dangerous grounds, isn't it?" while erroneous, was not prejudicial the court having immediately directed the jury to pay no attention to the statements made by the attorneys.—People v. Brittain, 142 Cal. 8, 75 Pac. 314.

§ 369. Retaliatory Remarks or Conduct.

[a] Statements of objectionable facts in argument in reply to similar argument of opposing counsel will not reverse where court instructed jury not to consider them.—People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 629, 10 Pac. 169.

[b] On a criminal trial, the counsel for defendant refused to reply to the opening argument of the prosecuting attorney after the evidence was in, and the latter claimed the right to argue the case further to the jury, which claim the court denied. The prosecuting attorney then remarked, in the presence of the jury, that "the defense was endeavoring to prevent the prosecution from arguing the truth of the charge." Held, that this was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Ross, 85 Cal. 383, 24 Pac. 789.

[c] Misconduct by counsel is not justified by like misconduct by opposing counsel.—People v. Kramer, 117 Cal. 647, 49 Pac. 842.

[d] Where defendant's counsel, in argument, assumed that accused had children, a statement by the district attorney, in reply, to the effect that he denied that there was any proof that any children of defendant existed, was not objectionable.—People v. Philbon, 138 Cal. 530, 71 Pac. 650.

[e] A juror on his voir dire was asked by the defense if he had any special prejudice against offenses "committed during Sunday broils." The district attorney, objecting, remarked that no one "broiled" but defendant. The juror was accepted without challenge. Held no prejudice.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 582; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2399-2402, § 1681.

§ 370. Error Cured by Instructions or Rebuke of Court.

[a] Where the attorney for the state makes statements to the jury not warranted by the evidence, and the court tells the jury that they should not be regarded by them in considering the case, the judgment will not be reversed therefor.—People v. Kamaunu, 110 Cal. 609, 42 Pac. 1090.

[b] A conviction will not be set aside because a prosecuting attorney, in his argument, urged the jury to disbelieve defendant's witnesses, who were Chinamen, where he also told them they were the sole judges of the credibility of all witnesses, and the court gave a proper and full instruction on the point.—People v. Foo, 112 Cal. 17, 44 Pac. 453.

[c] Improper questions which are ruled out on objection or stricken when answered are not ground for reversal.—People v. Sears, 119 Cal. 271, 51 Pac. 325.

[d] Remarks made by the district attorney outside of the issues, which were objected to by the defendant, and which the jury were especially instructed by the court to disregard, and which did not reach a course of proceeding militating against justice and the fair and orderly conduct of the cause, are not ground of error.—People v. Putnam, 129 Cal. 258, 61 Pac. 961.

[e] Where, on trial of a prosecution for rape, the deputy district attorney remarked during the state's argument that a physician who knew about the marks on defendant's face was subpoenaed by the defense, but not called as a witness, and that the constable who made the arrest was not called, the statements were not ground for reversal, where the court properly ordered the remarks stricken, and instructed the jury to disregard them.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[f] Where, on a prosecution for manslaughter, counsel for the people in the course of his argument referred to an objection made by the defense to certain testimony reflecting on the character of the accused, and said, "Happy, oh happy, would we have been, had the defense thrown the bars down and allowed us to prove the character of this defendant," and the court, without waiting for an objection from the defense, ordered no comment on such matter, rebuked counsel, and instructed the jury not to consider the defendant's character, such conduct on the part of counsel was no basis for a reversal.—People v. Smith, 134 Cal. 453, 66 Pac. 669.

[g] An improper statement to the jury by counsel for the people in a prosecution for embezzlement, that the attorney believes the defendant to be a thief and an embezzler, and a scoundrel, etc., does not authorize the reversal of a judgment of conviction, when the jury is instructed to disregard such statement.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[h] The repeated asking by the district attorney, on a prosecution for a statutory rape, notwithstanding the sustaining of objections thereto of questions the object of which clearly appears to have been to leave the impression on the minds of the jurors that defendant had committed other crimes and had repeatedly changed his name, was not cured by the action of the court in excluding the answers and directing the jury to disregard counsel's remarks. People v. Derbert, 138 Cal. 467, 71 Pac. 564.

[i] Where the court instructed the jury to disregard remarks of the district attorney, complained of, immediately on objection being made, and checked the attorney from making further remarks, error therein was cured.—People v. Edwards, 139 Cal. 527, 73 Pac. 416.

[j] In a prosecution for petit larceny by one who was charged with having before been convicted of burglary, while the district attorney was arguing the question of the admissibility of the record of dismissal of the information for petit larceny by a justice, which had been pleaded as a bar to the prosecution, he said: "The question turns essentially on whether or not the offense is a misdemeanor, or whether it is a felony. Our contention is that by reason of a former conviction, and the statute making (your honor is familiar with it) a second conviction of petit larceny—" Here the defendant's attorney objected, and the judge admonished the jury fully to pay no attention to what the district attorney had said. Held, that as it did not appear that the district attorney was acting in bad faith when he made the remark, and as the court promptly admonished the jury that it was not evidence, the remark was not cause for reversal.—People v. Smith, 143 Cal. 597, 77 Pac. 449.

[k] Improper remarks of the district attorney in the argument of the case will not require a reversal, where no objection was taken and the court interposed to stop them and the attorney desisted.—People v. Lyle, 4 Pac. 977.

[l] Where the prosecuting attorney proposes to read to the jury in his argument a paper not in evidence, and stated that it purported to be the record of defendant as furnished by a chief of police, his course, while reprehensible, does not prejudice defendant when it is promptly rebuked by the court, who charges the jury that statements of counsel not in proof are not evidence, and to be disregarded.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

[m] Error arising from argument of prosecuting attorney on a criminal trial held cured by the court's statement to the jury.—People v. Salas (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 295.

In prosecutions for homicide. See Homicide, VII, B.

§ 371. Power or Province of Jury.

[a] "Power" of jury is the same as "province" of jury.—People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 573.

§ 372. Constitution and Statutes Construed.

[a] Provision of constitution forbidding instructions with respect to matters of fact is violated whenever a judge so instructs as to force the jury to a particular conclusion upon the whole or any part of the case, or to take away their exclusive right to weigh the evidence and determine the facts. The meaning of the provision is that the judge shall decide upon the law and the jury upon the facts, and that the former shall not invade the province nor usurp the powers of the latter.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 166.

[b] Though it is conceded to be a proper rule of construction that the words of our constitution are to be construed in the same sense that had been previously fastened upon similar language by the decisions of other states, yet there are no authoritative decisions of other states which have fastened upon the language of our constitution the construction that judges may, in their charges to juries, criticise the weight and credibility of evidence.—People v. Vereneseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497, 58 Pac. 156, 62 Pac. 111.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, which provides that the jury are on all proper occasions to be instructed that the testimony of an accomplice ought to be viewed with distrust and the evidence of the oral admission of a party with caution, is repugnant to the constitutional injunction against judges charging as to matters of fact.—People v. Wardrip, 141 Cal. 229, 74 Pac. 744.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 587; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 2426, § 1696.

§ 373. Questions for Court or Jury—In General.

[a] Jury in a criminal case are the exclusive judges of the facts.—People v. English, 30 Cal. 214.

[b] The court cannot submit to a jury the determination of a mere matter of law.—People v. Ivey, 49 Cal. 56.

[c] If evidence tends to charge witness as an accomplice, jury must determine whether he is such.—People v. Curlee, 53 Cal. 607.

[d] Situation of parties, surrounding circumstances and incentives to crime are questions for jury.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 579, 10 Pac. 207.

[e] Ownership of money embezzled is question of fact.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 236, 10 Pac. 502.

[f] While jury has naked power to decide all questions arising on the general issue of not guilty, it only has the right to find facts, and apply to them the law as given by the court.—People v. Lem You, 97 Cal. 224, 32 Pac. 11.

[g] The question whether a witness is an accomplice is for the jury.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[h] An instruction that although it was in the court's province, in the first instance, to determine the admissibility of the decedent's dying declaration, the jury was not bound by the fact of admission to conclude that it was made in view of impending death, etc., but that it was for them to determine whether it was so made, and whether it had been correctly reported, is not erroneous.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[i] The question whether a witness is an accomplice is for the jury.—People v. Bunkers (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 364.

§ 374. —— Preliminary or Introductory Questions.

[a] Where dying declarations in writing, signed by deceased, have been first introduced, or their absence accounted for, the admissibility of evidence of oral declarations of similar import is a question for the court.—People v. Glenn, 10 Cal. 32.

[b] Court should not submit evidence to jury to be considered by them if they are of the opinion that it is applicable to the issue, but to be disregarded by them if they are of a contrary opinion.—People v. Ivey, 49 Cal. 56.

§ 375. —— Intent.

[a] Intent is question for jury.—People v. Mize, 80 Cal. 45, 22 Pac. 80; People v. Swalm, 80 Cal. 49, 22 Pac. 67.

[b] Intent is question for jury.—People v. Wilson, 119 Cal. 385, 51 Pac. 639.

§ 376. —— Place of Commission of Crime.

[a] Whether offense is committed in or out of county is question for jury.—People v. More, 68 Cal. 504, 9 Pac. 461, 463.

§ 377. —— Jeopardy.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1151, it is the duty of a court before whom a plea of former jeopardy is entered to submit that issue to the jury, though the plea was incorporated in, and was the basis of, a motion to set aside the indictment for want of jurisdiction.—People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 468, 24 Pac. 298.

[b] Jeopardy is question of fact.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 28, 50 Pac. 15.

§ 378. —— Alibi.

[a] Defense of alibi is question for jury.—People v. Sears, 119 Cal. 270, 51 Pac. 325.

§ 379. —— Insanity.

[a] Section 1368, Penal Code, requiring court to submit question of insanity to jury when in doubt as to sanity of accused, construed.—People v. Lee Fook, 85 Cal. 301, 24 Pac. 654.

[b] Where a defendant charged with murder relies upon insanity as a defense, the atrocity of the murder and circumstances of inhumanity and barbarity may be evidence of insanity, but may also owe their existence to the promptings of a brutal and malignant spirit; and where a jealous rage appears to have been the motive of the crime, and, upon the general question of insanity, the evidence of experts is conflicting, the jury are sole arbiters of the question.—People v. Larrabee, 115 Cal. 158, 46 Pac. 922.

[c] Insanity is question of fact which must be proven.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 220, 221, 16 Am. St. Rep. 72-n., 51 Pac. 329.

§ 380. —— Scientific Questions.

[a] Matters of science are matters of fact to be proven and court should not instruct in regard to them.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 220, 221, 16 Am. St. Rep. 72-n., 51 Pac. 329.

§ 381. —— Identity of Accused.

[a] Identity of accused with person committing crime is question for the jury.—People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679.

§ 382. —— Weight and Effect of Evidence.

[a] It is for the jury, in a criminal case, to determine whether evidence introduced upon a given point amounts to proof of the fact sought to be proved.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[b] Circumstantial evidence is peculiarly within the province of the jury because it is always solemnly to be weighed and acted on by their understandings and consciences.—People v. Barry, 31 Cal. 357.

[c] The weight of evidence is for the jury.—(Cal. 1868) People v. Dick, 34 Cal. 663.

[d] If declarations are offered in evidence as against a person in whose presence they were made, and there is evidence tending to show that such person heard and understood them, it is for the jury to decide whether he understood them.—People v. Chin Mook Sow, 51 Cal. 597.

[e] Jury may consider that innocent men have been convicted and danger of convicting an innocent man, in weighing evidence to determine whether there is reasonable doubt as to guilt.—People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 237, 238, 26 Pac. 88.

[f] Weight or credibility of corroborating evidence is for jury.—People v. Barker, 114 Cal. 617, 46 Pac. 601.

[g] Province of jury in weighing evidence and determining degree of credibility of witnesses is exclusive.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 200, 48 Pac. 75.

[h] Deduction to be drawn from circumstances is for jury, but when they are consistent with defendant's innocence, question is for court.—People v. Eagan, 116 Cal. 291, 48 Pac. 120.

[i] The value of a letter as evidence is to be determined by the jury, to whom the facts concerning it may be shown, but the application of the facts to the letter is to be made by the jury; and where there is no technical language requiring interpretation, it is proper for the court to refuse to permit a witness to tell the meaning of the letter.—People v. Yokum, 118 Cal. 437, 50 Pac. 686.

[j] A request for an instruction as to the weight and effect of evidence was properly refused. Judgment (1898) 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[k] One H. was castrated early Monday morning in Santa Cruz. Defendant, a veterinary surgeon, hired by P. to commit the crime, traveled on the preceding Saturday from San Jose to Santa Cruz with P., P.'s wife, and others, for the purpose of executing it on the next morning. On Monday defendant exhibited H.'s members to several persons in San Jose, telling them that he did the castration, but in the trial he testified that in making said statements he lied. Defendant and various credible witnesses testified that defendant returned to San Jose on Sunday evening, which, if true, precluded his presence at the commission of the crime, and defendant further testified that P. gave him H.'s members in San Jose on Monday. Held, that as to whether or not defendant was present when the crime was committed was a question for the jury.—People v. Schoedde, 126 Cal. 373, 58 Pac. 859.

[l] Notwithstanding the expert evidence and the opinion evidence of the friends and acquaintances of the defendant may all have pointed toward the defendant's insanity, still it was the right and duty of the jury to measure and weigh such evidence in connection with the conduct and acts of the defendant as disclosed by all the circumstances in evidence, and to determine whether or not the insanity of the defendant was proved by a preponderance of evidence.—People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

§ 383. —— Corroboration of Accomplice.

[a] Where, independent of the evidence of an accomplice, there is evidence tending to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense, the question of its sufficiency is for the jury.—People v. Kunz, 73 Cal. 313, 14 Pac. 836.

§ 384. —— Credibility of Witnesses.

[a] Jury are the exclusive judges of the credibility of an accomplice, as well as of other witnesses who testified in the cause.—People v. Gibson, 53 Cal. 601.

[b] It is province of jury to determine what evidence is entitled to credence.—People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 629, 10 Pac. 169.

[c] Jury may disregard testimony of impeached witness.—People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 69, 11 Pac. 493.

[d] Jury are judges of credibility of witnesses.—People v. Samario, 84 Cal. 485, 24 Pac. 283.

[e] Jury are sole judges of credibility of witnesses.—People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 576, 24 Pac. 313.

[f] Jury are not bound to take testimony of any witness as true though uncontradicted.—People v. Murray, 86 Cal. 34, 24 Pac. 802.

[g] Where value and weight of evidence depend upon the credibility of the witnesses, it is a matter peculiarly for the jury to determine.—People v. Cesena, 90 Cal. 381, 27 Pac. 300.

[h] Where there is some evidence to sustain a verdict of conviction on every essential point, it is peculiarly within the province of the jury to determine the credibility of the prosecuting witness, and, unless the appellate court can plainly see that the verdict could only have been rendered through passion or prejudice, it will not disturb the verdict, although it is plausibly urged that the story told by the prosecuting witness is grossly improbable, and that the witness made contradictory statements, both in and out of court, and was contradicted by other witnesses.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[i] The strength and credibility of the declarations of the accused as corroborating evidence of his guilt are for the jury.—People v. Whelan, 117 Cal. 559, 49 Pac. 583.

[j] The question of what degree of credibility shall be given to a witness, or whether his testimony is to be entirely rejected, is for the jury, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1847, making the jury the sole judges of the credibility of a witness.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

§ 385. Credibility of Accomplices.

[a] Jury are exclusive judges of the credibility of accomplice, though corroborated.—People v. Gibson, 53 Cal. 601, 607.

§ 386. Credibility of Accused.

[a] Whether account accused gives of possession of stolen goods is true or reasonable is question for jury.—People v. Luchetti, 119 Cal. 505, 51 Pac. 707.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2444, 2445, § 1722.

§ 387. —— Inferences from Flight of Accused.

[a] Question whether the flight of defendant was to avoid arrest for some breach of the peace, or on account of offense charged, is for the jury; and they are not bound to attribute the consciousness of guilt indicated by flight to one disposing cause rather than the other.—People v. Armstrong, 114 Cal. 570, 46 Pac. 611.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2441, 2442, § 1718.

§ 388. —— Degree of Crime.

[a] Question of degree is one of fact, to be determined by jury from evidence; and drunkenness, as evidence of a want of premeditation, is not within the rule which excludes it as an excuse.—People v. Belencia, 21 Cal. 544.

[b] Degree of crime is question for jury.—People v. Russel, 81 Cal. 618, 23 Pac. 418.

[c] It is exclusively the province of the jury to determine the degree of crime when there is any evidence supporting the determination.—People v. Mahatch (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 779.

[d] It is exclusively the province of the jury to determine the degree of crime when there is any evidence supporting the determination.—People v. Mahatch (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 779.

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2466-2468, § 1736.

§ 389. —— Extent of Punishment.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 190, which provides that one found guilty of murder in the first degree shall suffer death or imprisonment for life, "at the discretion of the jury," the court has no power to review the action of the jury in fixing the penalty.—People v. Leary, 105 Cal. 486, 39 Pac. 24.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 593; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2445-2447, § 1723.

§ 390. Direction of Verdict.

[a] Instruction not including every possible hypothesis of guilt cannot properly direct an acquittal.—People v. Stackem, 40 Cal. 601.

[b] Penal Code, section 1118, provides that, if the court deems the evidence insufficient to warrant a conviction, it may "advise" the jury to acquit, but that the jury are not bound by the advice. Held, that the court cannot "instruct" the jury that there is no evidence in support of an indictment.—People v. Daniels, 105 Cal. 262, 38 Pac. 720.

[c] Where the prosecution has adduced some evidence, and after an adverse ruling upon further evidence, the prosecution rested, the court, if it deems the evidence adduced insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty, has the right to advise the jury to render a verdict of not guilty, but it is error summarily to direct the jury to acquit the defendant.—People v. Roberts, 114 Cal. 67, 45 Pac. 1016.

[d] Where the first information in a prosecution for robbery was invalid for the reason that it contained no allegation of the ownership of the property taken, which defect was patent and undisputed, it was not an invasion of the province of the jury, in a trial on a new information, to instruct them to find for the people on the issues of jeopardy and former acquittal.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15.

[e] Where there is no evidence to support plea of former jeopardy, it is not error to direct a finding for the prosecution on that issue. People v. Cummings, 123 Cal. 269, 55 Pac. 898.

[f] No exception lies to the refusal of a trial judge to advise the jury to acquit defendant under Penal Code, section 1118, which provides that the court may, if it deems the evidence insufficient to support a conviction, advise the jury to acquit defendant, but that the jury shall not be bound thereby.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470.

[g] It is error for the court in a criminal case to direct the jury to acquit; Penal Code, section 1118, merely authorizing the court to advise the jury to acquit, and providing that the jury is not bound by the advice.—People v. Stoll, 143 Cal. 689, 77 Pac. 818.

[h] The opening statement is not evidence, within Penal Code, section 1118, providing that, "at any time after the evidence on either side is closed," the court may advise the jury to acquit.—People v. Stoll, 143 Cal. 689, 77 Pac. 818.

[i] Although Penal Code, section 1118, only authorizes the court to advise the jury to acquit, and provides that they shall not be bound by his advice, yet, where there is no competent evidence of the corpus delicti, so that it becomes the duty of the court to advise an acquittal, the fact that counsel, moving orally at the close of the people's case, uses the word "instruct," instead of "advise," does not justify a denial of the motion.—People v. Ward, 145 Cal. 736, 79 Pac. 448.

[j] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, an instruction held not erroneous on the ground that it commanded the jury to find defendant guilty.—People v. Griffith, 146 Cal. 339, 80 Pac. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 594-596; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2449-2454, §§ 1727-1729.

§ 391. Instructions Invading Province of Jury.

[a] On a prosecution for murder, the defense did not claim that defendant was insane at the trial, and objected to a statement by the prosecution that the jury must find that defendant "is insane," in order to acquit. The court instructed that the jury should consider all defendant's acts "at the time of, before, and subsequent to the alleged commission of the offense," but should consider him as sane at the time of the trial. Held, that such instruction was not error, as taking from the jury the power to consider the question of his insanity at the time of the trial as bearing on his sanity at the time the offense was committed.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[b] Instruction "You may believe as men that certain facts exist, but as jurors you can act only upon evidence adduced" is erroneous. People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 30, 50 Pac. 15.

[c] Instructions invading the province of the jury in cautioning him against testimony of oral admissions and statements should be rejected. Any instruction given on that subject should be confined as nearly as possible to the language of subdivision 4 of section 2061 of the Code of Civil Procedure.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[d] An instruction that an admission or confession made by the prosecutrix that she had been guilty of sexual intercourse was not such a complaint as should be considered to corroborate her testimony in any particular was properly refused, where the evidence showed that the prosecutrix, on being asked, told her condition, since it was for the jury to determine whether such statements were a complaint, admission, or confession.—People v. Totman, 135 Cal. 133, 67 Pac. 51.

§ 392. —— Intent.

[a] On a trial for assault with intent to commit rape, a charge to the jury that, "if you believe the prosecutrix, it is your duty to render a verdict accordingly," was reversible error, as it took from the jury the question of defendant's intent.—People v. Johnson, 106 Cal. 289, 39 Pac. 622.

§ 393. —— Assuming Facts and Charging on Matters of Fact.

[a] Where, on trial of an indictment for murder, the only witness who saw the transaction testified that he and deceased met a number of their countrymen, Chinese, some of whom took them to a certain place and tied him, and then one struck deceased on the head with a sword, another pierced him in the back, when he fell, and witness then escaped, and has never seen deceased since, an instruction that, if the evidence of the witness were true, defendants were guilty of murder in the first degree, was erroneous, as it assumed the homicide, which was not proven by the witness.—People v. Ah Fung, 16 Cal. 137.

[b] Where, on trial for assault with intent to murder by shooting with a pistol, the defense being insanity, the defendant, as part of the proofs, "admitted the shooting as charged, and that it was done under circumstances that would have constituted murder if the defense set up is not good," and the court instructed the jury, that if the defendant was not insane at the time of the shooting, they ought to find him guilty as charged in the indictment. Held, that the charge was right; that, taking the whole admission together, the court had a right to assume the facts as therein admitted to be true.—People v. Hobson, 17 Cal. 424.

[c] Courts, in their charges, should not directly or indirectly assume the guilt of the accused, nor use equivocal phrases which may leave such an impression.—People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[d] Where the court charged the jury that if they believed certain dying declarations of the deceased which had been admitted in evidence were true, they should find the defendant guilty, the instruction was erroneous, being within the provision of the constitution which prohibits judges from charging on matters of fact.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 166.

[e] It is error for the court, in a criminal case, to assume in its instructions to the jury that the defendant has confessed the crime when he has not.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[f] It is better for the court in charging jury in a criminal case to avoid assuming any material fact as proved, however clear to mind of court such fact may seem to be established. People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 213.

[g] Expression of opinion as to evidence addressed to counsel, in determining motion, is not charge on matter of fact.—Reed v. Clark, 17 Cal. 200; People v. McLean, 84 Cal. 482, 24 Pac. 32.

[h] Under a statute providing that a jury, in ascertaining guilt or innocence of a prisoner, where they find him guilty of the crime of murder, should also determine whether he should suffer the extreme penalty of law, or imprisonment in the penitentiary, a charge assuming that the deceased was, in point of fact, not armed, and that the prisoner knew this to be a fact, where no evidence upon either of these points was offered by either party at the trial, was error justifying reversal.—People v. Atherton, 51 Cal. 495.

[i] In trial of criminal cause, if there be a substantial conflict in the evidence as to a material fact, and if in its charge to the jury court assumes the fact as proved, it is error.—People v. Buster, 53 Cal. 612.

[j] Court instructed jury that if they found from testimony that defendant, soon after time deceased was killed, if killed at all, concealed himself, or fled from the neighborhood where deceased was slain, then that circumstance might be considered by them with the other testimony in the case bearing upon the question of defendant's guilt. Held, that this instruction did not assume that the deceased had been killed, but left that fact as the substantial fact in the case for the jury to find.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

[k] It is error for court to assume existence of fact which is not in evidence or which is to be determined by the jury on evidence, however slight, or on a conflict of evidence. The jury are the exclusive judges of the credibility of witnesses, the weight of testimony, and of the facts established and the presumptions of fact deducible from them.—People v. Messersmith, 61 Cal. 246.

[l] Instruction, if otherwise unobjectionable, is not erroneous if the fact which is assumed in it is one not controverted by the evidence.—People v. Messersmith, 61 Cal. 246.

[m] Instruction assuming fact is not error where fact is admitted or there is no evidence in conflict with it.—People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 68, 11 Pac. 493.

[n] In order to hold an instruction erroneous on the ground that it is a charge upon the weight of evidence, an invasion of the prerogative of the jury, and violative of the constitutional provision inhibiting charges with respect to matters of fact, it is necessary to show that there was a conflict of evidence upon the question on which the jury were instructed; and, in a prosecution for murder, the court, in charging the jury, may assume the fact of the killing by the defendant, if such fact as testified to is not contradicted.—People v. Lee Sare Bo, 72 Cal. 623, 14 Pac. 310.

[o] The mere statement by the court in its instructions that there is a conflict in the evidence in certain respects is not an expression of opinion upon the weight of the evidence, or a charge with respect to matters of fact.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511, 15 Pac. 102.

[p] Assumption of facts not justified by the evidence is error.—People v. Lee Chuck, 74 Cal. 36, 15 Pac. 322.

[q] Instruction characterizing defendant's case as defense "attempted to be shown" is proper when evidence conflicts.—People v. Swarbrick, 77 Cal. 125, 19 Pac. 374.

[r] Comment on weight of evidence or credibility of witnesses or probability of their statements is charge with respect to matter of fact. People v. Fong Ching, 78 Cal. 173, 20 Pac. 396.

[s] Instruction assuming guilt is erroneous.—People v. Bishop, 81 Cal. 117, 22 Pac. 477.

[t] Instructions should not directly or indirectly assume or hypothetically suggest guilt of accused.—People v. Lanagan, 81 Cal. 144, 22 Pac. 482.

[u] In charging upon alibi the court spoke of the "place of the alleged murder," and immediately afterward of the "time and place of the murder." Held, the jury could not have considered the last phrase as an assumption that the crime had been proved.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 329, 24 Pac. 1021.

[v] Charge on matters of fact cannot be sustained on ground that verdict was right.—People v. Chew Sing Wing, 88 Cal. 271, 272, 25 Pac. 1099.

[w] Defendant asked the court to instruct the jury that if, prior to the alleged seduction, the prosecutrix committed lewd acts, she was not at the time of the alleged seduction a female of previous chaste character, even though she did not actually have illicit intercourse. Held, that this was properly refused, as being a charge on the facts, contrary to Constitution, article 6, section 19.—People v. Samonset, 97 Cal. 448, 32 Pac. 520.

[x] On the trial for assault with intent to commit robbery, a charge that if "you have no doubt he aided and participated in the assault, and have a reasonable doubt as to the intent of the assault, you must give him the benefit of that doubt, and in that case you must find him guilty of simple assault," did not assume any fact.—People v. Mallon, 103 Cal. 513, 37 Pac. 512.

[y] Where defendant relies upon defense of alibi, instruction to effect that witness willfully false in one part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others, accompanied by a statement to effect that testimony of defendant as to his being with a particular person the whole of the day on which offense was alleged to have been committed was shown to be incorrect, and leaving it to jury to say whether the testimony was willfully false, or whether defendant was honestly mistaken, invades province of the jury, to prejudice of defendant's constitutional right, by charging the jury with reference to matters of fact.—People v. Lang, 104 Cal. 363, 37 Pac. 1031.

[z] The value of stolen goods alleged to have been knowingly received by the defendant is a question of fact for the jury, and is a material element of fact in the case, as bearing upon the presence of guilty knowledge in the mind of the defendant when purchasing the stolen articles; and, where various estimates of value were given by the witnesses, for the court to assume in its instruction any specific statement of value higher than the lowest estimate given by any witness is to charge the jury in respect to a matter of fact, and is violative of the constitution of the state.—People v. Hertz, 105 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 32.

[aa] Though a judge may not instruct on a matter of fact, he may declare to a jury that certain persons were not accomplices, where there is no evidence that they were.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

[bb] Correct statement by judge to jury of theory of prosecution, and of defenses is not statement of facts.—People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 45 Pac. 844.

[cc] Judge may not instruct upon matters of fact.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 200, 48 Pac. 75.

[dd] Instruction herein held to be charge on question of fact.—People v. Ellenwood, 119 Cal. 170, 171, 51 Pac. 553.

[ee] An instruction that if defendants were not present at the time it "was alleged or proven that the crime was committed, ... and did not aid or abet in its commission," they should be found not guilty, is erroneous, as assuming a crime proven.—People v. Roberts, 122 Cal. 377, 55 Pac. 137.

[ff] Instructions are not chargeable with an improper assumption of facts, where it appears that, so far as assuming facts, they presented merely an abstract consideration of the crime and its elements, and were not directed to the particular circumstances of the case at bar, and that the court, when dealing with the evidence in the case, was careful to leave all questions of fact for the determination of the jury.—People v. Kehoe, 123 Cal. 224, 69 Am. St. Rep. 52, 55 Pac. 911.

[gg] In a prosecution for burglary, the court charged that the fact that a person is found in possession of property recently stolen, "if such be the fact, and established by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt," is not sufficient to warrant conviction, but where the evidence establishes the fact, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the person who had recent possession of stolen property gives a false account of how he came by possession, it is a circumstance to be considered, and that the jury should not understand him as expressing any opinion on the facts or the weight of the evidence. Held not objectionable as a charge as to matters of fact.—People v. Neber, 125 Cal. 560, 58 Pac. 133.

[hh] An instruction which declares that there has been no evidence introduced in the case on trial which tends in the slightest degree to show any justification of the crime charged is improper, as charging upon matters of fact.—People v. Schoedde, 126 Cal. 373, 58 Pac. 859; People v. Plyer, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[ii] An instruction that evidence had been introduced "tending to show" a certain fact, and presenting the effect if the jury should find such fact, was not objectionable as a charge on the facts.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[jj] Where, on a trial for murder, defendant requests an instruction which assumes that the main case of the prosecution rests on circumstantial evidence, when in fact the main proof is direct testimony of eyewitnesses, the instruction should be refused.—People v. Lem Deo, 132 Cal. 199, 64 Pac. 265.

[kk] An instruction on a trial for murder assuming that deceased went on plaintiff's land unarmed, where there is no evidence in the record disclosing that fact, and there is affirmative evidence that the deceased at the time he was killed had possession of a gun, which he was about to use, is reversible error. People v. Matthai, 135 Cal. 442, 67 Pac. 694.

[ll] Any assumption of a fact in dispute which must be found by the jury is an infringement of their province, and constitutes error, for which a conviction should be reversed.—People v. Matthai, 135 Cal. 442, 67 Pac. 694.

[mm] Where defendant had lived for years on the land before deceased appeared thereon, and was in possession of the same on the day of the homicide, the assumption in the instruction that deceased was in peaceable possession of the property, and unarmed, and murdered by a defendant, a hostile claimant of the land, was reversible error.—People v. Matthai, 135 Cal. 442, 67 Pac. 694.

[nn] There being evidence of defendant's good character, he is entitled to an instruction that such evidence is relevant to the question of guilty or not guilty, and is to be considered in connection with the other facts, this not being a violation of the provision of the constitution forbidding the charging of juries with respect to matters of fact.—People v. Hoagland, 137 Cal. 218, 69 Pac. 1063.

[oo] Instruction directed by section 2061, Code of Civil Procedure, "jury will receive with caution all evidence of oral admissions of defendant against himself," is charge on matter of fact.—People v. Wardrip, 141 Cal. 231-233, 74 Pac. 744.

[pp] In a prosecution for rape, an instruction that "the fact that the prosecutrix made prompt and early complaint of the wrong .... committed upon her person .... is independent and original evidence, ... and may be .... considered .... in corroboration of her other testimony," etc., is not objectionable as telling the jury that prosecutrix did in fact make prompt and early complaint.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 686, 75 Pac. 304.

[qq] The statement, in an instruction in a murder case, that it is no defense to a party associated with others in and engaged in a robbery "that he did not propose or intend to take life in its perpetration," or that he "regretted" that any person was thus slain by his associates, is a declaration of an abstract principle of law, not subject to the objection that it assumes the existence of a state of facts of which there is no evidence. People v. Lawrence, 143 Cal. 148, 76 Pac. 893.

[rr] A requested instruction that verbal admissions ought to be received with great caution, and that such evidence is subject to much imperfection, the party himself not having clearly expressed his own meaning, or the witness having misunderstood him, is properly refused, because violative of Constitution, article 6, section 19, prohibiting judges from charging juries with respect to matters of fact.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[ss] Instructions as to the object of evidence offered to show the bad reputation of deceased for peace and quiet are properly refused where they assume that defendant believed that it was necessary to kill in self-defense. People v. Thomson, 145 Cal. 717, 79 Pac. 435.

[tt] An instruction that an intention is manifested by the circumstances connected with the offense, and the sound mind and discretion of the accused, does not assume any fact.—People v. Crowl, 34 Pac. 860.

§ 394. —— Weight and Effect of Evidence.

[a] The court should not, in its instructions in a criminal case, pass upon the credibility and weight of circumstances in evidence.—People v. Barry, 31 Cal. 357.

[b] The court has no right to tell the jury that a circumstance is a "strong" circumstance. Whether strong or slight is a question for the jury.—People v. Ah Sing, 59 Cal. 400.

[c] Charge examined and held not to be on weight of evidence.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 182, 183, 10 Pac. 375.

[d] Charge examined and held not to be upon weight of evidence.—People v. Lee Gam, 69 Cal. 554, 11 Pac. 183.

[e] Instruction amounting to an argument in favor of prosecution on weight of evidence is erroneous.—People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 237, 26 Pac. 88.

[f] The charge should be entirely free from intimating any opinion as to the weight of evidence.—People v. Cowgill, 93 Cal. 596, 29 Pac. 228.

[g] Where husband of defendant is allowed to testify as to her declarations, and to a conversation between them, to show that she was insane, the court may properly charge the jury that such declarations were only admissions to show the mental condition of the defendant, and that her declarations could not be regarded as proof of the facts stated or of her belief in them.—People v. Worthington, 105 Cal. 166, 38 Pac. 689.

[h] An instruction that evidence had been introduced tending to show that defendant had fled and resisted arrest, and that the flight and resistance to arrest of a suspect is a circumstance to be weighed, as tending in some degree to prove consciousness of guilt, was not objectionable, as being to the effect that the defendant actually had fled; as the language used was abstract, and left the jury to weigh the evidence.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[i] An instruction as to the relative value of direct and circumstantial evidence, stating that circumstantial evidence had this great advantage; that various circumstances from various sources are not likely to be fabricated, and that this species of evidence is not entitled to an inferior degree of credit, is improper, as the credit to be given to the evidence is to be determined by the jury.—People v. Verenesenecckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497, 58 Pac. 156.

[j] The law declares nothing as to the relative probative force of direct and circumstantial evidence; and it is wholly matter for the jury to determine according to their convictions, from the evidence. An instruction to the jury that circumstantial evidence is not entitled to a less degree of credit than direct evidence, and that circumstances are not likely to be fabricated, is an instruction as to matter of fact within the prohibition of the constitution. (McFarland, J., Garoutte, J., and Van Dyke, J., dissenting.) People v. Verenesenecckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497, 58 Pac. 156, 62 Pac. 111.

[k] In a criminal case, refusal to charge that the jury have a right to consider that innocent men have been convicted, and to consider the danger of convicting an innocent man in weighing the evidence whether there is reasonable doubt as to his guilt, is proper.—People v. Machado, 130 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 66.

[l] Under Constitution, article 6, section 19, declaring that judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, an instruction in a criminal prosecution that, though error has sometimes been committed by a reliance on circumstantial evidence, yet this species of evidence is not only proper and necessary, but is sometimes even more satisfactory than the testimony of a single eyewitness, as eyewitnesses may speak falsely, was erroneous, and prejudicial to the defendant.—People v. O'Brien, 130 Cal. 1, 62 Pac. 297.

[m] An instruction as to the weight of certain evidence was properly refused, as the matter was a question for the jury.—People v. Grimes, 132 Cal. 30, 64 Pac. 101.

[n] The court cannot properly give an instruction as to the weight and conclusiveness of a dying declaration in a murder prosecution.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[o] An instruction, in a prosecution for attempting to obtain money under false pretenses, that there is nothing in the nature of circumstantial evidence that renders it any less reliable than the other class of evidence, and that a man may as well swear falsely to an absolute knowledge of the facts, as to a number of facts, from which, if true, the facts on which guilt or innocence depends must inevitably follow, is not erroneous as invading the province of the jury.—People v. Howard, 135 Cal. 266, 67 Pac. 148.

[p] Under Constitution, article 6, section 19, declaring that judges shall not charge juries with regard to matters of fact, it is proper, in a murder prosecution, to refuse to instruct that, if the evidence fails to show any motive, it is a circumstance in favor of innocence.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[q] Notwithstanding the constitutional mandate that courts shall not charge as to matters of fact, an instruction correctly stating a rule of law applicable to the effect of evidence, such as the probative effect of the possession of goods recently stolen, is not ground for reversal.—People v. Farrington, 140 Cal. 656, 74 Pac. 288.

[r] In a prosecution for stealing a horse, defendant asked an instruction to disregard a robe, neck halter, and strap found in defendant's possession when arrested. Held, that it would have been an invasion of the province of the jury in deciding on the weight of the evidence concerning such articles, which had been admitted as relevant.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 441, 75 Pac. 676.

[s] The language of the court, in passing on the admissibility of evidence showing the flight of two of defendant's alleged co-conspirators in the commission of the crime charged, that "two persons who were claimed to have" run down a certain street, etc., was not a charge on the weight of the evidence.—People v. Donnolly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177.

[t] In a criminal prosecution it was not error for the court to charge that evidence of oral admissions should be viewed with caution.—People v. Tibbs, 143 Cal. 100, 76 Pac. 904.

[u] In a criminal prosecution, the main question being the identity of defendant with the person who committed the offense, held that an instruction that the identity of person is presumed from identity of name invaded the province of the jury.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 596, 597; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2462-2477, §§ 1732-1748.

§ 395. —— Credibility of Witnesses.

[a] In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to the credibility of witnesses held not objectionable as invading the province of the jury.—People v. Waysman, 1 Cal. App. 246, 81 Pac. 1087.

[b] Instruction that, "though an accomplice was impeached, yet, if his testimony was corroborated by the testimony of witnesses unimpeached, they were bound to believe him," was held erroneous, as taking from them their right to judge of the credibility of the evidence.—People v. Eckert, 16 Cal. 110.

[c] The court errs in instructing a jury in a criminal case that they may, in the exercise of their discretion, believe a part and disbelieve a part of the evidence, unless it instructs them further that such discretion must be conscientiously exercised upon consideration of all the facts and circumstances of the case.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[d] Penal Code, section 1111, providing that a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice, unless corroborated by evidence tending to connect defendant with the commission of the offense, does not prevent the application to the testimony of an accomplice of the rule making the jury exclusive judges of the credibility of a witness; and an instruction, reciting such rule in a case where an accomplice is an important witness, is not erroneous.—People v. Gibson, 53 Cal. 601.

[e] A jury cannot lawfully be charged that a witness who has been convicted of burglary, and served out his term, is not entitled to full credit.—People v. McLane, 60 Cal. 412.

[f] Charge may properly call jury's attention to relationship between witness and accused.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 183, 10 Pac. 375.

[g] Instruction tending to discredit defendant's witnesses is ground for reversal.—People v. Christensen, 85 Cal. 573, 574, 24 Pac. 888.

[h] Instruction, "Defendant not proving statements of prosecuting witness to be false, you are bound to presume them to be true," invades province of jury.—People v. Murray, 86 Cal. 33, 24 Pac. 802.

[i] Two instructions quoted herein held to invade province of jury as to credibility of witnesses.—People v. Murray, 86 Cal. 34, 35, 24 Pac. 802.

[j] It is not error to charge that "a case might arise wherein a jury would be justified in finding a verdict for the defendant upon the testimony of one witness against the testimony of any greater number."—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 329, 24 Pac. 1021.

[k] Under Constitution, article 6, section 19, providing that judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, it is error to instruct the jury that the testimony of an accomplice, who was called as a witness by defendant, ought to be viewed with distrust.—People v. O'Brien, 96 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 45.

[l] Instruction upon credibility of witnesses for defendant, to effect that, in judging credibility of such witnesses, the jury are to take into consideration the fact that they were near akin or related to the accused, and that they could not be expected to say anything unfavorable to the defendant, is erroneous.—People v. Hertz, 105 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 32.

[m] It is not proper for court to instruct jury that they should bear in mind the relationship or kinship between certain witnesses in behalf of the defense and the defendant, and that the jury may consider whether their position and interest may not affect their credibility.—People v. Shattuck, 109 Cal. 673, 42 Pac. 315.

[n] A charge that "you should carefully scrutinize all the testimony in this case, and in doing so consider all the circumstances under which each witness has testified, his degree of intelligence, his manner on the witness stand," and other enumerated matters, although improper, as invading the province of the jury, is not reversible error, as it merely tells the jury to do what they would do without being so told.—People v. Newcomer, 118 Cal. 263, 50 Pac. 405.

[o] Instructions as to credibility of witnesses or weight to be given to their testimony should not be given.—People v. Ellenwood, 119 Cal. 171, 51 Pac. 553.

[p] Requested instruction that the jury "are not permitted under the law to discredit or reject the testimony of the defendant, simply on the ground that he is accused and on trial on a criminal charge," is properly refused as being upon matter of fact, and not of law, and as invading the province of the jury, who are the sole judges of the credit to be given to the testimony of any witness.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[q] Where, on trial of a prosecution for rape, the court charged that the degree of credit due a witness should be determined by his conduct and character, his demeanor on the stand, relation to the parties and controversy, his hopes, fears, bias, and partiality, the reasonableness of his statements, and the strength or weakness of his recollection, viewed in the light of the testimony, the facts and circumstances of the case, the charge was not objectionable on the ground that the court invaded the province of the jury by telling them how they should determine the credibility of a witness.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[r] An instruction that, if the jury is convinced that a witness has willfully stated what is untrue with intent to deceive, the jury must treat all his testimony with distrust and suspicion, and reject it unless they are convinced that, notwithstanding his base character, he had in other respects sworn to the truth, was not objectionable as withdrawing the credibility of the witness from the jury.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

§ 396. —— Credibility of Accused.

[a] Upon a criminal trial, defendant testified. The court directed the jury to consider his situation, his relations to the trial, its consequences to him, and the inducements that he labored under, and added, "You should carefully determine the amount of credibility to which his evidence is entitled; if convincing, and carrying with it a belief in its truth, to act upon it; if not, to reject it." Held, that this instruction was unobjectionable.—People v. Morrow, 60 Cal. 142.

[b] It is proper to charge the jury to consider the circumstances under which defendant testifies.—People v. Wheeler, 65 Cal. 77, 2 Pac. 892.

[c] Defendant having testified in his own behalf, the court may tell the jury to consider the circumstances, consequences, inducements, and temptations likely to influence one in his situation.—People v. O'Neill, 67 Cal. 378, 7 Pac. 790.

[d] Instruction on credibility of defendant as witness upheld.—People v. Knapp, 71 Cal. 10, 11, 11 Pac. 793.

[e] An instruction that the jury should gather the intent with which the homicide was committed from all the circumstances surrounding it is not erroneous as precluding the consideration of defendant's testimony on the question of intent, where the jury are also instructed to weigh the testimony of all the witnesses and to judge the testimony of defendant fairly, and apply the same tests to his testimony, so far as applicable, that they would apply to that of other witnesses.—People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 41, 20 Pac. 359.

[f] Court may caution jury as to believing evidence of accused given in own behalf.—People v. Murray, 86 Cal. 35, 24 Pac. 802.

[g] It is not reversible error to charge that "the defendant, in a criminal case, testifying in his own behalf, occupies a relation to the case different from that occupied by any other witness," where the charge defines expressly the relation.—People v. Curry, 103 Cal. 548, 37 Pac. 503.

[h] Neither the constitution nor the existing statute prohibits an instruction as to the credibility of witnesses, and any instruction as to the credibility of the defendant as a witness will not be ground for reversal, if not more objectionable than others which have been sustained on appeal.—People v. Hitchcock, 104 Cal. 482, 38 Pac. 198.

[i] In a criminal case, where defendant is a witness, it is not error to charge as to the circumstances under which he testified, and as to his admission that he had previously been convicted of a felony.—People v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 418, 38 Pac. 91.

[j] Under Constitution, article 6, section 19, prohibiting instructions as to fact, an instruction that, in weighing defendant's testimony, "You are to consider what he has at stake. You are to consider the temptations brought to bear on a man in his situation to tell a falsehood," is erroneous.—People v. Van Ewan, 111 Cal. 144, 43 Pac. 520.

[k] An instruction that defendant has offered himself as a witness in his own behalf, and that the jury are not permitted to disregard or reject his testimony simply on the ground that he is accused and on trial on a criminal charge, is properly refused, as instructing on the credibility of testimony.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

§ 397. —— Opinion as to Facts.

[a] Judge cannot be too cautious in a criminal trial in avoiding all interference with the conclusions of jury upon facts; and it is improper for court to review argumentatively circumstances tending to show the defendant's guilt, so as to reveal the opinion of the court as to matters of fact bearing upon the question of defendant's guilt.—People v. Hertz, 105 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 32.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2456-2462, § 1731.

§ 398. Inferences from Facts.

[a] No legal presumption of guilt arises from the fact of flight of the accused. Accordingly, an instruction that such circumstance was strong presumptive evidence of guilt held to contravene Constitution, article 6, section 18, as being "with respect to matters of fact," and not to be curable by a correct statement of the law in another part of the charge.—People v. Wong Ah Ngow, 54 Cal. 151, 35 Am. Rep. 69.

[b] The rule is established that, where a legal presumption does not exist, it is error to instruct the jury that one fact should be inferred from another. So held as to an instruction that one's failure to pay over public money, if inexcusable, raised a presumption of felonious appropriation which would authorize a verdict of guilty.—People v. Carrillo, 54 Cal. 63.

[c] Upon the trial of an indictment for burglary, the court instructed the jury that the possession of the property by the defendant recently after it had been stolen, unless satisfactorily accounted for by the defendant, raised a presumption of his guilt. Held, that the instruction was in violation of the constitutional provision which prohibits the court from charging the jury with reference to matters of fact.—People v. Mitchell, 55 Cal. 236.

[d] Court cannot charge that any fact is an inference from any other fact.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 100, 16 Pac. 544.

[e] Instruction "When girl is taken to house of prostitution, fair and reasonable inference is that she is taken there for purpose of prostitution," should not be given.—People v. Slater, 119 Cal. 622, 51 Pac. 957.

[f] In a trial for arson, the court charged that if the jury should find that accused was informed by his accomplice of the object in going to the premises, and held the horse while he set fire to the house, they should find him guilty. Held, not to be a charge on the facts, but on the conclusion to be drawn from them.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[g] Where, in a prosecution for rape, the court charged that if the mother of the prosecutrix was the first person she saw, in whom she was expected to place confidence, after the offense was alleged to have been committed, and that she communicated to her at the first opportunity that she had been outraged, they might consider such circumstance as corroborative of the testimony of the prosecutrix, the charge was not erroneous, as infringing the province of the jury.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[h] In homicide, an instruction, in the language of Code of Civil Procedure, section 1960, that an inference must be founded on a fact legally proved, and on such a deduc-tion from that fact as is warranted by a consideration of the usual propensities or passions of men, etc., was not subject to criticism.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 76 Pac. 1017.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2525-2529, §§ 1790-1793.

§ 399. —— Determination Whether There is Evidence.

[a] The right to state evidence conferred on the judge by Constitution, article 6, section 17, includes the right to state that there is no evidence as to a specific fact.—(1865) People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95; (1868) People v. Dick, 34 Cal. 663.

[b] The court may state to the jury that there is or is not evidence of a particular fact, when the record shows such statement to be true, since whether or not there is any evidence at all as to a fact in issue is a question for the court.—People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174; People v. Vasquez, 49 Cal. 560; People v. Perry, 65 Cal. 568, 4 Pac. 572.

[c] The judge, in his charge, told the jury that he denied a motion to dismiss for want of proof, "because there is testimony enough before you to sustain a conviction, provided you believe it; and it is for you to say what you believe about it." Held, not a charge as to the effect of the evidence.—People v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 418, 38 Pac. 91.

[d] Statement, in an instruction in a criminal trial, that evidence has been introduced tending to show certain facts is not in violation of Constitution, article 6, section 19, prohibiting courts from instructing with respect to matters of fact.—People v. Cummings, 113 Cal. 88, 45 Pac. 184.

§ 400. —— Application of Law to Facts.

[a] The constitution prohibiting the judge in his charge to the jury from expressing an opinion on the weight of the evidence does not preclude him, in stating the evidence to the jury, from declaring the law resulting from the facts proven.—People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95.

[b] An instruction to the jury which correctly states the issues under an indictment for forgery, and further states that, if the jury find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant testified under oath, as alleged in the indictment, and in fact did not see or hear the occurrences to which he testified, and was at the time ten miles distant from the place of the homicide, and that his testimony was knowingly and willfully false, that then the defendant was guilty, and that they should so find, is a proper instruction, and does not violate the constitutional requirement that judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state the testimony and declare the law.—People v. Hitchcock, 104 Cal. 482, 38 Pac. 198.

[c] Court has a right to state the evidence for the purpose of pointing its instruction and making its pertinency apparent to the jury, if it assumes no fact as proven, and states nothing by way of argument thereon, nor calculated expressly or by implication to indicate a shifting of the burden of proof to the defendant.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[d] On a prosecution for rape committed on a girl under the age of sixteen, an instruction that neither the question of force, nor of consent, has any application, as the prosecutrix could not consent, and the law resists for her, is not objectionable, as invading the province of the jury.—People v. Totman, 135 Cal. 133, 67 Pac. 51.

§ 401. —— Extent of Punishment.

[a] Discretion is given to the jury in regard to the punishment in case they find a defendant guilty of murder in the first degree; and the court cannot direct or advise them upon the subject further than to inform them of their province; and it is not error to refuse to instruct them as to how they should use the discretion given them.—People v. Kamaunu, 110 Cal. 609, 42 Pac. 1090.

§ 402. —— Instructing Jury as to Their Duty.

[a] Where a murder case has been three times previously tried, and on each trial the jury disagreed, it is not error to charge the jury that they must in no sense consider such fact, but render a verdict according to the evidence in the case, and consider no other matters except the evidence and the instructions of the court.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[b] Instruction is not erroneous which calls jury's attention to importance of having laws properly executed, and of a careful consideration of the evidence and the law, so that they may reach a result which will be "just to both sides, regardless of what may be the consequences."—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[c] Instructions telling the jury of their duty to convict if the evidence satisfies them of defendant's guilt, though not erroneous, are better omitted.—People v. Crowl, 34 Pac. 860.

[d] It is not error to instruct the jury in a criminal case that "it is the duty of every juror to reason with his fellow jurors to the end that he may join in a lawful verdict."—People v. Richards (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 691.

Instructions applicable to prosecution for particular crimes. See Arson, § 33; Assault and Battery, §§ 45, 46; Bribery, § 16; Embezzlement, § 36; Homicide, VII, C; Incest, § 10; Larceny, §§ 39-46; Rape, § 28; Robbery, § 12; Sodomy, § 6.

§ 403. Duty of Court.

[a] Judges ought to confine their instructions to jury to few plain principles of law, when counsel do not ask for charges.—People v. Gibson, 17 Cal. 283.

[b] Court is bound to instruct as to law bearing on each class of facts presented in evidence, leaving jury to determine which was true state of facts.—People v. Buelna, 81 Cal. 138, 22 Pac. 596.

[c] Instruction should not be hostile to defendant.—People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 235, 26 Pac. 88.

[d] It is not incumbent upon court to instruct jury that it is safer to err in acquitting.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 222, 48 Pac. 75.

[e] Instructions should not ignore any findings of fact which jury might reasonably make upon evidence before them.—People v. Newcomer, 118 Cal. 274, 50 Pac. 405.

§ 404. Scope of Instructions in General.

[a] Instruction to jury that they have a right to take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances in making up their verdict is to be understood as limited to the circumstances in evidence.—People v. Kelly, 28 Cal. 423.

[b] Every instruction which correctly declares the law applicable to the case which it supposes, if the case can be rationally inferred from the testimony, should be given.—People v. Taylor, 36 Cal. 255.

§ 405. Issues and Theories of Case.

[a] Instructions should always be given with reference to facts proved before the jury.—People v. Byrnes, 30 Cal. 206; People v. Roberts, 6 Cal. 214; People v. Honshell, 10 Cal. 83.

[b] Introductory statements in charge commended the jurors for their careful and patient attention to the testimony and arguments, which was said to be an assurance that their remaining duties would be discharged with conscientious fidelity, and were to the effect that no man accused of felony could be tried without counsel, or be convicted except by a verdict of twelve disinterested men chosen from the people; and that no man is denied a fair trial, whether native or foreign; and that the court had the fullest confidence that the deliberations of the jury would be conducted with decorum and propriety. Held proper.—People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596.

[c] In giving hypothetical instructions, it is the duty of the court to caution the jury that they are not to assume the existence or nonexistence of any of the facts therein stated.—People v. Chadwick, 143 Cal. 116, 76 Pac. 884.

[d] It is not error for the court to read the information in a criminal case in the opening of its instructions.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 406. Elements of Offense.

[a] When robbery is clearly proved, instruction that offense of larceny is included in charge need not be given.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 91, 50 Pac. 390.

[b] Where the only ground on which the absence of malice could be based was insanity, the expression "reasonable doubt" was improperly included in a requested instruction relating to malice.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[c] It was proper for court to instruct jury as to nature of offense charged in information, and that charge was not an accusation of an extortion committed.—People v. Brennan, 121 Cal. 495, 53 Pac. 1098.

[d] Where, in a prosecution for robbery, the prosecutor's ownership of the property taken was not controverted, an instruction requiring a verdict of guilty if the jury believed from the evidence facts hypothetically stated, which included all the facts constituting the offense except that the property taken from prosecutor was his property, was not error.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 407. Insanity.

[a] On a trial for murder, to justify an instruction that, if accused has shown that he was insane at any time before the killing, the jury will presume that he was insane at the time of killing unless the contrary is shown, there must be some evidence showing accused's general insanity, as contradistinguished from mere temporary aberration, since it is only habitual insanity, when proved once to have existed, that the law presumes to continue until the contrary be shown.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183.

[b] Where defense of insanity is set up instruction, given for purpose of impressing upon jury importance of special care and circumspection in considering evidence tending to establish insanity of defendant at time of commission of offense charged, is proper.—People v. Dennis, 39 Cal. 625.

[c] An instruction to the effect that, if the jury find that the defendant was insane at the time of committing a crime, they should find him not guilty, without regard to the degree of insanity, is properly refused.—People v. Best, 39 Cal. 690.

[d] It is not improper for court, in its charge to the jury in a criminal case where defense of insanity is set up, to caution jury to be careful that no pretended case of insanity should be allowed to shield defendant from the ordinary consequences of his act.—People v. Bumberger, 45 Cal. 650.

[e] Instruction: "Insanity, as used in this sense, means such a diseased and deranged condition of the mental faculties as to render the person incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong in relation to the act with which he is charged" is correct.—People v. Hoin, 62 Cal. 120, 45 Am. Rep. 651.

[f] It is not error to state, in a charge upon the defense of insanity, that "the law rejects the doctrine of what is called 'emotional insanity,' which begins on the eve of the criminal act, and leaves off when it is committed."—People v. Kernaghan, 72 Cal. 609, 14 Pac. 566.

[g] Where a defense of insanity was interposed on a trial for assault with intent to kill, and the court charged that defendant was not responsible unless he was conscious of his act at the time it was committed, it was not error to refuse to charge that, although defendant may have felt an impulse to do the act while conscious, if such consciousness did not exist up to and at the time the act was committed, the jury should acquit.—People v. Clendennin, 91 Cal. 35, 27 Pac. 418.

[h] Instructions as to partial insanity which introduce the word "delusion" as a synonym of "insanity," although the word "delusion" has no proper application to the facts of the case, cannot mislead the jury.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 205.

[i] The court properly refused to charge that though defendant, at the time of the homicide, was able to distinguish right from wrong, yet, if he "did not possess the power to avoid the wrong and do the right, he is irresponsible, and you must acquit."—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[j] It is proper to instruct the jury that while the defense of insanity is to be weighed fully, fairly, and justly, and, when satisfactorily established, must commend itself to the sense of humanity and justice of the jury, they must examine it with care lest a mere counterfeit of this mental infirmity shall furnish immunity to guilt.—People v. Larrabee, 115 Cal. 158, 46 Pac. 922.

[k] It is proper to instruct the jury that they are to consider the defendant sane at the time of trial; and that the burden of proving the defense of insanity at the time of the alleged homicide is upon the defendant.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[l] In a proper case the jury may be instructed that they should thoroughly and carefully weigh the defense of insanity, and examine into it with great care, lest an ingenious counterfeit of the malady furnish protection to guilt; but in giving such instruction, when essential, the court should be careful to follow approved language; but it should be rarely given, and, in most cases, it is better not to give it, though it can do no harm where the defense of insanity is lacking in material substance.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[m] To caution the jury to examine with care the defense of insanity, lest a counterfeit of the infirmity furnish immunity from punishment, is not error.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[n] Instructions requested by the defendant in relation to the plea of insanity are properly refused, where they confuse intoxication and insanity, and where the whole law of insanity, as applicable to the case, was fully and clearly given in the charge of the court.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[o] Instruction cautioning jury in regard to defense of insanity upheld.—People v. Allender, 117 Cal. 83, 48 Pac. 1014.

[p] It was proper to refuse to charge that if the jury believed the testimony of experts that defendant, at the time of the homicide, was affected with mental disease, that impaired his will, and rendered him likely at any time to commit such an act as he did, he must be acquitted, such instruction not constituting a sufficient definition of legal insanity.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[q] Conflicting instructions concerning insanity produced by intoxication, which do not emphasize the distinction between insanity induced by the voluntary act of a sane person in becoming intoxicated, and general insanity resulting from chronic alcoholism, and which leave the subject confused and confusing, are erroneous.—People v. Fellows, 122 Cal. 233, 54 Pac. 830.

[r] An instruction that, where accused pleads insanity, "we hear everything that he says, consider everything that he does, we observe his conduct on the stand, we don't check him in stating his testimony, because one of the purposes is to see whether he is a sane man or not," is not prejudicial as authorizing the jury to infer that the issue was accused's insanity at the time of trial, and not when committing the assault, where the jury had in various forms been told that the question was whether or not accused was insane at the time of committing the crime.—People v. Burgle, 123 Cal. 303, 55 Pac. 998.

[s] An instruction that the fact that defendant attempted to commit suicide is to be taken as evidence of insanity is properly refused, as it makes such fact of itself evidence of insanity, whereas it is only one phase of the evidence, to be considered together with all the other evidence.—People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251.

[t] On the issue of the insanity of one charged with assault with intent to commit murder, testimony was received to show that the prosecuting witness had oppressed accused to such a degree in financial transactions as to drive him to insanity. The jury was instructed that this testimony was admitted solely on the question of insanity, and was irrelevant for any other purposes, and then charged that, where a man pleads insanity, his testimony is heard, his acts are considered, his conduct on the stand observed, and he is not checked in testifying, because one of the purposes is to ascertain whether he is sane or not, but, if the jury should "conclude that he is a sane man, ... those things drop out of the case." Held, that the instruction was not erroneous as directing the jury to disregard accused's testimony entirely if they found him sane, the words "those things" referring solely to the evidence admitted on the issue of insanity.—People v. Burgle, 123 Cal. 303, 55 Pac. 998.

[u] An instruction, where defendant set up a defense of insanity, that "the defense of insanity is one which may be resorted to in cases where the proof of the overt act is so full and complete that any other means of avoiding conviction seems hopeless"; that, therefore, while insanity was a defense to be weighed fully and justly, and, where satisfactorily established, must recommend itself to the favorable consideration of the jury, they should examine it with care, lest an ingenious counterfeit should furnish immunity for guilt—is not erroneous.—People v. Hettick, 126 Cal. 425, 58 Pac. 918.

[v] Instruction designed to caution jury against being imposed upon by "ingenious counterfeit of insanity," though not prejudicial error, should not be given.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 598, 75 Pac. 177.

[w] An instruction as to the care with which defense of insanity should be examined, though held not to be erroneous under former decisions of this court, would be better omitted, in view of the danger that the jury may take it as an intimation by the judge of his opinion of the case on trial. People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

[x] While the burden of proving insanity as a defense in a criminal case rests on the defendant, a preponderance of the evidence is all that is required, and an instruction that the defense must be "clearly established by satisfactory proof" is erroneous.—People v. Wells, 145 Cal. 138, 78 Pac. 470.

[y] An instruction as to the showing necessary to make out the defense of insanity on a criminal prosecution held proper.—People v. Griffith, 146 Cal. 339, 80 Pac. 68.

§ 408. Intoxication.

[a] Charge, in case of assault with intent to kill, that evidence of drunkenness on part of accused, while clearly admissible under the law, should be received with great caution, was not erroneous.—People v. Ferris, 55 Cal. 588.

[b] The intent with which a building is entered being a necessary element to constitute the crime of burglary, it is proper for the jury to take into consideration the fact that the accused was intoxicated at the time, in determining the intent with which he committed the act, and an instruction to the jury to the effect that they could not consider such evidence for any other purpose than that of determining the degree of the crime is prejudicially erroneous, there being no question as to the degree of the crime, the evidence showing without conflict that the building was entered in the night-time.—People v. Phelan, 93 Cal. 111, 28 Pac. 855.

[c] On a trial for murder there was evidence that, shortly before the homicide, accused drank some liquor, and the inference was justified that he had drank a great deal. Several witnesses testified that he was drunk within an hour of the homicide, and it was shown that between that time and the homicide he drank at least twice. Held to be sufficient proof of intoxication to require giving a requested charge thereon, under Penal Code, section 22, providing that, where intent is a necessary element of the crime charged, the jury may consider the fact that accused was intoxicated.—People v. Hill, 123 Cal. 47, 55 Pac. 692.

[d] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, held proper for the court to instruct, on the subject of voluntary intoxication, that the jury might distinguish it from alcoholic insanity.—People v. Griffith, 146 Cal. 339, 80 Pac. 68.

[e] In a prosecution for murder, an instruction on voluntary intoxication as furnishing no excuse for crime should contain the phrase "when sane and responsible."—People v. Trebilcox (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 684.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 618; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2568-2574, §§ 1829-1832.

§ 409. Alibi.

See, also, post, § 409.

[a] Upon a criminal trial it is error to instruct the jury that an unsuccessful attempt to prove an alibi is always a circumstance of great weight against the prisoner.—People v. Malaspina, 57 Cal. 628.

[b] Instruction to a jury to scrutinize testimony offered in support of an alibi with care, and avoid being imposed upon by a fabricated defense, and also stating the effect of proving an alibi, not amounting to an instruction upon the weight of the evidence, are not erroneous.—People v. Lee Gam, 69 Cal. 552, 11 Pac. 183.

[c] An instruction as to evidence to establish an alibi, that persons may, perhaps, fabricate such evidence with greater hopes of success, or less fear of punishment, than most other kinds of evidence, and honest witnesses often mistake dates and periods of time, and identity of people seen, and other things about which they testify, is not erroneous.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 180, 10 Pac. 375.

[d] On a trial for arson, where the judge charged that it was for the jury to decide as to the truth of an alibi interposed as a defense, "giving the defendant the benefit of every reasonable doubt," and has further fully charged on the burden of proof, and the subject of reasonable doubt, a verdict of guilty will not be set aside because he also charged that the proof offered to sustain the alibi should be subjected to a rigid scrutiny.—People v. Levine, 85 Cal. 39, 24 Pac. 631.

[e] Instruction that "when defendant undertakes to establish an alibi, evidence which he offers, taken with other evidence, must account for him during whole period," is not erroneous in ignoring doctrine of reasonable doubt, if other portions of instructions fully cover that doctrine.—People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 45 Pac. 844.

[f] An instruction on the question of alibi that such a defense is as legitimate, if proved, as any other defense, and if, in view of all the evidence, the jury have any reasonable doubt as to whether the defendant was in some other place when the crime was committed, they should give him the benefit of the doubt; in other words, he is not bound to prove an alibi beyond a reasonable doubt, it being sufficient if the evidence raises a reasonable doubt of his presence at the time and place of the commission of the crime charged,—is correct.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[g] In a prosecution for rape, an instruction on the defense of alibi held objectionable as misleading the jury to believe that such defense was one to be proved by a preponderance of the evidence, etc.—People v. Morris (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 463.

[h] In a prosecution for rape, the court's refusal to require that a conviction should be based on the jury's belief that the act occurred at or near a certain hour of the day in question held error.—People v. Morris (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 463.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 619, 620; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2574-2581, §§ 1833-1837.

§ 410. Character.

[a] In homicide, charge on presumption that defendant was of good character held properly refused.—People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[b] Good character of prisoner, when proven, is itself fact in the case; it is a circumstance tending in a greater or less degree to establish his innocence, and it is not to be put aside by the jury, in order to ascertain if the other facts and circumstances considered by themselves do not establish his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288.

[c] An instruction which practically tells the jury, in a criminal case, that evidence of defendant's good character is valuable only in a doubtful case, is erroneous.—People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288; People v. Fenwick, 45 Cal. 287.

[d] It is not sufficient for the court to instruct the jurors that the good character of the defendant is a circumstance for their consideration, for this is only equivalent to the admission of the testimony as to character.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485.

[e] There may be cases where guilt is so clearly proved that no evidence of good reputation can create a doubt, while there may be other cases in which a good reputation will create a reasonable doubt; but the prisoner has a right to have the jury pass on the question.—People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485.

[f] In a prosecution for murder, where there was evidence tending to show the previous good reputation of the defendant as a quiet and peaceable citizen, an instruction to the jury in the following words, given on the request of the prosecution, was erroneous, viz: "No inference can be drawn by a jury of the intention which induced the commission of the offense, from the previous character of the prisoner. His intention can only be determined by his acts. The law will imply a malicious intention."—People v. Casey, 53 Cal. 360.

[g] Where the character of defendant, in a criminal case, has not been attacked, no special instructions as to presumption of good character can be demanded beyond the general instruction of the presumption of innocence in the absence of evidence of guilt.—People v. Johnson, 61 Cal. 142.

[h] One on trial for a crime is entitled to a charge that his good reputation, if proved, is entitled to weight, and "may be sufficient" to raise reasonable doubt of guilt.—People v. Doggett, 62 Cal. 27.

[i] It is not error to instruct jury that if they believe defendant guilty of offense charged they should so find, notwithstanding his good character.—People v. Samsels, 66 Cal. 99, 4 Pac. 1061.

[j] On the trial of an indictment for robbery, it is not error for the court to add to the following instruction, given at the request of the defendant. "Proof of such good character may be sufficient to justify an acquittal, although without it no acquittal would have been had," the clause, "unless, in spite of such good character, the evidence yet convinces you beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt."—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 212, 13 Pac. 500.

[k] An instruction, on a trial for murder, that "the defendant has introduced evidence tending to show his good character as a man of peace and quiet, and for honesty and integrity," and that, "if . . . . the good character of the defendant for these qualities is proven to your satisfaction, then such fact is to be kept in view by you in all your deliberations, and it is to be considered by you in connection with the other facts in the case; and if, after a consideration of all the evidence in the case, including that bearing upon the good character of the defendant, the jury entertain any reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, then it is your duty to acquit him,"—contains all that defendant is entitled to have on the point.—People v. Bowman, 81 Cal. 566, 22 Pac. 917.

[l] When, in an answer to a question asked for the sole purpose of contradicting a previous statement of defendant, he admits that he has been convicted of larceny, it is erroneous to charge the jury as to that admission, and also that "as to how much credit such a man is entitled to is for you to determine."—People v. Murray, 86 Cal. 31, 24 Pac. 802.

[m] It is error for the court, in instructing the jury, to speak of the prosecuting witness as leading a dissolute life, where the evidence establishes that fact without conflict, and the court bases its statement upon admissions made by defendant's counsel in his address to the jury.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[n] Where accused has offered no evidence of character, an instruction that an accused's character cannot be assailed, unless he himself has put it in issue by calling witnesses in its support, is erroneous, as raising the inference that the people, had they been permitted, might have shown that accused's character was bad.—People v. Gleason, 122 Cal. 370, 55 Pac. 123.

[o] An instruction is not erroneous, which, after fully stating the rule as to the weight of evidence of good character, further states: "If, after a consideration of all the evidence in the case, including that bearing upon the good character of the defendant, ... the evidence convinces you, beyond a reasonable doubt, of defendant's guilt, you must so find, notwithstanding his good character."—People v. Mitchell, 129 Cal. 584, 62 Pac. 187.

[p] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, the refusal of an instruction that defendant was presumed to be a man of good character held not erroneous.—People v. Griffith, 146 Cal. 339, 80 Pac. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 20 L. R. A. 609, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 620, 621; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2582-2593, §§ 1838-1845.

§ 411. Effect of Evidence.

[a] Where evidence tending to show defendant guilty of other offenses is admitted, an instruction to the jury that they are not to convict him because the evidence shows him a man of bad character in having committed other offenses, and that they are only to consider the evidence in connection with the offense on trial, is sufficient.—People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679.

[b] The fact that witnesses have testified that, in their opinion, a letter offered in evidence by a defendant is genuine, while there is no direct testimony in rebuttal, does not require the court to instruct the jury that they must consider the letter as genuine, where the evidence of the prosecution tends to establish other facts which disprove its genuineness.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[c] It is proper to refuse a request to instruct as to the "weight" of certain evidence.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[d] A court is not, on any state of the facts, authorized to instruct the jury that a defendant's innocence conclusively appears. People v. Streuber, 121 Cal. 431, 53 Pac. 918.

[e] An instruction that the jury is not at liberty to disregard the testimony of a witness corroborated by other competent evidence is erroneous, because, if "disregard" be used as synonymous with "refuse to consider," it implies that the testimony of an uncorroborated witness need not be considered.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[f] An instruction that it is against all experience and reason to suppose that a man will imperil his own life, and inflict on another a brutal crime, without a motive, and in the mere wantonness of depravity, and that the question of motive is of great importance, when the question is as to whether defendant committed the crime, was properly refused, as involving a question as to the probative force of certain evidence.—People v. Verenesseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497, 58 Pac. 156.

§ 412. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.

[a] In a prosecution for robbery committed on a Chinaman, the court charged that certain rules of evidence had been established which must be adhered to in "all ordinary cases," but that these rules were not entirely unyielding; that, in the present case, the victim of the robbery would be the best witness to prove it, but, since the law precluded his testimony because a Chinaman, what would be secondary testimony in ordinary cases becomes the best evidence in the case at bar. Held, that this charge was erroneous, as indicating that defendant might be convicted on less testimony or different testimony than would be required if the crime had not been committed on a Chinaman.—People v. Jones, 31 Cal. 565.

[b] An instruction, in a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, that a presumption is a deduction which the law expressly directs to be made from particular facts, and unless this is controverted by other facts, the presumption will control, and that among such presumptions is one that an unlawful act was done with an unlawful intent, is proper, the instruction not relating to deductions of fact to be drawn by the jury.—People v. Crowl, 84 Pac. 860.

[c] Refusal to instruct on burden of proof and rule as to reasonable doubt is reversible error.—People v. Cohn, 76 Cal. 386, 18 Pac. 410.

[d] A charge that "it is not a matter of the number of witnesses, but the preponderance; and you may, if you retain a reasonable doubt, give the defendant the benefit of it,"—while not specially clear and perspicuous, is yet not erroneous.—People v. Christensen, 85 Cal. 568, 24 Pac. 888.

[e] Statement that "defendant may establish any fact essential to his defense by mere preponderance" should be left out of charges in criminal cases.—People v. Tarm Poi, 86 Cal. 228, 24 Pac. 998.

§ 413. —— Innocence.

[a] Instruction that "where there are two presumptions, one in favor of innocence, and the other in favor of a criminal course," the former must prevail, is properly refused, as there can be but one presumption of innocence in a criminal case.—People v. Douglass, 100 Cal. 1, 34 Pac. 490.

[b] Instruction "presumption of innocence goes with you in your retirement to consider your verdict and you must examine evidence in light of that presumption," is good.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 92, 50 Pac. 390.

[c] The court's instruction that the accused was presumed to be innocent, and was not required to prove himself innocent until the prosecution had proven his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, does not deprive accused of the presumption of innocence at some time in the trial, where it was further stated that the presumption abided with accused throughout the trial of the case, until the evidence convinced the jury to the contrary beyond all reasonable doubt.—People v. Arlington, 131 Cal. 231, 63 Pac. 347.

[d] In a prosecution for robbery, the modification of an instruction that the law presumes the defendant innocent; that the presumption attends him throughout the entire case; that such presumption might be sufficient to acquit the defendant, and was sufficient unless the jury was satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, from the evidence, that defendant was guilty of the crime charged—by omitting the words "such presumption is to be considered as a matter of evidence in favor of defendant," was not error.—People v. Linares, 142 Cal. 17, 75 Pac. 308.

[e] An instruction in a criminal case on the presumption of the innocence of accused held not to comply with Penal Code, section 1096. People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 414. —— Intent.

[a] On an indictment for burglary, a charge by the court that "it was not possible to give any direct intent of any person in the commission of any act, and that the prosecution could never, unless the defendant himself saw fit to speak, give any direct or positive proof of the intent," etc., is not erroneous, as suggesting that any presumption should be indulged against the defendant because he did not give evidence as a witness in the cause.—People v. Morton, 72 Cal. 62, 13 Pac. 150.

[b] An instruction that a malicious intent need not be proved by direct testimony, and that, if the jury found that the natural and probable results of an act would be to injure or destroy the property of another, no motive appearing from the evidence, malice may be implied, if the circumstances show a wicked, depraved and wanton spirit, is not misleading, especially when followed by others, treating the subject fully and liberally.—People v. Keeley, 81 Cal. 210, 22 Pac. 593.

[c] A charge relating to presumptions, as follows: "That an unlawful act was done with unlawful intent, and that a person intends the ordinary consequences of his voluntary act. The effect of these rules is that when the doing of an act is proven which, if there be guilty intent, would be a violation of law, the burden of proving the act to have been without such intent is in most cases upon the accused,"—held erroneous.—People v. Ribolsi, 89 Cal. 492, 26 Pac. 1082.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1962, provides: "The following presumptions . . . . are deemed conclusive: (1) A malicious and guilty intent, from the deliberate commission of an unlawful act for the purpose of injuring another." Held, that an instruction "that a malicious and guilty intent, from the deliberate commission of an unlawful act for the purpose of injuring another, is a conclusive presumption, under our law," substantially conforming to the language of the statute.—People v. McGlade, 139 Cal. 66, 72 Pac. 600.

[a] In a criminal trial, where insanity is relied on as a defense, it is proper to refuse to instruct the jury that, if the defendant was insane a short time before the commission of the act, the presumption is that he was insane when he committed it.—People v. Smith, 57 Cal. 130.

[b] Defendant asked the court to charge that if defendant was insane at a period before the homicide, it is presumed to have continued. The court gave the instruction after adding the words, "up to the time of the homicide, providing the exciting cause of such insanity also exists up to the time of the homicide." Held, that where the evidence tended to show defendant insane a year before the killing, and it all showed that his condition gradually grew worse up to the homicide, such instruction, as modified, even if erroneous was not prejudicial.—People v. Lane, 101 Cal. 513, 36 Pac. 16.

[a] In a trial for murder, it is error to charge that, if the jury find the defendant to have been at another place at the time of this alleged shooting, and if his being there then creates a reasonable doubt of his having been present at the place of the alleged crime at the time of its alleged commission, he should have the benefit of that reasonable doubt and be acquitted, as it compelled the jury to find as a fact that he was at another place at the time of the shooting, and did not therefore give defendant the benefit of any mere doubt which might be raised in the minds of the jury upon the question of alibi.—People v. Fong Ah Sing, 64 Cal. 253, 28 Pac. 233.

[b] Where there is testimony tending to prove an alibi, it is not error to charge that the accused "may establish any fact essential to his defense by merely a preponderance of evidence," when accompanied by a further charge that "if, from the whole case, and a consideration of all the testimony, the evidence [as to alibi] be sufficient to create a reasonable doubt as to whether defendant was present at the time and place of the murder, he should be acquitted."—People v. Tarm Poi, 86 Cal. 225, 24 Pac. 998.

§ 417. —— Flight.

[a] An instruction that if defendant fled from the scene of the crime, and was captured twenty miles away two days thereafter, it was a circumstance to be considered as tending to prove consciousness of guilt, was not error.—People v. Giancoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510.

[b] An instruction that flight is not an inference of guilt, and the timid might seek safety thereby, while innocent, was properly refused.—People v. Giancoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510.

[c] Where, upon the trial of a defendant for assault with a deadly weapon, the evidence is conflicting as to the character of his flight immediately after delivering the blow, it is error for the court to instruct that such flight "is a circumstance tending to establish his guilt," to be taken into consideration with all the other circumstances and testimony.—People v. Choy Ah Sing, 84 Cal. 276, 24 Pac. 379.

[d] An instruction that defendant's flight might be considered as in some degree tending to prove a consciousness of guilt held not error.—People v. Easton (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 840.

§ 418. —— Shifting of Burden.

[a] In a murder case, where the only claim of the defense was that defendant had inherited such an impaired mind, and this had been so further weakened by liquor, that he was incapable of the malice requisite for murder in the first degree, or that at least the jury should in their discretion make his punishment a life sentence instead of death, there being no claim of insanity, there was no prejudicial error in charging that the burden of proving insanity was on defendant; the jury being clearly charged that as to all other matters, including defendant's said claim, they must give him the benefit of every reasonable doubt, and that as to such matters the burden of proof was not on him.—People v. Eubanks, 86 Cal. 295, 24 Pac. 1014.

[b] The court charged the jury that, "if there be any reasonable hypothesis, not a mere possible one—any reasonable hypothesis upon which the conduct of the defendant [in entering the house] can be explained consistently with his innocence—then the testimony is such as ought to leave a reasonable doubt upon your minds." Held, that the jury could not have understood the court to mean that it devolved on defendants to explain his conduct.—People v. Winters, 93 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 946.

[c] An instruction that a person accused of crime is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty, and that this presumption goes with him all through the case "until it is submitted" to the jury, is erroneous, in intimating that the presumption ceases at that time, whereas in fact it continues until a verdict is reached.—People v. McNamara, 94 Cal. 509, 29 Pac. 953.

[d] An instruction that, when the doing of an act is proven which, if done with guilty intent, would be a violation of the law, the burden of proving the act to have been without such intent is, to the extent of creating a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, thrown in most cases upon the accused, is erroneous.—People v. Perini, 94 Cal. 573, 29 Pac. 1027.

§ 419. Testimony of Accomplices.

[a] The court instructed the jury: "If you believe that an accomplice has testified in this case, and you believe beyond all reasonable doubt from his testimony, to a moral certainty, that the defendant is guilty of the alleged offense in the information mentioned, and then in connection therewith you believe there is evidence outside of that which tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the offense,—outside of showing the commission of the offense itself and the circumstances thereof,—then it would be your bounden duty to convict him." Held, that this was consistent with Penal Code, section 1111, providing that a "conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice, unless he is corroborated by other evidence." People v. Clough, 73 Cal. 348, 15 Pac. 5.

[b] An instruction to the jury to the effect that they could not convict the defendant accused of receiving stolen goods upon the testimony of the thief unless corroborated by other evidence which, in itself, without the aid of the testimony of the thief, "tends to impute" to the defendant a knowledge that the goods were stolen, is not erroneous because of the expression "tends to impute" instead of "imputes."—People v. Ribolsi, 89 Cal. 492, 26 Pac. 1082.

[c] Where the jury has been fully instructed as to the weight and effect of the testimony of an accomplice, it is not error to refuse to charge that, if defendant committed the crime, a certain witness was an accomplice, as this would be a charge "with respect to matters of fact."—People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202.

[d] In a criminal prosecution, where the only evidence to justify a verdict against the defendant was the testimony of an admitted accomplice and that of a third person as to the defendant's oral admissions, the refusal of the court to instruct the jury that "the testimony of an accomplice ought to be viewed with distrust, and the evidence of the oral admissions of a party with caution," is prejudicial error.—People v. Bonney, 98 Cal. 278, 31 Pac. 45.

[e] Subdivision 4 of section 2061 of the Code of Civil Procedure, providing that the court shall instruct the jury in a criminal prosecution "on all proper occasions" that "the testimony of an accomplice ought to be viewed with distrust, and the evidence of the oral admissions of a party with caution," does not require the court to charge the jury with respect to matters of fact; and though it is not a proper occasion for such an instruction where it would discredit one of the defendant's witnesses, it is a proper occasion therefor when the testimony therein referred to is offered for the people against the defendant. People v. Bonny, 98 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 98.

[f] A requested instruction that the evidence of an accomplice is to be viewed with "caution and distrust" is not bad, though Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 4, declares only that it should be viewed with "distrust."—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 11, 43 Pac. 201.

[g] An instruction to the effect that evidence in corroboration of an accomplice "need not tend to establish the precise facts testified to by the accomplice," and that "it is sufficient if such corroborative evidence tends in any way to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime charged," is incorrect in not taking into account the essential condition that the corroborative evidence, standing alone, "without the aid of the testimony of the accomplice," must tend to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime.—People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44.

[h] People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 Pac. 44, affirmed as to the instructions to the jury therein held to be erroneous, relating to the disregard of corroborated evidence, the attempt to pass forged instruments, the corroboration of an accomplice, and the aiding and abetting of a felony.—People v Davis, 124 Cal. 42, 56 Pac. 1131.

[i] The treasurer of a corporation was indicted for embezzling funds which he had withdrawn from a certain bank under orders of the corporation. Other funds had been withdrawn from other banks in pursuance of the same order, and a witness for the state had participated in the withdrawal of all such sums. Held, that an instruction that if the defendant and witness had embezzled the sum charged, or if the witness had aided or abetted the defendant in the commission of an embezzlement, he would be an accomplice, and his testimony must be corroborated, was properly refused, as not requiring the witness to be an accomplice in the commission of the specific crime charged.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[j] In homicide, the court would have been justified in refusing to charge on the subject of accomplices where, under the evidence, the only witness to whom the charge could have referred was neither an accomplice nor an accessary.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 79 Pac. 1017.

[k] In homicide, a charge in the language of Penal Code, section 1111, providing that a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of an accomplice, unless corroborated by other evidence which in itself tends to connect defendant with the commission of the offense, etc., and, in concluding, declared that the corroborative evidence was sufficient "if it tended to connect defendant with the commission of the offense," was proper.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 76 Pac. 1017.

[l] On a murder trial, the court, on evidence fully authorizing it, submitted to the jury the question as to whether or not a certain witness for the state was an accomplice. The only corroborative evidence was given by the wife of such witness, who testified to certain oral confessions. Held, that it was error to refuse to charge that the testimony of an accomplice ought to be viewed with distrust, and the evidence of the oral admissions of defendants ought to be viewed with caution, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, which directs such instructions to be given "on all proper occasions."—People v. Strybe, 36 Pac. 3.

§ 420. Testimony of Experts.

[a] Instruction to effect that value of testimony of experts depends upon truth of facts upon which founded is correct.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 13, 52 Pac. 112.

§ 421. Admissions and Confessions.

[a] Instruction that confessions are to be weighed by the jury like any other evidence, and may be accepted in part and rejected in part, is not erroneous.—People v. Wyman, 15 Cal. 70.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 4, declaring that evidence of the oral admissions of a party is to be viewed with "caution," it is not error to refuse an instruction that it be viewed with "distrust"—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 11, 43 Pac. 201.

[c] Instruction to the effect that extrajudicial admissions of defendant are to be received and considered with great caution, is correct, and should be given when applicable. People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[d] Requested instruction that verbal admissions of party should be received with "great caution" is properly modified by striking out word "great."—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 332, 51 Pac. 538.

[e] Court may properly instruct jury in relation to statements or admissions of defendant, and in reference to weight to be given to the testimony of defendant in his own behalf.—People v. Totman, 135 Cal. 133, 67 Pac. 51.

[f] A requested instruction that verbal admissions ought to be received with great caution, that such evidence is subject to much imperfection, the party himself not having clearly expressed his own meaning or the witness having misunderstood him, is properly refused, because going beyond Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 4, providing that the jury is to be instructed that evidence of oral admissions of a party ought to be received with caution.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

§ 422. Rules of Evidence and Determination of Sufficiency.

[a] In a criminal trial, it is not necessary that the judge, in stating testimony to the jury, should instruct them that they are exclusive judges of the fact.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[b] An instruction to the jury that the defendant is not required to produce evidence to rebut such evidence, on the part of the prosecution, as merely tends to prove the fact in question, is erroneous.—People v. Kelly, 28 Cal. 423.

[c] It is error for the court to instruct the jury, in a criminal case, that they may in their discretion believe a part and disbelieve a part of the evidence. The discretion of the jury is not an unlicensed discretion, but is to be conscientiously exercised upon a consideration of all the facts.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[d] If two are jointly indicted for murder, and one is tried separately, and there is evidence of a conspiracy, an instruction to the jury that if there was a conspiracy, and the deceased was murdered by either of the conspirators in pursuance of the conspiracy, the verdict should be guilty, is not erroneous. If the instruction is not sufficiently explicit about preponderating evidence on the question of conspiracy, the defendant should ask the court to make it more specific.—People v. Geiger, 49 Cal. 643.

[e] An instruction distinguishing between direct and circumstantial evidence held to state correctly the rule of law applicable to the distinction.—People v. Anthony, 56 Cal. 397.

[f] An instruction to "determine the amount of credibility to which the evidence is entitled; if convincing and carrying with it a belief in its truth, act upon it; if not, you have a right to reject it"—is proper, being no more than an instruction to believe what is true, and reject what is false.—People v. Ching Hing Chang, 74 Cal. 389, 16 Pac. 201.

[g] An instruction that it is the duty of the jury to make a reasonable and conscientious endeavor to reconcile the facts and evidence with defendant's innocence is properly refused, since the jury should reconcile conflicting evidence if they can, regardless of the conclusions to which it may lead.—People v. Madden, 76 Cal. 521, 18 Pac. 402.

[h] Instruction: "The effect of statutory rules of evidence is that when doing of act which, if coupled with a guilty intent, would be a violation of the law is proven, the burden of proving the act to have been done without intent, to the extent of creating a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt upon the whole case, is in most cases thrown upon the accused," is erroneous.—People v. Perini, 94 Cal. 573, 29 Pac. 1027.

[i] Where, on a trial for murder, the expert testimony was that of a doctor, as to whether blood found on clothes was human blood, and his testimony was mainly as to the manner of determining the character of blood, and there was nothing to arouse suspicion as to his capacity or impartiality, it was not error to refuse to charge that expert evidence should be received with great caution.—People v. Smith, 106 Cal. 73, 39 Pac. 40.

[j] On a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to the belief of guilt which must be entertained by the jury in order to authorize a conviction held proper.—People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

§ 423. Circumstantial Evidence.

[a] In a prosecution for murder, a statement by the court during the examination of a juror on his voir dire that only one in ten thousand are wrongfully convicted on circumstantial evidence held not reversible error.—People v. Olsen, 1 Cal. App. 17, 81 Pac. 676.

[b] It was not error to refuse to instruct the jury in these words: "In the application of circumstantial evidence, the utmost caution should be used. It is always insufficient to convict, when, assuming all to be proved which the evidence tends to prove, some other hypothesis may still be true."—People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490.

[c] True rule is that, to authorize a verdict of guilty, the proof must be inconsistent with any other hypothesis compatible with such proof.—People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490.

[d] Where circumstantial evidence alone is relied on, the court may properly refuse to charge that it is always insufficient to convict "when, conceding all to be proved that the evidence tends to prove, some other hypothesis than that of the defendant's guilt may be true"; the true rule being that the proof ought to be not only consistent with the prisoner's guilt, but inconsistent with every other rational conclusion.—People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151.

[e] It is not error to instruct the jury that, "in order to convict, circumstantial evidence must be such as to produce nearly the same degree of certainty as that which arises from direct testimony and to exclude a rational probability of innocence."—People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191.

[f] An instruction that, "where the evidence is entirely circumstantial, yet is not only consistent with the guilt of the defendant, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, the law makes it the duty of the jury to convict, notwithstanding such evidence may not be as satisfactory to their minds as the direct testimony of credible eye-witnesses would have been," is correct.—People v. Daniels, 34 Pac. 233, following People v. Cronin (1867), 34 Cal. 191.

[g] A charge that "there is nothing in the nature of circumstantial evidence that renders it less reliable than other classes of evidence" correctly states the law.—People v. Urquidas, 96 Cal. 239, 31 Pac. 52, following People v. Morrow (1882), 60 Cal. 142.

[h] It is not error to charge a jury, upon a criminal trial, that there is no inherent difference between direct and circumstantial evidence, and that there is nothing in the nature of circumstantial evidence that renders it any less reliable than other classes of evidence; this statement being accompanied by proper explanations and qualifications.—People v. Morrow, 60 Cal. 142.

[i] At a trial for burglary, an instruction which, after directing the jury that circumstantial evidence must exclude to a moral certainty every other hypothesis than that of guilt, states that, "to convict upon circumstantial evidence, it should be such as to produce nearly the same degree of certainty as that which arises from direct testimony," is not erroneous.—People v. Eckman, 72 Cal. 582, 14 Pac. 359.

[j] It was error for the trial court, after charging that a mere preponderance of evidence was not sufficient to convict defendant, to add that "it is not required that the inculpatory facts shall be incompatible with the innocence of the accused," since, in order to convict an accused person, the facts proven must be inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of his innocence.—People v. Gosset, 93 Cal. 641, 29 Pac. 246.

[k] On a trial for grand larceny, it was reversible error to instruct, on the subject of circumstantial evidence, that the jury should be regulated by the superior number of probabilities on the one side or the other, whether the amount of such probabilities be expressed in words or arguments, or by figures and numbers.—People v. Dilwood, 94 Cal. 89, 29 Pac. 420.

[l] Instruction upon circumstantial evidence, stating that "such evidence may consist of admissions by defendant, plans laid for commission of crime, such as putting himself in position to commit it, in short, any act, declarations, or circumstances admitted in evidence tending to connect defendant with commission of crime," cannot be construed as telling the jury that defendant could be convicted solely upon his own admissions.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[m] Instruction properly embodying law relating to circumstantial evidence should not, at the request of the defendant, be modified so as to involve and cloud it or detract from its perspicuity.—People v. Smith, 106 Cal. 73, 39 Pac. 40.

[n] A charge that, "to justify the inference of legal guilt from circumstantial evidence, the existence of inculpatory facts must be established absolutely and to a demonstration incompatible with the innocence of the accused," demanded a greater degree of certainty than the law required.—People v. Bellamy, 109 Cal. 610, 42 Pac. 236.

[o] It is not proper for the court to read from the opinion of a court on the question of circumstantial evidence, and then instruct the jury that the part quoted is not the law in this state; but the court should instruct only affirmatively as to what the law is, not what it is not; and it is ambiguous and might be misleading to instruct the jury "that all the circumstances should tend to establish the guilt of the defendant, and be inconsistent with any other hypothesis," since all the circumstances taken together must do something more than tend to establish such guilt; they should establish the guilt of the defendant.—People v. Paulsell, 115 Cal. 6, 46 Pac. 734.

[p] Where two witnesses testified to seeing accused in the act of removing a ring from the cravat of a sleeping person, though they could not see the ring on account of accused's hand being in the way, but had seen it on the cravat, and noticed afterward that it was gone, it cannot be said that the prosecution relied entirely or mainly on circumstantial evidence; and instructions based on such an assumption were properly refused.—People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096.

[q] An instruction that, "where the evidence is entirely circumstantial, yet it is not only consistent with the guilt of defendant, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, the law makes it the duty of the jury to convict, notwithstanding such evidence may not be as satisfactory to their minds as the direct testimony of credible eye-witnesses would have been," though inexact and illogical, in intimating that a conviction may be had on less satisfactory evidence where it is circumstantial than would be required where it is direct, was corrected by special instructions to the effect that every fact essential to sustain the hypothesis of guilt, and to exclude the hypothesis of innocence, must be fully proved. Judgment (1898), 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[r] An instruction in a criminal prosecution that, when direct evidence cannot be introduced, minds will form their judgments on circumstances, and act on the probabilities of the case, was erroneous, since the law requires the jury to be convinced of the defendant's guilt before convicting, and they are not at liberty to "act on probabilities." People v. O'Brien, 130 Cal. 1, 62 Pac. 297.

[s] On a trial for murder, based on circumstantial evidence, an instruction authorizing the jury, if they have a reasonable doubt as to which of two opposing conclusions the chain of circumstances leads, they should give accused the benefit of such doubt, is properly refused, where both of the opposing conclusions might lead to accused's guilt. People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

[t] In a prosecution for larceny, an instruction that there is nothing in the nature of circumstantial evidence rendering it less reliable than other evidence, and that a man may as well swear falsely to an absolute knowledge of facts as to a number of facts on which, if true, guilt or innocence depends, though of doubtful accuracy as a statement of law, is not prejudicially erroneous.—People v. Wilder, 134 Cal. 182, 66 Pac. 228.

[u] Where the evidence was largely direct and positive, it was not prejudicial error to charge that, where the evidence is entirely circumstantial, yet it is not only consistent with the guilt of defendant, but inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, the jury must convict, notwithstanding such evidence may not be as satisfactory to their minds as the direct testimony of credible eye-witnesses would have been.—People v. Dole, 51 Pac. 945.

§ 424. Credibility of Witnesses.

[a] Jury may be instructed as to the law applicable to credibility of a particular witness, or of an interested party.—People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191.

[b] Instruction that if jury "believed any witness had, upon the stand, willfully sworn falsely in respect to any matter material to the issue on trial, they should disregard his testimony altogether," was properly refused. People v. Hicks, 53 Cal. 354.

[c] An instruction that "if any witness has, in the opinion of the jurors, sworn falsely in any material respect, he is to be distrusted in all others, and his testimony is not to be accepted and acted on without great caution," is not erroneous. The omission or insertion of the word "willfully" before "sworn falsely" would not change the effect of the language.—People v. Righetti, 66 Cal. 184, 4 Pac. 1185.

[d] Instruction "witness false in one statement, is to be distrusted in others" upheld.—People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 238, 10 Pac. 502.

[e] Court may allude to fact of relationship of some of witnesses to accused as affecting their credibility.—People v. Bush, 71 Cal. 602, 12 Pac. 781.

[f] Where a certain witness has testified falsely upon particular point, court need not specifically direct attention of jury to such evidence, or instruct them that it is material, and if they believe it to be false, to distrust the entire testimony of the witness. General instruction to distrust entire evidence of any witness whom they find to have willfully sworn falsely upon any material point is sufficient.—People v. Demousset, 71 Cal. 611, 12 Pac. 788.

[g] An instruction to the jury, requested by the defendant, that "every witness, the defendant included (if called as a witness) is presumed to speak the truth, and the jury are bound to remember such presumption in determining the facts admitted to them for their consideration," is properly qualified by the court by adding that "this presumption is a disputable one, and is not conclusive upon you. You are the sole and exclusive judges of the credibility of the witnesses and of the weight to be given to the testimony of each. In determining the weight of the testimony, you have the right to take into consideration the interest, if any, which the witness may have in the result of the trial, his conduct on the stand, his general appearance and demeanor before you, and whether or not it is such as convinces you that he is speaking the truth, or otherwise."—People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[h] The courts, in giving an instruction upon the subject of the distrust of a witness who is false in one part of his testimony, should carefully use the exact language of section 2061 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides "that a witness false in one part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others."—People v. Paulsell, 115 Cal. 6, 46 Pac. 734.

[hi] Instruction to effect that testimony of experts should be scrutinized and received with caution, and that jury could reject it if they deemed it not well-founded in fact, is correct.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 13, 52 Pac. 112.

[i] Giving an instruction that "a witness who has willfully sworn falsely in one part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others," in lieu of one that, "if any witness examined before you has willfully sworn falsely as to any material matter, it is your duty to distrust his entire evidence," was error, since the former omits the element that the testimony must be on a material matter, and the latter follows the Code provisions (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 2061, subd.. 3).—People v. Plyler, 121 Cal. 160, 53 Pac. 553.

[j] A requested charge that, if a witness named swore falsely in one place, the jury could believe his entire testimony false, was properly modified to read, "any witness." People v. Patterson, 124 Cal. 102, 56 Pac. 882.

[k] An instruction that, "You understand, of course, that a witness ascertained or appearing to be willfully false in one part of his testimony as to the truth or falsity of a given proposition of fact is to be distrusted in other parts," is good.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[l] An instruction upon the subject of the distrusting of a witness in other parts of his testimony, who is false in one part thereof, is not made erroneous by explanatory remarks as to what is meant by the rule, where there is nothing in such remarks contrary to law or prejudicial to the defendant. People v. Sternberg, 127 Cal. 511, 59 Pac. 942.

[m] Where testimony of experts in regard to the authorship of a libelous letter was introduced in a criminal prosecution, it was not error to refuse to instruct that the testimony of experts should be received and weighed with great caution, and that the evidence of a witness who is brought on the stand to support a theory by his opinion is testimony exposed to a reasonable degree of suspicion, which there is great reason to believe is in many instances the result of employment, and his bias arising out of it.—People v. Storke, 60 Pac. 420, order reversed (1900), 128 Cal. 486, 60 Pac. 1090.

[n] An instruction in a criminal case which, in substance, tells the jury that they are not to disregard the testimony of convict witnesses merely because they are convicts, but that they are to consider and weigh their testimony according to the rules of evidence, is not open to objection.—People v. Puttman, 129 Cal. 258, 61 Pac. 961.

[o] Under the Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 3, authorizing the court to instruct that a witness false in any part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others, the court cannot single out a particular witness, and apply such section to him.—People v. Arlington, 131 Cal. 231, 63 Pac. 347.

[p] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 3, authorizing the court to instruct that a witness false in one part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others, it is not error for the court, after instructions in the language of such subdivision, to add that if the jury find that any witness has willfully testified falsely to any material matter, they have a right to entirely disregard his testimony.—People v. Arlington, 131 Cal. 231, 63 Pac. 347.

[q] Instruction upon subject of distrust of a witness who has willfully sworn falsely as to a material matter, is not affected by an added statement that it "is duty of jury to scan closely" and distrust the entire evidence of such witness. It is the duty of jury to "scan closely" all evidence placed before them. People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[r] It is not error to instruct that a witness who willfully testifies falsely as to one fact is to be distrusted in other parts of his testimony, and that, if the jury find a witness has deliberately testified falsely in part, they have the right to reject the whole of his testimony which is not shown by other evidence to be true.—People v. Wilder, 134 Cal. 182, 66 Pac. 228.

[s] An instruction that the presumption as to witnesses speaking the truth might be repelled by interest in the case, or bias or prejudice against one of the parties,—there being no reference to any particular witness—is proper.—People v. Amaya, 134 Cal. 531, 66 Pac. 794.

[t] Where a witness who had participated as a police officer in the preparation of a case for the prosecution, testified that he was no more than ordinarily interested in the case, and as to experiments made by him, it was not error to instruct the jury that the police officer was under no obligation to assist the defense of any of the parties to the crime by making any experiment.—People v. Eaton, 136 Cal. xix, 68 Pac. 583.

[u] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 3, declaring that a witness false in one part of his testimony is to be distrusted in others, a charge in a criminal case that "if any witness . . . . has willfully sworn falsely as to any material matter, it is your duty to distrust the entire evidence of such witness," was proper.—People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014.

[v] An instruction that "a witness who testifies falsely as to one fact . . . . is to be distrusted in other parts of his testimony," etc., being substantially in the language of Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivision 3, is not improper, though not to be commended as a full or clear exposition of the meaning of the section.—People v. Dobbins, 138 Cal. 694, 72 Pac. 339.

[w] An instruction that the jury is not bound to believe the uncontroverted statement of a witness, in a prosecution against a defendant, as to a fact, and that the jury was not bound to take the testimony of any witness as true, was objectionable, as limited to the testimony on one side of the case.—People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586.

[x] Instruction, "If any witness has sworn falsely, it is your duty to distrust his entire evidence," is correct.—People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 492, 75 Pac. 62.

§ 425. Credibility of Accused.

[a] An instruction to a jury, in a criminal case, that what was said by the accused in his own behalf during a certain conversation, proved, must be taken as true, if what he at the same time said against himself is taken as true, is erroneous.—People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

[b] Where court instructed jury in respect to weight and effect proper to be given to defendant's evidence, who had testified at trial in his own behalf that "in addition to noticing his manner and the probability of his statements taken in connection with the evidence in the cause, you should consider his relation and situation under which he gives his testimony, and the consequences to him relating from the results of this trial, and all the inducements and temptations which would ordinarily influence a person in his situation. . . . . If convincing, and carrying with it a belief in its truth, act upon it; if not, you have a right to reject it." Held, that there was no error.—People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191; People v. Morrow, 60 Cal. 142; People v. Nichols, 62 Cal. 518; People v. O'Neal, 67 Cal. 378, 7 Pac. 79.

[c] The statute allowing an accused to testify in his own behalf does not make it obligatory that when a defendant in a criminal case becomes a witness in his own behalf, and gives testimony tending to exonerate himself, the court must of its own motion instruct the jury as to the credit to be given to his own testimony. In declaring that the credit to be given to a defendant's testimony must be "left solely to the jury under the instructions of the court" it does not establish a new rule in requiring instructions as to defendants in criminal cases, but simply applies to them a rule which exists as to other witnesses.—People v. Rodundo, 44 Cal. 538.

[d] A defendant, however incredible his testimony may be, is entitled to an instruction based on the hypothesis that his testimony was entirely true.—People v. Keefer, 65 Cal. 232, 3 Pac. 818.

[e] Where defendant in a criminal prosecution has been examined as a witness in his own behalf, it is not error to instruct the jury that he had a right to do so, and that they were to consider his testimony as they would that of any other witness; but that they should bear in mind the position of the defendant, the manner in which he would be affected by their verdict, and the very great interest he must feel in the result of the trial, and how it might affect his credibility or color his testimony.—People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17, 30 Pac. 837.

[f] Instruction to jury directing their attention to fact that defendant had offered himself as a witness on his own behalf, and saying to them that in considering the weight and effect to be given to his evidence, in addition to noticing his manner and the probability of his statements, they could consider his relation to the case, and the circumstances under which he gave his testimony, the consequences to him resulting from the verdict in the case, and all the inducements and temptations which would ordinarily influence a person in his situation, having been sanctioned under the old constitution, must be considered as a part of a similar provision of the constitution of 1879, and cannot be held erroneous. It would be better, however, to entirely omit such instruction from those asked and given on behalf of the prosecution in the future.—People v. O'Brien, 96 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 45.

[g] Instruction is proper as to weight to be given by jury to testimony of a defendant as a witness in his own behalf, if in line with like instructions approved by this court.—People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[h] Fact that code does not contain express reference to instructions of court in connection with testimony of defendant, which was contained in former statutes, does not effect a change of law upon that subject, the constitutional provision permitting such instructions remaining unaffected.—People v. Hitchcock, 104 Cal. 482, 38 Pac. 198.

[i] An instruction as to the defendant's testimony which is not a departure from instructions that have been allowed to pass by this court does not furnish sufficient ground for reversal; but attention is called to the criticism of similar instructions in recent cases decided by this court.—People v. Anderson, 105 Cal. 32, 38 Pac. 513.

[j] Instruction to jury bearing upon credibility of a defendant's testimony is not looked upon with favor by this court, and must be limited within the strictest lines; and the principle of such an instruction cannot be applied to the relatives of the defendant. People v. Hertz, 105 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 32.

[k] A requested instruction, in a prosecution for arson, that the jury should give the same weight to defendant's testimony as they would give to that of any other witness, was properly refused.—People v. Hiltel, 131 Cal. 577, 63 Pac. 919.

[l] Instruction requested as to testimony of defendant, in exact language of the instruction in People v. Cronin, 34 Cal. 191, 195, is sustained with reluctance. Justice would be more surely accomplished if no such instructions were given, and the credibility of the defendant were left entirely to the jury. People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210, 72 Pac. 899.

[m] An instruction that, in addition to noticing defendant's manner as a witness in his own behalf, and the probability of his statements taken in connection with the evidence in the case, the jury should consider his relation to the proceeding, the consequences to him of the results of the trial, and all the inducements and temptations which would ordinarily influence a person in his situation, but, if convincing, the jury should act on his evidence, otherwise they should reject it, was not reversible error.—People v. Tibbs, 143 Cal. 100, 76 Pac. 904.

[n] Judgment of conviction in a criminal case in which the defendant was a witness in his own behalf will not be reversed because of an instruction that, in weighing his testimony, the jury may properly consider his interest in the case, and whether it might not affect his credibility or color his testimony. People v. Wells, 145 Cal. 138, 78 Pac. 470.

[o] Language in an instruction as to weight and effect to be given defendant's testimony held not erroneous.—People v. Hill (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 398.

[p] An instruction on the weight of the testimony of accused, testifying in his own behalf in a criminal case, held erroneous.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 426. Failure of Accused to Testify.

[a] It is error, in a criminal case, to instruct that the evidence is to be estimated, not only by its own intrinsic weight, but according to the evidence which it is in the power of one side to produce and of the other to contradict; and, therefore, that if less satisfactory evidence is offered, when more satisfactory was within the power of the party, the evidence offered should be viewed with distrust, though it is based on Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, subdivisions 6, 7, where there is no suggestion that any important witness who could have been produced by defendant was not produced, but it was applicable to defendant, in that he did not become a witness, but stood on his constitutional right of not testifying and requiring the state to prove the case beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Cuff, 122 Cal. 589, 55 Pac. 407.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 54 C. C. A. 373, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 638, 639; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2689-2693, §§ 1902, 1903.

§ 427. Failure to Produce Evidence.

[a] An instruction requested by the defendant to the effect that the failure of the prosecution to introduce any other evidence to rebut the testimony of defendant's witnesses that a letter received by the defendant accompanying the draft alleged to have been forged was in the handwriting of the person whose name was signed to the draft, made it the duty of the jury to treat and consider the letter as written by him, is properly refused, where there was other evidence for the prosecution tending to show that it was impossible for the letter to have been written by him.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

§ 428. Reasonable Doubt and Degree of Proof.

[a] Defendant held not entitled to object to an instruction on reasonable doubt, in that it included only such facts as were inconsistent with guilt.—People v. Waysman, 1 Cal. App. 246, 81 Pac. 1087.

[b] Where the doctrine of reasonable doubt was correctly charged, it was not necessary that it should have been repeated with reference to other instructions.—People v. Waysman, 1 Cal. App. 246, 81 Pac. 1087.

[c] Where the court instructs fully on the doctrine of reasonable doubt in a criminal case, it is not necessary to repeat the doctrine in every instruction.—People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[d] In a prosecution for murder, defendant held not entitled to object to an instruction that each and every fact and circumstance relied on to establish guilt must be proved by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, etc. People v. Olsen, 1 Cal. App. 17, 81 Pac. 676.

[e] In a prosecution for murder, an instruction that if the jury believed, under rules governing circumstantial evidence charge that defendant committed the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, they should convict, though the act was surrounded in a degree by a doubt, held not error.—People v. Olsen, 1 Cal. App. 17, 81 Pac. 676.

[f] Defendant is entitled to instruction, based upon reasonable doubt as to a material fact, notwithstanding general instruction as to reasonable doubt.—People v. Eckert, 19 Cal. 604.

[g] When evidence against accused is entirely circumstantial, and is conflicting in relation to material fact going to make up chain of circumstances, an instruction to the effect that "if the jury entertain a reasonable doubt as to the existence of such fact, the defendant must be acquitted," is pertinent and appropriate, and should be given.—People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 326.

[h] Instruction that jury must convict, "although they may not be entirely satisfied from evidence that defendant, and no other" or different person, committed the offense, is erroneous. (Per Crockett, J.)—People v. Phipps, 39 Cal. 326.

[i] An instruction defining reasonable doubt was as follows: "If the evidence is such that a man of prudence would act upon it in his own affairs of the greatest importance, then there does not remain a reasonable doubt, within the meaning of the law." Held erroneous.—People v. Ah Sing, 51 Cal. 372.

[j] A useless instruction that, if the jurors as men believe the defendant guilty, they should as jurors believe him guilty, held not to be ground for reversal.—People v. Whitney, 53 Cal. 420.

[k] Following instruction is erroneous: "You are not legally bound to acquit the defendant because you may not be entirely satisfied that the defendant, and no other person, committed the alleged offense."—People v. Brown, 56 Cal. 405, 59 Cal. 345.

[l] Instruction is erroneous where it tends to deprive defendant of doctrine of reasonable doubt. It is a cardinal rule in criminal prosecutions that the burden of proof rests upon the prosecutor, and that if, upon the whole evidence, including that of the defense as well as that of the prosecution, the jury entertain a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused, he is entitled to the benefit of that doubt.—People v. Flanagan, 60 Cal. 2, 44 Am. Rep. 52.

[m] Court below charged jury: "You must be satisfied that defendant is guilty beyond reasonable doubt. As I have often stated to juries before, a reasonable doubt does not mean every possible doubt; it must be something reasonable, and that cannot give any satisfactory solution of the question except upon the reasonable basis that the defendant may be innocent. That is what reasonable doubt is." Held, the instruction is meaningless, and could not have conveyed to the jury any ideas which might mislead them. People v. De Los Angeles, 61 Cal. 188.

[n] An instruction that before the jury can convict they must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that defendant is guilty of the crime as alleged; that a charge of this nature is one peculiarly hard for a defendant to clear himself of; that from the nature of the case the prosecutrix and defendant are usually the only witnesses; that the jury should be perfectly satisfied from the case made out by the witnesses, and corroborating evidence, if any, before finding the defendant guilty; that, if not satisfied, they should acquit; and that the "reasonable doubt" mentioned is as follows: "A defendant in a criminal action is presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, by not the mere preponderance of evidence, but by evidence entirely convincing to the jury; and, in case of a reasonable doubt whether his guilt is satisfactorily shown, he is entitled to an acquittal," is sufficient. People v. Lenon, 79 Cal. 625, 631, 21 Pac. 967.

[o] A charge on the subject of reasonable doubt that "it would not be sufficient to justify a conviction if the jury should be satisfied of the guilt of the defendant to such a moral certainty as would influence their minds in the important affairs of life," should be refused, as calculated to confuse the jury.—People v. Lenon, 79 Cal. 625, 631, 21 Pac. 967.

[p] It is not error to instruct jury that their opinion must approach absolute certainty.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 35, 24 Pac. 33.

[q] Instruction, in effect, that guilt must be proved to entire satisfaction of juror, unless they seriously believe accused guilty, is erroneous.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 35, 24 Pac. 33.

[r] Instruction on reasonble doubt upheld. People v. Choy Ah Sing, 84 Cal. 278, 24 Pac. 379.

[s] Instruction on reasonable doubt criticised but sustained.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 332, 24 Pac. 1021.

[t] It is error to charge that a reasonable doubt is "such a doubt as would induce a man of reasonable firmness and judgment to act upon it in matters of importance to himself."—(1890) People v. Bemmerly, 87 Cal. 117, 25 Pac. 266; (1891) People v. Wohlfrom, 26 Pac. 236.

[u] A statement, in an instruction, that if, on full consideration of all the evidence, you are "fairly and clearly satisfied" of defendant's guilt, is equivalent to saying that the jury must be "entirely satisfied."—People v. Ribolsi, 89 Cal. 492, 26 Pac. 1082.

[v] In order to convict defendant charged with crime, facts proven must not only be consistent with the hypothesis of his guilt, but inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis of his innocence; and an instruction to the jury upon the subject of reasonable doubt, after telling the jury that a mere preponderance of evidence was not sufficient that "on the other hand it is not required that the inculpatory facts shall be incompatible with the innocence of the accused," is erroneous.—People v. Gosset, 93 Cal. 641, 29 Pac. 246.

[w] "If one set or chain of circumstances leads to two opposing conclusions, one or the other of such conclusions must be wrong, and therefore, if you have any reasonable doubt as to which of said conclusions the chain of circumstances leads, a reasonable doubt would be thereby created, and you should give the defendant the benefit of the doubt, and acquit him," states the law correctly.—People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[x] An instruction to the jury that "their opinion of the guilt of the defendant, based upon the evidence in this case, must nearly approach absolute certainty; that is, a condition of their minds so perfect, complete, and unconditional as to exclude the possibility of a doubt"—is properly refused, as belief beyond a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused is alone required.—People v. Smith, 105 Cal. 676, 39 Pac. 38.

[y] Instruction that if jury believed from evidence beyond reasonable doubt that, at time and place alleged in indictment, defendant was a deputy county assessor as alleged in indictment, and that, as such deputy county assessor, he collected from the persons named in indictment sum for personal property tax therein alleged, and that he did not pay over said money to assessor of county, but that he fraudulently appropriated same or any part thereof to his own use, they should find defendant guilty as charged, does not pass upon the weight of the evidence or invade the province of the jury, and sufficiently states the guilty intent in the language of the statute, and does not omit to state that the facts must be found by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Cobler, 108 Cal. 538, 41 Pac. 401.

[z] Court should not depart in its charge from the common and usual instruction upon the subject of reasonable doubt.—People v. Webster, 111 Cal. 381, 43 Pac. 1114.

[aa] A correct instruction upon subject of reasonable doubt is not rendered erroneous or misleading by adding thereto the sentence, "juror is not at liberty to disbelieve as a juror what he believes as a man."—People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 45 Pac. 844.

[bb] The jury should not be debarred by an instruction from considering evidence of the death of the person whose signature was claimed to be forged, together with all of the evidence in the case, because the death might not have been proved to their satisfaction beyond a reasonable doubt; but if the jury believed from the evidence that the defendant was not guilty unless it were proved that he was dead and that defendant knew of his death, then it would be incumbent on the prosecution to establish each of those facts beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[cc] An instruction based upon evidence of the defendant's that the draft described in the information was genuine, to the effect that he is not required to establish that fact beyond a reasonable doubt, or by a preponderance of evidence, but that if the evidence is such as to create a reasonable doubt as to whether the signature to the alleged draft is a forgery, the jury should give defendant the benefit of the doubt, and find him not guilty, should be given. People v. Sanders, 114 Cal. 216, 46 Pac. 153.

[dd] It is error to refuse an instruction requested by the defendant defining what is a reasonable doubt in the language adopted by Chief Justice Shaw in the Webster case, and approved by this court; and it is also error to instruct the jury that a reasonable doubt must be based upon common sense.—People v. Paulsell, 115 Cal. 6, 46 Pac. 734.

[ee] A charge on reasonable doubt, stating that "the doubt must be supported by reason, and not by mere conjecture and idle supposition, irrespective of evidence," is not objectionable.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[ff] Instruction on reasonable doubt upheld. People v. White, 116 Cal. 19, 47 Pac. 771.

[gg] Where the ordinary definition of reasonable doubt is correctly given, the omission to tell the jury that the guilt of the defendant should be inconsistent with every other rational hypothesis is not erroneous, in the absence of a request that it be given.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[hh] Where a request for instructions as to reasonable doubt contained a clause giving defendant the benefit of any doubt created by argument of counsel, such clause was properly eliminated.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15.

[ii] It is not reversible error to define a "reasonable" doubt as a "fair" doubt.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 216, 16 Am. St. Rep. 72-n, 51 Pac. 329.

[jj] There is no error in instructing jury that after weighing evidence they must decide according to their consciences.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 224, 16 Am. St. Rep. 72-n, 51 Pac. 329.

[kk] Defendant requested an instruction that: "Those facts . . . . must be established in your minds to a moral certainty, and beyond a reasonable doubt; that is, it must entirely satisfy you of the guilt of defendant, before you can convict. If you are not entirely satisfied, you should acquit him." The court gave it as requested, except that it struck out the word "entirely" in both places. Held no error.—People v. Kaiser, 119 Cal. 456, 51 Pac. 702.

[ll] Chief Justice Shaw's definition of reasonable doubt approved.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 13, 52 Pac. 112.

[mm] It was proper to refuse an instruction that if one chain of circumstances had two opposing conclusions, one pointing to the guilt, the other to the innocence, of defendant, and the jury have any reasonable doubt as to which of such conclusions the chain of circumstances leads, a reasonable doubt is thereby created, and defendant must be acquitted.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[nn] No injury can result from the court changing an instruction that the jury must be convinced of the guilt of defendant beyond "all" reasonable doubt, to "a" reasonable doubt.—People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096.

[oo] It is not error for the court to read forms of verdict to the jury, nor in a murder trial to read first the form for murder in the first degree.—People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596.

[pp] On a criminal trial, defendant was entitled to an instruction that "if, after consideration of the whole case, any juror should entertain a reasonable doubt of the guilt of the defendant, it is the duty of such juror .... not to vote for a verdict of 'guilty,' nor to be influenced into voting for the single reason that a majority of the jury should be in favor of a verdict of 'guilty.'" Judgment (1898) 51 Pac. 945, reversed.—People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50, 55 Pac. 581.

[qq] Where an instruction on the law of reasonable doubt contains a full statement of the law, a statement in the instruction in form, "You are instructed that the doubt which acquits a defendant on trial on a charge of crime must be a reasonable doubt in the sense mentioned, and no other," is not objectionable.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067,

[rr] An instruction that, "in case of a reasonable doubt whether defendant's guilt is satisfactorily shown, he is entitled to an acquittal," shows no error.—People v. Wynn, 133 Cal. 72, 65 Pac. 126.

[ss] An instruction that "if, after careful and impartial consideration of all the evidence, the jury can say and feel that they are morally convinced of the defendant's guilt, and are fully satisfied of the truth of the charge, that then they are convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and the verdict should be conviction," is not a sound legal instruction.—People v. Schoedde, 126 Cal. 373, 58 Pac. 859.

[tt] Where instructions repeatedly stated that the defendant must be acquitted if the jury had a reasonable doubt of his guilt, or of a single fact necessary to establish his guilt, an instruction that the jury must be "satisfied" of the truth of a certain fact presented in defense was not reversible error.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[uu] It was not error to refuse an instruction that defendant could not be convicted unless each of the jury was satisfied from the evidence that he was guilty beyond all reasonable doubt, and in determining such question it was the duty of each juror to decide the matter for himself, and not to compromise or sacrifice his views or opinions of the case in deference to the views or opinons of others.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[vv] Instruction as to reasonable doubt which complies in substance with the definition thereof laid down by this court is not objectionable.—People v. Davis, 135 Cal. 162, 67 Pac. 59.

[ww] Where the court, in a prosecution for robbery, in charging the jury, defined a reasonable doubt as "that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence in the cause, leaves the minds of the jurors," etc., an objection to the instruction on the ground that a reasonable doubt obviously is not a "state of the case," but rather a condition of the mind, is untenable.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

[xx] An instruction concerning intent, as an element in the commission of crime, is not objectionable because it omits to state that a conclusion adverse to defendant must be one that does not admit of a reasonable doubt where the jury were elsewhere fully instructed as to the doctrine of reasonable doubt.—People v. Gilmore, 53 Pac. 806.

§ 429. —— Moral Certainty.

[a] The charge was that, "before conviction, the persuasion of guilt produced by the evidence ought to amount to almost a certainty, or such a moral certainty as convinces the minds of the jury as reasonable men." Held not erroneous.—People v. Beck, 58 Cal. 212.

[b] Where one is entitled to a charge that certain facts must be established to a moral certainty, he cannot demand a charge that the facts must be established to an absolute moral certainty.—People v. Davis, 64 Cal. 440, 1 Pac. 889.

[c] Instruction, "If from evidence you believe" need not add "to a moral certainty" unless requested.—People v. Sheldon, 68 Cal. 438, 9 Pac. 457.

[d] There was no error in refusing an instruction that the jury must return a verdict of not guilty, unless convinced to an "absolute moral certainty" of defendant's guilt.—People v. Hecker, 109 Cal. 451, 42 Pac. 307, 30 L. R. A. 403.

[e] An instruction that moral certainty is that degree of proof which the law requires of moral evidence, and is described as a state of impression produced by facts in which a reasonable mind feels coercion or necessity to act in accordance therewith, is not error.—People v. Burns, 138 Cal. 159, 70 Pac. 1087, 60 L. R. A. 270.

§ 430. Law Applicable to Case.

[a] Judge is not bound to instruct on history, object, or purpose of the law. He does his duty by saying what the law is, without an exposition of its reasons.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

[b] Under section 1126, Penal Code, it is not error for court to charge that jury "should receive the law as I state it to be, notwithstanding you may firmly believe that I am wrong, and that law is or should be otherwise." People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 45 Pac. 844.

[c] Refusal of an instruction stating the object of the law in permitting persons charged with crime to testify held not error.—People v. Hill (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 398.

[d] On a trial for murder, where the killing is admitted, it is not error for the court to read to the jury section 1105 of the Penal Code, placing the burden of proof in such case on the defendant, where the jury is properly instructed as to the measure of proof required. People v. Richards (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 691.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 613; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2540-2548, §§ 1803-1811.

§ 431. Grade of Offense.

[a] Where the trial of an indictment charging both burglary and grand larceny is conducted on the theory that the defendant is on trial for burglary, it is erroneous for the court to recall the jury, after they have retired, and charge them that the indictment covers two offenses, burglary and grand larceny; that burglary is the higher and includes the latter; and that they could find a verdict of guilty of grand larceny.—People v. Garnett, 29 Cal. 622.

[b] It is proper to refuse an instruction on a lower offense where the evidence tends to prove only the greater.—People v. Turley, 50 Cal. 469; People v. Wright, 93 Cal. 564, 29 Pac. 240.

[c] Refusal to instruct that jury may render verdict for simple assault is proper where evidence shows that, if guilty at all, accused is guilty of higher offense.—People v. Madden, 76 Cal. 523, 18 Pac. 402.

[d] Upon trial of defendant charged with an assault with intent to commit robbery, it is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury "that under the charge they might find him guilty of simple assault," where the evidence tends to show that he was either guilty of the crime charged or of no offense at all.—People v. Barry, 90 Cal. 41, 27 Pac. 62.

[e] Court should inform jury of all offenses which are necessarily included in offense charged.—People v. Church, 116 Cal. 303, 48 Pac. 125.

[f] Under information charging assault with intent to commit mayhem, court shall instruct jury that defendant may be found guilty of simple assault, and, where court has omitted to give an instruction to that effect of its own motion, it is error for the court to refuse so to instruct the jury when asked to do so by counsel for the defendant.—People v. Demasters, 105 Cal. 669, 39 Pac. 35.

[g] Where crime is rape or nothing, court need not instruct on lesser offenses included in charge.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 689, 75 Pac. 304.

[h] When evidence is such that if defendant is guilty at all he is guilty of greater offense, instructions on lesser offense need not be given. People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 491, 75 Pac. 62.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 639-641; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2727-2732, §§ 1923-1927.

§ 432. Punishment.

[a] There is no error, in a trial for murder, in giving section 37 of the act concerning crimes and punishments as an instruction to the jury, where the language of the statute is used.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[b] Court should not, in charging on degrees of crime, give punishment which court would be bound to impose for each.—People v. Dice, 120 Cal. 202, 52 Pac. 477.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 641, 642; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2733-2737, §§ 1928-1934.

§ 433. Admonishing Jury on Separations.

[a] Court should always admonish jury on their separations occurring at adjournments and recess during trial.—People v. Thompson, 84 Cal. 606, 24 Pac. 384.

§ 434. Manner of Arriving at Verdict.

[a] The court should direct the jury to return their verdict in proper form.—People v. Ah Gow, 53 Cal. 627.

[b] Where counsel has read from cases of convictions of innocent persons on circumstantial evidence, the court may properly caution the jury against attaching too much importance to such cases.—People v. Shem Ah Fook, 64 Cal. 380, 1 Pac. 347.

[c] Direction as to form of verdict, held not erroneous.—People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[d] Right of juror to refuse to concur in a verdict unsatisfactory to him is a matter of such common knowledge that it is not error to refuse to instruct jurors as to such right.—People v. Hill, 116 Cal. 569, 48 Pac. 711.

[e] It is not proper for court to instruct jury as to ways and methods by which they must exercise their power to weigh testimony of witnesses.—People v. Newcomer, 118 Cal. 269, 50 Pac. 405.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 643, 644; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2738-2745, §§ 1938-1946.

§ 435. Definition of Terms Employed.

[a] Instructions should define legal or statutory terms employed.—People v. Byrnes, 30 Cal. 207.

[b] A defendant is entitled to have a definition of corroborative evidence given the jury, though they are instructed, in the language of Penal Code, section 1111, that evidence of an accomplice is not sufficient to convict, unless he is corroborated by other evidence, which in itself, and without his testimony, tends to convict defendant of the commission of the crime. People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 11, 43 Pac. 201.

[c] On a trial for arson, an instruction that "malice, within the meaning of the law, includes not only anger, hatred and revenge, but every other unlawful and unjustifiable motive," is correct; Penal Code, section 7, subdivision 4, providing that "the words 'malice' and 'maliciously' import a wish to vex, annoy or injure another person, or an intent to do a wrongful act.''—People v. Daniels, 34 Pac. 233.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 613; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2546-2548, §§ 1808-1810.

§ 436. Oral Instructions.

[a] Giving of oral instructions to a jury, in a criminal case, without consent of defendant, is error.—People v. Beeler, 6 Cal. 246; People v. Payne, 8 Cal. 341; People v. Demint, 8 Cal. 423; People v. Ah Fong, 12 Cal. 345; People v. Woppner, 14 Cal. 437; People v. Trim, 37 Cal. 274; People v. Prospero, 44 Cal. 186; People v. Max, 45 Cal. 254.

[b] Section 1 of the act of 1855, requiring instructions to be written amendatory to the act regulating criminal proceedings, is mandatory and not directory.—People v. Beeler, 6 Cal. 246.

[c] Verbal modification of written instructions to jury in criminal cases is erroneous.—People v. Payne, 8 Cal. 341.

[d] A jury, in a murder case, returned a general verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment; whereupon the court directed them orally to return and "to find" in what degree. Held, that this was not a charge which was required to be in writing.—People v. Bonney, 19 Cal. 426.

[e] The court may correct the error of giving an oral charge to the jury by withdrawing the instructions as orally given, and afterward reducing them to writing, and then reading them, with the direction to disregard those first given.—People v. Garcia, 25 Cal. 531.

[f] It is error to give oral instructions to the jury, in a criminal case, without the consent of the defendant, although he is present and does not object.—People v. Chares, 26 Cal. 78.

[g] Court may, by express consent of defendant, or by the mutual consent of the parties, charge jury orally.—People v. Kearney, 43 Cal. 383.

[h] Section 1093, Penal Code, requiring reporters to take down charge if not given in writing, is mandatory.—People v. Hersey, 53 Cal. 575.

[i] Oral instructions may be given if taken down by reporter.—People v. Ferris, 56 Cal. 442.

[j] In giving instruction, court read certain sections of Penal Code, and designated them by their numbers only. Held, to be compliance with law requiring instructions to be in writing.—People v. Mortier, 58 Cal. 262.

[k] Giving oral instructions to jury, which are not reduced to writing, either by the judge or any other person, nor taken down by the shorthand reporter, is error.—People v. Carrillo, 70 Cal. 643, 11 Pac. 840.

[l] Oral charge taken down by stenographer is equivalent to written charge.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 59, 17 Pac. 941.

[m] Giving of oral charge is proper.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 175, 25 Pac. 1116.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2746-2750, §§ 1948-1952.

§ 437. Formal Requisites of Instructions.

[a] If judge in his charge to jury undertakes to state a portion of testimony, the safer way is to recite language of witness as taken down by the reporter, or in judge's notes; but when the language of the district judge is in substance and effect a repetition of the testimony, the defendant cannot complain.—People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85.

[b] Instruction which goes to the whole case must be broad enough to cover all essential facts.—People v. Smallman, 55 Cal. 191, 209.

[c] It is proper to instruct that case must be decided by reference to evidence bearing upon the issues, and that it is of no consequence whether defendant is married or single.—People v. Young, 65 Cal. 225, 3 Pac. 813.

[d] In stating testimony court should be careful to give very words of witnesses or their substance.—People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 68, 11 Pac. 493.

[e] Mere grammatical errors in charge otherwise correct will not vitiate it if not thereby rendered misleading.—People v. Alsemi, 85 Cal. 435, 24 Pac. 810.

[f] Practice of giving charge in nature of a hypothetical question, embracing practically prosecution's theory of case, and including a large portion of evidence, is not to be commended.—People v. Dixon, 94 Cal. 255, 29 Pac. 504.

[g] Charge to the jury should be a plain statement of the law bearing upon the facts of the case, and should be so fair, impersonal and well balanced that the jurors will be unable to deduce therefrom the opinion of the judge as to the guilt or innocence of the accused.—People v. Stanton, 106 Cal. 139, 39 Pac. 525.

[h] Correct instruction which addresses itself to a theory permissible under the evidence should be given.—People v. Hecker, 109 Cal. 451, 42 Pac. 307.

[i] From an instruction asked, "You may believe as men that certain facts exist," but as jurors you must act only upon evidence introduced, etc., it was proper to strike the quoted words, since to have left them in would have made the charge confusing.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15.

[j] It is not reversible error to use the word "testimony" instead of "evidence" in instructing a jury.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 216, 63 Am. St. Rep. 72-n, 51 Pac. 329.

[k] An instruction to the effect that the mere possession of stolen goods by the defendant is not sufficient of itself alone to justify his conviction, but that "if there is any other evidence tending to show guilt, taken in connection with the possession of the stolen property, the rule is different," though concluding with an inapt and somewhat ambiguous expression, would be naturally understood by the jury as importing in its conclusion that there might be other evidence which, taken in connection with the circumstance of the possession of stolen property, would be sufficient to convict; and where the charge to the jury was on the whole correct, and favorable to the defendant, the inapt expression, "the rule is different," could not have influenced the jury prejudicially. People v. Childs, 127 Cal. 363, 59 Pac. 768.

[l] Each sentence of a charge to the jury in a criminal case need not contain all the conditions and limitations to be gathered from the entire text.—People v. Neber, 125 Cal. 560, 58 Pac. 133.

[m] Where the court marked one of defendant's requested instructions, "Not given; given in instruction 37," and drew several lines across the instruction, and afterward erased what he had written, except the word "Given," and the instruction went to the jury in that condition, after being read to them as a part of the charge, the defendant could not complain.—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295.

[n] Where charge, as a whole, is correct and clear, the fact that a selected passage may state a proposition without at the same time and in the immediate connection stating the exceptions or qualifications to which it is subject, and which appear elsewhere in the charge, does not render the charge erroneous.—People v. Meadenhall, 135 Cal. 344, 67 Pac. 325.
